HEDLEY P. T. A.

Hedley P. T. A. met in an important business session on Sept. 20 at 4 p. m. Among the more important matters discussed was the annual Hallowe'en Carnival, and the association voted to co-operate with the football boys in sponsoring such an entertainment on Friday night before Hallowe'en. It was also decided to give one dollar each month as an award to the room or grade having the greatest number of members present at the meetings for the month.

At the close of the business session, Supt. Baker spoke briefly on the subject of compulsory attendance, suggesting that we help to make it possible for all children in our district to attend school.

Mrs. C. L. Johnson gave an interesting talk on the subject: What can our P. T. A. do for our school and community.

Alton Hawkins and wife of Memphis spent the past week end here.

MRS. F. E. QUISENBERRY

Mrs. Florence E. Burleson Quisenberry passed away suddenly Friday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Garfield Dunn, near Claude. She had been in poor health for many months, and was anxious to go to be free from suffering. She ate her dinner and went to sleep. Her daughter heard her make a noise as she was struggling for breath and went to her and she was soon gone.

Mrs. Quisenberry was born Jan. 28, 1867, in Cook county, Texas. She was 67 years and 8 months of age. She was converted at the age of 16 years at Brownwood, Texas, and joined the Missionary Baptist church. She was married to J. W. Quisenberry Dec. 24, 1891, at Brownwood. Her husband preceded her in death ten years. Seven children were born to this union, six of whom are living. They are: Mrs. D. L. Baccus of Ft. Worth, Mrs. J. G. Dunn, Claude, Mrs. D. C. Pearson, Levelland, A. T., W. C. and M. F. Quisenberry of Hedley. Two brothers, J. L. and E. I. Burleson of Richland Springs, Texas, and one sister, Mrs. Rosie Jefferson of Eden, Texas.

Mrs. Quisenberry was a real Christian and attended Sunday School and church services as long as her health would permit. She expressed herself as ready to go, and that death would be a relief, but yet when the end drew near she told her daughter that she had to stay awake all night to keep from dying. Death somehow is something we shrink from even though we are prepared to cross the river. There is something about life that we cling to, though our suffering is great. Mrs. Quisenberry was a neighbor of the writer for several years, and was one of those mothers who stayed at home and kept her children together after the death of her husband ten years ago.

In spite of physical handicaps Mrs. Quisenberry performed her household duties for these years, and was both father and mother to her dear children, and was faithful to her church since the passing of her husband, and even before, for her companion was in feeble health for sometime before his death. She labored with diligence, bore her suffering as a good soldier, and thus inspires us who are left behind to a higher and better life; to a closer walk with the Master.

We have been reminded so many times in the last few weeks that death is on our trail, and made to think how it pays to be ready. Mrs. Quisenberry's funeral services were held at the First Baptist church Saturday afternoon at 8 o'clock by Rev. M. E. Wells, and her frail body was planted in the tomb in the Rowe cemetery to await the resurrection. A Friend

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Denman visited the latter's parents in Amarillo Saturday.

Mrs. Frank Simmons and son, C. F. have returned from an extended visit in Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Ballanger and Miss Zelta Carroll of Altus, Okla. were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. Dee Franklin. Mrs. Ballanger and Miss Carroll are Mr. Franklin's nieces.

J. S. Clark of Sunset visited his daughter, Mrs. Horace Cooper part of last week.

ROAMIN' HOLIDAY

By THAYER WALDO
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU service.

A CROWD of extra girls was clustered about the door of sound stage No. 6 as they went by.

Cora gazed at them curiously and asked her companion:

"What's the congregation for?"

Ann laughed shortly; there was a note of scorn in it.

"Don't tell me you haven't heard! Really? Why, my dear, this is the day they start Grace Monroe's new picture, with that latest imported hero, Barton Burns, as leading man."

Cora came to a full stop, staring at the other girl with amazed disbelief.

"You're not serious? I heard about him getting a contract, of course; but do you honestly mean they're going to give him a lead for his first job?"

Ann nodded solemnly, though a little sardonic smile curled her pretty mouth.

"Exactly that, no less. And is La-Belle Monroe furious? You know, she's been begging for months to be given Homer Austin in this—even got him to learn the lines. It was only last week that they told her about Bartie, and she's been moving heaven and high water ever since to get it changed."

As they moved on toward the building ahead, Cora exclaimed:

"I should think she would! And as for being just mad—well, I'd quit, that's all. Remember when we played with that fat-headed palooka in New York two seasons ago?"

"Do!! I still have chills and fever in the middle of the night thinking about it. Why, he was so dim-witted I always wondered how he used to keep existing left at precisely the moment when he should have been entering right?"

"Please don't!" Cora begged in mock anguish as they entered through the door marked Zenith Production offices.

"I've just had breakfast."

Down a short corridor they walked; at its end a blackboard confronted them. Neatly pink-chalked letters upon it announced:

Rehearsals for Penny Arcade postponed—Tuesday—8 a. m. sharp.
(Signed) WILLIAM NEWSOM, Director.

Ann shrugged.

"Well," she said ruefully, "that sort of leaves two perfectly good female bit players hanging in air; what? And to think I crawled out of my trundle bed at six bells just for this!"

Cora was silent a moment; then, "I know!" she cried. "Let's make a real spree of it—go over and watch the fun on Monroe's set. That ought to be as good as taking in a Laurel and Hardy."

The other girl made a doubtful little grimace.

"Do you think it'd last long enough to be worthwhile? Remember, they chase you for laughing out loud."

"Never mind; we're both wearing big sleeves. Come on, quick, while we still have a chance to get in."

The doorman at sound stage 6 recognized Ann, and Cora's sweet smile melted him utterly.

"Sure—go ahead," he agreed; "they haven't started shooting yet, and everything's so upset so one'll notice you anyhow."

Upset, as Cora remarked when they got inside, seemed to be a mild term for it.

Perhaps two-score various workers were in the great barn-like room, and most of them appeared to be in a state not far from frenzy.

The central figure was a little man with scant black hair that stood on end and a voice like a slide trombone in a tin box.

Up and down the food he dashed, short arms windmilling, a steady flow of language spouting from him.

"I ain't giving a twinkie's d—n about no allis!" he was shrieking, as the girls came within range.

"Me, I'm supervising this here picture, and what I'm saying is we can't wait no longer for nobody! What's wrong with this schlemiel, Barking Boina, anyways? Why don't he show up like he was told? Maybe nobody's realizing it costs us fifteen hundred dollars cash every hour this production ain't working."

Dramatically a fellow in white linen cap and flannel slacks stalked toward the prancing figure, glowering blackly.

Ann nudged her companion and whispered:

"So Nick Hormell's directing! That should mean fireworks."

"It does," replied Cora; "just listen to him."

"Sidney Klinkenbaum," the director was bellowing, "if you rave like that another minute, I'm going to walk out of here and sue the studio for everything it's got. Can't you listen to anything that's told you? This man Burns went to Mexico—to Agua Caliente—over the week-end; he's probably just had some kind of trouble on the way back. . . . All we need is a little patience—and a little less noise from you!"

"Trouble!" yelled Klinkenbaum. "I'm betting he's got it—bottle trouble!"

"Nothing of the sort!" Hormell snapped.

"If you'd only for the love of heaven pay some attention! Miss Monroe just said she was down there herself with a party and met him. He wasn't drinking a drop."

"Too dizzy to need it," murmured Ann.

From a chaise longue across the stage, Grace Monroe chimed in skilfully with:

"Yes, that's right, Sidney. Mr. Burns and I had a most delightful little chat. He seemed very anxious to see all the points of interest down there, and I was so glad to be able to give him some information. He was driving his own car, I believe."

"There—you see?" the director expostulated.

"It'll be only a matter of moments until he arrives, I'm sure. So please calm yourself and wait."

The supervisor's face screwed into a look of stubborn defiance.

"Absolutely no! One whole hour already it's gone blooey! and I'm telling you you gotta begin right now, immediately! Get somebody else, or leaving the part out—I don't care. Only start!"

With a savage groan Hormell flung away, smiting his brow.

"Ye gods!" he gritted. "Why did I ever leave Dubuque! Imbeciles—dopes! All right—I give up. We'll—"

He broke off and whirled on Klinkenbaum, a new-born fanatical gleam in his eyes.

"Listen, you genius—how about the time it'll take to rehearse a new actor? Ha! Never thought of that, did you?"

There was a second of near-silence as the supervisor gaped like a punctured balloon. Then, very casually, Grace Monroe sat up and said:

"Oh, Nicky dear—I just happened to remember; Homer Austin knows the part. Shall we get him?"

"Sure—right away you should get him!" Klinkenbaum squealed in triumphant relief. Hormell threw out his hands and let them drop again listlessly.

"Very well; send for him. I have nothing more to say."

A call boy was dispatched. Ann looked quizzically at Cora and remarked:

"Say, now isn't it a funny coincidence that this just turned out the way she wanted it to?"

Cora, however, was suddenly looking somewhere else. A uniformed messenger had entered; he took a yellow envelope from his hat and raucously inquired:

"Grace Monroe? Telegram for Klinkenbaum?"

Klinkenbaum made a rush for him and snatched the wire, spluttering:

"Shut up your racket! I'll make it. Scram!"

Ignoring the star's lazy, "Why, Sidney, you familiar thing" he opened the message and proceeded stentily to read it. In an instant Grace drawled:

"What's it, Siddey? Read it to me."

He lowered the paper momentarily to glare at her, then rasped:

"You really want I should, huh? Okay!"

"Gem of Buildings" is an Elaborate Mausoleum

The Taj Mahal of India is a famous mausoleum, erected at Agra, India, by Shah Jehan for his favorite wife. The Taj Mahal, which means "Gem of Buildings," is 186 feet square with the corners cut off, the whole surmounted by a dome 58 feet in diameter and about 210 feet in height, flanked by four octagonal kiosks. The interior is divided into four domed chambers in the corners, and a large central arched octagon, all connected by corridors. The central octagon contains two cenotaphs surrounded by an open-work marble rail. The only light admitted enters through the delicately-pierced marble screens of the windows.

The decoration is especially noticeable for the stone mosaics of flower themes and arabesques, many in agate, jasper and bloodstone. The entire structure stands on a white marble platform 18 feet high and 213 feet square, with tapering cylindrical minarets 123 feet high at the corners. The whole Koran is said to be written in mosaic of precious stones on the interior walls. In the construction of this building, 20,000 men were employed 20 years. Although the labor cost nothing, more than $20,000,000 was expended in its construction. The doors are of solid silver, and an enormous diamond was placed on the tomb itself.

The Panama Railroad

A charter for the building of the Panama railroad by an American concern was granted in 1850. The road was opened for business in 1855 at a cost of $7,000,000. The French canal company bought the line, part of its route being on that chosen for the canal. When the American government in 1904 bought the works of the French company it obtained the railroad also.

Uses for Amber

The principal uses for amber include the manufacture of pipestems and cigar and cigarette holders, beads, necklaces and ornaments. It is also used as the base for certain kinds of varnish and when distilled it yields succinic acid and a fine lampblack.

The Mingo Indians

The Mingo Indians, from which Mingo Junction in Jefferson county, Ohio, got its name, were the "500" of the Ohio valley. Among the other tribes they put on all the acts except claiming that their ancestors came over on the Mayflower.

Makes Its Wearer Feel "Just Right"

There's always one frock in your wardrobe that is the big favorite—you wear it time and again because it is most becoming, it's "just right," and you feel really stunning in it. So it is with the model sketched today. Here are lines and details that flatter every type of figure—graceful capes over the shoulders, a surplice bodice line, and youthful waistline treatment that makes for a more slender appearance because cleverly placed seamings replace a belt. The sash, from side seams, ties in back in a graceful bow. Choose a dainty printed silk or sheer—and make this your favorite!

Pattern 1502 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 takes 3 3/4 yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

LEGIIONNAIRES NOTICE

The American Legion
Austin, Texas.

To Every Texas Legionnaire
Permit us to take this means of expressing to each of you personally our deep appreciation for the splendid cooperation you have given us in our feeble efforts to carry forward the American Legion in this trying year. Your loyalty and devotion to the American Legion, its ideals and its purposes, has been the inspiration that has enabled us to carry on to a successful conclusion the affairs which you entrusted to our care.

It will be our rich heritage in the years to follow to look back with pardonable pride to this our period of service to you and the American Legion, firm in the knowledge that you made possible whatever success the history of the organization may record for our year's work.

Many of you have been officers in your post, many more of you have been just privates in the ranks, but all of you have been Legionnaires, filling the ranks of the organization which is so essential to the success of the Legion's program.

But we must look to the future. In just a few weeks a new administration will be vested with the affairs of our organization. We commend it to you. It is our sincere wish that each of you give it, if that be possible an even greater amount of your loyalty than has been accorded us in our feeble efforts.

In closing, may we express the wish that you exemplify your continued loyalty to our Legion by renewing your membership

JUNIOR STUDY CLUB

The Junior Study club held its regular meeting Wednesday, Sept. 19, at the home of Miss Ruby Hall. A very interesting program on "Romances of the Old Testament" was given. Delicious refreshments were served to the following members: Mesdames Chunn, Adamson, Dishman, Everett, Hickey, Moran, Reeves and Davis and Misses Pauline Caldwell, Alice Bishop, Melba Johnson and Ruby Hall. Guests were Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Royce Hall.

Mr and Mrs. T. J. Coffey and son of McLean visited in the J. P. Alexander home Sunday.

Messrs. and Mesdames Lonnie Gunn and George Goin visited in the L. A. Jamar home Sunday.

Mr and Mrs. Ellis Carter have been in Bethany, Okla. for several days.

Howard Arnett of Amarillo is visiting his sister, Mrs. Bob Adamson.

at once to the end that we may deliver the affairs of the Legion to the incoming administration on October 25th with a 100% renewal of the 1934 membership. Please don't wait to be solicited, but just go to your post adjutant today and say: "I want to do my part to make 1935 the greatest year in the history of the Legion of Texas by renewing my membership today."

Legionnaires, carry on!

WIFADADOS CLUB

The Wifadados club met in the home of Mrs. Josie Adamsan Sept. 26, with Mrs. Luttrell hostess. There were twenty present, counting three or four visitors. We were glad to note the presence of some long time absentees. We hope they will continue to come.

Miss Hixen gave a very helpful talk on kitchen arrangement for efficiency, which was much appreciated. We hope she meets with us regularly. Mrs. Ruth Kempson presented some helpful suggestions on labor saving devices. A round table discussion followed on these same lines. Then refreshments were served by the hostess, consisting of sandwiches, cookies and cocoa, which was enjoyed by all.

We meet Oct. 9 at 2:30 with Mrs. John Aull. The club is to have a "white elephant drawing" at this meeting. Each one bring something no longer useful to her, but possibly to some one else. Make some kind of contribution, or you are barred from drawing. We are looking for you to meet with us.

Children Like Their "Private Fair"

Millions of children have found the Enchanted Island with its forty new features, even more fun this year than last at the World's Fair in Chicago. Shown here is a section of the island's Adventure Land. Low travel rates and well-marked highways make Fair travel easy this year.

Lily Pad Raft at World's Fair

Nature provided this raft, a water platter known as the Amazon lily in the Horticulture gardens of the World's Fair in Chicago. It provides more than ample support for six-year-old Jane Haslip. Even these beautiful gardens will be torn up when the Fair closes forever Oct. 31.

NOTICE To Cotton Farmers

We are ready to receive, weigh and store your cotton.

The Government will lend 12c per pound on all cotton with 7-8 inch staple. Low middling or better, and 11c per pound on cotton under 7-8 inch staple.

On this season's cotton put under Government Loan we are carrying insurance on your cotton; and storage and insurance charges total only 25c per bale per month.

This charge plus 4 percent interest is all you are out on holding your cotton for a better market.

Cotton on which farmers secured 10-cent loans last year may be refinanced, thus increasing the loan to 12 cents and extending the maturity date from February 1, 1935, to July 31, 1935. All storage and carrying charges must be paid up to date on 1933 cotton to secure the 2-cent additional loan. Please see the agents who handled your last year's cotton for further details.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY
by Vance Wynn

The Case of Hannah Brown

THIS is a tragedy which began with the finding of the trunk of a boy in Paddington, London, on the day after Christmas, 1836.

That ghastly thing meant nothing, and in those days there was no organized or specialized police force to run down crime.

Constable Haines went on the job, however, with all of the enthusiasm characteristic of a Nineteenth-century Sherlock Holmes.

On the following day he found a human head in the Regent's canal. Next a pair of legs were discovered and finally two arms.

All of these parts, it was found, belonged to the same person, and that person a woman.

The head was placed in alcohol, in a glass case, for purposes of identification.

It had been on exhibition for many weeks when a workman named John Gay strolled into the impromptu morgue.

His sister, Hannah Brown, had disappeared the day before Christmas, and had not been seen since.

This typical cockney took a look at the head preserved in alcohol, and then exclaimed, with true lower-class British stolidity:

"Well, I'm blowed if it ain't Hannah!"

Constable Haines then busied himself in running down the life story of Hannah Brown.

He found a man named Harry Davis who recalled the woman.

Davis said Hannah had called on him on the day before Christmas and told him that she was engaged to marry James Greenacre, who lived near Kensington.

That was a good enough clue for Haines.

He started for that neighborhood at once, and eventually located Greenacre on the Surrey side of the Thames in the parish of Camberwell.

He was living with a woman named Sarah Gale, who had a young daughter. Greenacre stoutly denied any knowledge of Hannah Brown.

He said he had never met the woman, much less promised to marry her. But while Haines was talking to Greenacre he noticed a significant glance pass between the suspect and the woman.

He saw something else. It was a dress the child was wearing.

The material of which this was made corresponded with the stuff they had found wrapped around the trunk of Hannah Brown when it was discovered in Paddington.

Being a very conscientious as well as a very direct person, Constable Haines arrested James Greenacre and Sarah Gale, and left the matter of their guilt to be decided by the coroner's inquest.

The coroner turned the case over to the court and the trial took place in the Old Bailey, adjoining the annex to Newgate prison.

It is interesting to note that Chief Justice Coleridge presided.

A witness appeared who testified that he had seen Greenacre going into the house of Sarah Gale with a woman on the day before Christmas.

This woman was tall and in every particular resembled Hannah Brown.

He also swore that some time afterward Greenacre left the house carrying a bulky and heavy bundle in a large, blue merino bag.

Two other witnesses testified that they had heard a quarrel going on in the house during the time Hannah Brown was there.

There was a scuffling and much noise, and finally a sound of some one dropping to the floor.

It was proved that Sarah Gale was seen scrubbing the floor immediately after Greenacre left, and detectives completed the capsule of evidence by testifying that brimstone had been used in the house for the purpose of fumigation.

Two motives were assigned for the crime.

First, jealousy on the part of Sarah Gale, and secondly, robbery, because Hannah Brown had not only been killed but robbed.

The jury convicted Greenacre, and before he was executed he confessed his guilt.

There was doubt about Sarah Gale, and she was merely transported for life.

"Myrrh"

"Myrrh" is a perennial branching herb some two feet in height with finely divided pubescent leaves and small white flowers arranged in umbels. The fruit is like a large caraway seed about an inch long; smooth but strongly ribbed. The fruit and other parts of the plant have a sweet aromatic odor that has given it the name "Myrrh." It is not the true myrrh of perfumes which is the gum of a tropical tree, Balsamedendron myrrha.

Finland Wet Land

Finland lies between continental Russia and peninsular Scandinavia. The land is not considered rich from the agricultural standpoint, 60 to 65 per cent of it being wet, poorly drained land, lakes and peat bogs. It was through the wet land that the French name, Suomi, meaning swamp, was applied to the country. It has been adopted as a national name by the Finns.

Italy's Volcanoes Are Always Threat

Stromboli Again Gives Islanders a Bad Scare.

Rome.—Stromboli, the constantly active volcano on a small island in the Mediterranean at the toe of Italy, burst into more than usual activity a few days ago causing fear among the residents of the island and the nearby mainland. The activity quickly subsided to normal, relieving the terrors of the inhabitants who know that Italy's volcanoes have a record for being bad actors when aroused. Vesuvius, in 79 B. C., buried Pompeii and two other cities, and after more than 1,500 years relative inactivity burst forth with tremendous violence in 1631 and wiped out 18,000 people.

The conditions which exist in the neighborhood of these well-known volcanoes are duplicated in hundreds of places throughout the world where volcanoes are located in areas so highly developed and densely populated.

Not All Volcanoes Have Cones

There are probably several thousand active, or semi-active, volcanoes on the earth, but only about 400 are known and recorded. To the average person a volcano is a cone-shaped mountain out of the peak of which issue fire, steam, hot gases and molten rock. To the scientists who specialize in the study of volcanology this is but one of the many phases of volcanic activity. To them the cone-shaped mountain is common only to certain types of volcanoes. The cone is something that is built up by the volcano, and some volcanoes do not build cones.

Mauna Loa, in Hawaii, covered a vast plain with its flow before building its present crater. The Italian volcanoes also have cones of comparative recent origin. Stromboli's cone has been built up within 2,000 years. It started out, as did Etna and Vesuvius, as an under-water volcano. The higher a volcano builds its cone the harder it is for the lava to reach the vent, and then vents are developed at lower levels.

Chain Around the Earth.

Great chains of volcanoes stretch around the earth. The greatest chain is in the mountain range that extends like a ring around the Pacific ocean. Other chains stretch across Asia and Europe. The volcanic islands of the Pacific, from Hawaii, through the Philippines to New Zealand, mark sub-oceanic volcanic areas.

What causes volcanoes to erupt is not known. In recent decades observatories have been established to study them and much information is being gathered.

Their activity is due to internal heat of the earth. This heat is not the heat of the great internal core of the earth, because that heat is reached only at great depths, and volcanoes do not have their roots at greater depths than six to fifteen miles. The heat which causes volcanic activity is believed to be due to chemical action and to the great pressure produced by occluded and chemically produced gases as reactions take place between rock substances.

Some forces of world-wide effectiveness also may be involved. This is indicated by the frequent simultaneous activity of volcanoes or of earthquakes in widely separated parts of the world.

Beggar's Disguise Nets Sleuth $37.50

London.—The detecting business can be made a profitable affair over here by "them as knows 'ow." One Scotland Yard investigator, ordered to watch a certain street corner for a wanted man, disguised himself as a beggar and stood for six days on the spot before he finally made his arrest. During those six days kind-hearted passersby tossed $37.50 into his outstretched palms.

CONFIDENCE
By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

By common consent prosperity will not be fully restored until we have a return of confidence. The collapse of securities and the general decline of all economic values is attributable to the sudden reversal of a mental attitude; from confidence to distrust, from hope to fear. The establishment of confidence is essential not only to the stability of the financial markets, but also is a prime requisite for making permanent our civilization. If we remove confidence from business we have bankruptcy. The lack of confidence in the security of a bank causes runs and the ultimate failure of the bank, if it is not strong enough to withstand the runs. Lack of confidence in the integrity of nations creates suspicion, and in some cases incites war. Nations which do not trust each other soon become enemies. The same principle holds true in domestic life. Remove confidence from the home and a condition is created which may easily lead to divorce. True and lasting friendship can only be built upon confidence. As confidence is essential to the security of the family, so it is the mainstay of government. The absence of confidence in the government means revolution. One needs only to read of the revolutions in France and in Russia to be convinced of this point.

We are not surprised then to read, in almost every appeal for loyalty to our government that we should cultivate confidence. The restoration of confidence seems to be the main objective. Just so! There is no other way to win back more prosperous days. When we speak of confidence, however, we seem to have in mind a return of trust in some vague and intangible thing like chattels, mortgages, or even money. Now let us ask in all candor how any person can have confidence in an intangible object. We may have faith in the reactions of certain known laws which are bound to respond when we place them to the test, like iron which will invariably be attracted to the magnet. But confidence is quite another thing. It implies action in the field of human personality. The appeal which comes to us, if we understand it aright, is for confidence in persons; in the integrity and the moral value of promises and covenants. Confidence then is not a blind faith by which we trust a law, but a spiritual principle by which we trust one another.

The Household
By Lydia Le Baron Walker

The Inside of This Awning Lends Decoration to the Interior Since It Is Gaily Painted in Flowers and Birds.

THE intense heat of summer made many householders consider having awnings for windows which have been left unprotected hitherto. From the standpoint of economy, now is a good time to do this work since there are excellent opportunities to buy awnings, ready to put up, at decided reductions, and awning cloth very specially priced. By having the awnings done now, as soon as the heat of the sun and the glare becomes uncomformably strong. It is a fortunate replacement time—if you get advance styles.

Awnings not only reduce the temperature of rooms, and soften the light but they go far toward dressing up the outside of the house. There is a tendency in newest styles to have this ornamental element featured for the inside of the rooms as well as the exterior of the house. To promote this, huge flowers, or flowers and foliage are painted on the under side of the awnings. Birds and butterflies lend themselves admirably to this decoration as they might actually be flying and fluttering about outside the window. They are gay little creatures, both in color and character, and strike a happy note in decoration. It is well to remember this type of awning when taking advantage of late summertime buying.

Students Seek Famous Author's Lost Writings

St. Louis, Mo.—Research students at Washington university here are engaged in the unique task of reclaiming for literature the works of a writer, who gained international fame nearly one hundred years ago only to die in mysterious obscurity.

He was known as Charles Sealsfield, "The Great Unknown," but events toward the end of his life in 1864 tended to conform that he actually was Carl Postl of Poppitz, Moravia, from whence he fled a monastery as a boy.

Through a grant from the Rockefeller foundation, a staff of four students under Dr. Otto Heller, dean of the graduate school, is compiling as much of the works as possible in the hope of an 18 volume edition.

A man widely traveled, Sealsfield tried through his writings to interpret America to Europe. He wrote English sentences idiomatically in German, a custom which lost him favor abroad.

Shortly before his death in 1864, Sealsfield destroyed the manuscript of his biography, and left an estate valued at about $50,000 to the family of Anton Postl of Poppitz. Joseph Postl investigated and was so struck with his own resemblance to the dead writer that all doubt of his real identity, as Carl Postl, was removed.

Plaid for Style-Wise College Girl

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLAIDS to the right, plaids to the left, plaids everywhere in the autumn style parade, did one ever see so many plaids as are flaunting their gay colors and bold patternings throughout fashion's realm this season? Plaids in alluring lightweight woolsens, in smart rayon weaves, stunning taffeta plaids and knitted plaids, too, they are all among "those present" in the early fall collections with very special emphasis given them in the much-featured showings of campus fashions.

Evidently, according to the fall style program, the college girl is supposed to dine, to dance, to play golf and tennis, to motor, to study and even to sleep in plaids. Not fiction but fact, this about sleeping in plaids, for one of the smartest items to enroll in a college wardrobe is a sleeping and lounging pajama outfit of gray plaid. The most practical are made of smart cotton prints which are styled with cunningly designed tunics which are made delightfully feminine, with such dainty details as collar and cuffs of scalloped white organdie piped with the plaid, together with a wide sash of the plaid material which ties gypsy fashion in a big romantic bow at one side.

A leading question put up to the college girl is as to whether she will have her frock, suit or ensemble of all-plaid "alone by itself" or shall it be partly of plaid and partly of a weave in solid color. Either or both is the answer, for the advance showings present as convincing arguments in favor of one as the other. An outstanding fashion is the dress which is tailored of all-plaid with not a frill or furberlow to mar its sophisticated simplicity. You see the idea illustrated to the right in the picture. The girl seated is also wearing a frock of this type, in brown and light beige, made in shirtwaist fashion. The buttons are of brown braided leather. The plaid for the dress on the standing figure to the right is in red, white and blue and it is one of those fashionable thin woolsens which is delightfully lightweight and therefore pleasing to wear in the classroom. A bright blue belt and scarf enter attractively into the color scheme. As a matter of fact the two-piece dress tailored of plaid is not only a college girl favorite, for whether you go to school, to office or saunter about town during the shopping hours a plaid frock's the thing this season which interprets chic at its smartest.

Tremendously clever things are being done with plaid plus plaid. Such as the topping of a black velvet gown with a striking plaid jacket such as is shown in the foreground of the group. The plaid wool jacket is in black, green and white with black calf belt. The modish beret is of green duvetyne and of course, in answer to the demand of present-day millinery fashion, it needs must sport a dashing little feather. The blouse, which you cannot see in the picture, is of matching green duvetyne. An ascot scarf of black velvet adds the finishing touch to this ensemble.

In the charming autumn costume pictured to the left above the order is reversed in that the skirt is plaid and the jacket is in the solid color. Here a dark brown cut-velvet jacket surmounts a skirt in plaided brown, green and beige. The turtle-neck blouse is of green jersey. The color combination for this costume is noteworthy since it is typical of the newest trends. There is a disposition on the part of designers to combine any number of rich autumn colors working out effects which favor of the picturesque Alpine costumes even to the soft felt hats with their audacious little quills and feathers.

And have you seen the perfectly stunning velvet and corduroy prints done in bold plaids and checks? No college girl once glimpsing them, will not be able to resist this temptation.

AUTUMN CHIC

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The new tweeds are simply stunning both as to color and novelty in texture and weave. The latest suit models styled of tweed have both a jacket and a long topcoat. Unless you have already proved it to your own satisfaction you have no idea how really useful and practical these three-piece suits are. The model pictured is in a very swaggy-looking brown, beige and red checked tweed. The long manish topcoat can be worn as a separate fall wrap. The square patch pockets on the jacket are distinctive.

"BUTCHER BOY BACK" IS MUCH IN FAVOR

Possibly you have never thought of your butcher as a very stylish person. Now we have Mainbocher's "the butcher boy back." It's a loose back gathered from a shallow shoulder yoke. The front of this jacket or tunic, whichever it happens to be, is belted. Belted front and unbelted backs are regarded with favor by all who have seen this new arrangement. It adds an extra flipp to the two-piece costume, which is, as you know, one of the season's latest pets. Since so many women find difficulty in wearing belted well, the partially belted idea is a life saver.

Tunics have a long way to go before they catch up to their reputation. We've been hearing about tunics consistently, but that's as far as one can truthfully say the idea has gone. With the two-piece idea having the endorsement of the haute couture, there is every reason to see the tunic coming in vogue at last.

Collars This Fall to Be Worn Close to the Throat

Fall collars are something to watch. Most of them snug fairly close to the throat, big pilgrim collars, high roll collars and wide revers all being seen. Sleeves on the straighter coats are often large at the top, while those on the looser, shorter designs generally display fullness near the wrist. Belts are in again, since coats are lapping well in front, and many a late mid-season model is snugged about the figure by a narrow belt hardly an inch wide.

Hosiery Shades

Hosiery colors that will be most important for street wear this fall are dusky browns, taupe tones, smoke and gunmetal shades. For formal evening wear either skin tones or very dark shades in gossamer sheer will be worn

Urges Painless Doing Away With the Unfit

Sir Buckston Browne, the great surgeon, speaking at the annual dinner of the Harvelian society, pleaded that the power to give incurable sufferers happy release, power to decide that a congenitally insane or deformed baby should not live should be given into the hands of a joint council of doctors and lawyers, says a cable from London.

He said that he looked forward to a time when the medical profession should have the power of sentencing to death those who are not fit to live, either from disease or crime, and of granting permits to the old and wornout who wish to go to the lethal chamber. Sir Buckston is eighty-four, and has been a surgeon for 60 years.

"When I was a young man," he said, "the human body was regarded as a vile and unspokeable thing. Pain and disease were punishments for the original sin of Adam and Eve, and therefore it was immoral to administer chloroform to women in childbirth. Thanks to Charles Darwin, all that changed by slow and difficult degrees, until the body ceased to be an abomination and came to be regarded as nature's finest product.

"As we learned how to treat it, so we learned how to reverence it. When I began practice doctors were all laughing at the freakish ideas of Joseph Lister. At that time I knew there were certain beds in my hospital which meant certain death to any patient—they were so hideously septic.

"I have seen the advancement of science. I have lived into an age in which the machine has been made to outstrip the human body, so that it is becoming our urgent duty to accord to the body the same scientific attitude of mind as we grant to our machines. But we spend thousands and thousands on asylums for congenitally incurable, hopeless idiots, poor creatures whose miserable existences monopolize the working lives of expert nurses, and we do, officially, all that we can to prolong the sufferings of poor old broken-down bodies.

"I should not care to say how many cases I have known of doctors who have bravely taken the law into their own hands, who have helped old people to an easy way out of life, who have taken steps that monstrous and idiot babies should never live.

"And I say that it is time that the law should come to our aid and relieve us of this responsibility. A sufficiently responsible council should be able to accord the boon of a painless death. I think that as a first step, a council with this end in view might be formed immediately. It should contain both doctors and lawyers, the lawyers to insure that there should be no crimes committed by persons who want to be rid of aged relatives.

"The clergy could have no place on the council, I feel. It is for science to keep the body up to what is expected of it. The danger, in this age, is that the brain may run away from the rest of the body, and that we shall not select and improve the human body as Darwin taught us we should, and as we select and improve our machines."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Gifted Healer

Daniel Radcliffe Clarke, famous bone setter of the Isle of Man, who died at the age of ninety-three, was known for his great healing powers throughout Europe. His only school of doctoring was his grandmother's parlor and his only certificate her approval. At first Clarke would accept no payment for his services. He was a farmer first and foremost, and would leave the cattle and the fields to go to the house and set right an aching shoulder. Only when farming ceased to give him a living would he accept money for bone setting, and then only from those who could afford it. His power of healing was almost the only thing left to him in the end. He lost his wife, then his daughter and then his sight. With him died not only this power but a knowledge of the Manx language, which is rare today.

Suitable States

MAN OLDER THAN GENERAL BELIEF, SCIENTIST SAYS

The recent discovery of Dr. Solly Zuckerman that the blood serum of man is more closely related to that of Old world monkeys than that of New world monkeys confirms the belief that man is enormously older than has been supposed.

The announcement may help solve the riddle of evolution, for it tends to push man's beginnings on earth back to the Oligocene era, approximately 16,000,000 years ago.

Dr. Zuckerman, who has just completed two years of research work at Yale university, recently described his findings to members of the Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences at the London session.

Scientists have long known that anthropoid apes of the Old world, such as chimpanzees, have the same groups of blood cells as man, and that in this respect apes differ from Old world and New world monkeys.

Now Dr. Zuckerman has found the additional fact that serum proteins in the blood of Old world apes and monkeys are related to man's, but not to those of New world monkeys.

Revelation of this fact reveals that the whole Old world group split off in incredibly distant times from a common stock, which presumably also gave origin to the New world monkeys. It also suggests, according to Dr. Zuckerman, that independent human, or humanlike stock, branched from the apes very early in geological time.—Washington Post.

Brainiest Animal

Association with man evidently does not help an animal to increase its intelligence, according to reports. In a controversy regarding the intelligence of the animal world, the claims of the cat, dog and horse were summarily dismissed on the ground that they learn their feats and tricks by the trial and error method, much as man learns to ride a bicycle without applying any brain power. A well-known psychologist championed the chimpanzee as his animal intellectual. Then an official of an animal institution drew attention to the beaver's ingenuity. But neither of these animals, according to a group of German psychologists, possesses the mentality of the elephant. And what of the ant?

ALUMINUM TO FOLLOW IRON

Mankind has progressed through the Stone and Bronze ages and is now at the end of the Iron age, according to Prof. Collin Funk of Columbia university. There is more aluminum than iron in the earth's crust, he says, and aluminum is lighter and can be made just as strong as steel for most purposes.

Railroads, he predicts, will lighten their equipment by using this metal, and speed up trains to 100 miles an hour to compete with the growing air traffic. Transatlantic boats will also be much lighter and operate at higher speeds, while buildings will do away with heavy walls and be constructed almost entirely of glass and light metal. He predicts that we will be well into the new age in another ten years.—Pathfinder Magazine.

miraculously snatched from death to life, this man who drove an airship

After all the monstrous anguish, the fear, the sorrow, and the hope!

"MY DEAR!" Hortense came swiftly forward to greet Lavinia, hands outstretched.

Man has learned to control and increase the productivity of the land by methods of fertilization.

Through this—and the night sky was above them, the tall cottonwoods outlined against the stars.

The Border! The international line! She held her breath as they passed

Down in that dim world below, the last act of this drama of the sage land was preparing for enactment.

"Thank you," she said; "you're sweet to have thought of it. Have you—that is, do the others know?"

In this connection the preliminary report of the director of the Turkestan Institute of Rainfall is of considerable interest.

"Safe?" the man whispered tensely. "Safe," she answered pulling the buckle tight.

At that thought Sonya Savarin sat sharply up within the confines of the buckled belt.

In the quest of these three silent trailers there was more than a mere search for a lost white woman.

"Well, whatever the answer, you've blossomed marvelously. I remember when I first met you, how forlorn and unhappy you seemed.

They have found, the report says, that even in the driest regions the atmosphere contains enough moisture to make agriculture possible.

"Safe?" the man whispered tensely. "Safe," she answered pulling the buckle tight.

And in the magnificent heavens Starr Stone, looking desperately down ahead, caught the dim outline of Lone Mesa's crown, its shining white stone level.

"By the way," the hostess pursued, "have you ever heard from him since?"

This is a long way from any kind of weather control which would have helped the farmers of the American Midwest this season.

Then she saw Starr Stone turn to Concha and take her in his arms.

Through This—and the Night Sky Was Above Them.

Here were walls against which a man might make a stand if he were armed, find shelter behind which if he were not, providing he could get the time to leave his plane and gain them.

"Yes, I suppose it does." "By the way," the hostess pursued, "have you ever heard from him since?"

"Ready," he said, and, pushing the girl beyond the plane's wing tip, he caught the propeller's blade.

desperately about for something she might tell these three grim men, and found nothing.

It was almost level with them—was so—the ship was leveling off—distance, height, had dropped away—they were skimming the mesa's surface—touching—bouncing on the uneven rock—were still.

"Yes," Hortense said, leading her onto the terrace; "I thought it might be nice, and it's patriotic. They're a little group from the artists' bureau of the unemployment relief agency.

And, bending his tall head, he kissed her on the lips.

But she would not give up, she told herself again, would never sink. He had passed through too much to fall at last. Something would happen; some way would open.

So they were, the rocking gray ship still a hundred feet beyond. And El Diablo, Manuel, deadly shapes of menace, were climbing out, coming toward them.

Lavinia wasn't conscious of her going, nor of anything else in that thronged scene save the one figure she had suddenly glimpsed.

Billiousness Sour Stomach Gas and Headache due to Constipation

CHAPTER XIV On Lone Mesa's Top. Sonya clung to the cockpit's edge with clutching fingers, her eyes, burned dry of sudden tears, fixed on the future, if future there was to be.

He knew that not so far behind them, not so high above, another little gray ship dived steadily out of the south—that Nemesis incarnate was on their trail.

And then, high on the thin blue air there came a sound as old as the ruined walls behind, a sound to chill the blood, to shock the very soul. Clear and high and savage, primitive as life itself, the war cry of the Navajos, it pealed above the crackling gun, stopped the man and the woman like a hand upon their shoulders.

Lavinia's sob was barely audible. Over the close-trimmed turf she ran swiftly to the man beneath the tree.

PARKER'S HAIR BALM

However, no matter how much health supervision there is in the school, the health of the child is primarily the responsibility of the parents.

And then, high on the thin blue air there came a sound as old as the ruined walls behind, a sound to chill the blood, to shock the very soul.

Then, as Starr Stone ran toward them, as Sonya followed, tall Two Fingers rose with the dapper pilot held by the neck in his powerful hands.

Miss Prout found Hortense seated by herself in a far corner of the music room, sipping chartreuse and smoking.
