Will the Small Town Bie?

That all depends.

Every town like ours either grows, stagnates or dies from lack of support frem home people.

We've get to fight for our community. Let's de our trading here, help each ether, keep our money at home.

Then we'll have a town we're proud of, one in which we're mighty glad to live and do business.

Normal Life Span 140, Says Voronoff

Gland Specialist Outlines a The only difficulty was procuring an Plan for Longevity.

Calcutta.-"The natural span of life is 140 years, and I have every hope that one day we may prolong it to this period," declared Dr. Serge Voronoff, the famous exponent of rejuvenation

"Everybody who dies between the ages of seventy and ninety is a person who is 'killed'." Doctor Voronoff added. "The problem is to find out how not to be so 'killed.'

"Between sixty and seventy is a critical period. Death is awaiting us. Those who wish to survive in the unequal struggle have but one means of gaining their end-to replace their worn-out glands with young and active glands, which will impart a new impulse to the cells of all our organs, causing them to create new young cells and thus rejuvenate the whole organism.'

His Methods Recognized. Doctor Voronoff declared that the most eminent experts now recognized the efficacy of his methods and thousands of operations were being performed in Europe, and also in Japan.

Crosley Still Pioneering

Powel Crosley, Jr., president of Cin cinnati Reds, during his first year a the head of the club, spent $310,500 for the best young prospects available in minor leagues. Pioneer in other fields. he now is pioneering in baseball through the initiation of night baseball in the major leagues. Will spend $50,000 in order to give the Reds the finest lighting equipment in the country. This pioneering is in line with his genius, evident at age of thirteen, when he built an electric generator in the attic of his father's home in College Hill. using water power from a water storage tank. With this electricity he lighted his bedroom. There was no electricity service in that subdivision at that time, so It was unique.

adequate supply of animals for the The ordinary monkey was not suitable, the specimens of the genera required being the gorilla, orangoutang, chimpanzee or gibboon.

Together with his beautiful young wife, Doctor Voronoff intends to go to Java, where he will spend some time conducting experiments on the blood of the orang-outang. Afterwards he will go to Indo-China to conduct similar research on the gibboon.

Different Blood Types.

Recalling his early work, the doctor said that at first he presumed that the blood of monkeys was of one type instead of the four types present in the human being. Some of the early experiments were not very satisfactory, but after long research he found that the monkeys had four types of blood also, corresponding to those types found in humans.

He therefore altered his methods to include tests of the blood both of the patient and of the animal to make sure that the types of blood corresponded. Then he grafted onto the human being the thyroid, pituitary and sexual glands of the monkey.

The results, he claims, are "highly successful." The change observed in the aging human being could only be described as "something marvelous."

Mantel Pieces

Just now there is a tendency to have very narrow mantels or to do away with the shelf altogether. Before changing the style of your chimney treatment, be very sure the new style will be an improvement over the present one. If you have a very ornate wooden mantelpiece with center mirror and side shelves with columns, it is not in vogue. It can be simplified. however, to bring it up-to-date without oo drastic measures.

at least fifteen minutes to spare before arrivals begin. Unless she does there will not be opportunity for the last minute extras which are sure to crop up. A hostess who is flustered when she welcomes her guests cannot be at ease, and this tends to make her friends a trifle embarrassed. Neither of these things gives a good start to the occasion.

An Unhappy Start.

It is the early guest who so often upsets plans. The unexpected, and really unwarranted, appearance of the tooearly guest is bad enough when there are servants to admit the person, and assist in taking off wraps, but when the hostess has to do everything, which so often is the case, it is difficult for her to welcome the early arrival with the cordiality she wants to express. She must not give the impression of realizing her friend has come too soon, and this means she must not appear to have things wait for her to do

Such a situation is awkward. It need not happen if we give a little thought to it. For example, if we find it took less time to get to the house than we had expected, we can walk around the block, or wait in some store, if there is one near enough. We must save our hostess from embarrassment by some method, and allow her the opportunity for readiness. We can arrive on the dot of time set, and feel no qualms if the hostess is not ready to receive us. It is for her to be ready then, and it is correct for us to arrive then-but not before. Most hostesses, however flurried during the final moments, are ready on time to welcome punctual guests with graclous hospitality.

Painting Brick

Well-aged brick, stucco and concrete require no different paint from other exterior work. If these surfaces are not well-aged, however, they should be given special primers which usually contain tung oll varnishes. Any high quality house paint may then be used for the finishing coats. Or, if preferred, special stucco or brick coatings may be used. Ordinary brick, concrete and srucco are unusually porous. This porosity is an advantage from a painter's point of view because it algood. That is, how to keep everyone lows the paint to penetrate deeply and

PATTERN 9086

For a tiny girl's play or school frock nothing could be very much nicer than this adorable little bloomer frock with its quaint over-theshoulder yoke and prettily puffed sleeves. The frock is simple to slip into, too, buttoning up the front, with only three buttons to be fastened. And it allows plenty of room for romping-the skirt is gathered to the yoke at the back and box-pleated in front. A smart checked or plaid wool or cotton would be pretty for this frock-little girls always seem to love gay colors-and be sure to make up four or five of those crisp white collars in linen or pique. The bloomers, by the way, are included in this pattern.

Pattern 9086 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2% yards 36 inch fabric and 14 yard contrasting.

Electricity has brought a new era of dependable service to West Texas in recent years. Twentyfour hours of the day, approximately 43,000 homes and places of business served by this Company in 160 towns and communities rely on this service in some way every minute of the day.

Its large variety of uses acclaim its acceptance as a necessary service. Homes employ it as a means of lighting, washing and ironing, refrigeration, cleaning, water heating, cooking, air conditioning; for the operation of the radio and many small appliances. The uses of electricity in industry are innumerable. Almost every task has in some way been lightened and more nearly perfected by this necessary service. It has truly served all the pople in some way and has shared immeasurably in our progress.

The West Texas Utilities Company has provided this service practically uninterrupted and economically cheap. No greater words of praise could be spoken of this service than that our customers have become so accustomed to its reliability, until today it has become a commonplace item of the household and place of business.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule . . . and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

HELP FROM JULIAN

By R. H. WILKINSON

EGINNING with the day that Julian Merrie had blackened the eye of the town bully for trying to kiss Nita Crandon. Julian had been Nita's hero.

At the time of the eye blackening, the pair had been aged twelve and

It was possible, she thought, that Julian might not take kindly to this most important of all requests.

It was possible he'd laugh at her, chide her, make light of the situation.

That would hurt. And to be hurt right now, especially by Julian, would be torture. Nita took the time to reflect back to the day when Julian had blackened Nita did not return the grin. She sat down on the wharf's edge, letting her feet dangle, and stared soberly out over the shimmering blue of the lake.

Julian puckered his brow into frown, ceased idly drumming with a hammer handle on the gunwale, and waited. He knew the signs.

Presently Nita said, without looking

"Julian, ever since we've been kids I've come to you with my problems, heaped my burdens on your shoulders. And you've always been kind and help-Always sort of-looked after Julian scratched his chin with a grimy forefinger.

"Sure, Nita, why not? You've always been like a sister to me. Why shouldn't I look after you?" Nita gnawed at her lips and hesitat-

"Julian, I'm in trouble now, and you've got to help me." Julian slid down on the wharf close beside her. "Of course, Nita."

Nita turned and looked at him squarely.

"Julian, I'm in love!" Julian's jaw sagged open.

Surprise, pain, incredulity came into his eyes and were replaced by blank astonishment. "In love, Nita! You! In love! Nita, for heaven's sake" Nita suddenly looked away.

"I knew you wouldn't believe me:

knew you wouldn't take me seriously. Oh, Julian, can't you understand that it's driving me insane!" Julian guiped and laid a grimy hand on her white frock. "But Nita I do understand, Of course. You took me by surprise. I-Nita buried her face in her hands. "That's just it. That's why I came to you. He won't ask me!"

"Won't ask you! You mean he doesn't love you! Why, the skunk, I'll -just tell me his name! He can't get away with a thing like that !"

At last Nita turned to look at him. "Julian, can't you think of some way?"

Julian adn't return her look. "Nita, I don't want you to get married!"

"Don't want me to! Julian, whatever are you saying? Why shouldn't I get married? Why don't you want me

He didn't reply at once, and Nita went on:

"I know what you're thinking. You're thinking he's a cad for making me miserable. But he isn't, Julian. He's wonderful and grand and handsome. And, oh, he could make me so happy. I've waited and waited for him to propose. And-and now, Julian, I've come to you for help. You simply must think of something!" Julian turned at last and met her gaze squarely. "It isn't that that I was thinking. Nita. I wasn't thinking about him, or how miserable he's made you, or how to solve your problem." Nita looked at him aghast.

"You weren't! Then you don't care! Then you won't help me; don't want to help me?"

"I was thinking," Julian went on, "that it isn't fair. It isn't fair at allto have you want to marry."

"Fair? I don't believe I understand, Julian. What isn't fair?" "It isn't fair," said Julian, drawing close to her, "it isn't fair to have you

He kissed her again and again. Hot passionate kisses that sent little tremors vibrating through her body.

At last he released her, looked flercely into her eyes. "It isn't fair," he continued huskily, "for you to want to marry some one else, when I love you madly, when I've always loved you, when I've dreamed endlessly of the day when I can claim you all for my own. That's what isn't

Birthplace of Permanent Wave Claimed by Britain

It is interesting to learn, as one of the results of the hairdressing exhibition at Olympia, says the Manchester Guardian Weekly, that it is British "Glad you dropped over. Soon's as | ered, in the year 1907, the art of applying a permanent wave to tresses that would otherwise be as straight as the path of duty.

For it seems an epoch-making event to have put the permanent wave on the restless sea of fashion-perhaps the most important contribution to waves and their behavior from this country since Britannia began to rule them. One has a feeling that other countries might possibly challenge the British origin of what is now so widespread an addition to the resources of civilization-but then other countries are always challenging something, including the original Britannia's supposedly commanding interest in wave management on the ocean

And any little arguments over the waves of the hair are certainly likely to lead to less trouble than conflicts about command of the sea. In the matter of expense there may be not much in it; it possibly costs about as much to keep all the permanent waves of old England in working order (for their permanence is not so imperishable as it sounds) as it does to build a few battleships.

Largest Ranches

Probably the largest ranch in the United States, according to Winter's book "Texas the Marvelous," is the X I T ranch in the panhandle section of Texas, owned by the Farwell brothers of Chicago. This is said to amount to three million acres in all. The King ranch, situated in Kleberg county, Texas, is over a million acres. The Kennedy ranch in Texas near the gulf coast, is about 800,000 acres. The Hearst ranch at San Simeon, Calif., is about 240,000 acres. The Arnold X U ranch in northwest Nebraska and southwest South Dakota is about 100,000 acres. According to Winkler's biography of Hearst, the Mexican Hearst ranch at Babicora, Chihuahua, is a million acres, Another million acre ranch in Durango, Mexico, is that of Higginbotham brothers of Dallas.

A NEED FOR SHOES

T WAS Napoleon who uttered that aphorism about an army "traveling on its stomach." Gen. Robert E. Lee, the great Confederate commander, knew that, too. But, looking at the foot-sore men in gray with whom he was invading Pennsylvania in the summer of 1863, he knew that they needed something else besides food. The footgear of most of them was battered and worn. Many were hobbling along barefoot. They must have shoes!

Lee had selected Cashtown, Pa., as his concentration point. But Gen. Jubal Early, leading a cavalry raid into the Keystone state, sent word back to Maj. Gen. Harry Heth that the little town of Gettysburg abounded with footwear that might be had for the taking. Heth directed Pettigrew, one of his brigadiers, to look into the shoe situation at Gettysburg. On the morning of June 30 Pettigrew was just about to enter the sleepy little Pennsylvania Dutch town when far tothe south he saw a long dark column. Through nis glasses he identified it as a large detachment of northern horsemen and, though reluctant to abandon the chance to get the much-needed shoes, he decided to retire.

When Gen. John Buford, commander of a division of Union cavalry, rode into Gettysburg a little later, the citizens told him of the men in gray who had approached the town and then retreated. He knew they would be back, probably in much larger force, but he decided to stand his ground.

They did come back the next morning-this time General Heth's entire division, to get those all-important shoes. So the battle of Gettysburg, the greatest battle ever fought on this continent, began. And the thing which determined that it would be fought near this little Pennsylvania town and make it forever famous was the need of Robert E. Lee's men for shoes. . . .

UPPER OR LOWER

THEY were getting ready to hold a dance at one of Ben Holladay's stage stations on the Overland trail. It wasn't a very big building so, to make room for the dancers, employees at the station had fitted their cots with hinges, swung them up against the side walls and strapped them there.

One of the stage passengers at the dance was a young New Yorker named George M. Pullman. Chatting with Henry Carlisle, a freighter, he happened to mention what an uncomfortable night he had spent, sitting up in a day-coach on a Lake Shore train from Buffalo to Chicago.

"Why don't the railroads build sleeping cars with beds in 'em?" asked Carlisle. "They've oeen trying to," answered Pullman. "Some of them have bunks along one side but they're awkward and inconvenient."

"They ought to see what Ben Holladay's men have done and fix their bunks in the railroad cars like they do it here," Carlisle said, pointing to the cots strapped up against the walls.

When Pullman went back east he remembered this conversation. He began experiments on the Chicago and Alton railroad that resulted eventually in perfecting the sleeping cars which now bear his name. Years later, when Carlisle retired from the plains to his home in Missouri, he received a pass which entitled him to enjoy a comfortable night's rest whenever he traveled on any railroad line over which the cars of George M. Pullman operated.

. . . A STRAY HORSE

PETER O'RILEY and Patrick Me-Laughlin were busy at a spring near the head of Six-Mile canyon in Nevada, trying to wash out enough pay dirt to keep them in grub. As they toiled at their job a horseman rode up.

He was another prospector, Henry Thomas Paige Comstock. He had turned his horse out to rustle for itseif and the animal had strayed away. His search along the mountain slopes had finally been successful and now he was riding back to the little settlement, hopefully called Gold Hill.

Comstock glanced down at the contents of the Irishmen's "rocker." You've struck it, boys!" He exclaimed. "The only trouble is, that you've struck it on my land. You know I bought this spring from old man Caldwell. And I took a hundred and sixty acres here for a ranch."

O'Riley and McLaughlin protested at Comstock's "horning in" this way, but be made his bluff stick. So his name went on the location notice with theirs. Later he was to sell out his share for $11,000. But his bluff was destined to win him an immortality which he little dreamed of at the time.

For the two Irishmen, panning for gold, had uncovered ore which assayed as high as $4,791 in silver to the ton There, later was opened the world fa-mous Ophir mine and there the greatest mining town this continent has ever known, Virginia City. The source of all these riches bears the name of the owner of the stray horse. It was the famous Comstock Lode,

Chic Worsted for Suit and Ensemble

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to topnotch swank, audactous color schemes and versatile weaves the new worsteds which go to make up the spring suits and ensembles have arrived at a dramatic moment in their career.

It is nothing uncommon in the advance spring styles parade for an en-semble to be fashioned of a skirt of woolen, a blouse of another with the jacket, coatee or long coat still another type and color. Yet in the final analysis the entire outfit will have correlated into a perfect unit of highest artistry.

The call of the immediate mode is for the suave and slim fitted tailored suit which has a related topcoat of heavier wool to go with it. The ensemble to the left in the picture is typical of the new suit-with-topcoat movement. The skirt and jacket is of light oxford gray wool, with a long top ragian of two-tone stripe novelty woolen. Later this topcoat can be worn as a separate wrap with other

Buttons above the waistline as employed in the fastening of this coat and unusually wide belt are also featured details in the incoming fashlons. The wide collar is of navy woolen which is quilted in wide welts. Volumes could be written about the new quilted, stitched and shirred effects which embellish dresses, coats, hats and everything in sight which is quiltable, stitchable or shirrable.

The new "companion woolens" brought out this season provide endless opportunity to designers to work out striking and original fashions. A laceweave tweed for the suit with a lacier lighter weight wool for the blouse done in overchecks of white, the ground color matching the color of the suit material gives some faint idea of the handsome combinations in store for fashion's followers this season

Another model consists of a fitted suit in cinnamon brown wool with a loose topcoat in the same woolen which is striped in white. Then again a light and soft texture suiting in diagonal weave is apt to have a companion woolen in interesting plaided patterning which introduces bright colors and it is even possible to detect hem with a brown exford topcoat held an interweaving of gold or silver metal threads.

Rustic weaves in coatings are high style for sportswear, such as a basket weave check in soft spongy texture, one color running one way and a contrasting shade running the other, also handknit and carpet-weave effects which are colorful and sturdy in appearance.

MUST HAVE VELVET TOUCH TO ENSEMBLE

Even if you don't want to wear a velvet frock or suit this year, there should be a touch of velvet about you if you are to be truly smart and luxurious looking.

A turban of velvet ribbon done with intricate twists and drapings is always good when worn by the picturesque of exotic type. The tall Russian hats of sleek velvet also are good, as are the pill-box hats with rhinestone ornaments and flirtatious veil. These are nice to pestle in huge, upstanding fur coat cel-

Then, too, there are afternoon bags of velvet, many of them shirred and trimmed with rhinestone or mirror or naments.

Though Clothes Are Very Chic, They Are Practical

Clothes are ever so smart this season. but at no time have the designers lost sight of the practical. Thus we have tunics that are strikingly elaborate, yet they will give new life to an old eve ning frock, or a long, slim skirt. These tunics come in beautiful fabric, some-times they are rhinestone studded or else they have bands of spangles. One beautiful model that we saw was of heaviest lame in silver and green. The very draped neck was caught in front with a jeweled ornament, and bracelets caught the loose sleeves into tight cuffs. This could go over an evening dress to make a lovely outfit.

Frothiness

Net dresses, sometimes complement ed by capes, all are marked by extreme frothiness about the neck, shoul-ders and bem lines. Black, turquoise, pink, brown and peach are the favorite colors in order of their popularity.

Sport Sweaters

The smartest of sports sweaters show a decided English influence in their conformation to more or less simple and classic styles, softest saras and unusual pastel off-tones.

WHO REMEMBERS THOSE LONG AGO ASAFETIDA BAGS?

Webster's dictionary defines asafetida as a "feted gum resin of various Persian and East Indian apiaceous plants. It is used as a medicine, and it has a strong odor and taste of garlic.'

Mr. Webster is kind in his definition, as anyone who ever has worn one of the oldtime asafetida bags, so common to the last generation, will Scarcely 25 years ago, before children were reared on "bottled sun-shine," sun lamps, violet rays and other modern scientific devices, asafetida bags were as much a part of rural school equipment as the copybook and speller. In fact, they were more quickly recognized when the wearer entered those hot, steaming morning.

It always seemed that one of the tragedies of life was the fact that the prettiest girl in the room wore an asafetida bag. It made her a marked person, and only a strong personality undoubtedly kept her from developing an inferiority complex. With the arrival of spring each year she was saved, as a diet of "yarbs" and sassafras tea replaced the obnoxious bag she wore around her throat.

The agonies she must have endured in her mother's quest for health are unimaginable, and, indeed, her own children now owe science an undying vote of thanks for discoveries which eliminated the use of asafetida, at least in its most obtrusive form.

Possibly the one thing lacking in these modern air-conditioned schoolrooms, where germs and disease are banned, is the old familiar smell of asafetida "which has a strong offer and taste of garlic." Granting that the scientific inventions of today are applied successfully with less wear and tear on the human body and disposition than the methods used in the last generation, yet may it not be that something of sentiment still lin gers in the memories associated with its old uses?

Perhaps it is not too remote a suggestion that when the modern mother applies the "bottled sunshine" to Junior and Mary she sighs and possibly wishes for a return to those good old days when she wore an ass CROCHETED RUG fetida bag.-Boston Herald.

Indian "Medicine"

A Lyons man who is convinced that the editor knows Indian "medicine" asked if we could not do some thing to chase zero weather away. We have to confess we did not be cause we are not thoroughly schooled in the dark arts of the redskin.

But we do know, from him, how to bring cold weather so that furs and skins may be better, that animals may be tracked in the snow and that spring may not come dangerously soon. You take a small boy and strip him naked. Then you start him going north from the village, cursing the north wind and defying the north wind to come and meet him. It will not be long until he comes running back with the old north wind growling at his heels and the frost king nipping his tender posterior.-Lyons at Sight of Airplane Birds are more frightened or airplanes than are big game, an English aviator reports. When flying over Britain I have noticed that the pheasant, partridge, and even the omesticated hen, are thoroughly scared when an airplane drones in their direction. They appear to think that a plane is a giant hawk about to swoop down on them. It is a curious assertion among people who lived on the east coast of Britain during the World war that they received their first warning of impending Zeppelin raids from pheasants. These pheasants invariably awoke began calling to each other and scuttered away in fright long before the Constipated?

The doctors say . . . Use liquid treatment

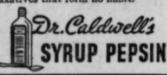

Here is the soundest advice anyone can give on the subject of laxatives. It is based on medical opinion. We want you to have the benefit of this information no matter what laxative you may buy:

The secret of real relief from constipation is reduced dosage. You can't regulate the bowels unless you can regulate the help you give them. That is why doctors use a liquid laxative; the dose can be measured to a drop.

Avoid laxatives that you can't cut down in dosage; especially those that seem to require larger doses than when you began their use.

Under the doctor's care, you usually get a liquid laxative. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. Smaller and smaller doses—until you don't need any.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—natural laxatives that form no habit.

SYNOPSIS

The luck that had brought the Boston Lawrences to California at the beginning of the gold rush has deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clippersville. The death of their poetic father forced the three eldest children to work so that Sam and little Ariel might continue their education. Phil, now twenty-five, had gone into the iron work, Gail to the public library and Edith to the book department of Clippersville's largest store. Seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem, and Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, scion of a wealthy family, returns from Vale, He and Gail had been close friends before he went The luck that had brought the Bos family, returns from Yale. He and Ganhad been close friends before he went to college and Gall has visions of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, has the

He had brought a large box with him; a florist's box.

"Dick, don't tell me you remem bered my birthday?" Gail exclaimed as he gave it to her.

"Whose birthday?" "Mine."

Dick's dissatisfied look traversed the circle. "I didn't know today was your birthday," he said resentfully. "No-I just met the boy bringing this in." Gall was paying no attention to him. Her fingers had been experiencing the unfamiliar delight of tearing away green strings and cardboard and massed layers of silky green paper. Roses-wet, sweet roses, two dozen of them!

"A dozen and a half," Edith breathed, awed. "Two dozen, Ede."

Gall had wrenched the card from its wire and torn open the wet envelope; the ink on the card was blurred, but the words unmistakable. "Twenty-three times twenty-three more. Love from Van."

She seemed amused and pleased; they were all pleased. But Gail's moderately gratified manner gave no hint of the bubbling geyser of ecstasy that arose within her. This was almost un-believable. Roses—and the intimate, offhand card from Van Murchison! Gail was only confusedly aware of what went on about her, of what the others were saying.

"School tonight, Phil?" Dick asked. "Oh, sure!"

They went off together and, in a happy daze, Gail began automatically business of clearing up. Her thoughts swam in a sea of golden

Gall had come into Ariel's was her habit the last thing at night, to see that her little sister was comfortably in bed. She kissed Ariel, and smoothed the discarded folds of blanket at the foot of the bed.

When she left the room Ariel seemed to be almost asleep.

Edith, meanwhile, had come into Gail's room. "When all's said and done-" she began, and paused. "Which God forbid should ever be!"

Gail interposed. "Well, I know. But when all's said and done, Gail, who are the Murchisons? They've nothing but money."

Edith said. "Still . . . money. . . . " Gall was laughing at her sister, but Edith did not resent it.

"Of course." She answered the uncompleted suggestion with a smile. "But I mean that money isn't-isn't like birth," she pursued.

Gail went about the room quickly, long adept in the business of making it ready for the night. She said her prayers in a brisk, businesslike way, with her eyes on Edith's face, and got into bed. Her sister came to sit at

"It would be wonderful if one of us married well," Edith offered dreamily. "On the strength of two dozen roses, Gall countered. "At a time of the year when roses are two dollars a

"They have scads," Edith mused, undiverted.

"Murchison's Mills. I suppose they have millions." Gail agreed soberly. "But he's not really a Murchison, Ede." "He was adopted. Nobody ever calls him Kinney.

"Was he legally adopted?" "Oh, yes. He was only five when his mother got a divorce, and when Van's father died Mr. Murchison practically adopted him." "How'd you happen to know that, "Reading a book about old CHppers ville-you know that crazy book that hardly mentions Grandfather? Well, it had all about some lawsuit, and the Chipps and the Kinneys were in it." "He's awfully nice," Gail said impulsively, out of a silence. "He must be. . . . Is he handsome, Gall?" "Oh-collegiate-looking."

Edith was silent for a full minute. Then she said, with conviction, "You ought to come to Muller's and get one of those striped linens."

"I was thinking I'd gat one of those dotted swiss dresses at the sale. They're three-fifty."

As for Gall, for many months she had known herself to be sinking into utter commonplaceness. As time went on she was becoming more and more drab little Miss Lawrence of the fibrary; I'hil more and more the quiet. hard-working, underpaid iron worker: Edith more and more bookish, old-

The joyous promise of the romantic Lawrence youngsters had long been lost. Phil had told Gail, with a little patient bitterness, that it was to the Hunter and the Barchi boys that all advancement at the Iron Works had been given. Months had gone by without seeing one single "You ought to get both," Edith said eligible man coming to the Lawrence

Hardest of all for Gail to lose had There was another silence in the big, been her faith in herself. She had dim, old-fashioned bedroom, whose been so sure, at sixteen, seven long heavy brocade wall papers had not years ago, that courage, self-confibeen changed or cleaned for twenty dence, high spirits, and honest service years, and whose windows were still were the weapons with which to conquer the world. She had been so sure "Isn't it fun, the way unexpected things happen!" Edith said. that she knew the secret! She had seen herself writing children's stories. Oh, nothing sensational, nothing classical - but simple, charming, boarding-school and ranch stories that all girls would love, and that would assure Gail pleasant fame among her townspeople, insure her an "You know we are. I mean-Phil's income that would mean pleasure and so handsome and so smart, and everybeauty for Ariel's girlhood, and an opone likes Sam, and everyone regards portunity to develop the little sister's Ariel as a sort of genius, who's going poetical genius. to inherit Papa's gift, and you-you

But it seemed that forever-forever -forever the once lucky Lawrences would be poor, shabby, hardworking, Challenge, and that was only because it and obscure, that Phil would help to build ships in which luckler men should cruise the waters of the world. tions always took prizes at school, and that Edith would sell to more fortunate women the romances she would never realize in her own life, and Gail taste in her own mind only the rap-"Well, I know," Gail pondered it ture of typewritten pages, the ecstasy a minute, and then said with a suddenof holding her own book in her own hands, the shy delight of being inone who had any money. Ede, and troduced in distinguished gatherings didn't have to work so hard and worry as "the authoress."

Now, on her twenty-third birthday, unexpectedly. Van Murchison had given her back these dreams. Oh, how good she could be, how gracious and sweet and fine she could be if Van Murchison fell in love with her! That was all she needed, just a break-just an indication that wonderful things could happen, that poor girls were sometimes sought in marriage by rich young men.

Young Mrs. Murchison. After all, if she was married at-say this time next year-nobody could say that she had been an old maid. Twenty-fourthat was young to marry. And then Ede should marry-it would be easy enough to find beaux for the other girls, with the Murchison money and position behind her! The fun of it! The beauty of It!

And why not? Other girls had had that much luck, and much, much more, Drowsing off to sleep in the sweet summer darkness, Gall heard a door bang downstairs, just as the clock struck a drowsy eleven. The Lawrences, having little to protect, rarely locked doors; perhaps this was Sam coming in late, perhaps it was Phil. Anyway, unless it banged again she did not propose to get up to bother with it.

As it happened, it was neither, but Gail could not know that, and so she drifted happily off into the deep sleet of tired twenty-three. Van Murchison's laugh, bis voice, still in her ears.

Sam had been in bed and asleep for an hour when the clock struck eleven. Phil had walked home from night school with Lily. He was now sitting on the steps of the Cass shanty at the end of Thomas street, mur muring incoherent and foolish absurdities to the little ear that smelled of heavy cheap powder and perfume.

No; the door had been slammed by Ariel-or rather it had been caught and slammed by an unexpected gust of wind when her small frail hand had opened it upon the summer dark. She had stood there, trembling, terrified. waiting to see if Sam or Gall or Edith had been roused, ready to fly to her room and scramble into bed at the first sound of an investigating footstep.

But there had been no disturbance upstairs, and after an interminable silence Ariel had opened the door again, noiselessly this time, and had slipped down through the overgrown garden, and into the deep green-black shadows at the gate. In a sky of clear dark blue millions of stars had been twinkling, and in the side lane, deeply rutted from winter rains, there had been two other stars, the watchful lamps of a shining low open car.

Ariel knew Buddy Raisch very slightly, but she knew, as all the town knew, that he was an overgrown big boy who had been in Stanford university for about three years and was still a sophomore, She knew what the scent of Buddy's breath signified, too,

Of the couple sunk in the rumble seat, an overcoated man with a col lapsed little bobbed, slick head on his shoulder, she had known nothing. But she had settled in beside the driver with a little gasp of satisfaction and excitement.

Buddy had whispered, "Lissen we're only going down the road a ways, and come back." "That suits me," Ariel had said.

unperturbed. "You're a good little sport," Buddy had told her. They were out of hear ing of the Lawrence house now, and he could move faster. He had stepped on the gas, and the car had shot like a projectile into the starry night. TO BE CONTINUED

By ARCH SELWYN

Theatrical Producer. "A RNOLD ROTHSTEIN always fascinated me, although he was a menace to organized society. I had known him as a boy. He came from upright people, who felt disgraced when he ran away from home, to follow the career of a gambler. I always followed news of his career," related Arch Selwyn, the theatrical producer. "Rothstein had a weird and definite premonition of fate that was going overtake his later career, and he didn't run away from it."

In the fading twilight of a day, wherein Mr. Selwyn had watched the rehearsal of his new play, "The Devil Passes," and wherein later he would watch its premiere, he had turned from talk of the theater to talk of colorful personalities in the arena of daily life who live dangerously, and of the dangers, seen and unseen, which pur-

"I once told Rothstein," he continued, "that I would like to see a certain gambling house where, it was reputed the leaders of gangdom gambled with one another, and where fabulous sums were exchanged, in cash."

Mr. Selwyn is a good theatrical producer and the sight of $50,000 in cash is a good show, even to a veteran the-

"Rothstein promised to take me to a private house in New York city to watch the gambling. One night he called me for dinner. A Mr. B. joined us and Rothstein exacted from us the promise that neither of us would gamble. "This gang," he said, "has a code and a language all its own, and you fellows can't play with it."

"Rothstein started to throw the dice. The first bet was $25,000.

"Mr. B., an indefatigable gambler, who made large sums, but who was in the habit of letting them slip by. was soon gambling, despite Rothstein's warning. Rothstein scolded him, but he started to play again, and won $1,-500. He wanted to get away from the place. There were too many 'bruisers,' too many desperate-looking characters staring at his winnings for him to feel easy. Rothstein commanded him to wait for him, but he refused. Rothstein told him to await him at Dinty Moore's.

"In the meantime, Rothstein was losing. In the end he lost $300,000 to three men. Usually these men in gangdom pay their gambling debts at once, in cash. This time, Rothstein could not pay in cash. However, he promised to pay soon.

"In fifteen minutes, after B.'s departure, Rothstein called me from the scene which had fascinated me like a bizarre foreign spectacle. He rushed

"There, in a panic, in the cold perspiration of fear was B. He collapsed before us.

"'You can't imagine what happened to me,' he whispered. 'When I came down the steps, three fellows stuck their guns in me and ordered, "Hand over the $1,500." I never was so frightened.'

"'Didn't I tell you to wait for me?' said Rothstein.

"'Yes, but,' began B.

"'You'll learn not to gamble with guys like those," Rothstein admonished. Then, seeing that B, was trembling, he said. 'Give back the money,' to the fellows in the corner whom had planted on the stairway to give B. a scare.

"The frightening experience was not the end of a sequence of affairs revolving about that night's losses, as I was soon to learn. I had intended to go sight-seeing, but when one sightsees in gangdom it is not the history of the event but the future ramifications that have significance for anyone who goes near.

"Two months later I was in the Warwick hotel, where it happened Rothstein had an apartment. He saw me in the lobby and said he wanted to talk to me. 'It's about those fellows I lost that money to. They sure have been giving me a ride. I can't pay now. I will later, but I must stall them off.

"We went upstairs. The phone rang. Rothstein's premonition now haunted him. After answering it, Rothstein said, 'It's those very boys calling me. They want me to come over to the hotel.'

"'Why do you go?' I asked. "'Because if I don't they will think am a coward trying to run away. I know what it means, I must go.' "That night Rothstein was fatally shot. He had several chances to tell who shot him. He refused, "There is nothing more ghostly or macabre than thus coming face to face with a consummated premonition of violent death."
