"When a man neglects to make previsions for his own retirement and comfort, it is like getting caught mapping off second after a two bagger. A man's most productive years take him only half way around life's bases and unless somebody comes to bat who can deliver the goods, his chance of getting home safely is slim. IT'S BEEN FUN

By FRANCES HEATH ©. McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

USTY'S brown face was spotlighted by the match that he touched to his cigarette.

"This is our last night together." Leila laughed but didn't mean it.

"Well, let's make it good!"

"Yes. Let's have fun!"

That had been their theme song all summer. Whether it was lying on the warm sand of the beach where Rusty guarded lives, or dancing at Dick's dive, or saying good night on the wide porch of Leila's home, they had had

"What'll we do, Rusty?"

Leila hung on his answer. She hoped he would say. "Let's get your And that meant they would ease the green roadster out of the garage, drive about thirty miles, very fast, to a certain lane that wound through an apple orchard. They would talk a little and laugh a lot. Then she would say, "Perhaps my father could get you a job in the city."

And he would answer as he had the other time she had suggested it, "But I like it here. I have a perfectly good job all season. In the winter I help my father with the garage."

"But Rusty, don't you want to be

The boys she knew were always saying, and only half of it was in fun, "When I get to be the city's best known surgeon-" or "I'll be a better judge than he is when-

Rusty would say, "I am somebody," with a flash of his strong white teeth, and a gleam in his bright blue eyes, that only partly denied the egotism of his words.

And he'd kiss her ear and maybe he'd thrill her with, "Leila, will you stay here and marry me? Don't go back to the city tomorrow with your parents."

If only he would say it.

But Rusty suggested the beach instead. It was just a kid's party. They were glad to see Rusty and proffered hot dogs and burnt marshmallows.

One of the girls started strumming her uke. Leila thought, I wonder if she was Rusty's girl?

"All I do the whole day through Is dream of you-"

Everybody was listening. But she was singing to Rusty. Leila wondered if Michael felt like that when she deserted him and the Beach club and the crowd, for Rusty. guardian of the public beach, and his

"Come on, Rusty. Let's go." Leila had had enough.
"O. K.! We're off to Dick's, kids.

Don't do anything I'd do."

"Be seeing you." The girl with the guitar called after them.

"Who is she?" Leila asked,

"Dot Kestor." "Native?"

"Kid, the way you say 'native,' anyone'd think you were holding your What's wrong with being a na-

"Why nothing, certainly. I didn't mean it to sound that way-"

"Skip it!" They were in the shadows and he caught her roughly in his arms. "Baby, I-" Leila thought Dot and some boy passed by, but she wasn't sure. It must have been Dot though, be cause she was at Dick's when they finally arrived. "Hello!" they a!! said casually.

Dick's was just an old barn. The orchestra consisted of four pieces and what they lacked in music they made up in noise. Apple highs were a quarter and they were the best bet because Dick made his own applejack. The crowd was almost wholly native with a smattering of cooks and chauffeurs from the ocean colony. "I just love this place." Leila was doing a hop, skip and a jump dance that threatened the shins of the other dancers. She was laughing up into Rusty's face when Michael and the club crowd came in. "Slumming," she heard Suzanne Engle say. They smiled

a cool. "Hello Lella."

She looked from her table to theirs. At hers the girls were Dot and Gert and Alma. At the table across the room sat Detzi, Suzanne, and Meryl. They were wearing a forecast of the autumn's fashions, while she and the natives were wearing what they had worn since May. And except for Rusty, Leila much preferred the crowd across the room.

"Dance with me?" Dot was asking Rusty. "Sure thing. 'Scuse me. Leila."

Leila lighted a cigarette and slowly sipped her drink. They must have danced together a lot, she thought. Then she caught the flash of Michael's gray eyes and she laughed and winked at him. He was such a stunning thing. Too bad he couldn't flutter her the way

The band started their version of a rhumba. Dot and Rusty danced on. They were looking straight into each other's eyes. The girl's brown ones were saying, "You and I belong." Lefla could read it, but Rusty could only

"Oh good, they're going to do their dance," someone at the table said. Faster and faster went the music until the floor was cleared by breathless ouples who left Dot and Rusty to finish it alone. Dot had a hard time stopping. She slumped to the floor and her ankle turned. She limped back to the table holding fast to Rusty.

"Leila, mind if I take Dot home?" "Not at all." Leila was carefully rouging her red lips. "Til wait for Two by two the gang drifted out, each couple offering to see Leila home. But she stayed though she knew he wouldn't come back.

Dick came over to her. "We're closing up, Miss Leila. Want me to take you home?"

"Thanks, Dick, I'll see to her." Michael had her by the hand.

"Nice of you to come back for me." He squeezed her hand

"Is there a moon?" she asked. "Yeah."

"Are there stars?"

"Uh, huh." "I wouldn't know."

Michael was silent for a long time. A kind and understanding silence. Then he said, "You're a sweet kid, Leila. It's been a dull summer with-

"Mike, you're a swell guy." "Skip it."

"By any chance, Mike, you didn't go native, too, did you?" 'Yeah-how'ja guess it? I've been trailing around with Dot Kestor." "Have fun?" "You bet! What are you laughing

"You and Dot. Rusty and me. Do you hurt?"

"No. Dot's a swell kid, but-" "Well I do. I hurt like h-l. Can you imagine it, Mike? I saw myself hanging curtains at the windows over his father's garage. I almost proposed it. I wonder what Rusty would have

They both laughed into each other's eyes, and found themselves clasping hands and swinging arms as they walked down the lane under stars that seemed not quite so far off.

Relics of the Stone Age

Days Are Found in West Traces of a "Stone age" civilization which apparently prevailed many centuries ago in northern Montana have been unearthed by Prof. H. M. Sayre of the Montana school of mines, writes a Butte United Press correspendent.

Professor Sayre, on a 1,400-mile exploration trip through the northern, eastern, and central sections of the state, found hundreds of circles, 8 to 15 feet in diameter, made of stones. No evidence was obtainable regarding the use to which these circles might have been devoted.

He also investigated long rows of stones 1 to 3 feet high, which in some cases were a mile in length.

It is thought the stones were placed by a tribe that occupied the plains section before the Crow, Cheyenne, and Blackfeet Indians took over the territory. Ancient legends of the Blackfeet, referring to a tribe "that lived without fire," are believed to concern the stone builders.

Professor Sayre also found a giant stone hammer, weighing more than 20 pounds-too large to have been wielded by a man of ordinary strength.

Near the town of Hinsdale, in northeastern Montana, the professor discovered a layer of buffalo bones 3 feet deep and 18 feet wide. The bones lay at the bottom of a steep bluff. Profes sor Sayre believes this to be evidence of a buffalo hunting ground used in a remote period-so remote it is not even chronicled in the legends of more modern tribes.

It was the custom of the Indians to drive buffalo over a sharp bluff or cliff during their hunting forages, then destroy the crippled animals with bows and arrows.

Paris Has Oversupply of Museums Nobody Visits

Paris has more museums than any other city in the world, but most of them are never required to disclose their treasures. Everybody knows about the Louvre, the Cluny, the Luxembourg and the Carnavalet, but the Paris correspondent of the Observer of London says there are hundreds of others to which hardly anyone ever goes at all:

"Private collectors bequeath their treasures to the state or the municipality, or else to the Institut de France. together with the house in which they lived, which is to become the museum. A curator is appointed, these small curatorships having become a recognized sort of pension fund for literary men. The house is open at regular hours, but nobody ever thinks of visiting it.

"Who, for instance, knows the Musee d'Ennery, the rather inferior collection of Chinese and Japanese works of art, brought together by a playwright who made a fortune out of melodramas and left by him to his country, together with a house in the Avenue Foch, the best address in

"Who has ever been inside the Musee Gustave Moreau, the house of that indifferent Nineteenth century painter, which he made a public legacy on condition that his works-and the gal lery contains nothing else-should be shown? Who could even find the way to the Musee Henner, another house of a painter, full of his paintings?

"There are galleries of more permanent artistic interest than these, such as the Musee Guimet and the Musee Jacquemart-Andre, but they are too dispersed.

Motorists who know these facts will save money:

Motor oils refined by the usual methods have some oiliness and film strength, but they may form carbon and sludge, which lead to expensive motor repairs.

Other oils may form almost no carbon and sludge, but are so over-refined that they are robbed of oiliness and film strength they need to prevent motor wear.

Germ Processed Oil is refined to eliminate carbon and sludge troubles and then the Germ Process adds extra oiliness and 2 to 4 times more film strength than any mineral oil.*

> YOU will save money on repairs and have a smoother running motor if you use Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil!

> The Germ Process-adding concentrated oily essence to highly refined oil-gives it the extra oiliness and film strength so necessary for full protection of high-powered, high-speed motors. No other oil is made by the Germ Process.

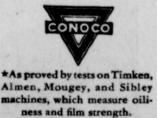

Germ Processed Oil cuts down costly starting wear, which other oils fail to do. It is the only oil with the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away. Germ Processed Oil is free from carbon and sludge troubles. It has a lower rate of consumption and gives longer mileage, as proved by the famous Indianapolis Destruction Test.

Justice Holmes had an unusually large capacity for friendship. He was frequently in company with his close friend. Justice Brandels, with whom he was often seen walking arm in arm. It was said that the two friends were inseparable. Much has been written concerning Justice Holmes' philosophy of life. Among the most salient points are, "a man must face the loneliness of original work." How true this is only those know who are sacrificially engaged in research and in specialized lines of altruistic work. Another maxim was that, "no man's work is done so long as there remains power to do the work." He had no desire for early retirement, preferring the life of active service to one of ease. Another guiding principle was that, "no task was great in itself. Itbecame great when conducted with a great spirit." In a letter to a friend he wrote, "Life is a romantic business. It is painting a picture: not doing a sum, but you have to make the romance." That sentence seems to express the spirit of the great jurist. . Western Newspaper Union.

Earth Slide Revealed Large White Sapphires

Hoquiam, Wash .- Dozens of large white sapphires and great deposits of manganese ore was uncovered by an earth slide that tore away the side to select those which lessen her budget rather than increase it. The kind quires immediate adjustment, and it of soap dishes to avoid are those which is temporarily fixed with no intention tend to keep the soap wet. The kinds of its remaining as it then is. But tend to keep the soap wet. The kinds to choose are those which permit the days and weeks, months, and somesoap to drain off extra moisture and allow air currents to circulate about it and thus aid in the drying out of the cake. It would be supposed that all soap dishes would have these features. but such is not the case. The bottom of a soap dish should be perforated, or else have a perforated soap rest in it raised sufficiently above the bottom of the dish to allow some water to collect in it without touching the soap. These features permit soap to drain after using and to dry quickly from air circulating about the cake. Woven wire or met al slat soap containers are well liked for bathtubs and sinks. The soap drains into tub or sink and dries well, since plenty of air can get to the cake. Slat containers are not so suitable as perforated or woven wire ones. When a cake of soap gets thin it will slip between the slats, which is annoying, and wasteful also, if it falls into water.

An Excellent Kind. The best kind of a soap dish is one with a well-raised removable tray. The tray can be taken out and washed in hot water to open clogged holes, and then dried. The dish can be overturned, emptied, washed and dried, and when parts are combined again the dish is like new. Or if the dish is fastened to the wall it can be wiped out, until clean, and then dried before the cleaned tray is restored to its proper place. With such a soap dish and given such care, soap will be kept in good condition without waste.

There is another style of soap dish popular some years ago in which the perforated tray is made high above the bottom of the dish and yet part of the dish itself. In one side, situated well above the bottom of the soap dish there is a good-size opening. The water which collects under the perforated portion never can come high enough to touch the cake of soap. The dish is emptied by pouring the water out through the opening. It is cleaned by running hot water through the perforations to free them from collected softened soap and to flush the under portion of the dish.

They are descendants of the nine British seamen and the twelve Tabitian women who landed on the island from H. M. S. Bounty 146 years ago. Each of the 200 persons is a descendant of the original 21. Although each person is related to each other, as a result of this close inbreeding, no ill effects can be detected, every man, woman and child being perfectly healthy. "It may be a pure racial type. I did. however, discover one type of more than usual interest, possessing blue eyes, dark hair, and fair skins. At present I have no idea how this type originated. It is what we call a 'disharmonic combination.' We have in this type a most unusual and peculiar combination of colors, from what we

The luck that brought the Boston Lawrences to California at the begin-ning of the gold rush has deserted the Lawrences to California at the beginning of the gold rush has deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clippersville. Phil, now twenty-five, has goue into the iron works, Gail to the public library and Edith to the book department of Clippersville's largest store. Sam is in school, and seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem. Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, scion of a wealthy family, returns from Yale, and Gail has visions, through marriage with him, of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, has the run of the house. Ariel is sneaking out of the house at night for joy rides. Phil suggests, to his sisters" consternation, that they invite Lily Cass to the house. Gail goes with Van for a week-end with the Chipps, his uncle and aunt. She is received coldly by Mrs. Chipps and her guests. At a roadhouse Gail sees a raccoon-coated man helping Ariel into a roadster.

-10-She stopped fiercely, as Gail merely sat, silent. From vague worry and apprehension about Ariel, suddenly the whole fearful danger had sprung upon her. This morning it had been no more than fear; now it was full knowledge.

"You weren't in San Francisco with the Camps, then?" "Oh, yes, I was! We went down from there." "Where was Mrs. Camp?"

"She had to go to San Rafael. She left us at the Fairmont."

"Just you two girls? Did she know you went out that night?" "We didn't tell her-no."

There was a pause. Then Gail said, "Ariel, I can't believe it!"

"You were there," Ariel offered ac cusingly.

"Oh, I know it!" Gail covered her face with her hands.

For the first time the younger sister seemed a little impressed, and she spoke in a lower tone, a tone that had some hint of huskiness or of apology in it.

"If it makes it any-better, we all thought that was a horrible place and that we'd never go there again!"

"You haven't been there before?"

Ariel could even laugh.

"Oh, goodness, no! We just happened, we happened- Here, I'll tell you how it was!" She leaned forward, locking her hands about her knees. "Mrs. Camp and Dorothy were going in to the city on the ten o'clock yesterday morning, to do some shopping and stay overnight, because Mrs. Camp wanted to hear some one preaching at church this morning. See? So they asked me to go, and Mrs. Camp was going to see her aunt in San Rafael, so she said that Dot and I could have lunch together, and go see a movie. Well, at about five we were back at the hotel cleaning up, and she telephoned and said that her aunt was so sick she was going to stay in San Rafael, and we could get four Orpheum seats and ask two boys to go with us. So we were sort of telephoning around for boys, and we got Buddy Raisch and his roadster. Well, that was about all there was to it! Buddy said we could get a grand shore din ner at Mockerson's about ten, if we went to the movie first. But I didn't realize it was forty miles away, and that it would be so foggy."

The horror that had held Gail in a vise since midnight of the night before began to loosen and fade; she could breathe again.

"So you went back to the Fair-

"Certainly we did!"

"What time did you get there?" "About one."

Gail reflected a few minutes, the heavy dark Lawrence brows drawn together in a frown.

"Ariel, you're only seventeen. Do you think men respect a girl who goes about with them at all hours of night, unchaperoned, to places like that?

Don't you want men to respect you?" she asked. "I want to have a good time," Ariel said simply. "Men aren't looking for good, pure, womanly women these days, and don't you fool yourself that they are, Gail! Men want girls to run around with them, and not to be afraid of being kissed-" "Stop, you make me sick!" the older sister said sharply. "Well, it's true. How many men do you know who are going after girls like Ede—paying calls, discussing ideals? Not one!' "And you think," Gail began, warming, "you think you can build a lovely, dignified married life on running around to places like Mockerson's?" "No, I don't," Ariel responded promptly, in the pause. "But I say it's only way you can have a good time, and I want to live, while I'm "Just the same, yeu're not right, Ariel," Gail persisted, "Honor is whatwell, what it always was-and dignity and self-control. If we turn ourselves into animals, we only have to work our way back to decency, sooner or later. Gluttony in food isn't any more expensive than-than developing appetitles for—for—other things—"

"I know what you mean," Ariel relieved her briefly.

"Surely-surely no sane girl, could think that the sort of marriage that goes on now, with jazzing and fighting and divorce—" Gail began eloquently. "Surely no girl thinks that is worth while! Why, girls like that are burned out at twenty. Their lives are over! They're fit for nothing! They go on for a few years . . . Ariel, at your age, to go on as you are going on, is simple ruin."

"And if I sit down at home, then what is it? Why, Gail," Ariel said, in a confident voice, "I'm no fool! I'm not taking any chances."

"Taking any chances!" Gall echoed, rolling up her eyes. There was a pause. "Now, listen, Gail," Ariel began again, in deadly earnest, "You had to lie, to get off on this Chipp party, didn't you?" Gail was checked.

"I'm not proud of it," she said presently, in a shamed voice.

"Why shouldn't you be proud of it? There was nothing wrong in that party. Only you found out that if it depended upon a formal invitation from Mrs. Chipp you simply wouldn't go. Didn't you? Didn't you?"

"Phil isn't my father, after all," Gail offered hesitatingly, unwillingly.

"Nor mine! But Gail," Ariel went on, more confidently, aware that she was gaining ground, "we can't get away from it, we can't have any fun here unless we take chances! Nobody could get away with anything in this town! Just as soon as I can I'm going to get out, and I advise you to! Why, what does it matter," she rushed on-"what does it matter what Van Murchison wants-how much he wants to fool around, how young a kid he is?

This Man Was Far From Thoughts of Marriage.

He's rich, he's going to take his wife East, and abroad. What do you care about the rest? You don't want to change him, you want to marry him. Let him be giddy-Phil said he was giddy. Let him be wasteful and frivolous if he wants to be! What is it to you? He gets you out of Clippersville, and away from these gossiping old busy bodies!" The river of words dazed and terrified Gail. This could not be delicate, ethereal Ariel, pouring out this coarse and dangerous philosophy of life or of death! Ariel, whom they had all thought young, innocent, protected, confessing her determination to grab the first man she could, and escapeescape from Clippersville.

Most terrible of all to Gall was her little sister's easy air of conspiracy, her casual quick assumption that they were both in the same boat. Gail was frantic with alarm. If she told Philip there would be domestic pandemonium, and if she did not, she herself must assume a most appalling responsibility. Perhaps if she could get Ariel to promise-to swear . . .

In the end there were no reproaches. no threats. She slid to her knees beside Ariel's bed, and locked Ariel's hand in her own and, after a long and solemn talk, they promised each other that there should be no more deceiving, no more clandestine parties, everything open and above board, between the two of them at least.

Gail felt oddly old, exhausted with emotion, tired from the confused impressions of these last brilliant, novel days, weak from the reaction from Ariel's revelations—yet she was strangely, deeply happy, too. Some how, in the confession of their mutual adventures, the acknowledgment of their mutual desires, and dreams, she seemed to have come very close to Ariel today. The sense of her responsibility as Ariel's senior, of her big-sistership, was solemn upon her. She loved its weight.

"Not one of them-Edith, Gail, Ariel. Sam - is really self-supporting. thought Phil. "And Cass sends Lily nothing; she doesn't even know where he is! Lily and the three klds-Wuffy and Miles and Daniel. If she came here-if we were married-that'd mean there were nine of us here, eating three meals a day. Twenty-seven meals a day-G-d! Gail might raise the roof, too. She might get Edith and Ariel to fight. But what could they GOES madly on the rage for checks and plaids. Where fashions are at their smartest these animated patternings are flourishing with all their might, both for day and evening wear.

The new plaids and checks are as apt to be "all wool and a yard wide" (more likely fifty-four inches) as they are apt to be of washable synthetics, linens or cottons. In fact among the swanklest weaves going you will find linens done in garish, racy plaids which make up too swagger for words-ever so effective for sports wear.

Then, too, topcoats of gorgeous plaids are going places where they never went before, for women are wearing them during the daytime hours about town and for travel as well as sports. Some have fur collars and some haven't, but they are that good looking with or without you will be envying the fortunates who possess them. The girl seated to the right in the picture is wearing a model which is styled with latest details, such as the bandcut fringe of self material which trims the wide scarf ends and the wide turnover collar. The predominating colors in the plaid for this coat are brown and beige with a streak of orange in its makeup. The same plaid is striking in tones of reds or greens. Her companion is wearing a check suit and if you are wanting to get into something decidedly stylish for spring here's your cue and no mistake about it. This one is black and white but if mood, there is a check to satisfy, such as green with gray, navy with white, brown with tiger yellow. Then, too, there are tweed checks galore out on the field of action. They are smart, to be sure, but we must say there is a regular landslide in the direction of the simple little checks as pictured.

It is ever so good style to wear a tweed wool check skirt with a jacket of plain or the reverse. It is smart, too, to top a plaid or check skirt with a colorful suede jacket.

Plaid taffetas for daytime frocks, either synthetic or pure silk are making a grand success of it this season. A shirtwaist dress of plaid taffeta is in the height of fashion. Likewise a one-piece taffeta frock topped with a redingote of wool in navy or black makes an ideal spring costume.

Myriads of simple little morning and informal afternoon frocks choose plaid for their media. The model on the standing figure plays up bias-to-straight effectively. Novel touches such as buttons in alternate colors and little pock ets set in on the bias add zest to this

The other dress is interesting, too, in that it is made of a star print-little stars instead of the dotted theme and you can get this material with white stars on navy or red and other combinations. A deep pointed collar of white pique and large white buttons tune into the scheme of things most cleverly.

NAVY AND YELLOW

It is good-looking, this girlish frock and hat to match, is it not? It is a film-folk fashion and you know it is Several arrivals consider it a signifi-smart and advance if it originates in cant new silhouette trend, promising Hollywood, as it has. Ruby Keeler wears it. Attention is especially called to it because of its navy and capar, color scheme. Navy for the foundational color with either white, yellow or pink is the talk o' town this season. The smart set are carrying out the idea by wearing accessories made of natural toned chamois skin. The turquoise has the preference among evening jewels, appearing effectively with white crepes and satins and especially with black velvet. Big turquoise buttons trim a black velvet dress cut away in front to show a fan-of the hatters, with madness its chief distinguishing charm. The skimmer is the 1935 version of the pancake sailor which has been with us, off and on, in recent months. Only now it is flatter and crazier and generally more exhilarating than ever. You clap it on the side of your head at whatever angle best suits your current mood, batten it down with a band around the back or even a hatpin, and then go out and join in a sporting battle with the spring breezes. There is one redeeming feature about the new skimmers. They have done away with the unsightly elastic bands that decorated last springs's version of this particular style of headgear, and have substituted bands of ribbon or felt or straw to match the hat.

New Silhouette Featured by Alix and Schiaparelli

There is much discussion and some difference of opinion expressed concerning the new draped lines which had their most prominent exponents in Alix and Schlaparelli dresses. These influences, variously related to the Hindu, the Persian and the Ihran, are best known in the sarl-draped togas familiar in Near East photographs,

The draping is in a soft, statuesque line, swirled round the body in a continuous movement from ankles to head, more for later season development. Others are inclined to disregard draping, considering it too extreme

Customs and Costumes Take Root in England

"The celebration in London of the centenary of the Old Bailey, the famous criminal court depicted by so many writers and the scene of many of Charles Dickens' delineations, recalls some of the oddities of lawyers' dress in England and the conservatism of the customs," Victor B. Bennett, of the American Express company relates.

"The reason why barristers wear black gowns is that members of the profession went into mourning for Queen Anne. Though Queen Anne is dead, the profession in England keeps on mourning. The English are conservative in the matter of dress. The Knights of the Garter continue to wear short capes and hoods, the same as in medieval days. The clocks on ladies' hose were originally put on to hide the gusset seams when the steckings were of cloth, and have continued as part of hosiery attire ever since."

On January 13, the Saar, as expected, voted to re-unite with Germany. The plebiscite was a peaceful, orderly affair. The volcano proved a dud. Europe breathed easier and returned to its less spectacular war against the Today-only three months later-Europe sits on another volcano that makes the Saar situation seem like a Fourth of July firecracker that has been left out in the rain. And Europe only sits and talks.

Except Germany. Germany is too busy to talk, too busy tearing up "scraps of paper." You remember what happened the last time Germany tore up a "scrap of paper." That one was the Belgian neutrality treaty. The present one is the armament section of the treaty of Versailles. Germany has thrown her hat into the ring of struggle for military supremacy. The hat is a steel helmet like soldiers wear when they fire guns that kill people. She is conscribing an army variously estimated at 540,000 to 750,000. Facing the call to arms are

8,500,000 men and boys. "You can't do that!" says Great Britain, "You can't do that!" say Italy, France, Russia, Poland, Rumania, Czechoslovakia. Like the man who screams, "You can't put me in jail!"from behind the bars. The turnkey says, "Tell it to the judge." Germany says, "We've already done it." 000 men by the treaty signed at the conclusion of the World war. That is about equal to the man power of the American army, which will be igreased by about one-third under the new defense plans recently announced by our government.

Hitler Hurls Thunderbalt.

On March 16 the reich, spurred evidently by the final fitful bursting of Fuehrer Hitler's patience with the continued re-armament of co-signers to the Versailles treaty, which has been known to have been progressing for years, broke the reins.

Hitler threw his thunderholt into the sky over Europe frankly, defiantly and, it must be admitted, courageously.

The Versailles treaty is junked. The old-time German system of universal military conscription is the law of the land. The new German army will rival in size and outdo in training and equipment the army of the Kaiser at the time when the late Theodore Roosevelt said: "With an army like this I could lick the world !"-the army with which the Kaiser couldn't.

There will be 36 divisions in the Nazi army. Each one will number at least 15,000 men. Building of the army, under the direction of Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense, is to get under way at once. As of old, conscription will begin with young boys who will be prepared for military training by preliminary commitment to the Nazi labor service.

How did the German people take the news? They went wild with joy. The shackles were thrown off. It was the end of political humiliation. It was the return of the incomparable German pride. Correspondents called the delirium "indescribable." Half a million Germans lined the streets of Berlin to cry "Heil!" to their worshiped leader and to watch a military parade in honor of Germany's war dead.

Who won the war, anyway? Germany lost it. Yet in point of numbers, her new engine of war bows to nonbut those of France and Russia. And authentic sources have it that she will demand an air force equal to that of England or France, with the common level to be decided by that of Russia; the repatriation of 3,500,000 nts of Czechoslovakia and cession of certain Czech territory; a navy of 400,000 tons, and economic union with Austria. The reichswehr will start with an army of about 375,000, to be increased to 500,000 in a few months, according the plan announced by Gen. von mberg. It is thought that the an- population of Europe and even threat-between 300,000 and 400,000, giving Germany a trained reserve of approximately 4,000,000 in ten years. If special training periods are adopted for the next few months-and this has been rumored-and the state police, which number 150,000, and recruits from the storm troops and Nazi labor camps are included, the personnel would reach 700,000 by the end of the present year.

Germany, according to correspondents, now possesses between 600 and 1,000 fighting airplanes and is equipped, under stepped-up schedules, to produce new ones at the rate of 125 a month. At this rate it could approach the air strength of France or Russia within a year.

France maintains a peace time army of 600,000 men, as compared with 790,-000 in 1914, when it placed an army of 1,800,000 in the field in a little more than two weeks. In addition to the 30 peace time divisions there are 20 divisions of reserves. There are more than 3,000,000 trained reserves available for fighting.

Although the completion of underground fortresses on the German and Belgian borders would seem to make France safe from attack by land, her army itself is not as well mechanized as it might be. Forty per cent of the artillery is mechanized and one out of six cavalry divisions is motorized and mechanized completely. There are 25 tank battalions, some in the colonies. France has 3,000 fighting planes.

Since 1925 Soviet Russia has expanded its army of 560,000 men to 960,-000, the largest in the world. Its war strength could be increased to 2,000-000. Annually it passes into service 800,000 recruits from a contingent of 1,200,000. Mechanization has progressed to a high degree of late years, although the Soviet government has guarded it as a military secret. In two years the air force is said to have increased 330 per cent; in four years the number of light tanks has increased 760 per cent, heavy artillery 210 per cent and machine guns for infantry and cavalry 215 per cent. The Italian peace time army has varied with the seasons-450,000 in spring and summer, and 270,000 in fall and winter. There are annually about 200,000 called for service. In addition to the regular army 373,000 Fascist militia and 92,000 others are organized on a military basis. From those figures it follows that Italy could put about 900,000 men in the field of battle in case of war. But reports have circulated that Il Duce is even now mustering an army of 1,000,000! During recent months the 1934 air strength of 1,600 planes has been augmented.

In Europe Great Britain alone has a professional army. Not including the troops in India, it numbers 140,000, with 125,000 additional officers and men available in case of war. Special experts and technicians number another 20,000 and there is an independent territorial militia of 132,000. A 'ew months ago His Majesty's government announced a building program of 460 planes, to bring the total to 1,320 in five years.

Of the smaller nations on the continent, the peace time army strength is distributed as follows: Poland, 266,-000 men; Czechoslovakia, 113,000; Yugoslavia, 107,000; Rumania, 141,000; Spain, 158,000; and Belgium, 67,000.

'Leads in Industry.

Germany is the leading industrial nation of Europe. She has great iron and steel industries. Her chemical and automotive plants, added to the iron and steel, make hers one of the great industrial systems of the world. In addition she is noted for her scientists and inventive minds. These inventive minds are credited with having devised some of the most terrible engines of destruction ever conceived by the mind of man- weapons which could wipe out the entire nual contingent will fall somewhere en other continents, without ever leaving Germany.

Most terrible of all is the reported "stratosphere" rocket. This, fired up into the thin air of the stratosphere, is guided by radio, loaded with explosives or germs, and caused to drop to earth, with its load of death and disease.

There is the "Z-ray," so fantastic that it might have come from a modern dime novel. The ray pulverizes all iron and steel in its path, destroys bridges and the structural work of buildings, melts guns, temporarily paralyzes human beings. It requires enormous electrical currents, and special generating equipment for its supply is said to be already completed along the Rhine.

The "Halger-ultra" bullet, invented by Dr. Max Gehrlich, is being turned out in German factories at the rate of 480,000 a day. It will pierce steel armor six inches thick.

Said to be in production in the famed Krupp plant are 2,000 "rotative" guns. These guns, huge cannons, have five rotating barrels and fire 5,000 giant shells a minute.

One of the most deadly of all infantry weapons is the German Stange machine gun. Weighing only 18 pounds, it can be carried and handled by one man. It fires 600 rounds a minute and needs no artificial cooling; when the barrel becomes overheated, it is simly replaced by a "spare" seconds. It will be equipped to use the all-piercing bullet. Heavier motordriven machine guns, which will fire 1,400 rounds a minute, are also rumored to be under construction.

Noble Sacrifices. All of this great military machine Germany is building under the guise of preserving the peace of Europe and world. Hitler felt that Germany had made noble sacrifices in carrying out the treaty of Versailles. He claimed the country had carried out all of the requisites of the treaty and had thereby done more than any other nation to uphold the principles of the treaty and its objectives.

The other nations, says the fuehrer have not lived up to their end of the bargain. They have steadily armed since the treaty, threatening the peace of Europe. In Hitler's opinion, Germany is doing the world a great favor by throwing off the shackles of Versailles, for he says that peace can be maintained only if Germany cap defend herself against any nation on the continent, Against all opposition, Germany forges steadily ahead with her program.

Meanwhile the diplomats of the other nations make hurried and frantic "agreements" and "pacts" in each other's capitals, send dignified, if indignant, notes to Hitler. He tosses them aside with the comment that they are not in accordance with the facts. Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, who seems to have taken it upon himself to plead the cause of the Allies, goes to Berlin to talk with Hitler, and sits dumbly by while the fuehrer talks to him-straight from the shoulder. Sir John accomplishes little more than nothing at all. The United States in one breath expresses herself as determined to stay out of European controversy, in another she says she will insist on treaties being kept, including

Germany's' arms pact with us. France, in desperation, appeals to the League of Nations to do some thing about it. The league, as it often has been of late, as it was indeed created to be, finds itself again "on the spot." It has called an extraordinary ession of the council at Geneva, There will hardly be a war as the outcome of that. It takes a unanimous vote of the league council to declare war. More than anything else, the memer nations would like to get Germany back in the League of Nations, And Germany will return, says Adolf Hitler, only if she is given back possessions taken from her after the World

Erroneous Belief That

Bees Know Their Owners

"Bees never come to know their owner," says James I. Hambleton, a gypsy cabinet of seven "minis Africa in which to settle agriculturist in the bureau of ento mology, dispelling the belief that beekeepers do not get stung, because their bees know them. "Every person who works with bees will be stung occasionaly. The layman who is stung most often is probably nervous and afraid of bees. Apiarists are well aware that their bees never get to know them. One who understands bees can work as safely in another aplary as in his own."

Bee specialists also point out that the worker bees, which do the stinging, do so only in defense of their hive, and even then only a few assume the responsibility of guards. leaving the others free to go about their work. If all bees rushed at once to the defense of the hive, and were successful in stinging their victim, there would be no workers left. because in stinging, a bee not only oses its sting but also loses its life. Away from the hive, bees are intent upon their work and can scarcely be induced to sting unless they are caught and crushed .- Boston Transcript.

The Rural Community Has Come to Town

The rural community and small city faces a new future. Electric service and all that electric power and light mean to home life, commercial and industrial development is now available for a more constructive and wider field of achievement.

Much work, planning, testing, engineering and large investments of capital was necessary in order to make this possible. Our 2600 miles of power transmission lines, interlacing 49 counties in West Texas and serving 160 towns and communities provide an adequate and economical source of dependable electric service with precise regulation to meet the requirements of modern day appliances.

Today hundreds of small West Texas towns and communities can offer to industry this modern electric service in proximity to its raw materials . . . two very necessary prerequisites for industrial progress.

We point with pride to our part in assisting the small towns and communities in this way, thus guaranteeing to them the same opportunities in respect to power as the larger metropolitan cities enjoy. It is our policy to fully co-operate with the small towns and communities we serve so that they may realize the full benefits accompanying and made possible by electrical development.
