W. S. SWINNEY DIES

W. S. Swinney was born in Mississippi Feb 23 1870 and was married to Miss Mollie Jackson September 14, 1890.

Nine children were born to this union, one preceding him in death.

Bro Swinney became Christian and joined the Methodist Church when he was a young man. He possessed the noble qualities that characterized the finest type of citizenship. A man like this will not be soon forgotten. He will live on in the lives of those who knew him.

Mr. Swinney was a very industrious man, one who provided well for the needs of his family. To him, "The life was more than meat, and the body is more than raiment."

Surviving him are, his devoted wife, Mrs. W. S. Swinney, seven boys and one girl, J. W., C. T., S. L., Alvin, Rondel and Hulet Swinney, all of Hedley, J. V. Swinney of Vernon Texas, and Mrs. J. A. Jesse of Hedley, four sisters, one brother and fourteen grandchildren.

Bro Swinney was devoted to his wife, who walked by his side for about forty five years. They shared each other's joys and carried each other's sorrows to the end of the way.

He departed this life May 6, 1935.
His friend,
A. V. Hendricks.

In Loving Remembrance of Mr. Swinney

Oh, how sad we feel today,
Since our daddy's gone away.

We miss his sweet smile, and footsteps
As he went here and there,
And our hearts are filled with sorrow
When we see his vacant chair.

While down here we're sad and lonely,
And it's hard to understand
That all is joy and gladness
In that far and happy land.

"'Tho' I left my wife and children
Broken hearted, sad and blue,
I think that they'd not grieve so
Could they see me here with you.

"But I'm happy here in Heaven,
Up above the bright blue sky,
And some day you'll come and join me,
Then we'll never say goodbye."
Seretna Gunn

PICNIC

The Junior class journeyed to the new state park Tuesday afternoon, and enjoyed a hike across scenery and ended at the spillway on the new highway southwest of Giles. After the hike they enjoyed roasting weiners. There was plenty of sandwiches and cookies. "They didn't know where Maw was, but they had Pop on ice."

After the feast they enjoyed a good show in Memphis. Those present were: A. V. Hendricks, Verlin McPherson, Imogene Bell, Sammie Dee Whiteside, Homer Richerson, Marvin Hickory, Clyde Laurence, Olen Plunk, C. C. Horschler, Omer Wood, J. G. Gull, sponsor, Miss Hixon, guest, Miss Samewell, and hostesses Mesdames Horschler and Whitfield and L. A. Hart, driver of the bus.

LUNCHEON CLUB

The Hedley Luncheon Club had a social Tuesday night, entertaining their wives in the Methodist Church basement. The enjoyable dinner was prepared by the Methodist ladies, and the following program was much appreciated:

Welcome address, Rev. A. V. Hendricks.

Reading, Theresa Webb.
The future progress of Hedley, Rev. M. E. Wells.

Piano solo, Mrs. Bob Watkins.
Vocal solo, Mrs. W. H. Burden.
Those present were Mesdames and Mesdames Neel, Powell, Trimble, Bridges, Burden, C. E. Johnson, Sterling Gossaday, Moffitt, Wells, Mosley, Hendricks, Hall, Mrs. Bob Watkins, C. L. Johnson and Miss Theresa Webb.

RAIN!

Hedley has received several good rains in the last two weeks. Crop prospects look good, and the farmers are feeling cheerful as a result of the moisture.

MARBLE MACHINES TO PASS OUT SATURDAY

Based upon opinions recorded by Wm. McCraw, Attorney General, the decision is to abolish the operation of marble machines in this county. The ruling refers to every type of gaming device, whether the game involves pure skill, pure chance, or a combination of skill and chance. The opinion as issued by the Attorney General is 18 pages in length and anyone wishing to see this opinion may see R. Y. King, County Attorney. Any person knowingly permitting such gaming devices after Saturday, May 18, will be subject to prosecution. Guy S. Pierce, Sheriff.

ENTERTAINS

Miss Helen Settle entertained a group of young people in her home Tuesday night, May 14, with a party. Punch and Angel food cake were served during the evening to the following: Nettie Blankenship, Martha Sue Neel, Geneva Whittington, Edna Mae Smith, Ruby Dell Aldridge, Ruth McQueen, Helen Settle, Robert Pickett, Buster Culwell, Elton Howard, Gene Youree, Willard McQueen, John Mitchell, Troy Walker and H. B. Settle Jr.

JOHNNY SKEENS

Friends of H. P. Wilson are sorry to learn of the death of his nephew, Johnny Skeens, who was drowned near his home at Lake Creek, Texas, Sunday, May 5. Mr. Skeens was 26 years of age, and lived with his grandparents in the Lake Creek community, not far from Cooper. Mr. Wilson attended the funeral services, which were held Monday, May 6.

CONFESSIONS

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

RUBELLA HAMPSTEAD is a famous writer. Her name is featured in all the leading magazines of the country.

She has three novels to her credit, and it has been announced that a fourth is to be brought out next fall.

Rubella cannot attribute her achievements to any mysterious or inherited gift.

Her fame is the result of hard work and study, of constant, tireless plugging, of the triumph of determination and the will to write over heart-rending discouragement, of a love for her work, grimness, perseverance and a sense of humor.

In short, Rubella is no natural born genius, no worker of miracles; her rewards are just and well earned.

Some few months ago the good people of Rubella's home town held a reception in honor of their distinguished townswoman.

Among those present was one Lena Norman, a newcomer to Maplewood, a woman of some social prominence—and also a writer.

Unfortunately, however, Lena is an "unknown" writer. She has acquired no fame, has had little success with her literary efforts. And she is inclined to be somewhat bitter about her fate.

Despite the recognized fame of the guest of honor, Lena's regard for Rubella was somewhat skeptical, (a skepticism, doubtless, born of envy).

She was, in fact, heard to remark that Rubella had doubtless won her reputation through some sort of drag and was now trading upon the selling power of her name. She even went so far as to suggest that Rubella's "stuff" wasn't so good, when you compared it with real literature, and she probably wouldn't know a good story if she saw one.

Of course Lena in no way betrayed this skepticism when Rubella was within earshot.

In fact she was, on the contrary, quite gushy and complimentary.

However, as the evening progressed and honor after honor was heaped on the smiling Rubella, one watching Lena's face would have noticed that skepticism and bitterness were becoming more and more in evidence.

It was toward the end of the evening that Lena succeeded in getting Rubella alone in a secluded part of the hall.

Said Lena: "My dear, I think your work is wonderful! Really! Every word of it. And I do believe I've read about everything you've had published. And now, my dear, would it be asking too much if I requested a favor?"

Rubella, though certain of the nature of the request, could do naught but smile and nod her head and hope that Lena was about to request a favor somewhat different from the usual run of favors requested of famous authors.

But she was doomed to disappointment.

"My dear, I knew you wouldn't refuse. So sweet of you. The favor is really nothing much. It concerns a story I have just completed. A short story. It occurs to me that the yarn has some merit, yet I really would appreciate your professional advice before submitting it. Would you mind?"

Ordinarily Rubella would have refused, despite the fact that Lena would doubtless have thought her rude and selfish.

But the situation was a little different from ordinary.

In the first place, Lena was a fellow-townswoman, her hostess, in a manner of speaking. And in the second place, Rubella saw in Lena's eyes a look that was slightly baffling.

The look somehow resembled a challenge.

And so Rubella agreed to read Lena's script, though she regretted her decision a moment after it was made. However, the word was spoken and there was no alternative.

The script came to Rubella's hand on the day following, neatly typed, with Lena's name on the by-line.

Rubella glanced over the first few pages with casual indifference.

But as she delved into page No. 2 she suddenly sat upright in her chair and read on with renewed interest.

At the conclusion of the story Rubella found herself amazed and somewhat puzzled.

The story was—actually—a well done piece of work. It merited publication. It was, in fact, not the assortment of jargon that she had expected.

Rubella carefully folded the script, tucked it in her handbag, caught up a hat and headed for the house of Lena.

Lena received her guest graciously. They sat down together in Lena's neat little sitting room and looked at each other closely.

Said Rubella: "My dear, I have a confession to make. When I agreed to read your script I expected to find trash. I—I almost hoped I would. Believe me, I was tremendously surprised. It wasn't the sort of thing I expected to find at all."

Said Lena: "You actually thought the story was good?"

"I thought it was fine! Splendid! There is no reason at all why you can't place it with one of the better magazines. In fact, if you are willing, I'll handle the placing of it for you."

Lena looked thoughtful.

She gazed through the window.

She studied the floor.

And at length her eyes came to dwell upon the kind, smiling and friendly countenance of Rubella.

Said Lena: "My dear, you have been honest and fair with me. I, too, have a confession to make. I feel guilty and ashamed. The story that I gave you to read was not written by me. I don't know who the author is. I clipped it haphazardly from a magazine and typed it off before coming to the reception. You see, heretofore I have misunderstood famous authors. I had made the remark that your stuff wasn't so good compared with that of real literary geniuses, and that you probably wouldn't know a good story if you saw one—and I wanted to prove that I was right."

Rubella smiled, a gracious smile.

"Thank you for telling me. I'm so glad you decided it was the best thing for you to do. For, you see, I knew all the time that your story was a re-write, and I'm ashamed to admit, I led you on, hoping you'd let me try and place it for you. I'm so glad it turned out this way. Now I'm sure we can be the best of friends."

Lena was frankly aghast.

"You knew it all the time! How wonderful! Now I'm positive that I was wrong in remarking that you couldn't tell a good story from a bad one. My dear, I'm thrilled!"

"In a way," said Rubella, "I'm thrilled, too. For, you see, the story you clipped haphazardly from the magazine happened to be one of my stories!"

Famous Oregon Ranch Is Now a Waterfowl Refuge

Another area, unprofitable for agriculture, is being restored to the uses of wildlife in this country. The bureau of biological survey has recently completed the acquisition of the famous P-Ranch in Harney county, Oregon. The 64,717-acre area, now known as the Blitzen River Migratory Bird refuge, not only will be important as a sanctuary, but will also be of strategic importance in insuring a water supply for the Lake Malheur Bird refuge, which adjoins it on the north.

Federal acquisition of these lands marks the return to public ownership of an historic area. Bounded on the east by the Steens mountains, on the west by the slopes rising to the Hart mountain, and on the south also by high land, the valley is traversed by the Donner and Blitzen river. This stream rises in the Steens mountains and flows west into the south end of the basin, then north into Lake Malheur.

In subsequent years it has been the scene, not only of the resounding storms of the atmosphere, but also has known a "Donner and Blitzen" created by the stormy early settlers. During the years about 1870 amidst gunfights and constant struggle among various exploiters of the public domain, Peter French, locally famous, established his claims to this valley with its Teutonic name and established the P-Ranch which he made the capital of a vast cattle empire. With all the daring and shrewdness that characterized the early land settlers, French not only acquired available public lands, but also consolidated his holdings by taking over those of his rivals. He continued this enlargement of his kingdom up until the time of his death, December 26, 1897, when he was shot by a rival land owner along a boundary fence.

Since the death of the founder of the empire, the P-Ranch has been owned and managed by live stock corporations. The Blitzen river has been dammed to water the vast bottom lands, giant dredges creating ditches for the purpose, and dams being erected at intervals to control the water supply. It has at times constituted one of the greatest hay ranches in the region, and until the recent long-continued drought, was considered a profitable agricultural enterprise. With the sudden decrease in rainfall, however, and with overgrazing, the agricultural usefulness of the area has almost disappeared and at the same time the wild life species dependent upon the Blitzen river's flow have been threatened with disaster. The results extended to Lake Malheur, where this once famous area—now a federal refuge—has been almost completely dried up and rendered useless for a time.

The marshy lands, stretching 35 miles back from Lake Malheur, have always been a favorite breeding ground of migratory waterfowl. Millions of ducks and geese have bred there, and a naturalist of the biological survey counted 120 species of birds nesting on the area. Among these were 100 pairs of the rare sandhill cranes.

Biologist Explains the Wherefore of Long Outdated English Costumes

Wilfrid Mark Webb, a biologist, has discovered the reasons for many apparently strange fashions in English dress, relates a writer in the Detroit News.

That muff-like military headgear of beaver, the busby, for instance, is a relic of jealousy among many officers. It was originally a cloth cap with a narrow edging of fur worn by Hun-arian mercenaries in the British army.

day found difficulty in donning their red chaperons. So they put them on like a wet towel, flopping over their faces, and earned the title of "coxcombs." Barristers still wear the chaperons attached to the backs of their gowns.

Incidentally, barristers wear black gowns because they went in mourning for Queen Anne and have never come out of it.

Perfection in Its Simplicity

PATTERN 2092

Every now and then some simple idea comes along and creates a furor—and every one wonders why it hadn't happened before! Like this perfectly grand house dress which has been designed. Its long coat lines make one appear slim as a rail while at work about the house, and it gives much freedom of movement. Its greatest feature, of course, is the fact you can slip it on and not be bothered by mussing your hair or twisting your neck—just a dive into it and it's on. It is attractive in colored cotton broadcloth, percale or pique print, substantial materials lending themselves well to its coat lines.

Pattern 2092 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4 3/4 yards 36 inch fabric and 3/4 yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

The inquisitive woman was worrying the gardener. She asked a lot of meaningless questions.

"What steps do you take with caterpillars?" she asked.

"Well, mum," said the exasperated gardener, "I takes half-a-dozen steps into our nearest field and turns the caterpillars round three times so that they gets giddy and don't know their way back."

Ideal

"What would be your idea of a good husband?"

"A kind and considerate man," answered Miss Cayenne, "who is willing to quit smoking so that his wife can have more money to play bridge."

200 AMERICAN FAMILIES WILL START LIFE ANEW IN ALASKA

Federal Emergency Relief Commission to Supply Work Animals and Necessary Farm Tools for This Sensational Pioneering Adventure.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

PROBABLY countless times since depression and drought struck sub-marginal lands and poor farming country, farmers and their families, discouraged and in some cases destitute, have prayed for a chance to go away somewhere—anywhere—and start all over again, with nothing more perhaps than the strength of their hands and a few fundamental pieces of equipment, but with a clean slate and an equal footing for all.

In one of the most spectacular experiments the Brain Trust has yet devised, the Federal Emergency Relief Commission is trying to determine whether a literal answer to that prayer is not, after all, the solution to the farmer's plight in many an advanced case of economic collapse.

The FERA is taking 200 families from drouth-stricken farms in northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, families who had just about given up all hope of ever again "making a go" out of their farms, herding them and a few of their effects into a boat and shipping them away to a brand new stake and a new life—in Alaska.

Here is a land which to most of them is one so cold that ice cream bars are named after it, so wild that most of the life consists of Eskimos, caribou and grizzled prospectors panning for gold. But they care not. For them it is the land of new hope, and in it they are going to build a Utopia in the wilderness, where everybody starts from scratch and where, they are certain, reward will come in actual proportion to sweat and sincerity of effort.

The exodus has, in newspaper accounts somewhat colored, been called the "exiling of families to bleak territorial outposts," inferring a parallel to the exile of Russian peasants into Siberia. It is not like that at all. Nobody has to go who doesn't want to—and everybody in the party seems to be tickled to death of the chance.

Selecting the Company.

For the past few months FERA workers have been going about quietly selecting members of the company. This has been an exacting task, for only the purest American farming stock will be allowed to settle in the Alaskan colony. They must also be healthy and well equipped physically to stand pioneer life and temperatures which sometimes fall to 40 degrees below zero. Most of them are families that have been entirely dependent upon the government for their existence.

Along with the 200 families, 400 single men, CCC workers, are being sent in the hard work of starting the frontier Utopia. They will help in the clearing of government land and in the building which will be necessary.

Each family is allowed to take but 2,000 pounds of belongings. Many an heirloom, itself carried west in an earlier day by an earlier pioneer, is being left behind, making way for equipment that will be of greater value in the new life. There is not room for an unnecessary pound. Live stock and machinery are being disposed of, for at the end of their journey these families will get tools and equipment better suited to Alaskan climate and terrain. Not a few heartaches may be imagined as some treasured possession, of great sentimental but no practical value, is kissed good-by. But then, moving day is always a house-cleaning for non-essentials.

The average family making the trip has four members. Each family will have the benefit of a government drawing account of $3,000, which must be paid back in 30 years with 3 per cent interest. To finance the project the government has set aside $500,000. In some quarters it has been suggested that half a million dollars might be more wisely spent in buying these people will never again pass south of their point of entry into the Alaskan peninsula. At any rate, they will never again return to the farms they have left, for these, in accordance with the FERA plan of relocation of destitute farm families in many sections of the United States, will be turned into bird refuges, wild life preserves, forests and other adaptations, but will never again be farms.

Up in this rugged country Arctic winds chill the climate but at the same time warm Pacific currents from Japan temper it. It is not really as bad as imagined by those not familiar with Alaska. The winters are not really much more severe than those of many well-populated parts of Canada, and the summers are quite comparable to those of the Middle West, although the winters are longer and the summers shorter.

From Seward the little band will pass onward through Anchorage, which is the southern gateway to the rich Matanuska valley. They will travel by train to Palmer, a little village 150 miles north. It is in the wild country near Palmer that their new plots of land will be staked out.

Leader of the party is Don L. Irwin, son of a man who was among the leaders in the Oklahoma land rush. He is superintendent of colonization in Alaska. The organization itself is known as the Alaska Colonization corporation.

Draw for Locations.

Not until it has reached Palmer will the party settle the question of location of individual farms. There a drawing will be held which will assure the dispensation of land with complete impartiality to all.

Slips of paper, numbered, will be mixed up in a hat, just as at a raffle. The number on each slip of paper will correspond with the number of a plot of 40 acres of unsettled, wooded land. For temporary dwellings the Alaska Colonization corporation will have set up a tent on each plot. Each family, when it draws a number, will move into the tent designated by that number. The process will be repeated when the second half of the migration arrives.

All of this land of new hope is entirely overgrown with spruce, cottonwood and birch. This must all be cleared away, and with the help of the CCC workers, the families hope to have a large share of the work done before the short Alaskan summer draws to a close. Log dwellings will be erected at first, from the gleanings of the timber clearing. According to the plan, the women folks will have to pitch right in, maybe even swing an ax or two, and help the men with their work.

FERA architects have designed a sort of hamlet for the center of the colony, and the CCC workers will begin upon this project soon after their arrival. A modern schoolhouse, accommodating 480 children, will be erected first, for these people have no intention of robbing their offspring of the cultural and educational benefits of the civilization back home.

The schoolhouse will serve in several other capacities. It will be the center of all community life. It will have a community hall and a gymnasium where meetings, dances and entertainments of various kinds will be held.

If the workers are able to maintain the schedule laid out for them, the coming of the next winter will also find a comfortable dormitory for the teachers in the school, and a home for the manager of the colony. There will be a community industrial building which will include a creamery and a greenhouse. Construction will be speeded on a barn for 40 teams of horses, a warehouse, shops, garages, a community poultry farm and other essential community projects.

Just as These Pioneers in the Gold Rush Days of '98 Set Forth to Conquer the Wilderness, Will 200 American Families Seek a New Start in Alaska This Summer.

HAWAIIANS TURN TO PRESERVATION OF RACIAL GROUP

Not that the Hawaiian race is dying out—far from it—though it is certainly spreading out, by intermixture. But it is at the same time experiencing today a fresh groundling in its own subsoil through an increased "inmarrying"—that is, the tendency of part-Hawaiians to marry back into the Hawaiian group rather than to continue outward toward a further dilution of blood.

The Hawaiian people are a vigorous and prolific people, and their women are instinctive and devoted mothers. The race is experiencing now a period of recrudescence in numbers as well as in racial self-consciousness.

Curiously enough, this new racial self-consciousness is one quite unmistakable symptom of the changing cultural life in the islands. It is a symptom not to be overlooked—this swing from an earlier enthusiasm for the "melting pot ideal," on the part of almost all elements in society, to the tendency to draw apart into self-conscious racial groups with cordial relations but a distinct feeling of difference in interests and background.

This finds its most practical expression in separate civic clubs and chambers of commerce. It is accentuated by the cultural clubs down along racial lines at the university and by the growing emphasis upon the study of racial heritage in the schools.—Elizabeth Green, in Asia Magazine.

SOCIAL

The adults of the Baptist Training Union of the First Baptist Church had an enjoyable time Tuesday night, May 7, at the church basement. The Cafeteria idea was carried out in both games and refreshments.

The most enjoyable feature was the music by the "Tune-Bone" orchestra. We learned that R. W. Alewine is an excellent orchestra director.

Refreshments were served to the following: R. W. Alewine, A. B. Harris, E. M. McQueen, J. K. Caldwell, J. E. Blankenship, W. H. Hamilton; Mesdames R. W. Alewine, A. B. Harris, E. M. McQueen, J. K. Caldwell, J. E. Blankenship, W. H. Hamilton, G. Z. Sherman, W. A. Luttrell, W. H. Huffman, M. J. Smith, M. E. Welis and Ralph Alewine Jr. J. W. Luttrell, Wilmoth Smith, Pauline Caldwell, Irene Anderson.
