GOOD WILL CLUB

The Good Will Club (formerly known as The Hedley Rural Club) entertained Tuesday afternoon, May 14, at Mrs J B Masterson's home, honoring the mothers of Hedley. This is an annual Mother's Day affair given for ladies having attained the age of sixty years, and the wives of our local ministers.

Upon entering the guests registered and gave their age and the book was awarded to Mrs Ring, the oldest mother present. Mrs Heward, president of the club, opened the program with a brief address of welcome. Mrs. R E Mann gave a Mother's Day reading, Mrs Charles Grimsley read "Beatitude for Mother". The club sang "My Mother's Bible," and "Memories of Mother" was given by Mrs. Fred Finch. Mrs Masterson closed the program with a prayer. Mrs Royce Hall, played parts of various songs and the guests guessed the names.

The club colors of orchid and green were carried out through out the decorations. Lovely refreshments consisting of Angel food cake and orchid brick ice cream were served the mothers and club members. Small green candles fixed in green candy holders were the favors.

Charming Print Jacket Costumes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FANCY a two-piece suit or a jacket-and-frock costume made exactly as tailored of cloth, only instead of being of tweed or broadcloth or serge or a novelty woolen, it is fashioned of a gay print, either crepe or taffeta. It's news we are telling you, for the print jacket suit is fashion's big headline feature this spring.

Perhaps you have already acquired one of these attractive and wearable print suits. If not, why not, and if you haven't, hurry up and take a look at the charming types which the shops are showing.

The print may not be expensive. In fact, some of the most successful models are of simple, unpretentious patterns and weaves. Small figures on dark backgrounds are favored for practical daytime wear. The skirts are either gored or cut straight and slim with a slit hemline or, if you take delight in being very ultra, choose one of the new circular flare skirts with its widened hemline such as Paris designers announce as the newest silhouette. The jacket that is smartest is tailored along classic lines, is fitted in slightly at the waist and buttons up the front and is only hiplength. However, any style is in good form from swagger to cape-jacket style.

If you want to simulate a jacket effect, that is wear a one-piece dress that has a jacket and skirt "look," the charming model to the left in the picture is the answer. This soft taffeta frock has intriguing little style touches adapted from the utterly feminine regency period. Bows and belt of scarlet velvet ribbon pick up one of the colors in the print. The hat is of onion skin straw with a chou of velvet ribbons at the front.

This idea of employing little velvet bows instead of buttons is a note worth keeping in mind when you plan your new frocks and blouses. It is an important this-season fashion gesture. It is not unusual for these sprightly wee bows to travel up and down the front of a one-piece dress (perhaps cut in the new princess lines) from neckline to hemline. Then, again, they may even fasten a bodice up the back or pose in little groups on one's blouse. In fact, whenever a decorative touch is needed, just scatter a flock of little velvet bows over your costume for effect and up-to-the-moment chic.

Printed chiffon suits for dressy daytime wear are making fashion history. They are really the most flattering costumes one can wear at an afternoon social gathering. The young woman seated is wearing a striking ensemble, the jacket and skirt of which are fashioned of a printed chiffon which shows cornflower blue, beige and yellow flowers massed on a black ground. The classic tailored jacket has a bountifully lined with black taffeta to match the slip. The blouse is of handsome black lace. Black trims and faces the wide-brimmed shallow beige straw hat.

For evening formality prints are simply gorgeous. You can see, looking at the figure to the right in the picture, how strikingly handsome a formal ensemble of print can be. This model is fashioned of a flower print done in exotic multi-colorings. Here again you see a touch of velvet in that the dress collar is of green velvet, the same repeated in the sleeve and pocket facings of the loose swagger jacket. A corsage of fresh orchids (wearing natural flowers this season) tucked through the belt and a big rhinestone clip at the neck are smart additions.

BUTTONS ON SUITS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

On account of the importance of buttons this season many stores are devoting extra space to their display. The types of buttons in favor are legion. Novelty enters largely into the scheme of things. Very new and chic for the dressy blouse or frock are stars cut out of mother of pearl or set with tiny rhinestones. Clever, too, and exceedingly attractive are the new flower buttons made of an ivory-like composition and tinted realistically. The buttons which enhance the good-looking suit pictured are woven of green straw. The cloth which fashions this softly tailored two-piece has the smooth finish for which best designers are expressing preference. The coat front may be thrown open in a way to achieve big revers. Many of the smartest dresses and coats sport huge revers this season.

VOGUE FINDS NEW USES FOR PIGSKIN

The uses for pigskin leather have steadily been increasing. So many new things have been fashioned of it, that the range in accessories mounts into numbers.

First of all, are pigskin shoes, and there is nothing that wears better than this leather, or looks any finer with sports clothes. It has been dyed to black, brown, navy . . . any color desired—and is excellent in white shoes for summer.

The pigskin handbag is certainly a smart accessory, holds its shape exceptionally well, and has a grain that doesn't show markings which often mar the appearance of smooth leathers.

Pigskin gloves are the perfection of the sports world. In natural, white, brown, navy and black, they can be found to accompany any tweed, and do it in the grand manner.

Frothy Fabrics Are Used for New Dancing Frocks

Dancing frocks continue to add charm and color to the evening scene. Almost everything goes but lately there seems to be a fresh interest in frothy fabrics rather than in the stiff moires, satins and lames that have obtained for so long. Many of the frocks planned for resort wear are masses of tulle and there is more lace than has been the case for some seasons. Pleatings are generally seen when it comes to frocks done in a sheer medium. One frock of soft blue tulle embroidered in silver stars has the skirt entirely knife-pleated as is the peplum. Soft brown lace with touches of rose pink velvet makes another delightful frock for southern or cruise wear.

Vogue for Gold

The vogue of gold metal is still in full swing, but most of the new models in clips, dress ornaments, fancy bracelets or necklaces often show gold metal combined with either black metal in onyx effect or with transparent plastic materials.

PATTERN 2175

Be a queen in cotton in this beautifully designed dress. The round yoke and panel front are inevitably becoming, and the ruffle or puff sleeves may be omitted if they're not your type. Or, you may have the sleeves in flaring little wings, simply by omitting the elastic which makes them puff. (See detail sketched). In any case, it's an adorable frock. The most delightful color combinations are being shown in cottons now—choose unusual, delicate shades or boldly marked patterns, in percale, gingham, broadcloth or lawn—they launder and wear well.

Pattern 2175 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 3/4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included. SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred, for this pattern. Write plainly name address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE. WASHINGTON TRIP GIVEN IN DETAIL BY COMMITTEEMEN

Speakings, Banquets, Side Trips Make Busy Week for Farmers

The AAA delegates sent to the national conference at Washington from Donley county returned home Sunday. A report of their trip is submitted as follows:

"We, your committee, sent to Washington, D. C. in the interest of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, beg to make the following report:

First, let it be understood that the government had no part in paying our expenses, as some seem to think. Expenses were paid by Donley county citizens who favor the farm program.

Of course our trip was very interesting in many respects, in other ways, tiresome. We traveled by auto the entire distance of $ 390 miles, and were in 13 different states besides the District of Columbia. We saw some of the finest scenery in the United States. The best improved homes were not seen in the cotton belt.

We left Clarendon Friday morning of the 10th, and arrived in Washington Monday, the 13th.
late Tuesday we met the Texas delegation coming by train after waiting from 8:30 to 12:30 in the train yards. We all then went to Constitution Hall to hear a number of big speeches, one by Mr. Davis, head of our trippers,
Hon. Marvin Jones and others.

We next went to the White House where we heard our President make a talk at 5 p. m., the finest talk we ever heard. That alone was worth the trip. The President is paralyzed in his legs and feet, but is a true friend of man.

Another big event was the banquet at the Mayflower hotel at 7 p. m. Talk about good things to eat and big speaking, it came off! Our Texas representatives did most of the talking. Marvin Jones, Tom Connolly, Morris Sheppard, Wright Patman who is author of the soldier bill, Secretary Wallace of our National Department of Agriculture made a fine practical talk, but Mr.
Cobb took the cake as for fine talks. That man is a great orator.

We believe Marvin Jones is the key man for the farmers in Washington, but with the cooperation of the President, Secretary Wallace, Mr. Cobb and others we see no reason why our farm program will not go over in a great way.

In a conversation with Mr.
Jones in regard to seeing the President, he said it had been planned that some time during our stay for us to see him and hear him speak, but Congress was going to have to do something to keep the masses away from him as it was such a strain to meet all the problems and worries of the nation, and that no president lives long after he retires due to this strain. We told him that if being president killed a man, we in Texas were going to prepare for his funeral as soon as Mr. Roosevelt goes out of office. He laughed.

The only thing we did not like about the trip was that neither the President or anyone else called on us Donley county fellows for a speech, but each speaker impressed upon us that the object of the Convention was to create a good fellowship and good feeling between the farmers and official Washington.

We were directed to return to Texas and tell the people that they were for us 100 per cent if we want the farm program put over, and they hoped to make it permanent, and the only way it can be done is with a tax.

The President said "the big man has his tariff, then why not the farmer?" Some may say that it was not necessary for Donley county to send a bunch of farmers to Washington, but suppose every county had of said the same? Anyway we went and we thank every one that had a part in paying our expenses.

To prevent motor damage when you

...you must have oil of high film strength!

DID YOU know that idling along at 10 miles an hour or picking up suddenly can cause as much motor wear as high-speed driving?

All three put extreme pressure on your connecting rod and crankshaft bearings.
If your oil does not have enough oiliness and film strength to withstand these high pressures, your motor parts suffer damaging wear. That's why you need oil with the greatest possible oiliness and film strength.

Straight mineral oils have no more oiliness and film strength than they had 10 years ago. Some, because of over-refining, have less!

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil has more oiliness and 2 to 4 times more film strength than straight mineral oils! The Germ Process—adding concentrated oily essence to highly-refined, paraffin-base oil—puts into this oil more film strength and oiliness than any oil possesses naturally, no matter what crude oil it is made from!

That extra film strength and oiliness enable Germ Processed Oil to stay on the job and prevent wear under the most extreme pressure and heat. It helps Germ Processed Oil give long mileage with greater motor protection, as proved by the famous Indianapolis Destruction Test.

Germ Processed Oil protects your motor another way. Because it penetrates and combines with metal surfaces, it forms a "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and cuts down wear during the starting period.

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil is the oil you need in this day of slow city driving, speed on the highway and sudden acceleration everywhere. It protects your motor and saves you money!

CONTINENTAL OIL COMPANY • Est. 1875

*MOTORISTS WHO KNOW THESE FACTS WILL SAVE MONEY!

Motor oils refined by the usual methods have some oiliness and film strength, but they may form carbon and sludge, which lead to expensive motor repairs.

Other oils may form almost no carbon and sludge, but are so over-refined that they are robbed of oiliness and film strength they need to prevent motor wear.

Germ Processed Oil is refined to eliminate carbon and sludge troubles and then the Germ Process adds extra oiliness and 2 to 4 times more film strength than any straight mineral oil, as tests on Almen and Timken machines have proved.

HARD FOR LIP READERS

Deaf students of a Madison avenue school of lip reading are told at the start to watch not only the lips but the tongue, throat muscles and the expression of the entire face. There are many problems. Thirteen words look on the lips, like "bad" ("man," "mad," "band," etc.); twelve look exactly like "fade" ("veln," "felgued," etc.); "juice," "chews," and "shoes" look alike, and so do "honor" and "otter" (although you can be fairly sure that it's "honor").

We were interested to learn that the word "king" is the hardest word to lip-read in the English language; the "k" and the "ng" are deep in the throat, and the short "i" hardly moves the lips at all. Men's lips are harder to read than women's, because men's lips are less flexible.—The New Yorker.

Coin Squeezers

Too many of us so live as the poor farmer who, as the story goes, dying on a hospital bed, refused to open his right hand for the oil of extreme unction for the hand clutched a few dirty coins and the dying man was unable to realize that very soon neither his hand nor he himself would be his own any more.—Exchange.

ALL the sunshine, good soil, fertilizer and cultivation in the world won't help poor seeds produce big, tender, flavorful vegetables. The quality must be in the seed. They reproduce what their parents and great grandparents so lavishly bequeathed them.

Chic Leather Fashions for Spring

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A LONG comes leather to add to the new spring mode. And such leathers—most beautiful and rich, exquisitely colored, dainty and supple suedes, kidskins and calfskins designed with arresting dressmaker details that bring them smartly into the current high-style parade.

Only seeing is believing as to the perfectly marvelous things being accomplished via leather artistry in the realm of costume design this spring. Which reminds us to say to those who have hitherto held to the idea that garments fashioned of leather belong solely to the sports wardrobe, the time has come to change your way of thinking.

Out Hollywood way where the newest, smartest fashions go on parade in advance of the rest of the world, leather for dress occasions has been accepted with genuine enthusiasm. A movie star of distinction wears a lovely evening gown of shell pink suede. At a smart gathering, an evening mess jacket was noted styled of white suede with a white galyak collar.

A leading designer in the French capital has created a charming evening coat, three-quarter length, of soft, supple brown leather embellished with intricate network design, posed over brown lacquered satin. From Paris also comes the message that the haute couture is creating fetching little daytime dresses suitable for town activities. These attach chamois jumpers in smart new colors to wool skirts. Wide leather belts with bizarre metal fastenings complete the costume.

By the way, if you want your costume to carry a sure-fire style message wear chamois accessories. Swank gilets, boleros, lapels on spring coats and suits are made of chamois. Other jaunty items include handstitched chamois scarfs, belts, berets, slip-on gloves and roomy bags with contrast stitching.

You can see from the illustration that the new leather jackets are—well, they are just too good looking for words, that's what they are. For early spring these costumes which top a checked wool skirt with a gay colored suede jacket are not only ideal to wear but they have that out-of-the-ordinary look and being "different" they offer a welcome diversion from the regulation cloth tailor. What's more, they are as outstandingly modish for town and travel as they are practical for country and sports wear.

The gay colors of the new suede jackets delight the eye. The simple model on the standing figure is in a mosaic rust shade. Its sash-belt and turn over collar are chic features.

The modish sportswoman seated in the foreground is wearing one of the very new jackets that are styled with knit sleeves and collar. You can have it in any smart colors such as Robin-hood red, rust, green or in the much-talked-of amber. Of course the checked woolen skirt must carry corresponding colors. A Tyrolean suede hat, pig-skin gloves and calf oxfords complete this smart outfit.

The wonderfully attractive jacket on the figure seated to the right is most happily tuned to a colorful spring. It goes in for zigzag red, white and blue stitching, which is a chic move on its part, since the emphasis this season is so decidedly on fancy and lavish stitching.

IRISH LINEN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here's how Irish linen goes cruising—smartly fashioned into a two-piece with pockets and pearl buttons and a belt of good plain rope which gives it a novel and nautical touch. This model is becoming to almost every one, with its round Peter Pan collar, four buttoned down pockets and a slim slenderizing skirt. A two-piece dress in white Irish linen such as this will fill many a gap in cruise wardrobes now and later on it will prove an ideal summer costume.

Brown With Beige

Brown and beige are a favorite color combination of the Princess Amedee de Broglie. She wears a wool ensemble woven in a novelty weave combining those two colors, collared and cuffed in brown astrakhan. It is finished with a belt of brown leather.

SEPARATE SKIRTS FOR SPRING WEAR

Since separate skirts are so necessary a part of the spring wardrobe and since tweed ones are highly approved, it would seem an economy measure to start with a tweed suit. Jackets are no longer wedded to one skirt, and skirts may step out with any number of jackets, blouses and sweaters, so there is no end to the possibilities.

Outside of the practical feature of skirt and jacket going its own way, there is the practical detail of the cape being detachable, and therefore ready for a career of its own. The objection to a cape jacket on the score that one might tire of the cape is also overcome.

Slipper of Glass Steps

From Cinderella's Land
Cinderella's glass slipper has stepped from fairy tale lore into the modern everyday world.

This is the way it's made: Bits of shimmering glass cut to reflect the light are strung along transparent mica straps across the top of the foot while the tip of the toes and the instep are left bare. More strips of glittering glass gird the heel attached to a pale pink kid ankle strap and a tall pink kid heel spike. So, except for the heel and ankle strap, it gives the effect of a foot held by a few twinkling glass bands.

Gray Is Very Smart Color for In-Between Seasons

Gray is just about the smartest in-between season color, fresh and flattering. Shirring and tucking, quilting and smocking are smart manipulations for the gray crepe frock. Puritan collars of immaculate white pique trim charmingly childish frocks of gray metallase.

Often grayed blue or cherry red provides a piquant accent for these new silvery grays. A high style collar for midseason shoes of kidskin, gray appears in a rather dark cast.

Year's Discoveries Add Laurels to Explorers

A hitherto unknown, inactive volcanic crater, partly eroded, but with an original circumference estimated at 30 miles, was discovered in July, 1934, by Father Bernard R. Hubbard, near the tip of the Alaska peninsula. Father Hubbard's party, which carried on its work in co-operation with the National Geographic society, also sealed for the first time the Agulhas pinnacles, lofty peaks near the crater.

Dr. Sven Hedin, Swedish explorer, found, in a desert region of Chinese Turkestan, traces of the lost city of Edsina.

A fresh-water lake, two miles long by one mile wide, heretofore known only to Indians, was discovered in Costa Rica in September. It was first located from an airplane. The lake is near the Nicaraguan border.

The Greenland ice cap was crossed by dog sledge, from Disco bay on the west coast to Scoresby sound, by a British expedition led by Martin Lindsay, after which the party pushed southward parallel with the coast for nearly 400 miles, traversing previously unexplored territory, between Scoresby sound and Angmagssalik.

SYNOPSIS

The Boston Lawrence came to California at the beginning of the gold rush, but the holdings of the family have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clippersville, Phil, twenty-five, has gone into the iron works, Gail to the public library and Edith to the book department of a store. Sam is in school, and seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem. Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, son of a wealthy family, returns from Yale, and Gail has visions, through marriage with him, of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's friend, has the run of the house. Ariel is sneaking out at night for joy rides. Phil suggests, to his sisters' consternation, that they invite Lily Cass to the house. Gail goes with Van for a week-end with the Chipps, his uncle and aunt. She is received coldly. At a roadhouse Gail sees Ariel, at midnight. Next day Ariel admits she was at the place, and displays no remorse. A policeman brings Ariel home, announcing that a child has been killed in an automobile smashup. Ariel was driving one of the cars.

"Not that way. But if they send for an assistant district attorney from San Jose—if they do," Dick said, "I know them all down there, and I'll do what I can to keep the questions down. But you see, Gail, the trouble is in getting into a mess like this," he offered tolerantly.

"Oh, I know, I know!" She beat her palms together. "Oh, what a fool a girl is!" she whispered frantically. "What possessed her, Dick?" "Oh, I don't know." He was silent, and they stood without speaking for a moment, in the dark outside the court-house. "She wanted a good time," he said. "She's—of course, she's beautiful. Well, come on." He tugged her arm. "Let's go in."

She imagined Ariel, bareheaded, frightened, shaken, descending these same steps, in dusty afternoon heat, and shuddered as she followed him.

There were bare, dangling lights, a man at a flat-topped desk, benches, fences, gates, men in uniforms coming and going, murmurs.

"Hello, Tex. Hello, Joe. Good-evening, Sergeant!" Dick said. He glanced at Gail. "This is Miss Lawrence's sister," he added.

"Sorry to have your sister mixed into this, Miss Lawrence."

"Oh, it's terrible!" Gail said in a trembling voice.

"Hear that the little girl died?" the sergeant asked Dick.

"Yes, we heard that. Very sad. Terrible for them!"

"The young lady had no license," Walsh said, glancing up from his papers at Gail. "It's an awful thing, you know, if a man can't take his wife and child out for a run," shaking his head, mumbling his words.

But he was kinder, and she knew it. "Your little sister, hey?" he presently asked.

Her little sister, yes, she answered, suddenly shaken by tears. She went away, and sat on a desolate bench, and Dick talked to the sergeant. The atmosphere of the dreadful place oppressed Gail like a pall, and she had to keep telling herself that this ordeal, like every other, would soon be over. She started as Dick sat down beside her.

"Made a hit with the sergeant," he murmured; "he's been very decent!"

Gail went back to the desk, and smiled with blue eyes filled with tears.

"Thank you so much, Sergeant Walsh."

"Now, you have your sister here at ten o'clock day after tomorrow, see?" the man said. "It's too bad to have a little girl mixed into a thing like this!"

"Oh, I know it," Gail murmured thickly, heartsick. He was probably thinking that his little girl never would run about Sunday roads with intoxicated boys, she reflected bitterly.

Dick took her away through the nail-studded doors and the smelly hall.

"Dick, what kind of a fool is a girl," Gail began passionately—"what kind of a fool is a girl to let herself in for this sort of thing?"

"Well, that's what you wonder!" he commented mildly.

"I don't know what we would have done without you," she said, wondering.

"I haven't done anything," Dick answered promptly.

Gail went on with her musing, not so much about Ariel now as about Dick. He seemed a very rock of strength tonight; she felt a passionate regret for all the times she had thought slightingly of him, treated him carelessly.

Buddy Raisch, Larry Barzel, and Dorothy Camp had all failed Ariel. But big, homely, awkward, loyal Dick had not, and never would fail, any of the Lawrence. Gail felt puzzled, somehow.

She was even aware of a little self-consciousness with him tonight for the first time in her life. It was as if she had never seen him before. When they went back into the old kitchen, and he half sat and half leaned against the table in his usual way, she found herself studying him—fascinated by his ease, and his quick, emphatic use of words, and his adequacy in this crisis. Whenever he called her "Gail"—and he had called her by her name all her life—she felt an emotion of pleasure.

"Walsh will do all he can; I don't think we need worry," Dick said. "Barzel and the Raisch boy were both gone—out on bail—when we got there, but they say there's no question they both had been drinking. It was natural enough for them to think Ariel had been drinking, too. I think I got it over that she hadn't been."

"What's the worst that can happen to Ariel, Dick?"

This was Edith from the arm of Phil's chair, where she sat leaning against him.

"What I think'll happen," Dick said, reflecting, "is that the charge against Ariel will be dismissed, and that she'll be retained as a witness. But there may be damages—from Moss."

"Oh, dear!" Gail wailed. She looked at Phil. "Another mortgage, just as we were clear!" she said philosophically.

"No, I wouldn't mortgage the place again," Phil said deliberately. "I'd borrow on my insurance policy this time."

"Phil, are you insured?" asked both sisters, surprised and impressed.

"I took out some a little while ago," his colorless skin, as clear as a girl's, flushed suddenly. He looked at Dick and laughed a little uncomfortably.

Dick gave Gail a look full of significance and understanding.

"Phil's insured himself because he wants to marry Lily!" Edith said to Gail when they were alone, later.

"I know it."

"This," Edith said solemnly, "is real trouble, Gail."

"I know it," Gail agreed again.

"We thought we knew what trouble was before."

"I know."

They looked gravely at each other.

"I can't believe that I went off to Los Gatos only yesterday, never dreaming of any of this!"

"I suppose we go to work just as usual tomorrow?"

"Well, I'll have to," Gail said.

Lying in bed, she went over the whole bewildering panorama. The incredible had happened: this was real trouble. This was disgrace.

But she could not quite forget a new note, a new thread of friendship and happiness that had somehow come of it all. Dick's sternly concerned face as he first listened to Ariel's story, the authority with which he had assumed command of the situation, and his manner in the police station—definite, unfrightened, and friendly—all these seemed to create a new Dick, or rather to put an unknown person in Dick Stebbins' place. Protecting—self-reliant—devoted to the Lawrence.

Van would be tremendously concerned, too, of course. Van, who might have saved Ariel all this if he had acted quickly enough last night over at Monterey. If he had realized. . . .

But then, why should he? Had any of them realized the deadly danger into which Ariel was drifting? If her family's influence could not keep her at home, why should that of a man she hardly knew bring her back there?

"Except, of course," ran Gail's reasoning thoughts, "except, of course, that we never dreamed she would be over there alone with Dorothy and the boys, and he knew that she was."

A spasm of sheer pity for Ariel stirred Gail. Poor little Ariel, hot and tired and frightened, trying to drive a car through the Sunday traffic with a couple of heavy, half-intoxicated boys for her only companions. It was horrible.

Gail brought her eyes resolutely to her book. But instead of the printed lines there rose before her inner vision the picture of a hard, lean, serious young man leaning over a police sergeant's desk. Dick Stebbins was in the kitchen again, awkward, earnest, adequate. She was in the courtroom with Dick Stebbins.

She closed her book, put out the light. Soon she was floating, drifting, sinking, and rising on a sea of dreams.

CHAPTER VII

The big courtroom was very hot. Gail could hardly believe that this tense, dark, dirty place of fear and shame had been in existence yesterday and last year, and would be going on through all the years with the happy, marketing word to near and unearring. Phil and Edith were with her; the fifth Lawrence, white and frightened, and looking less than her seventeen years, was inside the fence. Dick was with Ariel. Sometimes they whispered together; often she looked at her brothers and sisters.

Dick and Ariel talked to the Judge, who looked from face to face seriously, biting his lips as he listened. Gail prayed wildly. Then Ariel and Dick came down and joined the others.

"The case against Ariel is dismissed," Dick said in a whisper. "So far so good! Miller was drunk," he explained, his words barely audible, barely formed with his lips. "He's been arrested before. Ariel's fined fifteen dollars for driving without a license."

"You mean they're not going to try her for anything, Dick?"

"The case is dismissed." They couldn't believe it. Their eyes moved solemnly toward each other.

"We can't—Ariel and all—we can't go, Dick?"

"Sure you can."

Five minutes later the Lawrence, scared and white, but beginning to breathe again, were out in the street. Ariel's ordeal was over.

Dick brought the verdict to Gail late that afternoon.

"The jury wasn't out fifteen minutes. GUILTY. They say Miller'll get five years."

"Dick, is that the end of it?"

"The end!"

"Oh, my G—d, I am grateful!" Gail whispered, tears in her eyes.

Phil went up to tell Edith. And Van Murchison took Ariel off for a drive. "He's going to have her home well before six," Dick reported.

"Could you dine with us, Dick?"

"Not tonight. I'm going over to Stanislaus, to see Mother. Gee," Dick added youthfully, after thought, "I wish you could get Ariel to stop running with that bunch of rotters!"

"Oh, she's cured now," Gail predicted. "When it's too late," she added sadly. "Well, we've been fools."

"I don't see that you've been a fool," Dick protested, surprised. Gail laughed, a little fluttered, looked down as she stamped a book, looked up.

She looked straight into his face, noted the line of jaw, the wide-apart, wide-open gray eyes. Her eyes fell to the big hand on the desk, with his old cap in the fingers. The shabby old library in the jaded last heat of an autumn day seemed to lift and quiver with light.

"Dick, how are we ever going to thank you?"

"Oh, cut it!"

"And you know," she said, leaning toward him, looking at him with her heavy brows anxiously knitted—"you know what a child she is, Dick? That there is nothing wrong about Ariel—just mischief, and wanting to have a good time! You don't think people will remember this against her, Dick?"

"Oh, I suppose the old tabbies will whisper about it, for awhile."

"She'll just have to live it down," Gail said, wondering if her words had any meaning.

"Oh, sure."

He still lingered. Their heads were close together. Gail wondered what he would do, what the dull, browsing occupants of the library would do, if she suddenly kissed him on the temple.

He looked up, with his kindly grin. The waters of the great sea were drawing her—drawing her away from solid ground. Gail was deeply, subconsciously aware of a fear that she would betray herself.

"Suppose," she thought, smiling her mysterious smile at him, "he suddenly leaned across here, and caught at my hands, and said, 'I love you!'"

"What's the matter?" Dick asked.

"Nothing. I just felt—a little—giddy. Reaction, I suppose."

For twenty minutes after he went away she knew neither where she was, nor what she was doing or saying.

Then she went up to Muller's and joined Edith, and they walked home together, happy, exhausted, grateful, Gail hugging her amazing, strange new secret to her heart as if it were a living thing.

Ariel came in a few minutes after dinner preparations were under way, and both older sisters glanced at her fearfully. She was quieter than usual, but she looked lovely, her face flushed, her hair flyaway gold under her white hat.

"Did you have a nice drive, darling?"

"Oh, heavenly!" Ariel said, with a weary sigh and a sober face.

"Couldn't bring Van back to supper?"

"Didn't think to ask him."

"Do you like him?" Gail asked encouragingly.

"Oh, he's darling," Ariel said listlessly. "Not that it makes any difference," she added bitterly.

"Ah, don't say that, dear!" Both sisters dreaded this mood, when she would be resentful and dark for awhile, and end up with hysterical laughter, hysterical tears, and physical collapse.

"Well, why should it matter, in this joy place! You don't suppose Van'll stay here one minute longer than he has to, do you?" Ariel demanded angrily. "I'm sick of it! Sick of it!" she said, in a sullen undertone.

Sam came in and lighted the gas above their heads; dusk had deepened almost into darkness.

"Sam, you're an angel!" Edith said gratefully.

"I suppose, jail or no jail, we eat sometimes?" Sam asked by way of answer, kissing the back of Gail's neck where the thick, tawny tendrils of hair curled up like a baby's hair. "Listen. There's a swell film at the Liberty tonight. Want to go, Ariel?"

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

The sheik who now controls southern Arabia is nothing like the sheik which Rudolph Valentino disclosed to a wondering world in the old motion pictures which were without sound.

He wears khaki trousers, travels in an armored car, has a string of machine guns and a stenographer, to whom he dictates orders which are sent out over a private radio system.

Civilization has spread to the desert, and there it will doubtless remain.

It will be modern civilization, the kind that was so prevalent for the four years in which many other tribal people also went civilized.

A great thing civilization is growing to be. Time was when the then "heathen Chinese" was remarkable for the fact that he fought wars with dragons that frightened the enemy away.

Now, though not so belligerent as some other nations in his vicinity, and not nearly so capable, he still manages to get modern weapons of war to use in little tribal fights.

It is rather fortunate for the people of this country that when their forefathers landed here the American Indians did not have that kind of a civilization.

The story of this sheik is interesting and significant.

If armaments are to become universal, if every country big and little is ready to go to war on a moment's notice, perhaps the population will soon be so thinned out that there will not be available people enough to fight a second rate battle.

In that event it may occur to some of the many great powers who every now and then, for some undiscoverable reason go out and try to kill each other off, to stage a first class campaign.

That will be bad for some of the war-loving rulers, but it might not be an unmixt blessing to the rest of the world.

There are medicines which are so drastic that when partaken too freely they produce results exactly opposite to those that are expected.

If that begins to happen all over the world, it may occur to intelligent people that war is a rather stupid pastime, and sometimes even does more harm than good.

That would not suit the fire eaters, but it might be received by the general populace of war-ridden countries as a really good thing for all and sundry. It will be interesting to watch the progress of this sheik.

Outside my window a tiny wren whose whole body I could hide in my hand is giving to a cat her views on cats in general, and this one cat in particular.

The cat will not get her. She lives in a little house, whose only door is the size of a silver quarter.

Moreover the house is perched on a section of a gas pipe, and no cat could climb it.

But the wren wants to make it clear that when the day comes around that the little ones may slip or fall out of the nest she will be on hand. And she will.

Up in the elm tree the orioles are building a marvelously constructed home for the youngsters they are expecting.

It is woven of fine threads and strips of bark from trees, and is swung over a limb 50 feet from the ground. Some time in the blow that comes with a thunderstorm it swings out almost horizontally.

But the little birds will be safe there. Never yet have I known one of the brood to fall out before its wings were strong enough to enable it to flutter to a high bough.

Season after season the birds come back to nest in or near the old homesteads.

All of them have different ideas about home building. The robin is a little careless, and too often builds his establishment within the reach of the feline prowlers.

The cat bird, more observant, finds a location in a thick bush preferably one that is thorny.

The brown thrasher goes deep into the woods, and is usually safe from molestation.

Why does each tribe of birds have its own method of building, and stick to it for season after season?

Why and how does each manage to retain the same song?

"Just accident," says the atheist. The scientist makes some other explanation.

But to the ordinary mind it occurs that somewhere, somehow, there is a power that arranges these matters, and arranges ours. I have never heard a preacher deal with this subject, and I wonder why.

I should think it would supply the theologian with many very excellent arguments in the battle between believers and unbelievers.

As for us humans, we think and ponder and wonder about it, and in the end we never seem to probe very deep into the mystery.
