O. C. HILL DIES

O. C. Hill was born in Datesville, Mo. November 12, 1858. He came to Dallas County, Texas, when thirteen years of age. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Rutledge Dec. 14, 1876. They then moved to Wise County, and from there the family came to Donley county in 1909.

Ten children were born to this union, seven boys and three girls. Three of the boys and two girls survive their father, O. C. Hill of McLean, D. S. of Lockney, W. T. of Lefors, Mrs. J. T. Bain of Hedley and Mrs. W. M. Parker of Glarendon. All the children were present at the time of death except Mrs. Parker. He is also survived by his wife, Mrs. O. C. Hill of Glarendon, about forty grandchildren and a number of great grandchildren.

He professed religion and joined the Baptist Church at the age of thirty-seven years. Just a few days before death came he spoke of his abiding faith in Christ.

Mr. Hill was one of the first settlers in this part of Texas who braved the hardships that naturally come to the first settlers of a new country.

He departed this life Aug. 8, 1935. Funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church here by Revs. L. J. Crawford, M. E. Wells, E. M. Grigsby and Dick Halcomb. After the service at the church, the Masons had charge, and the tiled body was laid to rest in the Rowe Cemetery to await the resurrection.

Active pallbearers were: P. C. Johnson, O. E. Johnson, J. K. a dwell, J. H. Hurn, Nellie Simmons and George Tutt.

Flower girls were grandchildren.

FROM CHILDRESS PASTOR

The following letter has been received by Rev. M. E. Wells:
July 30, 1935

Dear Brother Preacher:

It is just twenty-five more days until Texas votes to reject hard liquor or votes to accept hard liquor.

The call of the hour is for the ministers of God to stand in their places: "Sry aloud and spare not."

Evangeline Booth said, "Drink has drained more blood, hung more crepe, sold more homes, plunged more people into bankruptcy, armed more villains, slain more children, snapped more wedding rings, defiled more innocence, blinded more eyes, twisted more limbs, dethroned more reason, wrecked more manhood, dishonored more womanhood, broken more hearts, blasted more lives, driven more people to suicide, and dug more graves than any other poisoned scourge that ever swept its deathless waves across the world."

God help us to do our best to prevent Texas from legalizing such a curse as this!

Between now and election day preach on the subject in your own church, if you have just recently preached on the subject in your own pulpit, then exchange pulpits with a brother pastor in town, and both of you preach on it again.

On Sunday August 18th, every pulpit in Texas should ring with a warning cry against the terrible curse of liquor.

May God inspire each of us to inspire our people to go to the polls and vote to protect our children against the ravages of strong drink.

Sincerely

E. A. Maness, Pastor

NEDLEYANS NEAR WALLAGE

W. I. Rains, W. Bridges, J. G. McLaughlin, J. B. Masters, and J. N. Noel were in Amarillo Monday and heard Secretary of Agriculture, H. W. Wallace speak on the AAA program. About 4000 people were on hand, from a radius of about 200 miles. This was the last of a series of such talks. Secretary Wallace has made in the South and South west.

Those attending from Hedley state that the address was very interesting and educational, and that the large audience showed keen interest.

NEDLEY SINGERS

At our last meeting we had one of the best singings we have had in a long time. Had several visitors from adjoining communities, and invite them back again. We meet again next Sunday, August 11, at 8:30. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

SUCH IS LIFE—A Bitter Moment

Glassmaker Expert in Middle Age Art

Turns Out Church Windows in Medieval Style.

Bethayres, Pa.—The atmosphere of a medieval workroom pervades the studio of Lawrence B. Saint, famous American stained-glass artist, who is at work on windows for the Protestant Episcopal cathedral at Washington.

Saint has been at work on these windows for six and one-half years. He was one of the artists on the designing and construction of windows for the Swedenborgian cathedral at Bryn Athyn, near here.

It took Saint and his associates working in their respective departments of the studio on Second street, Bethayres, 11 years to complete that particular task.

Spends Life at Art.

Since he was seventeen, more than thirty years ago, Saint has been working and experimenting with glass. During the last seventeen years he has created only ecclesiastical glass.

The glass worker not only designs and constructs the panels, which later become windows, but also makes all his own glass, following closely formulae used by ancient glassmakers.

He has had several pieces of ancient glass analyzed and from the findings has been able to approximate the texture and colorings of the ancient glassmakers. Although this has involved tremendous research and experimentation, the results have been very gratifying.

Saint does not attempt to copy existing windows, but seeks to recapture the beauty of color and the enduring qualities of the Middle-age glassmakers.

Seeks More Lifelike Figures.

He contends that many of the figures in Eleventh and Twelfth century windows are very unreal and impossible in posture and proportion. "I am trying to design more lifelike figures," he says.

Some of Saint's remarkable colors have been the result of pure accident. On a trip to Europe Saint procured a small piece of glass which he had ground up and analyzed. Under the microscope he found the various layers of color. Finally he hit upon one of the secrets of the rich red glass no modern until then had been able to duplicate.

Following a formula the resultant glass was green, with only a few pale streaks of red. He laid it on the tray of a paint-firing kiln. Some one inadvertently turned on the heat. When the piece of glass was discovered, to Saint's surprise, it had turned a rich, ruby red!

Science Standardizes Cooing Birds' Sex Life

Minneapolis.—A University of Iowa zoologist reported that after years of experiments the love life of birds has been put on a year-around basis.

Emil Witschl told the American Association for the Advancement of Science it always has been a mystery why birds exhibited sex emotion only during the mating season.

Now, he said, they can be made to bill and coo for month on month.

It's done by injecting gonadotropic hormones, or serums obtained from pregnant horses and sheep.

Female sparrows, Witschl also said, are likely to lay four or five eggs and then quit. If the eggs are removed as she lays them, however, she will go on laying up to fifty or more.

Game Law History Traced by Warden

Des Moines, Iowa.—Some of the nation's first game laws were resurrected by Game Protector W. W. Britton. They are:

First game law—Book of Deuteronomy, 22:6.

First warden system—Massachusetts and New Hampshire, 1850.

First bag limit—Iowa (25 prairie chickens).

First closed season—Massachusetts (deer, 1718).

First hunting license required—New York, 1864.

First non-resident license required—New Jersey, 1894.

First state to ban market hunting—Arkansas, 1875.

First game farm—Illinois, 1906.

At the outbreak of the Revolutionary war 12 of the 13 colonies had laws banning certain methods of hunting.

ECONOMIC CONTROL by LEONARD A. BARRETT

A strong prejudice exists in many minds against economic control. Any form of control means power which may be directed to constructive as well as destructive channels. The electric current passing along the wire may be used either to warm and light our homes or for the purpose of self-destruction. Economic power therefore in itself is neither good nor evil. Its use determines its ultimate value.

Economic power means congestion of wealth which in turn means accumulation of profits which again means activity in some industry beneficial to humanity; otherwise the public would not have purchased that particular commodity. Whether labor was exploited

Sokol Champs

Mrs. Marie Konecny of Berwyn, Ill., the mother of an eleven-year-old boy, and Francis Schwartz of Chicago, were champions of the Czechoslovak Union of America at the national gymnastic, athletic and calisthenic exhibitions in Cleveland, Ohio.

In order to produce profits is another question, and should be settled upon an entirely different basis than the destruction of the means through which labor was made possible and the public benefited.

We destroy initiative and creative enthusiasm the moment we deprive industry of the power to accumulate profits. The inevitable question arises, can we have material prosperity without economic control? The driving force in any kind of business is not altruism. Many business men, however, are imbued with the altruistic spirit and cheerfully give away large sums of money, which must be made out of profits before it can be distributed for the public good. Most of our colleges, libraries, art museums, public parks, and many other institutions were grants from men, who, because they had accumulated large wealth, were able to make the gifts. Money must be earned before it can be given away. We cannot give something we do not possess. This does not argue, however, that the congestion of wealth which means economic control is not dangerous; frankly it is, but again, like dynamite, it depends upon how that power is used.

Why not argue that economic control be directed into channels of social values and moral uplift rather than destroyed by legislation? Is it not a problem which could be better solved by a proper appraisal of social values with an appeal to conscience? In short, it is a moral and not a legislative problem, and should be settled upon an authorized system of moral values which, according to the spirit of our democracy, is our inalienable right of "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness."

The Household by Lydia Le Baron Walker

THERE are some little courtesies in telephone conversations which are appreciated decidedly by those who are called up. For instance the friend who calls up does a kindly thing when she discovers first of all whether the time is opportune. It is an easy matter to say:

"Is this a convenient time. Am I interrupting you in your work? If I am, won't you give me a ring when you are free, or I can call you again later on?"

Then the person called up can say frankly whether the time is well-chosen or not. She can do it gracefully and another time can be set.

"Thank you so much for asking me this, as I am in the midst of something important. If I may I will call you back. If you are not going to be at home in about half an hour, call me whenever you can later in the day. I shall be home."

Unless it is interrupting the person disadvantageously, it is friendly to take the call when received, even though you may have to say, "I have just a few moments, and shall be delighted to talk with you even though it may not be for very long."

Party Line Courtesies

It is a courtesy to others on a party line to make all calls reasonably short. Also when there are indications that the wire is wanted, it is graceful to say:

"I think some one wishes to use this line, so I am going to say good-bye now." To this may be added, "I still have some things I want to talk over with you, so I'll call back later," or, "Will you call me back when you have time?" It is also a courtesy to say then, if you are going to be out, when you will be at home to receive the call.

One thing, frequently forgotten when making a long call, though wires are individual and not party lines, is that some one may want to call you or the person at the other end of the wire. It may be something delightful you, or the other person, will miss out on, if you cannot be reached at the very time. Or it may be a call from some one who is in town, and will not be able to talk with you soon again. Also it may be some important business matter that one of you should know about immediately and cannot be reached. So long conversations over the telephone are not advisable.

Make Decisions Quickly

Making decisions is one of the things every person has to do. Some persons make them very quickly, seemingly without even giving matters their due consideration. Yet this does not mean that they have poor judgment. It may be that pressure of business or affairs has trained them to decide quickly. When a person has scores of decisions to make daily, as so many heads of business concerns do, they cannot ponder long over any one. When major decisions are to be made, they concentrate on them, and what appears to be a quick decision may be but the result of quiet thinking for some time.

The person who figuratively hems and haws over each trifling decision is laying up trouble for herself. No one's judgment is perfect, and sometimes mistakes will occur even after much mental worry before coming to the settled opinion. A quick decision may prove just as satisfactory. To permit oneself to weigh each trivial decision as if it were a mighty problem, weakens one's powers of decision.

Parents are well advised when they encourage their little folk to decide things for themselves. For example, let a child decide what frock it will wear among those which are suitable. It may be that the color is the only difference between two, set out for the child's choice. The spending of the first penny or two—a week's allowance—is as momentous to a child as the expenditure of many dollars a week, when judgment has matured. The habit of making decisions is being nurtured along the way from childhood to maturity, when it begins early.

When a child feels a decision has been wrong, he may worry, and wish he could reverse it. It is at such times that parents can help the child to realize that he is learning to decide quickly, and that his judgment is growing. Encourage the child to decide quickly, and then feel it is through.

Discover Mummified Body of Man in Mammoth Cave

Mammoth Cave, Ky.—The mummified body of a man, perhaps one thousand years old, found in the Mammoth cave here, was the object of intense interest among noted archeologists.

Grover Campbell and Lyman Curditt, cave guides, discovered the body on a 30-foot ledge of the cave. The man had been caught on the ledge by the fall of a four-ton rock. Marks of an implement near the base of where the rock had been indicated the man had been digging under it when it became dislodged.

Near the body was found a torch made from reeds bound with grasses. It still was sticking nearly upright in the sand. Among the crude implements found was a dagger-shaped limestone rock believed to be a weapon.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

MILITARY APPOINTMENTS

The Eighteenth District of Texas will have for appointment to the Military Academy, for entrance in 1936, two cadets, and to the Naval Academy two midshipmen.

In order to afford equal opportunity to all young men in the district who are interested in entering these institutions, appointments for the Eighteenth District will be made on the basis of a preliminary competitive examination which will be held under the direction of the War and Naval Departments on October 26, 1935.

For each vacancy which exists at the Military Academy there will be appointed one principal and two alternates; and at the Naval Academy one principal and three alternates. These appointments will be made strictly in accordance with the ratings made by the applicants on the examination.

It must be understood that this preliminary examination is simply for the purpose of determining to whom the appointments will be given, and that nominees must then meet the entrance requirements of the Academies. This is done by taking the regular entrance examination for the Military Academy in March, 1936 or for the Naval Academy in February, 1936; or, in lieu thereof, submitting educational certificates with or without validating examinations in English and Mathematics, according to the character of certificate submitted. In addition to mental examination each candidate is required to pass a rigid physical examination.

Candidates for the Military Academy must be between the ages of 17 and 22 at the time of entrance, which will be the first week day in July, 1936. Candidates for the Naval Academy must be not less than 16 nor more than 20 years of age on April 1, 1936. This has been construed to mean that the candidate must not yet have reached the age of 20 on that date.

The preliminary examination as well as the entrance examination is a difficult one and announcement of these vacancies is being made at this time in order that any prospective candidates may have an opportunity to prepare themselves for the preliminary examination during the coming months.—Congressman

TELLS HOW BANKS AIDED PROGRESS

Economist Describes the Ways Banking Institutions Have Contributed to Development of United States

OMAHA, Neb.—Privately owned banking, despite its faults, has served America well, William A. Irwin, Professor of Economics, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, declared in a recent address here on "Banking in a Changing World."

"Under the leadership of individuals banking has helped to bring this country to a foremost place in economic development among the nations of the world," he said. "The small community has been developed by the individual bank. The frontiers of America have been pushed forward by the help and counsel of the individual banker. The shocks of wars and depressions in a century and a half have been withstood with the assistance of the individual banker."

Change May Be Necessary

It may be that we have reached a tide in the affairs of America when new methods are needed. It may be that we have come to a point where the individual should be submerged for the greatest good of the greatest number.

"It may even be that complete centralization of the banking system has become an economic necessity in our complicated social life. But the banker ought to be satisfied that these things are so before he should give up his fight for the system we have known. We came to greatness under that kind of banking; we should not give it up without unmistakable proof of the absolute necessity of such a change."

The American Pattern

Professor Irwin said that the proposal which has been advanced for coordinating banking operations in the national interest under "a Supreme Court" for banking is typically American and ought to have the most serious consideration of those elements which are clamoring for political control, which is typically un-American.
It is not wise, he said, to oppose changes as such, but that bankers should "see to it that change, if and when it does come, shall preserve all that is good in the past and stick as closely as possible to the American pattern of things."

Banking is properly a conservative profession, he pointed out, and should cling to practices and principles of banking that are, and always have been, fundamentally sound.

"It is to its credit that so large a group of its members never faltered, even in boom times, in their allegiance to those sound principles," he declared.
"We probably owe our salvation from chaos to that fact."

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

SCARLET FEVER

The past winter has been an epidemic year for scarlet fever. In Illinois scarlet fever and other forms of streptococcus infections, notably red sore throat, have been more widely prevalent than at any previous time since reliable records have been kept. Scarlet fever, in all degrees of intensity, has been widespread among children, while adults who have become immune to scarlet fever through having had the disease in childhood have developed the sore throat.

We do not have at this time a practical public health method of preventing scarlet fever as we have of preventing smallpox and diphtheria. The chained or bead-like coccil of the so-called streptococcal family are still man's most dreaded bacterial enemy. They cause scarlet fever, erysipelas, child-bed fever, septic sore throat and blood poisoning. Scarlet fever is milder than it was a decade ago, but it is still a serious disease.

We use two general principles to control contagion. One is preventing the distribution of the causative agent of disease. We do this by a variety of means, such as filtration and chlorination of drinking water, proper disposal of sewage, the pasteurization of milk, the inspection and control of foods and food handlers.

The whole big field of what we now call sanitary science has been built up around this desire of man to protect himself and his family against the diseases conveyed through water, milk and other foods.

We have made wonderful progress in the control of diseases spread through these channels, such as cholera, diarrhea, typhoid fever, etc. These diseases may, very frankly, be termed filth diseases, since they are caused by germs which are in the excreta of the sick person. The well person becomes sick by swallowing the germs. The dysentery outbreak that recently occurred in Chicago belongs to this group. Regardless of where, how and why one of these diseases occurs, from our standpoint it is a filthy contamination of food.

Now as to the second method of controlling contagion. This is by vaccination, which makes people immune to the causative agent. One should look at this general problem of disease from two standpoints, one, the host, and the other, the invader. You and I are the hosts, the germs are the invaders. All germs want to live, the same as you and I. Germs grow rapidly.

We have some ways of preventing scarlet fever. These ways are not so good nor so efficient as we should like. It is possible to vaccinate against scarlet fever by injecting doses of vaccine. Five separate injections have been recommended as the best method. Before being vaccinated, however, one should have a skin test done to see if vaccination is necessary. After the course of five injections, another skin test should be made to make sure that the vaccine has been effective and immunity established. This requires seven punctures in all. The length of time a person is immune to scarlet fever is still in question. This method has proved successful in preventing scarlet fever in boarding schools and with other groups of children under controlled conditions. Vaccination against scarlet fever, it must be admitted, is not so successful as is vaccination against diphtheria.

Anyone recently recovered from an attack of scarlet fever has disease-preventing substances in his or her body. Blood from such a recovered person can be injected into a child during the early stages of scarlet fever and the disease will run a short mild course. Sometimes the use of this convalescent serum, as the blood from a recently recovered case is called, will cause a prompt disappearance of the fever, skin rash and sore throat.

Scarlet fever antiserum, like diphtheria antiserum, is available for treating cases of scarlet fever. But like the preventive vaccination methods, the scarlet fever antiserum does not work so well as the diphtheria antiserum.

Scarlet fever, like most of the contagious diseases of childhood, begins as a sore throat. The diagnosis is usually made upon the type of skin rash appearing a few days after the onset of the sore throat and fever. The disease is contagious from the beginning of the sore throat stage, even before scarlet fever is established in the diagnosis. The contagion is spread by droplets from the throat, and not in the peeling skin, as many laymen believe.

One should try to guard children against contracting the disease, particularly young children. Ninety out of each hundred deaths from scarlet fever occur in children between two and ten years of age. While scarlet fever is not a major cause of death now, recovered cases may have permanent and irreparable kidney damage.

Scarlet fever lingered longer this spring than it has been in the habit of doing. This leads public health authorities to believe that the disease may have an early flare-up in the coming winter.

JUAN CARLOS' GOLD

A SPANIARD named Juan Carlos came from the South into the San Luis valley a long time ago. He came with many peons, and they drove a pack train loaded with such things as books and manuscripts. Possibly gold was also a part of the cargo, for Juan Carlos had gold dust in profusion, and was very liberal with it.

Each year for three years, this strange man disappeared on the first day of May and returned on the last day of October. Where he went, and why, no one ever knew. At last some of the Mexicans who lived thereabouts tried to follow him, but to their dismay he saw them, and turned back. He stayed at home after that.

In 1868, Carlos hired some of the most ignorant of the Mexicans thereabouts to build some large adobe houses at the side of the San Luis lakes. He paid them in the usual gold dust, and ordered them away as soon as the buildings were completed. They went, it is said, all but two of the least intelligent, who stayed by request. These men no one ever saw again.

Their families, who came at last to inquire for them, were told that they had received their pay and departed, with the rest. But the Mexican people will not have it so—they say that Carlos caused the two to do some secret work and then had them killed lest they reveal it. But what work, and what secret, no one can tell.

Then Juan Carlos died. Within the year two of the Mexicans in the valley became suddenly wealthy, and bought large herds of sheep and cattle. They claimed that they had made this money in government contract work near Santa Fe, but no one believed them. Perhaps they did not even believe themselves.

The houses near the lakes were used as late as 1885 by hunters who gathered there to shoot water fowl. Apparently their walls harbored no secret, so it is not known what the two missing Mexicans had been hired to do.

And the source of Juan Carlos' gold? That is still a mystery. It is thought that possibly it may be the place discovered by Kit Carson, Stewart, and Archuleta, when they camped by the Rio Grande on their way with messages to San Francisco. In a little stream which ran into the river they saw considerable gold, and panned enough to sell in San Francisco for $87. When the party came back, they passed that way again, but they tried in vain to find that shining little stream.

There is another story about this trip which goes into greater detail. According to this legend a pack mule fell into the water and Stewart and one other man had to stay at this place while the pack was dried out. Stewart saw the gold and panned some of it to pass the time. He wrote the location down in a little book, but unfortunately the book was later destroyed in a fire.

Stewart went to Old Mexico and did not return until he was an old man, when he tried to revisit the scene, but could not find it.

Whichever of these stories, if either, is the true one, it is said further that an old prospector and a buffalo hunter put their heads together later and followed out every clue to the place that they could discover. They found the general location without a doubt, but flood waters had caused a landslip of half a mile in length, and the little stream had vanished.

THE SOMBRERO MINE

WHEN the Apaches were making the Southwest a place of danger for white men, a band of Chiricahuas raided Janos, Sonora, and captured a Mexican boy, whom they raised as one of themselves. Years later, they made another raid on the same place, but this time they were chased and the boy was recaptured.

Among other trinkets, the boy had some silver bullets. Where could the Apaches get silver, the people of Janos asked. From a cave in a canyon, answered the boy. The cave lay under a peak which resembled a sombrero (the high-peaked Mexican hat), and there was much silver, which the Indians used.

Could he show them the place? Indeed he could; he gave many directions, which assured them that he knew where to go.

So several of the Mexicans got together, and with the boy as guide they rode into the Hatchet mountains, which lie on the boundary between the United States and Mexico. Soon they would be at the canyon under the hill shaped like a sombrero, the boy assured them. And soon they were, indeed, at the place mentioned, but at the mouth of the canyon they were met by the Apaches and driven away with a firm fierceness that allowed no delay in leaving.

The Apaches still, probably, know the location of this mine, but others who have sought it have never found it.

Action in Every Line of This One

PATTERN 9368

Everyone you know—everywhere you go!—Action—Action—Action! The natural expression of youth and good health. Even our clothes are "built for action" these days and here's one that just can't wait to get going. You just know you're "going places" in the fashion world with the free stride the front and back skirt pleat give you. The simple yoke miraculously becomes an action pleated sleeve and anyone can see what subtle flattery is gathered into that bodice. A proper set-up for your summer wardrobe would be one of striped shirting, another in washable pastel sports silk. The frock is just as appropriate for street and office wear as for sports.

Pattern 9368 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

Not Flattering

A young woman had come to a family reunion from a distance of several hundred miles. One of her father's cousins in trying to place the younger relatives through their closest kin, asked: "Now, whose daughter are you?"

When the young woman told him, he still looked puzzled; then he remarked unthinkingly: "Your two sisters resemble their father, but you don't look like anybody to me."—Indianapolis News.

Where Will Japan Strike Next?

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

AMERICA for Americans, Europe for Europeans—and Asia for Asians. That is the marching song, figuratively, of the Japanese army in eastern Asia, and the theme song of the drama of imperialism that is unfolding today in the vast theater of the Far East.

To all appearances its true meaning, in the eyes of America and European nations is "East Asia (at least) for the Japanese."

The rapidly expanding power of Nippon in East Asia—which, for the present, means China—is the result of a nationalism which has been growing steadily with the civilization of its people and came to a full awakening with the realization of those people that they had "gotten away with" the complete subjugation of Manchuria; the ever-increasing pressure of a spirited population to make room for its existence by enlarging its boundaries, and the self-discovery of a people's genius for making all manner of commodities for which there is a demand at a cost low enough to get the business.

Japan has conquered Manchukuo and Korea. She has an eye, it is generally believed, upon the islands of the South Pacific. And she has already established a virtual protectorate over North China. How far she will go and how soon, are the answers to a question which all the rest of the world would give a cookie to know.

If the Japanese have gained control over the "heathen Chinese" they have certainly also bewildered him. For while the Japanese ministry of foreign affairs shakes his hand with an attitude of paternal benevolence, the Japanese army sneaks up behind him and kicks him in the pants.

Foreign Minister Hirota eulogizes the Chinese leader, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek; army leaders immediately dub him a fake and a fraud. Hirota honors China by making an embassy of the Japanese legation in China; the army immediately declares it's all news to them. While Japan on one hand speaks of co-operation and the common good, Japan on the other hand goes right ahead with methods of out and out coercion.

As an excuse for direct action, the Japanese army cited banditry, supposed to have been encouraged by the Chinese, and the assassination of two Chinese editors who had been friendly toward the Japanese policy. The army of Gen. Yu Hsueh-Chung has withdrawn south of the Yellow river and the Japanese army has moved in.

Japs Will Dominate.

Whatever government finally emerges in the North China area, it is certain that it will be "guided" by Japanese policy and expediency. It is doubtful, however, if any kind of political union with Manchukuo will ensue, for the two areas combined in one would be a package mighty unwieldy to carry; the Japanese believe that it will be easier to administer them separately.

Under the provisions of the Tangku treaty of two years ago, China north of the Yellow river has been declared a demilitarized zone, but it seems the only demilitarization has been carried out by the Chinese in moving to the south and west. The Japanese army is still there and is completing occupation of the province of Chahar, which is rich in iron ore. This, with the other three North China provinces, Hopei, Shantung, and Shansi, will unite to form a new territorial unit, completely divorced from the Chinese national government and distinctly favorable in its relations with Japan and Manchukuo.

Chinese coal and iron, and the opportunity for cotton planting, particularly in Hopei and Shantung, have been the incentive for most of the Japanese action; however, it is pointed out that the loss of trade in other parts of China as a result may offset these advantages. This becomes doubly important when it is considered that Great Britain, America and other powers may extend financial aid to China.

Where Japan's imperialism and expansion will carry it next is open for conjecture. Japan is, or was, an "island empire" and to its south in the Pacific are many islands in which it has enormous commercial interests. After a statement like that we in America are prone to think immediately of the Philippines, but more important to Japan are the Netherlands East Indies, which buy more goods from Japan than does even China. Japan has an annual balance of trade with these heavily-populated islands that is more than $35,000,000 in her favor.

As to the Philippines, Japan makes horrid gestures at the suggestion that her interests there are anything but platonic. Certainly, although defending the Philippines from Japanese attack would be a man-sized job for America, the Japanese would venture no aggression there so long as the islands are under the wing of American protection.

But in 1945, according to the present agreement, the Philippines will get their complete political independence. With American domination will go the privilege of free trade with the United States; in fact during the next 10 years the tariff on Philippine goods coming into the United States will be annually increased. If the economic burden becomes too great for the Philippines—and there are plenty of those who say it will—the islands may be forced to enter some sort of union that would give them trade advantages with another large power. That would be Japan.

Consider Russia.

It must be remembered that there is another great power which has something to say about the reapportionment of territory in East Asia. That power is Soviet Russia, which has 200,000 fighting men and a far superior air force north of Manchukuo and across the Amur river. The conflicting aims of these two powers was not so serious when Manchuria existed between them to absorb all the shocks. Now their borders have moved right up against one another. Already border skirmishes, allegedly provoked by Japanese guns, have caused vigorous protests from the Soviet ambassador in Tokyo.

That the status quo is likely to be maintained for some time between these two nations is due not to a mutual sympathy of interests so much as to the unwillingness of both nations to take any action that would provoke a war between two forces which are so evenly matched that such a war might result in economic, if not physical, annihilation of both.

The Siberian army is far better mechanized than the Japanese, its airplanes are modern and double the Japanese strength, and the island of Japan itself is a perfect set-up for aerial destruction.

To offset this, Japan will be moving from interior lines, and administration of a Japanese army campaign would be possible on a much more concentrated basis, for Siberia is on the outside of a great, curving, northern frontier of Manchukuo. While Japanese reinforcements could be moved in with comparative celerity, because of the proximity of the homeland and because of far superior rail facilities, it would take a much longer time for the Red army to move replacements from Russia proper into eastern Siberia. These replacements would have to come over one lone railroad which is notoriously inefficient and easily susceptible to crippling by an enemy force.

While Russia would like to reach an agreement of non-aggression with the Japanese, Japan has so far avoided it. The possibility of having to defend itself from Russia is always a good excuse for keeping the military budget high. Japan is also a trifle wary over making it easier for communistic propaganda to filter into Manchukuo, North China and even Japan itself.

The Test May Come.

Soviet-Japanese relations may come a little more nearly to a head next year when new contracts will be discussed to permit Japanese fishing off the Siberian and Kamchatka coasts. Only 10 per cent of the fish taken from these waters bit on communistic hooks in 1927; now half of them do. Perhaps the red bait is more enticing. At any rate Japan now wants to pay its rental of fisheries in yen instead of gold rubles and wants to base the rentals on the number of fish actually caught, instead of on the "standard catch" as it is now. Maybe the answer will depend upon who counts the fish.

By consenting peacefully to the waiver of its ownership rights in the Chinese Eastern railway, Russia indicated that it was willing to let Japan have something of a free hand in Manchukuo. The area, which is three times as large as Japan itself, is now administered—and very ably, too—by the Japanese army of occupation.

The Japanese policy in Manchukuo has been constructive. Railroads have been increased in mileage more than one-third in three years. These have all been built where they will make it easier to divert to Japan much of the traffic in goods which has passed through Siberian cities, particularly Vladivostok, which now must depend almost entirely upon inland Siberia for its trade. New railroads planned for construction will make even the far reaches of Manchukuo readily accessible to Japanese commerce. Japan also built 4,500 miles of roads in Manchukuo in 1933 and 1934, and schedules call for 2,500 miles annually in the years to come.

Last year Manchukuo became Japan's biggest export market, taking 18 per cent of the exported goods. The value of these exports grew from more than 75,000,000 yen in 1931 to more than 400,000,000 yen in 1934. This has confronted Japan with a serious economic problem, however, for if exports of goods to Manchukuo have grown, so have exports of capital. Japan's capital investments there were 90,000,000 yen in 1932, 176,000,000 yen in 1933, and 237,000,000 yen in 1934. The cost of military occupation in Manchukuo is about 150,000,000 yen annually. A balance of trade will have to be effected if Japanese investments are to be secure.

It is not merely Manchukuo's 4,800,000,000 tons of coal reserves, and the area's iron which Japan wants. She is honestly desirous of maintaining more peaceful and civilized conditions in Manchukuo, where the preceding rule was corrupt and oppressive. While she has admittedly improved the country, she is not so popular with the native population, probably because of her desire to acquire more high posts in the administration and in business than is seemingly necessary.

America Chagrined.

Naturally, America has been chagrined by the Japanese abrogation of naval treaties and insistence on naval parity, and has been offended by the Japanese policy of forcing out foreign oil companies in Manchukuo. We, along with Great Britain and other nations, have been provoked at her interference in China and visualize the suffering of our trade. But Americans have only about $200,000,000 invested in China. Great Britain has six times as much, Japan a little less than Great Britain.

Our export sales to China in 1933 amounted to nearly $52,000,000 or approximately 3 per cent of our total exports. We exported $143,000,000 worth of goods to Japan in the same year. If we were to go to war with Japan the value of our Chinese export business would vanish in no time. The expense would paralyze Japan economically and destroy our best customer in Asia.

The Japanese people are probably much more excited over our recent naval maneuvers in the Pacific than we are over their policy in Asia. Influenced by a press which speaks only with the voice of Tokyo, they feel that we plan to carry out our Far Eastern policy with an armed force, and that the fact that we demand a stronger navy than Japan's is evidence that we want to be equipped to carry on an offensive in the Pacific and have no intention of fostering world peace by limitation of armaments.

Japan, with her withdrawal from the League of Nations and her abrogation of armament treaties, has openly showed her disgust and disinterestedness in European affairs, and her intention to devote her activities entirely to Asia. But she cannot forget Europe entirely, because of the interests of European nations, particularly Great Britain, in her vicinity.

More than anything else Japan fears an Anglo-American agreement which would form a potential union of the two greatest navies in the world. The great puzzle is whether such action would avert or bring on a serious crisis.

Trouble which is brewing in Europe may come to a head, and if it does, this will command most of the attention of European powers. Japan will then pursue her aggressive Asiatic policy more intensely, as she did during and immediately following the war.

But Japan harbors no illusions of ruling the world. All she is concerned about is Asia, particularly eastern Asia.

EXPERT EXPLAINS HEAVY RAINFALL IN CLOUDBURST

Why a "cloudburst" may yield many times as much rain as all the water in the cloud when the rain begins is explained by Charles F. Talman, well-known meteorologist of the United States weather bureau, in an account for the American Nature association of Washington, says the Baltimore Sun.

Even the densest clouds never contain more than about one part of water to 30,000 parts of air, which is far much less than the water in many so-called cloudbursts, which have been observed and measured, even if every bit of cloud condensed and fell as rain at the same instant. It is a usual experience, also, that the clouds do not vanish during a cloudburst, but are apparently just as thick and dense afterward as before.

Mr. Talman explains that a cloudburst really is an especially sudden and violent thunder storm, in which great currents of warm, moist air from close to the ground rush rapidly a mile or more up into the atmosphere, are cooled suddenly by this rise and give up their load of moisture in the form of raindrops. The rapid up-currents of air may keep most of these raindrops aloft for a while, but presently the upward air currents slacken and billions of the suspended droplets fall as a violent rain.

The water in one of these sudden falls may have been drawn from the low air for many square miles around the spot where the cloudburst happens. What may have been the world's record cloudburst is described as 24 inches of rain falling in less than five minutes, but Mr. Talman is skeptical. The maximum acceptable record is one of about an inch of rain in a minute, which fell in California in 1920.

Swords Made History

Two historic swords have been made national treasures in Japan. The first is that worn by the late Fleet Admiral Togo at the Battle of the Japan sea, originally the gift of the late Emperor Taisho when his majesty was crown prince. The second is a samurai sword called "Bizen Fukuoka Ichimonji," which was presented to Viscount Chokai Okabe formal feudal lord of Kishiwada, by the city of Kishiwada. Both will be displayed in museums in Tokyo.

Gail turned and looked at her, sleeping. Even in her sleep Ariel's face wore a faintly discontented look, and she sighed impatiently, scornfully—Ariel to the end.

Then it was morning, and there was no more time for dreams. The house was astir in her sleep Ariel's face wore a faintly discontented look, and she sighed impatiently, scornfully—Ariel to the end.

"You'll be back early, Phil dearest?" "Oh, Lord, I'll be here by ten!"

"Mrs. Bates wants to know if you'd rather have chicken or lettuce sandwiches, Gail!"

"The boy for the trunks is here, Gail."

"There's someone we forgot, after all!" This was Phil, departing.

"Oh, good heavens, Phil, who? May-be I could telephone."

"The Formaldehydes!" Phil called over his shoulder.

"Gail—look at the roses!" "Gail—Miss Wells wants to bring her mother upstairs to see you in your wedding dress. She says her mother might have a stroke if she—"

"Listen, all the food goes here, see?—in this closet. Just stack it there, and while we're at church Mrs. Wiggin and Betsey are going to sort everything out."

"Wiff-waff, if you would eat it, and let me wash the bowl!"

"Here are the cakes from Lou. Will you look at the ten-layer cake!"

"Well, she wanted to come downstairs, too, the darling, and see what was going on, and help get her Aunt Gail married."

"Oh, look, fruit punch, two pails of it. Oh, that's marvelous! Look—two pails of it. Two pails of fruit punch, Lily, so that's all right!"

"Give me the baby," Ariel said. She sat holding the soft little drowsy armful.

"You look real cute with a baby, Miss Murchison!" said Lily's mother.

"Mamma, will you lay off?" Lily demanded patiently. But Ariel only laughed. She was her sweetest, her gentlest self, on this busy morning. She had seemed to keep rather near Gail, and when the clock had raced as far as eleven o'clock, and Gail outwardly calm, inwardly madly agitated, went upstairs for the actual donning of the wedding dress, Ariel went, too, still carrying the sleeping baby.

The bedroom was a scene of mad confusion; Mary Keats was on her knees, finishing the packing, and holding everything up for Gail's approval before she laid it away.

The white silk gown slipped over her head; she was all in white. They who loved her thought they had never seen Gail look so lovely as she did now. Square-shouldered, straight, steady-eyed, she looked at herself in the old dim mirror that had reflected all the moods of her girlhood, and laughed contentedly.

"Somehow I can't feel that I'm getting married!"

The others struggled away, Lily taking her baby. Ariel was alone with her sister. Suddenly she came close, and encircled the sweetness and whiteness and glory that were Gail with her slender arms.

"Just one thing, Gail. I'm going on to Chicago tomorrow to meet Van, and I'm going—I'm going to make a go of it, do you understand? I'll be the nicest woman in the country club, I'll have a little girl baby that Van will adore. I'll study French and keep house—honest I will, Gail!"

It was complete surrender. Gail caught her little sister to her in the first real embrace they had known since Ariel had come back. Both their faces were wet.

Then Gail had to wipe her cheeks carefully and powder them again, and go downstairs to join the others, and to walk around the corner and across the tree-shaded street to Saint Mark's.

There were persons on the sidewalk—kindly persons who said, "Good luck, Miss Lawrence!" There were more clustered on the church steps, and she walked between them at her brother's side.

They were all there: old friends, old neighbors, library acquaintances. She felt their love about her like a protecting great wall as she went slowly up the aisle and saw Dick waiting.

The boys had been shepherded into a pew, and Lily, flushed and weary, was sitting there with little Gail restless and hot in her arms; Sam looked oddly grown-up in his new suit, standing beside Dick. And Dick looked—just Dick, big and lean and homely and kind, stooping down a little beside the shorter Sam, watching Gail, catching her eye as she looked at him. And at the sight of him Gail forgot everything else except that after this packed and hurried and extraordinarily emotional morning she was really getting married.

They smiled at each other. Gail's cold right hand caught at his left, and during the little ceremony their fingers were linked.

Afterward, when they were home again and the congratulatory crowds

Whether you spend your summer in town or in country, on the golf course, or at the beach you will find it the better part of wisdom and good taste to have at hand one or several of the prettily colorful, porous, airy knitted outfits that have been developed in wide variety to keep you cool as the mercury mounts. They'll keep you fashionable at the same time because of their graceful, silhouetting lines, smart tailoring and casual appearance.

For vacation purposes knits are ideal. Throw them into your valise at home and take them out ready to wear when you reach your destination. As crinkles and wrinkles disappear with a shake. Their sporty appearance, too, tunes them to practically all daytime requirements whether your program calls for active recreation or just lolling about.

The vast majority of these creations for warm weather wear are two piece dresses coming in linen, feather-weight zephyr, silky and cotton knits. Sweater blouses in openwork effects, many with self belts and novelty tie girdles, are undeniably in the lead. These are generally set off by skirts in plain stitches. A new touch, which is seen with increasing frequency is a match of sleeves with front blouse panels. Sleeves, by the way, are usually short and of the puffed type.

Ideal for bridges and teas on sultry afternoons and suited as well to spectator sports is the two-piece ensemble, knitted of a silk frill, shown to the right in the picture. Hand fashioned throughout, it is marked by a lacy knit bosom which matches split umbrella sleeves. A novel touch is provided by a braided neckline running into a tie effect, with two crystal clips for adjustment purposes. The neckline theme is carried out in a braided cable cord ending in a long graceful tassel. Other details of interest include the rib bottom of the blouse and the novelty rack hemline of the skirt. Dusty pink is a becoming color for this smart, serviceable costume and it is also definitely modish in blue, white, wheat gold, antique mauve and white, also other summery shades.

Simplicity is the keynote of the two-piece cotton knit, shown to the left, rendering it perfect for golf and tennis and just as good for morning shopping on these cloying summer days. It is an almost imperceptible bird's eye knit with a unique straight collar line developed in a rib effect, similar to the treatment of the brief puff sleeves and the bottom of the blouse. Ample freedom of action is permitted by semi-concealed pleats, front and back, which make walking no battle against skirt restrictions. At the same time the skirt is fashioned so as to retain its trim effect. A decorative touch is introduced by a self-belt which may be casually and even negligently, tied at either side in accordance with your whim.

As a pert addition to your beach wardrobe you will find that a knit pajama outfit, as centered in the illustration, will give you endless comfort and satisfaction. The garment, which is in a corduroy stitch, is distinguished by the wide knit rib waistline which assures close fit. The contrasting stripes of the waist are carried out in the wide opening club collar, which is also in a rib knit. Interesting details are the button closing in the now-so-voguish shirtwaist effect, the pocket monogram, the wide pants and the backless treatment. Gray is an unusually effective shade for this pajama, the contrasting stripes being red and blue.

"When we used to play 'round the old ranch together, twenty years ago, we didn't see this coming at the end, did we, Gail?" Dick said, as he caught her hand for the run to the waiting motor car.

"At the end!" she echoed, with a swift, shocked, laughing glance. "Dick, Dick, this is only the beginning! Don't forget that I'm one of the Lucky Lawrences!"

Knit Outfits Are Ideal for Vacation

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Whether you spend your summer in town or in country, on the golf course, or at the beach you will find it the better part of wisdom and good taste to have at hand one or several of the prettily colorful, porous, airy knitted outfits that have been developed in wide variety to keep you cool as the mercury mounts. LACE AND CHIFFON

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lace and chiffon make a charming combination and one that is most fashionable at the present moment. For the model pictured silk lace goes partner with navy silk chiffon, the matching jacket being entirely of the lace. The V-decolletage in front can be adjusted high or low.

SUMMER PARTY TOGS NOW HOLD INTEREST

Summer party dresses are absorbing the attention of the younger set these days. Sleek sophistication is out for summer evenings, so far as the youngsters are concerned, and fluffy ruffles are the rule of the day. Sheer confections of lace and net and organdy are blossoming in shop windows, with plenty of frills and furbelows.

Consider, for instance, an evening gown made entirely of diagonal ruffles of Chantilly net lace, mounted on tulle. In petal pink or baby blue it is about as fetching a costume as ever was donned by a dewy debutante.

White also is on the up and up for summer evenings, what with the new epidemic of organdies and organzas and such. Ruffled white net is a sure-fire summer dance frock number, with a black net jacket, if you must be sophisticated.

"Something Different" Is Slogan for Accessories

"Something different" is the slogan for the accessories which accent the new clothes. Almost every one has changed its shape and design a bit.

Gloves are shorter, bags are deeper, belts are wider, handkerchiefs larger and all marked by new touches and trims. Short gloves of pigskin, do-skin or suede are the last word in chic accessories to the new tailleur. They extend only about one inch higher than the wristbone, sometimes slashed briefly up the back and buttoning on the back of the hand.

Button Trim

Tiny buttons of crochet or pearl are part of the dainty detail of sheer lingerie blouses. Rows of them range down front frills or along the sides of cuffs.

Why Should Male Sex Have Monopoly of Fun?

"In this corner (we are describing a boxing bout) is Myron Emory, weight 132 pounds. And in this corner Charlie Young, weight 114. The boys are known as the Cuban Flash and the New Hampshire Wildcat. They will now fight four rounds for the welterweight championship of the world."

The reporter, in a popular magazine, goes on to describe the fight; how the boxers, lean, tanned, eager, advanced to the center of the ring; how the crowd applauded wildly; how they battled, now boxing cleverly, now slugging hard, the crowd shrieking encouragement. Twice one of the fighters was knocked to the canvas, but twice he arose and earned himself the decision of a draw.

And now, says a woman writer, whose widely read articles are not usually devoted to prize-ring activities, the point of this boxing report in this space. It was really a very strange contest. For the fighters, Emory and Young, were seventy-nine and seventy-eight years old! The referee was a hundred and three.

The bout took place in St. Petersburg, Fla., a popular haven for old people. It was managed by the Three Quarter Century club, all of whose members are over seventy-five, all active in some sport.

And no old-time athletes are these men. Just elderly people who when they retired to that city in the sun found all sorts of diversions—for young people. They realized that if they were to have any fun there they would have to organize activities for themselves. So they founded the Three Quarter Century club—"not to turn back the years, but to utilize fully the years they have left." It appears they are adding to them.

But—the Three Quarter Century are all men. My thought is, what about the women? They don't have to box, or join the baseball team, but there are goodly activities in that city of the sun that would give them no less fun. Have they been so preoccupied all those years before that they can't learn now how to take fun like their men? That's an idea for the generation to follow them. Let this July 4th be remembered as an Independence day for a Woman's Three Quarter Century club!

Big Australian Estate

What is the world's biggest estate? The question is prompted by the news that the Zamolski estate in Poland has been reduced by half, the family having handed roughly over 50 per cent of the lands to the nation. Before this was done, the estate was 250,000 acres in extent. Even now, it is bigger than any estate in Britain. But the largest estate in the world is not in Europe at all. You have to go to Australia if you want to see it. There you will find the holding of Sir Sidney Kidman, famous as the Australian cattle king. It is over 39,000 square miles in extent, larger than Ireland, Austria, Hungary, or Portugal.—London Answers.
