HEDLEY P. T. A.

The Parents and Teacher's Association had a delightful treat in store when it assembled in its regular meeting Thursday evening, November 21, at 7:00 p. m. The Sixth and Seventh Grades entertained the audience with Thanksgiving playlets which were exhibitions of class room performances, not learned for public entertainment.

The Seventh Grade presented Thanksgiving Dinner, which was written by its class members in a class room project. Judging by the presentation, we feel very sure that this group is enthusiastically working in the class room.

What older person was informed concerning the origin of the fruits and the vegetables which go on the Thanksgiving table when the Sixth Grade gave their playlet, Thanksgiving Dinner? They also gave splendid examples of their ability to design costumes and masks.

The Sixth Grade also gave a group of Thanksgiving hymns, and Mary Lane Hendricks gave a reading.

The Sixth Grade won the dollar given for attendance of parents at P. T. A. during the month of November.

The Paid Membership Drive will not close until the first meeting in December. Rumors are afloat that some of the grades are very busy. Remember to help these pupils win the prize, a picture for their room, by paying them your dues.

Whenever each one misses these meetings, he is robbing himself of both pleasure and information. The next meeting is Dec. 5, at 7:00 p. m. Be there! The Publicity Committee

SIMILAR

Gerald was scheduled for a class on Saturday which he did not like to attend.

"What's the matter with it that you don't like to go?" asked his mother.

"Well, it's just like coming to the table to eat. If it's something you don't like it lasts too long, and if it's something you do like there's not enough of it."—Indianapolis News.

GOING AND COMING

"There is nothing more expensive than getting married."

"Oh, I don't know! I only gave the minister ten dollars to marry me, but it took fifty for a divorce."

No Line

In reply to the teacher's question, "What is the axis of the earth?" Sam said an imaginary line from pole to pole.

"Good," said the teacher. "But could you hang clothes on that line?"

"Sure," answered Sam.

"Why, Sam," asked the astonished teacher, "what kind of clothes?"

"Imaginary clothes!"

Such a Quandary!

"When are Joan and Edward to be married?"

"Never, I'm afraid."

"Why, how's that?"

"Well, she won't marry him until he pays his debts and he can't pay his debts until she marries him."

At the Wedding

Mrs. Van Dyke—Look, dear, doesn't the bride look stunning?

Mr. Van Dyke—Yes, and doesn't the bridegroom look stunned?—Casper's Weekly.

Super-Blackness

"This negro I'm talking about was so black they called him Midnight."

"That's nothing. I knew one who was so black that lightning bugs followed him around in the daytime."

On With the Loud Noise

"Silence is golden," said the ready-made philosopher.

"Yes," said Senator Sorghum, "but under our present financial system, what's the good of gold?"

Her Answer

He—Do you think your father would object to my marrying you?

She—I don't know. If he's anything like me, he would.—Atlanta Constitution.

SUREST SIGN

"Is your husband improving?"

"I think his health is, because his language isn't."

Making Home Sweeter

"Why do you write household hints and cook books?"

"Because," said Miss Cayenne, "a woman's place is in the home."

"Whose home?"

"Everybody's."

He Didn't Stick

Fond Mother—I hope my little precious has been as good as gold all day.

Nurse—Unfortunately not. He went off the gold standard about lunch time.

Following Directions

"Hey, what's your roommate doing with those two mirrors?"

"Well, he had a boil on the back of his neck and the doctor told him it wasn't serious yet, but he'd have to keep his eye on it."

Poor Baby

Mother—Why do you think my rolling pin isn't much good?

Junior (heavy reader of the funnies)—Because it doesn't say "Fow" when I hit the baby over the head with it.

A LETTER

Hedley, Texas
Nov 21, 1935
Dear Mrs Owen
I have just finished reading the book of Florence Nightingale by Laura E Richards. Because it is very interesting, I had much pleasure reading it. What I enjoyed most was her helping Roger's dog to get well. As she and the vicar were riding along one day, they met Roger, who was having a terrible time. When they asked him what his trouble was, he said that the boys threw stones at his dog and broke his leg; so Florence and the vicar set off to Roger's home to doctor the dog. They doctor'd him, and soon the dog got well. Florence doctor'd dogs, cats, and dolls. She would play that the doll had a terrible headache, and she would put the doll to bed and put hot cloths on her head. Sometimes the doll would be sick for two or three days. Her doll never did know when she was going to be sick or when she was going to have her clothes changed. Florence was a very funny little girl.

Yours truly,
Jonimerie Pickett

Why we don't have more assemblies?
Why Seniors are supposed to be dignified?
Why its hard to stand up on skates?
Why everybody is glad when Friday comes?
Why we don't have three months school and nine months vacation?
Who invented tests, book reports, examinations, etc.
Why music isn't called Greek?

TRAVEL TALK

The high school students were delightfully entertained last Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Walker, who gave a discussion, together with a moving picture, about India, China, and Japan. Mrs Walker is a professional in geography, and her travel and experience in this work made her talk very interesting. These pictures showed the occupations types of people, places of beauty and interest, and travel and transportation in these different countries.
We enjoyed Mrs Walker's visit very much, and we certainly do appreciate the 1919 Study club who made this opportunity possible for us.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to C. E. Johnson, Mayor of Hedley, Texas, for the construction of a Sewerage System in accordance with the plans, specifications, and instructions to bidders, prepared by W. D. Howren, Engineer, Amarillo, Texas, will be received at the Office of the City Secretary until 2 P. M. December 3rd 1935.

The successful bidder will be required to enter into a contract with the City of Hedley, which will contain provisions conforming with the requirements of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, as set out in FWA Form No. 166 or 179, issued July 22, 1935, and revisions thereof and the special requirements of the State Director, PWA.

A Cashier's or Certified Check, payable without recourse to the order of C. E. Johnson, Mayor or an acceptable Bidder's Bond, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible total bid, including consideration of alternates, must accompany each bid as a guarantee that, if awarded the contract, the bidder will promptly enter into a contract and execute a bond on the forms provided, as outlined in the specifications and contract documents.

A performance bond, in an amount not less than one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the contract and upon the payment of all persons supplying labor or furnishing materials, will be required.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the prevailing rates of wages as established by the City Council, approved by the State Director, PWA, and as herein set forth must be paid on this project.

In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating prices in the proposal, the Owner reserves the right to adopt the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the proposal.

LABOR CLASSIFICATION AND MINIMUM WAGE SCALE.

The Labor Classification and Minimum Wage Scale below have been predetermined by the Owner in accordance with the statutory and PWA requirements and the prevailing local wages, and shall govern all work performed by the contractor in connection with the construction of the project covered by these specifications. The bids submitted are based on not less than the rates of pay indicated in this predetermined Labor Classification and Minimum Wage Scale. In no event shall rates of pay be lower than those established by recognized unions operating in the community at the time of the bid opening.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service

The future, not the past, is going to be your concern from now on. Instead of worrying about mistakes you have made, big or little, try to arrange that those mistakes will not be made again.

What is done, is done. Profit by it if it has been beneficial. Forget it if it has been harmful.

You are one of a great procession of human beings, all hoping to be useful or successful, all looking forward to possible happiness.

Try, after this, to do nothing that you will be forced to undo by and by.

If you have the hurry habit, and have suffered by it, proceed with a little more care next time.

If you have neglected your education, don't sit down and whine about it. There is still time to fit yourself for what you want to do.

Self-confidence is an excellent thing. But don't be too confident. Test your own capacity before you try it out.

I know a great many young men who, because their early training has been neglected, and because they cared more about passing enjoyment than what they might do with their futures have convinced themselves that they are failures, and that it will be futile to try to succeed.

But if they have the will to succeed, they will succeed, even if they have wasted years that should have been devoted to effort.

The important thing is to gain ground, to equip yourself more and more thoroughly for the game.

Every time you make a serious mistake, resolve that that particular mistake shall not be committed again.

Every time you feel ashamed about the time you have wasted, work double-time till the waste has been made up.

I could cite dozens of cases of men who, late in life have begun all over again, and got away with it.

Mark Twain tried plotting till the railroad displaced the Mississippi river, then he turned to gold mining. He was unsuccessful at gold mining, so he turned to writing.

And at writing he made a great success, and soon was earning more money in a year than he had made in many years spent "fading himself."

If you try to analyze your own mental makeup, you will learn that there is some one thing you can do, and will enjoy doing more than anything else.

Go ahead and do it. Don't worry about early mistakes. Think only of what you are going to do tomorrow and many hundreds of tomorrows.

"No man can succeed in producing great things who is not thoroughly sincere in dealing with himself." — James Russell Lowell.

Look to Yourself

One human being you can control— if you try hard enough.

One single career you can guide—that is your own.

If you have children, you can influence them—for a time.

But soon they will get out of leading strings.

Don't fool yourself. Don't, considering somebody else's career, say: "I could do as well as he does, or better, if I tried."

Maybe you could. But you've got to find out. You have a troublesome person on your hands. That's you.

Look yourself squarely in the face every morning. If you've done mean things, admit it. Don't make excuses.

Being human, you will be prone to criticize other people, but you have no right to. You really know little about them. Restrain your judgment of them until you are sure what their motives are.

As for you, if you are misunderstood—and about half the people in the world imagine that they are—it is your own fault.

You can be frank and honest if you want to. That may not always be easy but it is a thing that can be acquired by practice.

Set a high mark for yourself. Before you condemn others for actions which you think are mean and petty, make sure that you are not doing actions of very much the same kind.

Keep envy out of your system. Keep your sympathy working. You doubtless expect it from others.

Your happiness as you travel through life will depend upon your peace of mind.

You may get hardened after a while, and begin to nurse the notion that if other people cheat and lie, you can get away with it, too.

Maybe you can, but you'll be ashamed of yourself, and feel like a sneak.

I know that there are many respected and venerated people in the world who gain wealth, make friends, and are known as leading citizens.

But among these are many who are aware, down inside of themselves, that they haven't played a straight game, or who, if they had a chance, would start all over again.

But second starts, while the possible, are about a hundred as difficult as first starts, so it's much better to chart the right from the beginning and stick through the voyage.

Three States May Be Added to Union

Puerto Rico and Hawaii Are Seeking Admission.

Washington.—There'll be 51 stars in the American flag if three bids for statehood now being made are successful.

Puerto Rico has dispatched a committee from its legislature to urge the granting of statehood to the island, which now ranks technically as an American possession. A bill to grant statehood is now before the house committee on territories.

If Puerto Rico should become the forty-ninth state, it would be the first state to be organized outside the continental limits. Alaska and Hawaii rank as territories, a condition which has usually been precedent to the granting of statehood.

Hawaii Has Hopes. Americans in Hawaii would also

For Summer Sports

Here's a very smart country-clubbish outfit for sports on hot summer days. It is of white acetate fabric and is fastened in front with brown wooden buttons. There are two patch pockets which adorn the jacket tailored top. The brown dotted scarf and the brimmed sports hat give a swagger touch to the costume.

Who Will Solve the Problem?

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Whatever we may think of the present theories for solving the unemployment problems, one fact challenges our most serious consideration. As business improved we expected a decrease in the amount needed for relief, whereas the opposite has been true. More money is needed today to care for the unemployed than three years ago. Either the number of the unemployed or the amount paid per individual has increased. How many persons are now on relief who could be gainfully employed? How many have been offered work and refused it? These questions merit most discreet investigation. In view of the ultimate solution of this social problem the inevitable question arises, is the present method of granting relief adequate? Will it solve the problem? If not, are other solutions possible? Among the many solutions offered for consideration, three are receiving serious thought. The most unique plan is known as the Townsend method by which all persons over sixty years of age, regardless of race or social standing, be given $200 per month upon the agreement, that the person receiving the money will not work for wages and that he will spend the entire amount within the month it is granted. The enormous expense of such a plan is to be raised by taxation. The argument is that it would take 10,000,000 out of the ranks of the unemployed.

New Open Champion

Samuel J. Parks, Jr., a Pittsburgh professional of only three years' standing and almost unknown outside of his own club, won the national open golf championship at the Oakmont Country club with a score of 250 for 72 holes.

Another plan, championed by Mr. Huey Long, suggests there be no increase in taxes but the entire wealth of the country be divided, so that every person will have a spending allowance of $2,500 per year. Just how this is to be divided and the method by which more wealth will be created when it all runs out, does not seem to have received earnest consideration.

Another plan is that of unemployment insurance, the burden of the cost of carrying the insurance to be carried largely by industry itself.

Many other plans have been suggested, but in addition to the present "dole" system, these three seem to be the most important. What is the perfect plan? Who will think the problem through? Who will present a practical and possible solution? It is a problem which must be settled upon the basis of facts and not theories. It is a mighty big challenge! Who has the solution and what is it?

Exploratory Seal Has Look at Liberty Statue

New York.—A harbor seal which recently decided to get a good look at the Statue of Liberty, was the first of its species to visit New York harbor in 30 years.

The seal was sighted near Bedloe Island. It swam within a few hundred feet of the statue and was seen by a score of persons. As it cannot long survive in polluted waters, the seal faces inevitable death if it remains in the harbor.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

The Hangings on Divided Rods Are Swung Out When They Serve as Screens.

THE window draperies for a summer home should be planned not only for decoration, but to allow for breezes to blow into a room without disarranging them. In bedrooms it is possible also to have them act as screens to shut out sunlight which may shine into a room too early for the sleeper's comfort. And again the curtaining can be so managed that it permits either the top or bottom sash to be raised or lowered to admit the air fully and freely without disturbing the arrangement of either portion of the window decoration, while the light can be dimmed and the view into the room be shut out from either half of the window or both top and bottom as preferred.

Rods and Tie-Backs. To permit the air unobstructed entrance, the curtains, when hung in the usual way, should fall chiefly over the woodwork rather than over the panes. Tie-backs should be used lest the wind blow the hangings ungracefully and annoyingly out into the room.

When draperies are hung on divided rods which are hinged so that they can extend at right angles to the wall as well as parallel with it, they may act as screens. Not only will they shield against sunlight, but also against drafts. No valance is used with curtains hung on these divided rods. Frequently the rods themselves are decidedly ornamental not only in shape but in finishes, polychrome being a favorite finish.

Dutch Draperies. Curtains hung in Dutch style are very adaptable. Each sash of the window has its separate curtain or pair of curtains which may be sheer or of a drapery fabric. The pair on the upper sash hang a trifle below those on the lower one, which should just escape the sill. This prevents hems from getting soiled as quickly as if they swept the sill.

New Kentucky Museum to House Indian Relics

Blue Licks, Ky.—A structure of colonial design is nearing completion here, which will be used as a museum in connection with the state park.

The building will house a collection of Indian relics and historic bones. The museum building is being erected at a cost of $20,000. The funds were appropriated by the Kentucky general assembly in 1932.

On the Catwalk of a Monster Bridge

Here are seen men working on the catwalk of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge extending from the San Francisco anchorage to the central anchorage near Yerba Buena Island. The catwalk is made of four cables two and one-quarter inches in diameter with what looks like magnified chicken wire slung between them. The cables from which the bridge will be suspended will be spun three feet above the catwalk.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a drab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff, who are older, her seventeen-year-old brother Bruce, and their Aunt Meg. In her job-hunting rounds she interviews Lawrence Bellamy, editor of the Journal of Commerce, but finds he has no place for a woman writer. She likes him very much, as she tells Brenda later. He's a stunning young thing, as tall as Cliff, not much more than thirty, I think, and very much the gentleman. As the sisters talk, diffident Barney Kerr drops in, asking where Cliff is. Barney has his eye on Tony, but she despises him. Tony gets a telephone call from Mr. Greenwood, city editor of the Call, offering her a job as society reporter. It being late at night, she has promised to see him in the morning. Cliff, returning just then, says: "Why not pinch it tonight?" and accompanies Tony to the newspaper office.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"Is there a man named Burke working here?" Clifford now found a lull in which to ask.

"Sure. Spike, where's Burke? He's usually in the sports," said MacGrath. "Here he is!"

He smote the shirted back of a stalwart young man who was washing not only his face, but his whole head and his arms up to the elbow at one of the basins. This person, dripping and sudsy, turned about with a loud "Quit!"

"Oh, hello, Cliff," Joe Burke said, then added, beaming over the filthy roller towel in a froth of white, "Hello, Miss Taft—say, what a break! What's doing?"

While he quite without embarrassment dried his face and hands, rolled down his sleeves, put on a collar and combed his thick red hair, they told him what was doing, and Tony beamed hopefully into his pleasant red-brown eyes.

"Sure, you can work that society racket like a shot!" Joe Burke told her hearteningly. "It's soft."

"Oh, I hope it is!" Tony said, with a smile, with a lift of thick lashes, with a great rise of her heart.

"Listen, let's eat," Mr. Burke said abruptly.

They went up Market street to Lorenzo's, where Tony and Cliff had hot delicious "half-and-halves" and toast, and Joe had a limp pink veal cutlet that had been seized from a long damp pan of cutlets displayed in Lorenzo's window, rolled in egg and crumbs, blackened in a pan of hot grease, smothered in gory catsup and served smoking hot with fried potatoes within the space of six minutes. With this Joe had coffee that had been simmering all day in a black pot, spongy bread, and coconut custard pie.

The little restaurant with the window grill was bright and warm on the rainy night; the clock stood at twelve, and Tony felt excited and happy. This was living! There were several men having veal chops and oyster stews in Lorenzo's, and presently her brother was surprised to see her flush and smile a little self-consciously and bow to one of them.

"Who's that?"
"It's Mr. Bellamy of the Journal."
"That's right, too," said Joe. "I don't know him, but I've seen him in here before. He's pretty thick with old Arnoldson on our paper. Arnoldson told Fitch—Fitch is the managing editor—that he thought Bellamy was the smartest man on the coast, except maybe Anders down in Fresno."

Tony knew that the man who was watching her; she looked absently at Joe.

"Is Mr. Greenwood smart, Mr. Burke?"

"He is and he isn't," said Joe. "He's a terrible souze. Here's Moore. Sit down, Buck. This is the new society editor, Miss Taft, Miss Taft, Buck Moore, of the Sunday edition. You'll have to see a lot of old Buck!"

Tony hardly heard him. She was thrilled; she was happy. The romantic, dark, brilliant Mr. Bellamy had seen her alone and forlorn and supplicatory this morning in the dreary rain; he saw her tonight with three good-looking men having oysters at Lorenzo's. And to Mr. Moore she had been introduced as the Call's society editor.

CHAPTER IV

Oh, it was good to have a job again, and to have it spring, and morning, and to be twenty-three! Tony awakened eagerly, dressed with enthusiasm, finished her breakfast, and plied her coffee cup and berry saucer in the sink. Then came a blank.

"How do you suppose I can get those photographs for Sunday, Betsy?"
"I've been wondering," Brenda said. "Would any of the photographers help out, do you think?"

"I don't think they'd be allowed to give out pictures for the papers. Just the same, they're my best bet!" Tony decided uneasily. She left the house at nine o'clock and went to six photographers. It was always the same. It was not permitted; they said they were sorry.

At five minutes to one she went into the newspaper office, all the first enthusiasm of the new job clouded by a sense of fear and failure. She hung up her hat and coat in the office and confided her problem to Joe Burke.

"Oh, shucks," Joe said, "I'll tell you what you can do. Look over the other Sunday papers for the last few weeks, and telephone the studios for what you want."

"But I've just been to the studios, and they were awfully mean!"

"They won't be, if you want pictures that have been used. Or telephone the girls, if you like," Joe suggested easily, "and say that you are going to use an old picture and would like permission to have a new one."

"Yes, but have we old pictures?"

"Lord, haven't you seen the gallery?"

He took her in there, and she began to feel excited and happy and confident again. When she came back to her desk she telephoned a downtown studio firmly, authoritatively. This was the society editor of the Call speaking.

"I can have the prints there for you in an hour," the voice promised. Tony felt almost giddy with relief, and laughed aloud.

She sat working in a sea of clippings and notes; she was conscious of the increasing stir about her. Men were lounging in, gossiping and smoking; they all looked curiously at her, and she knew it, although she did not look up. The city editor came in and chatted with her, sitting edgewise on her desk, picking his teeth; every moment that passed made her feel more and more that she belonged here, that she was holding her own, and yet the fluttered sensation of uncertainty and novelty persisted, too.

Tony worked away industriously. She clipped, pasted, counted words; her face grew hot and her hair tumbled; it seemed to her that a tide of paper was rising steadily about her.

Mr. Florence, acting for the absent editor, asked her for her "stuff" for tomorrow. Tony produced it anxiously. He took it without comment; presently came back to ask: "Oughtn't we have the Harriman bridesmaids?"

"Oh, should we?" Tony asked agitatedly, her heart hammering and her mouth dry. "How do I—shall I go out there?"

"No, I'll get 'em for you," a nice boy named Slosser volunteered lazily, from the adjoining desk. He whirled the leaves of a telephone book that was stuffed up to three times its size. "That's the Paul Harrimans," he muttered. Presently he was penciling hurriedly; he tossed a scribbled sheet to Tony's desk. "Here they are!" he told her carelessly. "You fix 'em up."

Her telephone rang; she answered it apprehensively. But it was the apathetic Henrietta on the switchboard; Miss Taft's sister was there, and should she send her in?

Tony went eagerly to the door to meet Brenda, not quite sure that Brenda had any right here, but all the more welcome for that.

"Darling, do you come home to dinner?"

"I don't know. I could ask Mr. Florence."

They went together to Mr. Florence's desk, and he assured Tony heartily that of course she could go home to dinner; she was tired, she'd been working like a Turk—couldn't one of the boys finish up the Sunday page?

Oh, no, no, no, Miss Taft would be back in about an hour, she had it all in line, there wasn't very much more to do. Tony and Brenda were hugging each other's arms with excitement and pleasure as they got into the elevator, and at the dinner table Tony was voluble about the delights of the new job.

She went back to the office through the black night with a singing heart, and the hot city room, when she reached it, with the boys lounging about, and the typewriters going, telephone bells tinkling and shouts and racket on every side seemed to her the most satisfying spot she had ever known in her life.

CHAPTER V

The nervous excitement persisted for days—for weeks. There were bad hours as well as good. Tony learned that a newspaper office, like an army camp, is a fertile place for rumors, and most of them were alarming. Almost every week there was dark talk of a complete change in management, and no reporter felt sure of himself even from day to day. And especially glib, strange, young man, or well-dressed, unknown young woman, observed to be deep in talk with Greenwood, spread general apprehension.

"What's he after?" the boys would ask the city editor casually when he was gone. Tony would find some excuse to drift up to his desk as soon as the woman caller disappeared. "Who is your pretty friend, Mr. Greenwood?"

She had accepted Barney's humiliating suggestions in serious earnest; she would take no chances on this job. Tony was always the first to reach the office, the most punctual with her work. She brushed her hair back slickly and saw to it that her cuffs and collar were in trim. Over such mistakes as she made she showed so horrified a contrition that Greenwood's reproofs often turned into good-natured laughter.

"Well, listen here—no harm done. Old Mrs. Rufus Waite got mad because she hasn't ever forgiven George for marrying as he did, and you put the Georges at her big ball. Don't do it again, that's all."

Tony would go back to her desk to take out the indispensable old leather book and turn to the page-tab marked "W." Under "Waite" she would carefully write "old Mrs. R. hates Georges—his wife Carolyn Petty, light opera."

She was often late at the office as autumn came on with affairs for the debutantes and the reopening of city houses, and she loved every minute of it. Aunt Meggy, assisted more often by colored Asterbel now, insisted that Tony sleep late; there was something very agreeable about awakening at nine instead of seven o'clock, and coming out to the sitting room for late coffee and blackberries and the newspaper and Aunt Meggy's contented chat. It was not only one's natural liking for ease, Tony thought; it went deeper. There was something in this changed routine that flattered her pride, that pride that had been so cruelly hurt and lowered in the long humil-

the word 'hellish' because I saw Aunt Meggy shudder, but hellish is what they were, and as hellish I shall continue to remember them!"

"Do they all make love to you down at the office?" Brenda once asked her. Tony laughed.

"That's just what they don't. They borrow quarters, and they tell me their whole histories, and they telephone other girls, right at my desk, but somehow the atmosphere of the city room is anything but romantic," she explained. "There's so much rush and confusion, we're always under such a strain—no, Joe and Van and Spike Hlyan—they're darlings. But they don't make passes at me!"

"Aunt Sally is always casting out Jack suspicious of these evenings at the office."

"Aunt Sally? She thinks President Harrison is still in office!" Tony could afford to laugh at Aunt Sally. "As for her dear influential friend Augusta Terry," she told the appreciative dinner table one night, "she is a stuffed shirt!"

"Antoinette," said Miss Bruce mildly. "You remember, she was going to help me with social notes and ask all her friends to send me in stuff? Well," Tony said, "I've telephoned her when I got into a tight place two or three times, and nothing doing! So yesterday I went up to see her and said how kind it would be of her—all that, you know. And she stiffened up like an old macaw and said she personally had the greatest abhorrence of newspaper notoriety, and thought it most extraordinary that any girl of a nice family would ever have her name in the paper. She implied that if I were a gentleman I'd give up my job! To Hannibal with her!"

"And then, on the other hand," Tony presently resumed, when Aunt Sally's influential friend had received due comment from the group, "on the other hand, Greeny told me to call up Linda Flood—that's Mrs. Paulding Flood—the other day. I was stuck, and he wanted me to go out on this milk investigation story, and of course I wanted to, because it's wonderful for him to give me any of the straight stories—and he said, 'Call up Linda Flood, she'll give you a lot of dope.'"

"And you don't know her?"

"I've never seen her; she's been at Tahoe all summer. So I sort of half-heartedly telephoned her, and said who I was, and I heard this darling voice, 'Why, girl dear, I don't know much, but I'll give you what I have! Got a pencil?' And she began to just pour it out, what everyone was doing, and tips on two engagements, and everything. And she said, 'Now you just call me up whenever you get short—I used to do that social column myself!'"

"Oh, people are lovely when they're kind," Brenda said, her eyes shining.

"I'd love her."

"Old stiff-necked parakeet of an Augusta Terry!" Tony muttered. "Afraid of herself, that's what she is. And this Mrs. Flood isn't, and that's the difference."

"I'll tell you, Tony, send Mrs. Flood some flowers at Christmas."

"I will! I love being able to do things like that," Tony said. "How a little money does help your self-respect!"

"How a little money does help your everything!" Bruce expanded it, with fervor.

"My old smart Tony, I always knew she'd make us proud of her!" Miss Bruce murmured contentedly, reaching for her solitary cards. Tony and Brenda began to gather up the dessert dishes. They were presently talking with their own unflagging animation over the sink.

"I'd never mind this, you know, Tony, I mean our having to do the dishes—I mean, just as things are now seems richness to me," Brenda said.

"Money doesn't matter terribly," Tony conceded. "Work is the wonderful thing. To be hard working at something you simply love, and to wake up in the morning and think that here's another day's work—that's heaven."

"For a while," Brenda conceded. "But after all," she presently added thoughtfully, "no matter how successful a woman is, it seems to me she's a little lopsided if she doesn't marry."

"You say so, Brenda?"

"Well, I do."

"But you—you—why, you've always said that as far as you were concerned you didn't need anything more than friendship, such as you have with Margaret and Alison and Gay."

"Yes, but that's me."

"You mean I'm different?"

"I mean," Brenda insisted, "that there are different sorts of women. I like me tremendously—I think I'm easier with them than you are. But when it comes to getting quite close to one, going in for all the murmuring and intimacy and—the loving part—all that, it simply doesn't register. It makes me feel uncomfortable. I have heavenly times, going down to Carmel with Alison and the Beattys; we're completely happy. We cook, and talk books, and go uptown and get things for supper in the back garden; I don't miss anything."

"I don't miss anything, now," Tony said. "I'm completely happy."

Brenda, even while she smiled and shook her head, knew that it was true; in finding her work Tony had found herself, and quite innocently liked what she discovered. She seemed to grow taller and slimmer as the months went by; all the qualities that had made Brenda and Aunt Meggy uneasy about her disappeared as if by magic; she was groomed, energetic, purposeful.

Every night she came home to them with tales of her adventures. When Tony told of the scene that restored the little lost Jensen boy to his mother and father, Aunt Meggy had to wipe her eyes; she sketched every separate entity on the big Call staff for their benefit, and they felt that they knew good-natured common little Greeny, and stern handsome Mr. Fitch, and all the boys of the city room, as she did.

Lazy, unwashed, yawning little Arch Slosser continued to occupy the desk next to Tony's, and helped her generously even when he would not do his own work. Spike Hlyan came in from the sports department to ask her about the clothes the women had worn to the tennis tournament. Joe Burke assumed the affectionate attitude of an old friend, promising to take her to a fight some night. And Van Florence told her about his wife's tuberculosis. All of them liked her, and she liked them all, and regretted that they were so often a little hazy from their too convivial dinners, and in so constant a state of being fired and re-employed, warned and scolded by Greeny, who was himself a heavy drinker.

Patty Perkins she did not like, but there was a friendly, rangy big woman who "covered Oakland," and who was confidential and friendly with Tony, and there was kindly old Mrs. Magius, who tottered in to do a weekly editorial headed "A Kiss for Everyone's Mother on Mother's Day" or "Baby Annie's Little Hands Keep Daddy Safe and Sane." If there were any event, local or national, with a mother, baby, an old soldier, an old song anywhere involved, Mrs. Magius, who signed "Betsy Ross," pounced hungrily upon it; she often wept when she told Tony what she was writing, sentimentally describing herself as the most beloved and useful newspaper woman in the world.

The only other woman on the staff was a blonde named Bess Cutter, who was paid a hundred dollars a week for a column called "Bessie Saw It." No one in the city office was supposed to know why Gavia Franklin Fitch, general manager, felt justified in paying Miss Cutter so generously for the queer tangled notes she occasionally brought in and that, if indeed they were usable at all, someone in the office always had to put into shape for her, but everyone did know that she had an apartment on Pine street, where Mr. Fitch dined almost every night and that Mrs. Fitch often had to be told, when she telephoned in meekly to ask where he was, that he had to go to Fresno or Sacramento.

Tony and Bessie got on well together, and after a while it became the custom for Tony to do a great part of Bessie's work. The older woman—she was well into the thirties—would tumble all sorts of little notes upon Tony's desk and look with pathetic confidence at Tony while they were discussed.

That Mr. Fitch, who was all-powerful and much feared, was aware of her kindly assistance to the inefficient Bessie she knew when he stopped, on an autumn day, and put a new-thick book on her desk.

"Read that!"

She flipped pages. "No, I haven't, and I've heard a lot about it."

"I thought you might enjoy it." He hesitated, his face rather red. It was a quiet morning hour in the city room, and nobody was within sound of their voices. "Everything comfortable for you in here, Miss Taft?"

"Oh, wonderful!"

"We want you to feel at home, that anything you don't like can be changed," he said stiffly, but with what for him was rare graciousness. Tony sat fingering the book, staring after him, when he went away. This was gratifying, reassuring, as far as the precious job was concerned; there was no one in the office, Greeny included, who would not have given a week's pay for so much from Mr. Fitch. But she saw breakers ahead. Her face flushed, her eyes shining, she sat lost in uncomfortable thought for a long time.

Lee's Invasion of Pennsylvania
The Dictionary of American Biography states that General Lee's Invasion of Pennsylvania, which resulted in the Battle of Gettysburg, July 1, 2, and 3, 1863, was undertaken for three reasons: (1) to supply his army; (2) to strengthen peace sentiment in the North by showing the futility of the effort to force the South into submission; (3) in hopes that he could compel Lincoln to detach troops from the far South and thereby relieve the pressure on Vicksburg. This hard-fought battle is often regarded by historians as the turning point of the Civil war.

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

New Liquor Control Law

You are allowed in dry counties, to have in your possession up to a quart of State and Federal tax paid liquor, provided it is bought in a wet territory. You must get this liquor and sign up for it yourself. It must not be ordered, or brought to you by someone else.

It is a violation of the law in dry territories to have over a quart of tax paid liquor. It is also a violation to buy it or manufacture it in a dry territory, or to have any amount of bootleg or untaxed liquor in your possession at any time. This is both a State and Federal offense, and the penalty is for a misdemeanor in county court, not less than $100 nor more than $1000 fine, and up to one year in the county jail.

This law will be enforced in this county to the fullest extent, whenever it is violated.

Thanksgiving — And the American Spirit

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Thanksgiving Day has been widely characterized as "the most American of all our feasts."

It is an apt description. Apart from Independence Day no national holiday recalls more clearly the primary American qualities of courage and self-reliance.

Originated by a hardy group of pioneers who by their own efforts had established a firm foothold in an unfriendly wilderness, it constituted an expression of reverend gratitude not only for plenty, but for freedom of body and of spirit.

Today, three centuries after that celebration, it is significant to recall that almost every President who issued a Thanksgiving proclamation has sounded that typically American note.

George Washington in his Thanksgiving message of 1789 emphasized "the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed."

Abraham Lincoln, in the dark days of '63, reminded the people of the blessings of freedom.

Many of his successors in office have repeated the thought.

Perhaps that is why the Thanksgiving celebration remains to all Americans not only a solemn religious festival, but an annual reminder of the spirit of those pioneers who were taught to depend on Providence and themselves, rather than on kings and politicians.

Both Independence Day and Thanksgiving continue to celebrate those American qualities of self-reliance and love of freedom. And so long as these days are celebrated, the demagogues who try to teach the people that government should bear all their burdens and politicians rule all their lives, are going to find the going hard, and their message futile.

America still retains the spirit of the first Thanksgiving Day.
