Hedley P. T. A.

The special feature on the regular P. T. A. meeting last Thursday was an address given by G. W. Kavanaugh, County Superintendent elect. His topic was one of vital interest to parents, character and honesty. He brought forcibly to our thinking that these traits were governed by heredity and environment, the home and the school, the principal training places. Industry (energy taught in school) perseverance, ambition and dependability build the individual into a self-reliant character and useful citizen.

During the business meeting the association planned a carnival on Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving. Please remember this date and store your pennies because we shall furnish you fun for your money. Come everyone.

The organization is also sponsoring a subscription campaign for the McCall's Magazine.

The Seniors played a prank on the grade school and won the highest number of votes for the flag. The next meeting will be Nov. 19, at 7:30 in the auditorium.

The Parent and Teacher Organization sponsored a play presented by The Personality Players from Amarillo. The entertainment brought sixteen dollars into the rapidly "slaking fund" of P. T. A. The help of the community is always appreciated.

Rev. Hendricks Leaves

In the Methodist conference last week, Rev. A. V. Hendricks was transferred to Turkey, after a stay here of several years. Rev. B. J. Osborne will come to the church here as pastor. The Hendricks family is moving to Turkey this week. They have endeared themselves to the people of this community in their stay here, and the best wishes of a host of friends go with them in their work.

Other appointments of interest to Hedley people include Rev. E. D. Landreth, who remains at Clarendon, and Rev. Rex Kendall, who returns to Leuders.

Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Methodist Church a church supper was enjoyed by about 150 people. A delicious supper was served. A program was given as follows:

Song
Reading, Eva Jean Cherry
Reading, Mrs. Trostle
Talk, Mrs. Kendall
Farewell talk, Bro. Hendricks
Many favorite songs were sung. When Rev. and Mrs. Hendricks returned to the parsonage they found a number of lovely gifts.

John Strood of Amarillo, district manager for the Winston Publishing Co., donated a biography of Will Rogers for the trades day drawing last Saturday. He states that he will be in town again this Saturday, and will again donate a book to the drawing.

NOTICE

The Ex-Seniors will put on a short play and musical comedy Friday night, Nov. 20. Be sure to attend.

NOTICE

The music club will meet Tuesday night, Nov. 17. All members are urged to attend.

H. E. Plumlee

After several days illness Henry Edgar Plumlee passed away Wednesday morning Nov. 4, in a Memphis hospital. He suffered very much from sinus trouble and developed meningitis which soon took him away.

His funeral was held at the First Baptist Church Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. M. E. Wells, assisted by Rev. H. E. McClain.

Mr. Plumlee was born in Springtown, Texas, April 4, 1882. Was married to Miss Millie Bond May 1904. To this union were born 8 sons and 4 daughters. He was converted in youth and joined the Baptist Church at Agnes, Texas. He moved from Posville, Texas, with his family to Hedley eight years ago and settled on the Kinslow farm where he has resided since. He joined the local Baptist church here with his wife and was a member at the time of his death and he will be missed in his church and in our town. He was of a quiet reserved disposition, and although in ill health, worked hard for the comfort of his family. All of his children except one daughter were unable to attend his funeral.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his wife, Mrs. Millie Plumlee; two sons, Edgar and Glenn Plumlee, Selma, Oregon, two daughters, Mrs. Estelle Lovelace of Dallas and Mrs. Irene Todd of Henet, Calif., three sisters and three brothers. Three children preceded him in death. The other relatives who attended his funeral were Mrs. Pawitt and Miss Plumlee of Ft. Worth, Mr. and Mrs. Will Beach and Mrs. Harvey Anderson of Fletcher, Okla., and Mrs. Shelby Anderson of Chickasha, Okla.

The pallbearers were Tom McLaughlin, Dallas; Milner, Hobart Moffitt, A. C. Maness, Ed Todd and Harrison Hall. Flower bearers were Theresa Bain, Jo Wells, I.ell Biffe and Pauline Boliver. His remains were laid to rest in the Rowe Cemetery, under a mound of flowers, there to await the resurrection morn, when all whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life will come forth to meet the Lord. May we all be prepared to meet Mr. Plumlee in that day.

A friend, Mrs. O. R. Culwell.

Hooker's have in a lot of new toys and gifts. Do your Xmas shopping early.

Several Baptist ladies visited Mrs. Ruth Priestly, who is ill, at Clarendon Sunday, and presented her with a love bag, containing a number of useful gifts, one of which Mrs. Priestly will open each day.

On Wednesday, Nov. 11, students of the Hedley school gave programs in observance of Armistice Day. In the morning, pupils of the three primary grades gave an interesting program, and in the afternoon the high school had charge. Talks were made at the programs by Mr. Trostle and Mr. Payne.

If you plan to have your poultry flock culled without any cost to you, see E. H. Walker.

Curse of Progress

Non-Stop
After an hour and a half of preaching, a clergyman who was given to both long-windedness and fanciful flights of oratory was just getting warmed up to his sermon on immortality.
"I looked up to the mountains," he shouted, "and I said, 'Mighty as you are, you will be destroyed; but my soul will not.' I gazed at the ocean and cried, 'Vast as you are, you will eventually dry up, but not I.'" And then he wondered why his hearers smiled. —Tit-Bits Magazine.

How It Happened
Blinks looked a wreck. His face was covered with sticking-plaster; both eyes were black; and his left arm was in a sling.
"What happened?" a friend asked.
"A motor accident?"
"No; a loose floorboard."
"Tripped over it?"
"No; trod on it, as I was sneaking in the other night and woke the missus up."

Entertains Class

Sybil Holland was hostess to a delightful entertainment for her Sunday School class Thursday evening, Nov. 5. The group enjoyed the laughter and merry making of playing dominoes and eating popcorn until Mrs. Holland called them into the kitchen where they engaged in an old time candy pulling. Believe it or not, the candy was delicious although it did persist in sticking to our hands. To the great surprise of our honoree, Mary Lane Hendricks, Sybil came in and presented many lovely handkerchiefs to her which expressed our loving friendship, together with our regrets of her leaving.

Mayfield-Hill

An impressive ring ceremony joined Miss Delma Hill and Talmage Mayfield in marriage Sunday afternoon, Nov. 1. Hugh Clark, minister of the Church of Christ, confirmed the nuptials in his home in Fort Worth.

Attending the wedding were Mrs. Hill, mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mayfield of Clarendon, Wanda Mayfield of Abilene, Mrs. Hugh Clark and Carl Childs of Fort Worth.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. E. C. Hill, formerly of Hedley. She attended school in Hedley, and for the past few years was a student in Clarendon high school.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mayfield, graduated from Clarendon high school in 1931 and attended Junior College here. He was also a student in Brantley Draughon Business College in Ft. Worth. He is employed at Peggy Point Service Station in Houston, where they will make their home—Clarendon News.

Mrs. Mayfield has many friends in Hedley who extend best wishes for a happy future.

What We Did and Where We Went

Mr. Harman went to the Centennial the first week of our cotton picking vacation. The next two weeks, he went to Tulla, where he, believe it or not, sowed wheat last week end, heard Mrs. Harman and son visited in the home of Mrs. Harman's sister.

Jo Wells could not stay away from Theresa Bain even four days, consequently they visited the Centennial last week.

Mrs. Cannon visited in her parental home in Levelland and folks, do you know how she added one dollar and thirty five cents to her income? Yes, you are correct, in the cotton patch last week end she enjoyed the W. T. S. T. C. homecoming in Canyon.

Miss Hixon was quite a busy woman. Say girls I heard she baked her father a coffee cake I wonder if he is still sick?

Mrs. Owen, Misses Hixon and Bishop enjoyed a trip to the Centennial at Dallas and to Casa Manana in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Owen was chief cook and bottle washer at her home in Canyon. Mrs. Owen, is it true that you had that 'thar' tooth extracted?

Marie Clawson went to San Antonio. She says she enjoyed the Alamo, the State Capital and Breckenridge Park best of all the sights that she saw.

By the way, ask Mrs. Owen how she likes to ride in a street car.

Dorothy and Eddie Mae Land visited in Wellington during our holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Leggett enjoyed a tour to the Centennial, Galveston and Houston.

Aline Abernathy visited relatives in Shamrock.

Mrs. Watkins visited her parents home in Melrose, N. Mex.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne and son visited Mr. Payne's father and mother in Waxahachie. They also visited the Centennial.

Mr. and Mrs. Treatle visited in Shamrock.

Mrs. Donald visited Mr. Donald Pampa. They went to the Centennial and she says she really "made whoopee" I wonder what that is, don't you?

Fred Wells and Max Webb were Centennial visitors the last week.

Jonimerie Pickett visited the Centennial and she also visited in points around the Louisiana line.

The Scholarship Society of Hedley high school met on Thursday, Nov. 5, 1936 to elect new officers and plan the year's work. After electing Dorothy Land, president, we chose the remaining officers as follows:

Vice president, Calvin Reed
Sec. treas., Theresa Bain
Reporter, Ione Wall
Sponsor, Mrs. Owen

A constitution was drafted and will be ratified the next meeting. The society will present a one act play "Fixing The Fixer" on Tuesday, 24, during the chapel hour, from 8:00 to 4:00. The public is cordially invited.

Mister X

Hello folks, how is the cotton fields been serving you?

Well, if you want to know who Mr. Harman's first sweetheart was ask Beatrice Hansard.

Teachers Forrest Adamson can't read well as he has a sore finger.

Jack Farris is so popular that he has hired a private librarian. S. L. Adamson wonders why the coach says the basketballs have handles on them.

Sorry, but as Clay Plank is absent no jokes can be written about him.

Home Economics

In Home Economics I, Thursday morning, the girls cooked muffins. We made the muffins and served them with butter. They looked and tasted delicious. Mr. Harman said that he didn't mind keeping the study hall five minutes longer if the Home Economics girls would serve him each time.

In Home Economics II, Thursday, the girls cooked delicious pork chops. From the way the Economics room smelled at noon, some of the girls will be splendid cooks some day.

Basketball

The basketball annual workout started Monday, 2, with about twenty five high boys trying for the team. Progress was slow at first because most of the men were inexperienced. Improvement has been shown by the boys who worked out only for this year. Hedley will play games with neighboring towns until they get started well.

Spanish Rebels Seem to Be Due to Win

Communist, Fascist Ideals Are Filmy to Illiterate General Populace; They're Concerned Only With Delivery From Oppression.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

AS THIS is being written, the army of the Fascist revolutionists is closing in on Madrid, less than 20 miles from the outskirts of the Spanish capital.

Thousands upon thousands on both sides have lost their lives on the firing line, have been executed like so many cattle, or have perished from starvation in times of siege. Atrocities have been committed upon religious, educational and civilian institutions which have rocked the civilized world.

All this has been happening in the name of philosophies of government which have begun to assume importance in the world only in the last decade or two. The Loyalist government supporters, headed by their new premier, Francisco Largo Caballero, are nominally Marxists and Communists. The insurgents under General Franco are Fascists.

But the Spanish people are emotionalists. Most of them have not the faintest idea what these theories of government mean, and care less. A Loyalist accepts his classification as a Communist because he believes that if his government is successful, he will be delivered from the penalty and oppression which has been his many of the business men and industrial holding classes.

However, in Spain there has been no humanization of industry to the point reached in many other countries. Industrial hospitals, schools and other institutions, which have been developed by many American concerns for the benefit of their employees, are not to be found in Spain. Both worker and employer regarded each other merely as objects for exploitation.

Sign of the Fist.

While five years ago there was little or no hatred of class for class evident in Spain, the outbreak of ists, Communists and Anarchists among the supporters of the national government opportunity to quarrel among themselves.

Indeed in the lack of unity on both sides lies the only real hope of a compromise in the civil war. As a matter of fact it is extremely doubtful that the doctrines of either side that might emerge victorious would be beneficial to the nation. As long as either side is confident that it has enough unity and power to win—regardless of the cost in life and destruction—it is apparent that the fight will go on to the bitter end.

All Europe is aware of the extremely delicate situation that exists with relation to outside aid for either faction in the Spanish civil war. But General Franco, in a brilliant campaign, has now captured Badajoz, which virtually makes it impossible for the government at Madrid to receive aid over the Portuguese border. The capture of Irun closed an important point of entry for any help that might have been forthcoming over the French border. With the fall of San Sebastian, the Loyalists lost practically the entire Atlantic seaboard. And the insurgents also hold Morocco, the Balearic Isles and the Canary Isles.

Portugal Takes a Walk.

Premier Blum of France, with the aid of Great Britain, has succeeded in establishing an agreement among the major European powers not to interfere in any way in the Spanish incident, especially not to render assistance to either warring faction. Yet, it appears from all reports certain that somehow both Loyalists, and Insurgents have been receiving materials of war from some outside sources.

Russia aroused the alarm and the disapproval of the other nations when she openly charged that Germany, Italy and Portugal had been aiding the cause of General Franco, in direct violation of the treaty of non-intervention. Stalin made it clear that the Soviet would, if this outside aid to the insurgents continued, feel perfectly free to come to the assistance of the Communists of the national government in Madrid. The Russians gave names, dates and locations.

This resulted in a walkout on the meeting of the committee for non-intervention, by the Portuguese delegate, who declared that his country outside aid to the insurgents continued, feel perfectly free to come to the assistance of the Communists of the national government in Madrid. The Russians gave names, dates and locations.

The Italian ambassador, Signor Grandi, opened up counter-charges of the same nature against the Russians, also naming names and dates and locations said to be involved in the supply of war materials to the Madrid government by the Soviet. The Russians defended their acts on the premises that the ships which Grandi had named carried only cargoes of food, upon which there is no limitation. Germany denied that she had any part in giving aid to either side.

Investigation Will Be Slow.

It seems probable now that the committee will demand investigation of the Russian charges. The move is led by Lord Plymouth of lot. An insurgent accepts his classification as a Fascist for the same reason, or to keep himself from getting shot as a Communist at the hands of the rebels who seem destined to emerge as victors in the civil war.

The March on Toledo by General Franco's Insurgent Army.

Half Nation Illiterate.

Not that General Franco's army does not have plenty of work ahead of it before it can really claim Spain. There are important cities which have not yet fallen. After Madrid there are Barcelona, Bilbao and Valencia. Barcelona, a city of a million souls, has virtually shelved all other industry in the zeal to produce bullets, airplanes and other implements of war. If Caballero should find a way of combining the Loyalist strength that lies principally in these large cities, his government might hold out for some time.

But if the premier succeeds in binding his legions together in a solid front, it will not be by links of Marxist or Communist argument. Half the citizens of the country can neither read nor write. They are elemental, emotional. Their civilization has lagged behind. Literature has in a few years slipped back over centuries of what progress it may have once claimed.

There are thousands upon thousands of Spanish villages which are not accessible by road, which have no water supply. Half of the population makes its living directly from the land, by the crudest of methods. Average earnings are hardly more than enough to buy the poorest kind of food. Generation after generation, they have grown up to the same kind of existence.

These are the kind of people who are doing the actual fighting in the civil war. Are they fighting for ideals of government? Most of them have no more idea of their physical location in the world's geography than they have of television.

Republican Reform Falls Short.

By the millions, these people have for generations slaved at back-breaking labor to the profit of rich landlords not even present on the properties, and not one whit interested in the welfare of the tillers of their fields. The republic assured them that the lands would be taken from the landlords and given to them, and they could have the profits.

When the republic was ushered in, it began some reforms on the land, but was unable to supply the peasants with the funds and equipment necessary to work the farms at a profit, and the situation was little improved. In fact in some cases peasants were driven to work in the city factories at starvation wages.

The coming of the revolution was actually welcomed by certain of the business men and industrial employers of Spain. For the old Republican regime had not been so hard upon the industrial workers as upon the small farmers. Instead, it was the worker who was to blame for strikes and riots, some of them without any justification. The Azana republic had actually persecuted the present trouble must have been a long time brewing. Today class feeling is so intense that, as one distinguished correspondent put it, "in many parts of Spain to wear a collar or a tie, or for a woman to wear a hat may be inviting a bullet."

Visible demonstration of this class hatred is the challenging Communist sign—the clenched fist. Even tiny children, carted about the streets in trucks, are taught to give the sign to the bystanders along the way. And if the latter do not return it, it may lead to serious consequences.

As I have said above, in the excitement and emotion of all this stir of class against class, reason and education have been subjugated to an alarming degree. Spanish literature production is at a standstill. The only good reading obtainable in the language is the old classics. This is taken by many as a sign of the increasing, rather than decreasing, illiteracy of the general public.

Under the present regime it became apparent that the army was soon to become only the strong arm of Communism, wielded unmercifully in revenge upon the upper classes. Officers of the regular army had been dismissed and snubbed. In 1932, Manuel Azana had retired some 18,000 officers on pay, only to take this pay away from thousands of them at a later date, because of his suspicion that they were to become involved in a Fascist revolt. That was the match that lighted the tinder.

Both Sides Lack Unity.

The Fascists—army officers and the capitalistic class—conducted their revolt under the leadership of a smart commander expertly competent to take advantage of the domestic weaknesses of the Nationalist enemy. His campaign has been slow but sure. His lack of speed has given many luke-warm Socially Great Britain, whose government is vitally interested in checking the course of any international disagreements over the Spanish case, which, it holds, is entirely local to that country, and need not draw all of Europe into another mortal conflict.

Britain has another interest. Madrid charges that the forces which captured the island of Ivizita in the Balearic group were composed primarily of Italians. Britain would certainly not be pleased with the prospect of Benito Mussolini coming into power in such a location.

France has decided to back up Britain in its demands of an investigation. The irony of it all is that any investigation which takes place will probably be so long drawn out that General Franco will have won the war before it is completed.

NOT ALL AMERICAN WIVES ARE GOOD SPORTS

George grinned affectionately at her tantrum and conceded that it would be pretty hard on her, and that was the end of that.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

AS A class, American wives are poor sports. Studying them and their problems, year after year, one is forced to the depressing conclusion that most of them are but half-developed as human beings, and that in any change or crisis they are notably poor sports.

There are exceptions, of course. The exceptions are the fine mothers and wives who live out their lives in big cities or country towns or lonely farms, solve their difficulties with courage and imagination, and never trouble anyone for advice or sympathy.

There are, thank God, millions of these. One hears little of them, but they exist in their legions. They are the heart and soul and sinew of tomorrow's America, the hope of the nation.

But there are millions of the others, too, women who try to make life fit their own petty ideas of comfort and vanity and pleasure, and who turn slacker the instant life refuses to fall into the pattern. They want it to be one way, they expect it to be just this or that. Times change, unexpected circumstances arise, trouble comes, and they collapse. They become helpless burdens upon the nearest shoulder; one gets nothing but complaint and protest from them for all the rest of their days.

For example, there is Jean. Pretty, affectionate, happy when Oliver Jones married her, she settled down into a bird-cage of a new cottage charmingly and competently; she could direct a maid, drive a car, give little bridge dinners, buy clothes and have her hair set as efficiently as any girl in her group. Oliver was a successful junior member of his father's real estate firm; everything went well with the young Joneses.

Jean didn't want a baby, but Nature trapped her presently into motherhood and when he arrived she dearly loved her little boy. She had a nurse, and expenses rose alarmingly, but Jean would make no concessions and no changes because of bad times. Bills waited unpaid, Oliver worried and nagged, little Sidney was neglected and sick, but Jean rode serenely over the wreckage, charging purchases, borrowing money, and losing no opportunity to compare Oliver's failing fortunes to those of his cleverer friends.

Six years ago the whole thing went on the rocks. After the failure of his father's firm, Oliver, after months of anxious searching, finally obtained a job; but it was a humble job, checking shipments for a cannery, and he was paid only $22.50 a week. He had to live in a town Jean didn't know, she said she hated it; he had to give up his club and his car. Jean refused to share these fallen fortunes. She went to her mother. Her mother secretly admires and likes Oliver, and didn't want Jean, but that didn't matter. Jean wanted a home in which she would still be waited upon, in which she could still lie late in bed and have her room kept clean and her dishes washed. She has not divorced Oliver, but she resents his unsuccess and despises him, and he knows it.

A Frenchwoman in her place would be living down near the cannery in one of the rentless cottages attached to the place, making her man good soups and stews, struggling to see that her child was well educated. An Italian woman would accept the change in fortunes philosophically, even gaily; it would be all in the day's work to her, the main thing would be that her man needed her. An Englishwoman usually sticks to her partner through thick and thin; the husband is the important thing, not what happens to the bank account. But not Jean!

Then there is Lucia. Lucia and I were friends when we were quite small girls and we have followed each other's fortunes ever since. Lucia married young, married a rich man ten years older than herself. They built a handsome colonial home and lived in some elegance; Lucia, furred and spoiled and lovely, was the happiest young wife imaginable.

Presently the firm that employed George underwent some serious set-backs, and George was asked to take a lesser salary and invest in the business what capital he had left. Lucia was indignant at the idea, and easily persuaded him that he was being badly treated. Why should they give up their lovely house and their three servants just because old Mr. Smith didn't know how to run his business? George resigned and began to look about for better prospects. The best of these was a partnership with an old friend who wanted George with him in the medical-supply business. Harry had brains and energy and experience; he wanted George to lend dignity and social value to the venture. It meant moving from Philadelphia to a small manufacturing town, it meant living on a minimum income until the business was well-established; it meant, in short, doing exactly what every successful person in the world has to do at the start.

Lucia refused point-blank to consider it. She said that she hadn't been ten years married, hadn't gotten herself into the nicest set, hadn't taken her part in club and social events and learned to play bridge and golf to be banished now to a place like Millville! George grinned affectionately at her tantrum and conceded that it would be pretty hard on her, and that was the end of that. He never had another such chance, he slipped down and down and down. They have two dark rooms in a dark crowded street now, a dreadful street of pretenses and disappointments and shabby gentilities. Lucia is a bitterly thwarted woman; she feels that life has dealt cruelly with her. "Of all the men I knew twenty-five years ago," she says over and over again, "I had to choose a failure!"

And so it goes with hundreds and hundreds of wives. They bargain for marriage on certain terms, and when those terms are not met they will make no changes, no adjustments whatever. They want to live in a certain street, and to have and do certain things; under these circumstances they will be reasonably affectionate and amiable, and contribute something, if not much, to the comfort of those about them. But threaten to disturb them, and they show themselves for the soft little cats they are, wanting idleness and petting and a warm corner, and not caring particularly who supplies them, and whining and crying when they are taken away.

Such women never see that changes, even painful and humiliating changes, are often the gateway to great adventures and successes. They may have heard some such theory in school days, they may have written, "Sweet are the uses of adversity," in their copy books, and learned, "Then welcome each rebuff that turns each earth's smoothness rough," in English class, but nothing of it really penetrated to their minds, nothing changed the selfish tight little boundaries of their souls.

Some years ago I met such a wife at a dinner. Her husband was talking to us of China, and the opportunity had been offered to go and help with some research work there. The woman smiled blandly, indulgently, as he enlarged upon this glorious opening, but presently she said firmly: "You may as well give up the idea now, Tom. I simply will not go one step. You'll stay right here; this is where our friends are, and this is the only place in the world where I can be happy!"

So they stayed at home, and bad times came, and the whole world went to pieces, and there were no more adventures at all for the unimaginative wife and her Tom. They moved into a boarding house, where the wife mopes and complains and stagnates to this day; Tom meanwhile trying to sell fire insurance from door to door.

On the other hand there are women left, and perhaps plenty of them, who see life for what it is, a brief period in which change is, growth, and the thing that does not move does not live.

Women have more power than men in marriage. A timid, lazy, selfish husband is not often able to destroy his wife's life; she rises above him and carves out her own way. But men are more helpless; the attitude of American men is indulgent and admiring toward their women; they are in the habit of obeying. Which makes it all the more of a tragedy that so few women are sports!

Boeuf Bourignon

Half dozen slices of bacon are diced and fried in butter and to this is added a dozen little onions. When they are browned, there is added to them about two pounds of beef that has been cut in cubes. The whole is seasoned and when the meat is brown, two tablespoonfuls of flour are shaken over the pan and mixed in with the rest. After this is cooked for a minute a small bottle of red wine is added a cup of bouillon. A bouquet garni is thrown in and the pot is well covered and allowed to cook slowly by the side of the fire for three hours.

Busiest Highway

The department of public relations of the American Automobile association believes it is generally recognized that Route No. 1, running north and south along the Atlantic seaboard, actually carries more traffic on a yearly average than any other. It is also their belief that the area between New York city and New Jersey represents the greatest highway traffic density of any place in the country.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Don't Sleep When Gas Presses Heart

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable. You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, arched, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adierka the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adierka rids you of gas and cleans four poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adierka. Get rid of GAS. Adierka does not gripe—it is not habit forming. Leading Druggists.

If You Have a Child

ASK YOUR DOCTOR THIS

Ask Him Before Giving Your Child an Unknown Remedy

Practically any doctor you ask will warn: "Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first."

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia," the standard of the world is established. For over half a century many doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia." Safe for children. No other is "quite like it."

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Now also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Satin-Clad Brides Go Victorian

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE importance of period fashions for evening this year means that they will be reflected in the gowns worn at many smart autumn and winter weddings. There is a quaintness about the early Victorian fashions that especially offers alluring possibilities to brides who would have a "picture" wedding scene.

Young brides with slender figures can wear becomingly these demure gowns of Victorian inspiration in silk taffeta or heavy slipper satin.

The lovely gown pictured creates romance and poetry for the modern wedding scene. This 1936 version of a Victorian wedding gown is interpreted in traditional ermine-white pure silk satin. The basque buttons quaintly down the back. The full sleeves give the broad shoulder effect that accents, by way of contrast, the slender girlish waistline. The bride carries a prayer book with gardenias.

Of course one's bridal party must carry out the idea so the flower girl has a period look in a Victorian cream silk taffeta princess dress that is gored to fit at the waistline

SILVER LAME GOWN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Never have gleaming metal weaves been more fashionable than they are at this very moment. The interesting note about these glamorous fabrics is the fact of their importance for dressy daytime wear as well as for formal evening. Of course their styling 'tunes them to afternoon as does that of the charming dress pictured. Fine allover pleating distinguishes this silver silk lame cocktail gown. This very beautiful silk silver lame comes in beguiling color tones, which makes it particularly adaptable for the making of the costume blouse, or the tunic that completes color harmony for the ensembled costume.

with a widely spreading skirt which, by the way, stresses the new length for little girls party dresses this season. This wee maiden ties a lavender silk ribbon in her hair and carries a bouquet of purple asters and cream colored gladioli with a silk tulle frill.

The bridesmaid befittingly wears a cream silk satin Victorian gown. The full sleeve, slender line and back fullness are important. Style details that present-day designers are definitely introducing in their newest creations. A demure little brown silk net bonnet adds to the quaintness of the costume. The flowers she carries are purple and cream asters.

If one prefer that the attendants dress colorfully rather than keep strictly to cream satin, they may wear pearl gowns in autumn hues of paff de soie or silk taffeta with puff sleeves and full skirts. As quaint and as "period" looking as if she had stepped from the fashion pages of a Godey appears a bridesmaid who is gowned in a frock of lavender silk taffeta with a tiny wine-colored silk velvet hat surmounted with three hyacinth blue ostrich tips. An armful of purple, rich red and cream asters adds to the color glory of the picture.

One thing is certain, whether she is a classic bride in traditional satin or in soft clinging fabrics, or a bride in quaint frock of Victorian or directoire inspiration, she will be dressed in silk of one type or another.

This year it is good style to have one's attendants wear the same style and the same fabric as one's own gown, only in different colors. If desired, the bridesmaids may all wear the same color, or that which is novel and new, different shades of a basic color, giving somewhat of an ombre effect to the group as a whole.

For the important evening ensemble, smart trousseaux will include a black velvet evening gown which will make the bride look like a re-incarnation of Sargent's famous "Madame X." Top it off with a matching hip-length silk velvet jacket and it can be worn on the honeymoon for dinner and formal wear.

WHIMS OF FASHION

Gay velvet scarf and belt enliven the new suits of nubby tweed. Rough, nubby woollens will be used for winter frocks.

Designers accent borders of fur and inset bands of contrasting fabric.

There is no denying it—muffs are very smart. The newest are large and flat.

Black velvet, that most romantic of fabrics, takes its place in the autumn mode.

Shoes of black suede are a smart choice for footwear that will look well with any daytime frock.

Molten gold and other gleaming metal shades are used extensively by Paris designers of formal evening gowns.

Sam Brown belts, known to every World War veteran, are being worn by women of France as the latest style for hiking.

What Women Like to Know About Fashions

Travel tweeds are as colorful as ever. Shadow patterns in blocks, checks and plaids will be popular this fall.

If your new fall coat bears the stamp of being very up-to-date, it will have deep pleats at the back.

Lacquered finishes, which have usually been restricted to satins, are now spreading to other fabrics.

Paris is sending us a number of visored hats for fall.

Heavy fur trimming is due to appear again on autumn coats and suits.

There are no low necks for daytime. Dame fashion decrees the base of the throat is the limit.

A revival of elegance in lingerie asserts itself in luxurious negligees and lounging costumes of lace.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio
By VIRGINIA VALE

IT'S always interesting when a star stages a come-back; Karen Morley's is especially interesting, because she had to fight a battle, not with loss of popularity but with poor health, before she could win back the place she once had on the screen.

Now she is prettier than ever. Shortly after arriving in New York on a vacation trip she attended a party given by Paramount for all of its celebrities, and practically stole the show. Dressed in black velvet, she was very lovely, very dignified. She has just signed a new seven-year contract, calling for four pictures a year.

Shirley Temple is going to China, on the screen. She is making "Stow-away," part of which is laid in Shanghai, and in those scenes she is dressed as a Chinese girl.

Later on she will do "Wee Willie Winkie," the Kipling story, which is laid in India. That famous bit of fiction is about a boy — will they make Shirley a boy for this one, or change the character? Whatever they do about it, the part is a grand one for her.

Margot Grahame is one of the busiest girls in the movie center. She returned from England, her home country, September 6, and has just been cast by RKO for her third consecutive featured lead since that time. It's opposite Lee Tracy in "Criminal Lawyer," following on the heels of "Make Way for a Lady" and "Night Waitress."

When you see "The General Died at Dawn" pay a lot of attention, girls, to the clothes that Madeleine Carroll wears as she dashes about China, and the way in which she wears them. You can learn more from that one picture than you could from a dozen fashion shows!

Irene Dunne traveled to New York recently for one of her usual reunions with her husband. And of course, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell arrived there and were greeted by everything their company could think up that would attract attention to them—as if they wouldn't have attracted plenty just by themselves! Thirteen tugs went down the bay to meet their ship. Two planes also met it, one of them trailing a banner which read "Welcome Dick and Joan."

If you can invent a microphone that can kick, you'll make a fortune—or so says Marjha Atwell, who directs some of our most popular radio programs—"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" for instance. She says that one of her hardest tasks is keeping actors from kicking the mike when they're broadcasting. And of course that delicate instrument registers every sound. She thinks that, if the microphone could kick back, the actors might learn to stand still.

There's never a dull moment in a broadcasting studio where one of those amateur programs is going on. Phillip Lord launched his "We, the People" not long ago, and when one of the women began telling about her baby, who had been kidnapped, the poor soul began to cry and couldn't stop.

"Everybody lost their heads, for a moment," one of the executives told me. "Then Phil came to the rescue, talked to her, and finally calmed her down."

Betty Furness likes to make pictures, but she can't resist dashing back to New York every so often, to be entertained by the very social crowd of which she was part before she betook herself to Hollywood.

Gary Cooper's wife rates socially too, you'll recall, but she and Gary are so dignified when they are in New York that they aren't news. It's hard to remember the old days when his romance with Lupe Velez was constantly dragging him into the limelight.

ODDS AND ENDS... Dorothy Arner, the famous woman director (now doing "Mother Cary's Chickens" with Ginger Rogers), relaxes between films by doing something different—studying astronomy, redecorating her house, or planting a new garden... Buck Jones recently celebrated his 19th anniversary in pictures—and is so popular that his "Buck Jones Rangers" club has 5,000,000 boys as members... Katherine Hepburn's "Portrait of a Lady" has been changed to "A Woman Rebels," so that people won't think it's about a photograph of a Confederate or die.

A Trio of Trim Togs

This trio of trim togs offers an appealing variety to the woman who sews at home. There is style and economy in every design.

Pattern No. 1950, the tunic, is one of the season's smartest, featuring a modish stand-up collar and just the right amount of flare or "swing." A grand ensemble for any youthful figure. Simply and inexpensively made, this clever pattern is designed for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20; 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 14 requires three and one-eighth yards for the tunic in 39 inch material and two yards for the skirt. Five-eighths yard ribbon required for the bow.

Pattern No. 1891 is a perfect fitting princess wrap around or a coat frock with a reversible closing. It has everything demanded of a morning or utility frock—style, slimming lines, slashed set-in sleeves, one or two patch pockets, simplicity of design, and a double breasted closing which is smart and compelling. Available in a wide range of sizes, 14 to 20; and from 32 to 48, this versatile frock will win a favorite spot in your clothes closet in short order. Size 16 requires four and three-eighths yards of 35 inch material.

For tiny tots, pattern No. 1812 has all the adorable qualities you like to associate with darling cherubs. The pattern includes a waist and pantie combination, as well as the frock and will serve for party or playtime wear with equal facility. Utterly simple in design and construction, it will slide through your machine in a brief hour or two and be a source of never ending delight to your style conscious daughter. Available in sizes: 2, 3, 4, and 5 years and suitable for a wide selection of fabrics. Size 3 requires just two and five-eighths yards of 35 or 39 inch material, plus three-eighths yard contrast for the collar and sleeve band.

Nations Prosper As They Are Free

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"Countries are well cultivated, not as they are fertile, but as they are free."

That axiom, pronounced many years ago, remains true today. Now, as then, it applies not only to the soil, but to every form of productive activity—whether at the farm, the factory, the store, the office or the laboratory.

It was through the freedom of her workers—not political liberty alone, but the freedom of unfettered energy—that America became great.

It was largely because of this freedom that the standard of living for all Americans became the highest in history, while the workers of Europe—hampered by government edicts and restrictions—lagged far behind.

It was this freedom of enterprise that converted our central plains into earth's greatest granary; that released our hidden mineral wealth for world-wide utility; that transformed the experiments of the scientific laboratory into the realities of every-day life and use.

It was this freedom that gave the American workers more and better farms, more and better homes, more and better food, more automobiles, more telephones, more radios, more comforts of all kinds, than any people on earth.

Let's remember these things through the months immediately ahead. Let's remind those in whose hands we have placed the reins of government that it was freedom of opportunity and of labor that made America what it is.

Let's ask them—with our help—to sweep away all the barriers that block the road to recovery, and to let the American people press forward as they did during the period of their greatest development, free from the handicap of bureaucratic edicts, whether past or present or future.

Let's impress on them anew that countries are well cultivated, not as they are fertile, but as they are free.

And that means freedom of our intelligence, our energies, and our spirit, as well as of our persons.

NOT in cash, of course. We're speaking of its equivalent. But here is something for you to consider:

Every year this newspaper brings you at least three outstanding novels in serial form. Purchased as books each would cost not less than $2, making a total expenditure of at least $6 per year.

Like yourself, we could find plenty of uses for that $6. Some member of the family is always in need of a new pair of shoes or some other necessity. But at the same time your requirements for good reading material must be met. By accepting these three novels each year we feel you are treating yourself to real enjoyment, at the same time giving your purse a substantial boost.

These novels are a source of constant pride to us. Every year we select them from the season's most outstanding best sellers, offered in serial form by a large newspaper syndicate organization. We'd like to feel that you—as a subscriber—always look forward to reading the coming installment in the next issue. It gives us a great satisfaction to know that here is another reason why our paper is popular in the home.

You are invited to begin reading our novels now. These regular brief visits to fictionland will prove a delightful interlude from your work-a-day activities. And it will make us happy to know that you are getting enjoyment from them.

"The Man Who-O-O"
Tales and Traditions from American Political History
by FRANK E. HAGEN and ILMO SCOTT WATSON

AN EARLY "BLACK LEGION"
ON TREES were posted mysterious squares of paper, black, or white or red, summoning men to midnight meetings. At these meetings there were oaths and grips and pass-words.

That was more than three-quarters of a century ago, but members of the "Black Legion," who created such a furore early in 1936 would have felt pretty much at home in those meetings back in the forties and fifties. There they would have fraternized with members of "The Supreme Order of the Star-Spangled Banner," a secret society which grew into a political party, the Native Americans, with a platform of opposition to foreigners, the papacy, infidelity and socialism.

Later they became known as the Know Nothings because, when a member was questioned about the order, he invariably answered "I don't know." In New York and Pennsylvania they elected several men to congress and in 1847 they held a national convention at Philadelphia. There they nominated Gen. Henry Dearborn for vice-president and recommended, but did not formally nominate, Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate for President.

In 1854-55 the Know Nothings carried Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Kentucky and California and looked forward to the election of 1856 with high hopes. Soon the party threw off its secret character and it became apparent that they were mostly Whigs. In February they held another convention in Philadelphia at which they formally renounced their party the American party. They nominated for President Millard Fillmore, the Whig vice-president who had served all but one month of the term to which Zachary Taylor had been elected, and gave him for a running mate Andrew Donelson of Tennessee, the ward of "Old Hickory" Jackson. Fillmore carried only one state in the election which sent James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate, to the White House and the Know Nothings passed out of the political picture soon afterwards.

"TO THE VICTORS—"
TO THE victors belong the spoils!
Although Andrew Jackson was the first exponent of that political creed, he was not the first man to express it in so many words. The man who did was William L. Marcy of New York, leader of one of the factions in the Democratic party when Polk was President.

The division in the Democratic ranks was over the distribution of federal patronage and it centered, as it has so often since, in New York state. The faction, led by Marcy, was called the "Hunkers" who were supported by Tammany who were always inclined to hunger, or "hunker," for office.

The other faction, led by Silas Wright, was composed of disappointed Van Burenites—disappointed because Van Buren, whom Jackson had made his successor, had been refused a second term by the party which took Polk, a "dark horse," instead. This faction was called the "Barnburners," because, like the Dutch farmer in New York state who burned his barn to get rid of the rats in it, they declared they were ready to "burn their barns to get rid of the rats," the upstart "Hunkers."

As a matter of fact they did just that in the campaign of 1848. Opposed to slavery, they joined forces with the Liberty party, took the name of the Free Soil party and nominated Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts. This split in the Democratic party resulted in a victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate, over Van Buren and over Lewis Cass, the regular Democratic nominee.

Along with "Hunker" and "Barnburner" is another interesting name once applied to the Democrats, growing out of the rivalry of these two factions. In the campaign of 1840 the Whigs called their opponents the "Locofocos" because at a meeting of the New York Democrats the two factions were trying to get control of the meeting. One gang turned off the gas lights and in the darkness, the other gang, which had come prepared for just such a stunt, took from their pockets the new friction matches, called "locofocos," struck them and by thus lighting the room were able to continue the session and dominate it.

New York City Milestones.
The first New York City milestones were erected in 1769, starting from the second City Hall at Wall and Nassau Streets and running along the Bowery Road to Kingsbridge. In 1801 a second series was set from the second City Hall to Middle Road. The third series was erected in 1822 from the present City Hall along the Bowery and Third Avenue. All the stones were of uniform size, being sixty-six inches high, four inches wide and six inches thick.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

"That's where we got caught—right there," cried the barber. "We got back to the ponies an' had to cut across a piece of burned timber to get out. A dead limb from one of the trees fell on me. I went down with the pony. When I kicked loose, the pony bolted, an' when I tried to get up, my leg was broke."

"There we was, Doc. Panama's pony couldn't carry double. The fire was creepin' up on two sides of us. It was terrible, Doc—that's all a man can say, just terrible. We couldn't hardly hear us talk. Panama picked me up to set me on his pony. 'No!' I yells. 'It won't do, Panama, an' you know it. I'm done, Panama. Save yourself. You ain't got a minute to lose. Get back on your horse and run for it.'"

"Shut up, Jake," Panama yells. "Get up on that pony! I tried to fight it out with him—but I was crazy with pain 'n' couldn't handle myself, neither. He lifted me on his pony, stuck the lines in my hands. 'Beat it,' he yelled. 'What'll you do?' says I. 'I've got good legs, I'll run,' he says."

A melancholy procession took the desert road that night for Sleepy Cat. In the wagon lay Panama; beside him lay his injured friend, Spotts—Jake would have it no other way.

In town, next day, the boys tried vainly to figure out some sort of a decent burial service for Panama. The best coffin to be had in Medicine Bend was ordered by telegraph to reach Sleepy Cat on train Number One.

"I've got it," exclaimed Jeff Sellers, who was sitting near Carpy. He slapped the doctor's knee. "We'll have the old Doc himself make a few remarks over Panama."

"No."
"Yes."
"Hell, no! I won't do it," growled Carpy.

"They all set on him. 'Yes, you will,' Carpy was inflexible. 'Boys, you might just as well shut up.'"

"But why won't you?"
"Well, I tell you, I'm just another bum, like poor Panama—that's all. You needn't yell—I know. The way I look at it is this: Nothing in Panama's life became him like the leaving of it. Surely no man could die a nobler death than Panama's. Now I want to see a man who lives a life like Panama's, death say a few words over Panama, and I'm going to try to get him to do it. Who? The old padre over on the Reservation."

"But he won't do it. Panama didn't belong to his church!"
"That doesn't make a d-d bit of difference, boys. The padre knows Panama. He knows me. He will do it—if we're lucky enough to catch him at home and not away fifty miles on a sick call. I've done a few things for Padre Cataldo. I know the man inside and out."

Dr. Carpy called up the padre and was lucky. At least the padre was at home. As to his coming—that was something else again. Carpy held him long on the wire; he pleaded earnestly. At last he agreed to come.

At eight o'clock, the welcome splinter of the dilapidated engine was heard outside. The padre, a Gunlock buck chauffeur, and a little Indian boy of ten or twelve dismounted, and the reception committee welcomed the guest of honor to the hotel office—long well filled. And headed by the clergyman and the little fellow, the growing crowd straggled down the street to Harry Tenison's, where poor Panama lay in state on the rear-most of the pool tables.

Padre Cataldo, laying aside his hat and his overcoat of many patches, made the sign of the cross, knelt a moment in silent prayer, and standing behind the pool table on which Panama lay in his coffin, spoke clearly and simply.

"Boys," said the old priest, "this looks like a queer place for a padre; perhaps a queer job. But I've known Bill Hayes a good many years. I know him in his wildest days. And I've known him for the last three years, since he turned over a new leaf."
"Bill used to visit me and talk with me. It was something I said to him once, so he told me, that started him thinking. 'What's all this about—this greedy, rotten old world?' he asked him. 'That doesn't make a damned bit of all to think about?'"

"Bill was not a follower of my faith—you know that. But he believed Jesus Christ to be the Son of God, and for three years he has tried the best he could to keep his commandments and persuade the boys up and down the line to do the same. He told me he wanted to try to do right where he had spent his life trying to do wrong. 'Naturally, I never heard Bill preach. But I have been told what eloquent and sincere sermons he did preach. But out there in those forgotten hills, facing—no, not facing but embracing—a dreadful death, Bill preached a deathless sermon, for he took his next from the lips of God himself. And wherever you bury him, boys, let the words of that text be graven on his tomb:

"Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

The lull in the fire threat issued in fresh dangers to the hill ranches. A blaze starting up anew on the reservation cut-over lands crept north on the very night that Panama was buried.

With what aid she could bring, Jane rode next morning over to her neighbor's only to find the situation critical. By noon the fire fighters were being driven back all along the line. But, loath to abandon hope of saving the ranch buildings, the men fought till Denison, riding among them, warned them to look first to their own safety.

Riding then fast to the ranch house, he found Jane consulting with Quong in the kitchen.
"I must think of your safety, Jane," he said, "It is getting too close to danger here. You and Quong must go home."

"Bill, is it that bad?"
"We might as well face the truth. It's not safe here for you. You must go, and quickly. Are your ponies saddled?"

"They are."
"Then take Quong and mount up."
Jane's eyes softened. They fell before his. "I just hate to go, Bill," she pouted, tantalizingly. "It seems like deserting a friend."

"You mustn't think too much of anybody but yourself just now, Bill," she murmured. "I do some thinking myself these days."
Quong had been called. Always forward-headed, without any words he was winking and blinking in his saddle. Denison handed Jane her lines. She leaned toward him and spoke low:

"We Must Do Some More Running Ourselves, Jane."

"Bill, will you promise me, solemnly, one thing?"
"Promise you anything, girl."
"Solemnly, Bill?"
"Solemnly. What is it?"
"That you'll think first for your own safety. Now promise!"
"I promise, Jane."
"For my sake, Bill?"
"Do you mean that?"
"I do mean it."
"God bless you. If the buildings go, I'll ride over to report tomorrow."

The wind died that night with the bloodshot sun, as if to leave in the hearts of its victims a faint hope of escape from the worst of its ravages. Jane slept so well that she opened her eyes in the heavy air of daybreak, conscience-stricken at having rested peacefully during the hours in which her neighbor might have been burned out.

She dressed, ate Quong's hurried breakfast, saddled her pony, and set out for Denison's, directing Quong to follow as soon as he could. The smoke grew more dense as she neared the ridge, and she reluctantly turned about to: home and told Quong of her failure and that she would ride up into the high hills to try to see what was going on.

She remounted and rode up the Di-vide trail. The smoke was so dense that it cut off hope of seeing the valley, and, spurred by the determination to see by riding higher, she rode on and on till she found herself at the foot of Gunlock Knob. Jane headed the pony up the mountain. The summit had never seemed so hard to reach, but, panting and exhausted, the pony carried Jane to the summit, and she rode out on the table to look. The scene below was terrifying. Huge clouds of smoke billowed and spread, only to boil up anew and race on the wind. It seemed as if the whole country were in flames. Here and there tongues of fire shot from the rolling smoke.

Jane sat the pony, fear-stricken and immovable, watching and hoping for a rift in the angry clouds that would reveal the ranch buildings. None came.

Wearily, at length, and depressed, Jane turned her pony's head to ride home. Gunlock itself might be in danger.

Even the pony took the downward trail reluctantly. Jane could not tell why until, rounding a shoulder of the Knob, she saw below her a fire sweeping across the trail she was following. Worse than that, the fire was spurting through the brush, up the mountain, in front of her. The pony balked. Thoroughly frightened, Jane turned him up the narrow trail and headed for the summit.

Even the few moments she had been away from the top had changed the scene. Overwhelmed with consternation, she began to think anew of her own safety. She urged the pony swiftly down the trail again, hoping faintly to find some hidden by-pass. Her path was blocked. The hot air of the fire below was catching at her throat; gusts of smoke burned into her eyes. She refused about to return, despairing, to the summit.

Once again the level rock afforded her temporary refuge. She dismounted. The pony was growing unmanageable. He snorted, stamped, flung his head up and down and chewed frantically at his bit. Hope deserted her. She sank to her knees and fell forward, covering her face with her arms.

For a moment her mind was a blank. She heard nothing of a frantic calling of her name, when a singed and blackened horseman spurred and lashed his pony toward her, sprang from the saddle, and caught her up in his arms.

"Jane!" he cried, as he looked into her face and shook her in his effort to restore consciousness. "Jane! Open your eyes! Speak to me! It's Bill, Jane, Bill! Can't you hear me? Speak!" Her eyes opened; she looked in a daze at him. "It's Bill, Jane!"

She threw her arms convulsively around his neck. "Oh, Bill, Bill! What can we do? Must we die, Bill, in this horror?"
"No!" he exclaimed. "We can get through. But we mustn't lose a minute, not a second. Come!"

He half-carried her to an edge of the summit, where a rock crevice gave a slight footing a few feet below. Into this he lowered himself and raised his arms to Jane.

"But the horses, Bill?" she cried.
"Leave them," he called back. "They may escape. There's no footing for horses where we're going. Quick, Jane! Jump!" He caught her in his arms, steadied her, showed her how to secure herself on the precarious footing, and lowered himself to another slender ledge to brace himself, bade her spring, and caught her again in his arms.

Her heart beat so violently, she seemed to feel it as she hugged close to him. There was barely room for the two to stand. "Keep cool, Jane. We can make it, but be very, very careful of your footing, darling Jane. The fire hasn't touched this side of the mountain yet, but if you fell it would be a hundred feet. Be everlastingly sure of every step, won't you? Never move until I tell you."

Spurred to superhuman effort, Denison achieved the almost impossible, and by sliding, clinging with fingers and arms, and by carefully using his lariat, he managed to bring Jane down unharmed to the foot of the precipitous wall that had given him the bare chance to save her life. He held out his arms to catch her for the final jump. "Bill!" she exclaimed, breathing hard and looking up in sheer amazement at the precipice down which he had brought her. "How did we ever get down there alive?"

He was still very anxious—the wrinkled veins of his smoked forehead plainly mirrored that. She waited for orders. "We must run through that grove of quaking asp and try to get away from the Knob. This will all be burning in a few minutes. Are you able to run?"

"I'll bet I can run faster than you, Bill." The laughing tone of her words thrilled and cheered him. He knew better than she what still lay between them and safety. They hastened on through the light timber; then, running a broad shoulder, they saw a vast panorama of smoke, lighted in places by flames where the fires had wrought destruction in the virgin pine forests along the mountain slope.

Denison hurried on, Jane briskly keeping pace with him. But when they neared the smoking pine, she felt dismayed.

"Bill, it's all on fire, yet—look at the little blazes. See the ground pine, and the trees are smoking and burning yet. Bill! See the deer running over there—mercy, those are bear running, too—why, every animal you can think of—"

Jane was looking toward an opening in the pines, half a mile away. It was a precipitous flight of the animal life of a whole mountainside from the wrath of a forest fire.

"They'd better run," said Denison grimly. "We must do some more running ourselves, Jane. There's very little danger crossing this strip. But I want to get across it quick."

They dashed into the fire area together. Little tongues of flame darted from the still burning ground, but nothing to threaten Jane's stout laced boots or leather trousers.

They crossed the burned strip and broke together down a long slope that bordered another forest of pine.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY?

DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Talks About
Underweight Children.

IN AN examination of a number of children in the public or grammar schools it was found that the number of underweights was reduced by supplying milk at the school at least once a day. In the high schools where no milk was supplied the gain in weight for height and age was not so satisfactory.

While this habit of supplying extra milk for school children is excellent there is often physical defects and bad health habits that are undermining the youngsters' health, and these must be corrected if permanent results are to be obtained.

A youngster that plays all the time and is too tired to eat and digest his food properly may be keeping his weight low just as can a youngster who doesn't get outdoors at all, and has no appetite for his food. Infected teeth or tonsils, a nose that is blocked and preventing proper breathing, round shoulders, and other physical defects all prevent proper growth and development.

Dr. W. R. P. Emerson in "Archives of Pediatrics" says: "The essentials for good nutrition and normal physical and mental development are: (1) freedom from physical defects, (2) adequate food, (3) free air, (4) sufficient exercise, and (5) proper rest. From a survey of a large number of children of preschool (three to six years) and school ages it was found that each child had an average of 4½ physical defects and 6 faulty eating habits. Of a group of 1,000 children only 2 per cent (20 in the whole 1,000) were found to be free from physical defects."

The most frequent defects are obstruction of the nose, bad teeth, diseases of various organs, and postural conditions (round shoulders, sway back, spinal curvature), which were either the result or partly the causes of the underweight and underdevelopment.

Physicians are agreed that attaining the proper weight for any youngster's particular type of body or physique will mean "improvement in mental development, increased efficiency, and increased resistance to disease."

The treatment of underweight in children then should be from the various standpoints outlined above which means, first, the removal of defects and bad health habits, and second, plenty of fresh air, plenty of good food and plenty of rest.

The Family Physician.
There was a time when the "out-standing" doctor of a community was supposed to be very silent, very gruff, having no patience with the patient who wanted to tell him all about his sickness. It was felt that he knew so much that just a glance at his patient and the taking of pulse and temperature was all that he needed to know what was wrong and how to treat it.

Fortunately the real family physician was not of this type, but a real all-round friend of the family who had all the affairs of the family on his mind and tried to help whenever and wherever possible.

And then came the "hospital" type of physician who took samples of blood, urine, sputum, used the X-ray and other types of examination possible in the hospital, and after waiting the hours and days necessary for these examinations to be completed, told the patient and the patient's family exactly what was wrong.

Now it is only good sense for the doctor to get all the help possible from the hospital's laboratories, because this will be of help to the patient; but the up-to-date doctor, the successful physician now realizes more than ever before that more than a knowledge of medicine, more than the findings from the laboratory are necessary if the patient is to get the best possible treatment.

Humanism is Needed.
Dr. Oscar Klotz in addressing the Toronto Academy of Medicine states: "In the practice of medicine the physician is called upon to use his every effort and equipment to learn the cause of the ailment and its treatment. He is often called upon to strain the last resources known to science to attain a satisfactory result. But over and above all these scientific endeavors, aided by all the available skill, there is need of a very commonplace attribute of man best spoken of as humanism—love and understanding of your fellow man. There is need of a sympathetic understanding which serves to support the courage of the patient, an appreciation of the mental and spiritual reactions of the sick, often determined by their surroundings and made worse by the poverty and distress of other members of the family. The full understanding of 'humanism' in medicine is acquired through varying circumstances of life and is attained in greatest measure by the family or general physician, rather than by the specialist."

ONCE LIABILITIES, LUDWIG'S CASTLES ARE NOW ASSETS

The three great castles which Ludwig II of Bavaria exhausted his country's resources to build are today supplying the state with a tidy income, and hundreds of German and foreign visitors wander through the magnificent buildings, paying a small admission charge for viewing the eccentric king's old properties.

First of the castles Ludwig built is Neuschwanstein, a replica of a medieval stronghold. The king had it decorated with scenes from Wagner's operas, and nearby he constructed a lodge with a large tree in the main room, representing the scene in the first act of "Die Walkure." The castle cost $30,000,000 and took thirteen years to build. Its situation is romantic in the extreme, for it stands on a mountain of rock, above a stream hurrying through a gorge, and its only approach is a road hewn out of the mountainside.

Linderhof, a replica of the Trianon palace at Versailles, is sumptuously carried out in French style. Even it did not satisfy Ludwig's ambitions, however, so that he next attempted to rival Versailles itself with the Schloss Herrenchiemsee, on an island of the Chiemsee. This has sixteen rooms of state and is splendidly decorated in crystal and gold. Its finest room the Grand Ballroom or Gallery of Mirrors, was lighted with over 2,500 candles, but the interior of the palace was never completely finished, because the king's funds at last gave out.

A Tribute to H. E. Plumlee From His Wife

NOW FOR SO LONG

Now for so long your step has matched my own
As we have climbed serenely up the hill,
So close you were new darkness held no fear.

(I had forgotten nights could be so still)
Your hand upon my arm had been a guide
That found a path for me, fair built, among

The bramble trees, you see, dear, I have walked
So many days where your tall lantern awung.

It is not that I'd call you back tonight
To take the road that bruises as it climbs
Strange though it is to walk without you now.

I'm glad you found your roof, your rest
betimes.
Nor is it that I am not brave, dear heart,
But for so long your step has matched my own.

That I may stumble on the highway now
Until I learn, once more, to walk alone!
