Mrs. Josie Adamson Dies

Hedley citizens were deeply grieved to learn of the death Wednesday afternoon of Mrs. Josie Adamson, who passed away at her home here after a two weeks illness with pneumonia.

She was a pioneer mother of this community, having lived here many years. She was 77 years of age.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon at the Methodist Church by Rev. V. A. Hansard and Rev. Cal. O. Wright. Interment was in Rowe Cemetery.

A more extended article will appear next week.

AUNT JOSIE

What a lovely title! It means a life worth while. For all who really knew her Will not forget her smile.

But let's go back a little And see her at her best, This splendid pioneer Whose life so many blest.

We see her in the sick room, Both capable and grand. We felt a little better If Aunt Josie was on hand.

If worse came to the worst, You saw she never left. She knew just how to fit a shroud And comfort the bereft.

I have the gravest doubts If she herself could say How many youngsters she dressed first And started on their way.

It was part of her religion To do the things she could, While we never heard her shout, We saw her doing good.

She loved her church sincerely, Yet no prejudice did hold. She knew the Lord had other sheep Besides her special fold.

Aunt Josie had her sorrows, But she had courage too, And bore them with the fortitude That God's own children do.

Devoted to her family She served them one and all. She never shirked a duty, However great or small.

She loved her friends and neighbors, And chased away their blues. She kept herself informed, And discussed with them the news.

But her busy stay is over, She will have a splendid rest, And we wonder what she's doing In those mansions of the blest.

Mrs. J. S. Hall

Curse of Progress

Hurrah for the Moon

Sambo had joined a debating society, and the day after his first meeting he was being questioned by friends.

"What was de subject of de debate, Sambo?"

"De subject were, 'What Is de Most Benefit to Mankind, de Sun or de Moon?'" replied Sambo.

"And which side did you take?"

"De moon's," said Sambo. "I argued dat de sun shines by day when we doan' need de light, but de moon shines by night, when dat light mos' certainly am needed. An' dey couldn't answer dat, suh!"—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Worm Turns

Angus was out for the evening and when he returned he found his father waiting up for him. "How much did the evening cost ye, lad?" he asked at once.

"Half a dollar."

"That's not so bad," he said, visibly relieved.

"It was all she had," the boy explained.

Smiles

Barberous

For some moments the two small boys had watched the barber sing a customer's hair. "What d'you suppose he's doin'?" one asked finally. "Don't be so dumb," answered the other. "He's lookin' for 'em with a light."

Swimming Instructor—That's better, sir. You ain't swallowin' so much water—doin' more to the gallon so to speak.

A (DON'T) COMEBACK

"Pretty place," approved Percy, after surveying his friend's estate with a patronizing air. "Bit bare, though. Trees are so small."

"Don't let that worry you," replied his host, genially. "Probably they'll be grown to a good size next time you're invited out."

A Word for It

He was spouting with great vigor against corporal punishment for boys, which he declared never did any good. "Take my own case," he exclaimed. "I was never caned but once in my life and that was for speaking the truth." "Well," retorted somebody in the audience, "it cured you."—Washington Star.

What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

She would have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints. But wisely she saw in his frequent colds, his "lagged out," "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had wangled. Constipation! The very morning after taking DR. Legion Project

"The harder people work, the more they need relaxation," opined H. H. Monk, district manager for the West Texas Utilities Company who passed from his multitudinous duties long enough to discuss the Legion's building project in Abilene.
"Now, take these boys there," he continued, "they don't have much money to work with but they've managed to dig up the dinero for a 50 by 130 foot club house, all because they work hard and they want to have a little fun in their spare time.
"And they're not doing any sloshy job, either. Modern as any high powered club house in the country. Why, they've already installed 80 ft of lamaline lights in four different colors across the ceiling of that building. And they're disking for an attic comfort cooling system so they can sit and read write, or do their jiggling, this summer with all the comfort of a seaside resort. They've even figured out a way to finance a complete electric kitchen for their banquets and conventions. Those boys sure have got something on the ball."

The Abilene Legion has a 5 acre plot on the main highway east of the city. Located on the site is a children's playground, a natatorium, a caretaker's cottage and the new club house 50 by 130 feet in size. The entire grounds is lighted by flood lamps.

The club house, constructed of native stone, includes a dance floor 35 by 81 feet which can be converted into a theatre with a stage at the north end; lounge rooms for men and women; banquet kitchen; lodge room and office. A patio, 12 by 88 feet, is on the east side facing an artificial lake and the swimming pool.
A cove lighting system, with center ceiling construction of lamaline changeable lamps in four colors, red, green, yellow and blue, extends the length of the building.

Ruck Sibley, chairman of the building committee and former post commander, said completion and gala opening of the club house on June 1, culminated a drive begun 11 years ago by the Legion for a recreation park which might be opened to the public. Income from the swimming pool and dance facilities will be used to promote Parramore Post, a community service, child welfare and public safety program.

also some cotton seed.

Big Tourist Season

Local merchants, and particularly the Conoco dealers, are looking forward to substantial profit this summer, as a result of the largest tourist season in history, according to H. H. Hall, manager here for Continental Oil Company.
Early summer requests received by the Conoco Travel Bureau touring information indicate that 1937 will surpass even last year's travel business, he said.
Naturally all merchants will profit, but the Conoco dealers have an additional reason for optimism.

Under Continental's new policy all of its products are sold through independent dealers, which means that every Conoco dealer either owns or leases his station in business for himself.
He doesn't work for a weekly or monthly pay envelope; so naturally he gets out and hustles for that extra profit. And when he gets that extra profit, it stays in town, as he spends his money with the local merchants.

"Furthermore, Continental Oil Company is giving its dealers some fine cooperation. They are taking newspaper space to advertise the dealer's station as well as their own products. In this advertising Conoco dealers are known as 'mileage merchants' and, actually that's just what they are."

THE President of the United States, no less, is the new diction coach at the Selznick-International studios in Hollywood.

Players memorize his speeches, then play the records over and over following his every intonation until they have mastered the art of perfect phrasing.

In recent weeks Carole Lombard has been the busiest young woman in Hollywood, because her Paramount contract allows her to make one picture for another company each year.

Carole Lombard

All of us who could not get to London for the coronation can comfort ourselves by watching the long-ago coronation scenes in "The Prince and the Pauper."

Some weeks ago, you may recall, Gloria Swanson's return to the screen was all set. She was going to make "Mazie Kenyon" for M-G-M.

In spite of her outstanding success in "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" and the forthcoming "They Gave Him a Gun" which is said to be even better.

Social life and cafe-hopping were at low ebb during the weeks when there was talk in the air of a strike of the Screen Actors' guild.

James Cagney won the undying gratitude of extras and bit players, for they were battling to improve their pay and working conditions, not their own.

ODDS AND ENDS—Hollywood will throw a grand party soon in honor of Weber and Fields and the fiftieth anniversary of their stage debut as a team.

THE KING SETTLES DOWN TO WORK

George VI Faces Task of Dignifying Monarchy by Emulating His Late Father, but It Should Be Easy for Him.

It takes more than an incident like the reign of Edward VIII to upset the Crown of England, but it did it ever so little.

George VI and Queen Elizabeth, now that the pomp and circumstance of the coronation is a thing of the past, face the task of satisfying the British heart by emulating King George V and Queen Mary.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

NOW that the coronation is over—what of the newly-crowned king and queen? Their "big day" past, will they retire into that quiet dignity of family life and imperial duty which has characterized British ruling families for a hundred years.

That is just what they will do. For that is just what the British government intended they should do when it so swiftly moved to rid the Empire of the eldest son of George V.

George VI and Elizabeth have a job cut out for them: That is to live and reign just as nearly as did his parents as they possibly can.

So long have British kings been above reproach, above even criticism or controversy, few who recognize the task now set before George VI also realize that he is not the first of his line to have faced it.

Crown Is Symbol. In this case the Crown has only tipped over so slightly. But for the safety of the Empire it must not be allowed to tip at all.

It will not do here to go into the actual meaning of the Crown itself in too great length, for that has been done time and again in the American press during the weeks leading up to the coronation.

When Edward ascended the throne, the Crown had enjoyed three rulers in a row who so perfectly exemplified the British ideal that Britons had begun to believe the monarchy itself (not the monarch) was permanently perfect.

Edward VIII became openly, sharply criticized in a manner entirely foreign to his three predecessors. The fact that the press had withheld reports of his romance with Mrs. Simpson and the impending crisis until only eight days before he abdicated only served to increase the shock when it did arrive.

George V was known as a father to his people, a family man, a figure of the court and a country gentleman. His second son is already much like him, although he is of another generation, more progressive in many activities—but all of them highly respectable and commendable.

At forty-one (a fresh, boyish forty-one), he has reigned six months and in that short time has returned a dignity to the throne worthy of the best efforts of a much older and more experienced man.

He goes to church regularly and has brought back to the Buckingham Palace chapel the daily prayers that were absent during the reign of his brother.

That he may have expert advice in following his father's footsteps, he has returned to the post of private secretary to the king his father's life-long friend, Lord Wigam. Other members of the old king's household have likewise returned.

Has Retiring Nature. He is expected to become, indeed he has become, admired by Britons for the way in which he has surmounted personal handicaps.

Long subjection to the more dynamic personality of his older brother as well as long periods of ill health have left him with rather a retiring nature, so that there is likely to be no more idle gossip about him than there was about George V.

Yet in some ways he differs from his sire. He does not live quite so much the life of the court; rather would he spend the days in the country, at his great, white house in the park at Windsor, with the queen and his children.

He has the interest in industry that characterized Edward in one of his moods. He frequently inspects electrical plants, cotton mills, textile factories, telephone offices, warehouses and shipyards, and he knows every industrial section, every slum, in Great Britain.

Elizabeth Follows Mary. George VI is definitely of mechanical bent. He served in the forward turret of twelve-inch guns on the battleship Collingswood on the battle of Jutland.

Queen Elizabeth should do equally well in her task of filling the shoes of Queen Mother Mary. She's a gal after Mary's own heart.

Elizabeth's family is one of a type that every commoner knows and admires. Her brothers are not captains of regiments, but captains of industry, one of them chairman of one of Durham's largest coal-mining firms.

Never a "modern," Elizabeth shied away from most society, was noted for her lack of interest in fancy clothes.

Enjoys Boys' Camp. Like King George, she loves to visit among the people, is frequently seen at orphanages, hospitals and the like.

One of the chief pleasures of the king's life is the annual summer camp for public school boys and working boys which he established shortly after leaving Cambridge.

These are not the only times when he has become surprisingly human. More than once, the story is told, crowds waiting for him at a railroad station have been shocked and delighted to find him alighting from the cab, grimy with grease and dirt, rather than stepping clean and white from a comfortable coach.

But these things will probably occur much less often now that he has dedicated himself to becoming a carbon copy of his father. That that is certainly what he intends to do is further proved by the latest reports from London.

He is reported to be growing a beard. The crown is safe!

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Lightening of the war clouds over Europe—when viewed from any point within the United States—is one of the most interesting developments for months.

The real truth about the present situation was pointed out in these dispatches last fall as the consensus among Washington's diplomats—perhaps as well informed a group of people as exists in the world.

Mussolini has been sounding off again, but the diplomats point out that he does this at frequent intervals. Just ten years ago, in the spring of 1927, he made a terrific speech—much more sabre-rattling in tone than his recent one.

Almost on that schedule he attacked Ethiopia, defied the League of Nations—a fairly safe practice—and pulled the long-suffering British lion's tail.

Some Friction. Recently, however, some friction has developed between Germany and Italy. Which confirms another theory set forth in these dispatches last fall, and originating in the diplomatic corps here.

The fact remains that while there is the general idea that Japan and Germany would fight the Soviet republic and possibly France, there is grave doubt as to which of the two camps would attract certain other nations.

Diplomats here privately point out that Britain seems to have revamped part of her war policy, striving for a huge air force and navy in her new armament program, but obviously not planning for a great expeditionary force to be dispatched to the continent of Europe in the event of a war, as she did in 1914.

The French viewpoint is that they are not concerned one iota with the strength of either the British or the United States navy. There is no possibility, as the French view it, of their ever being in conflict with either one within the possible useful life of any ship that might be constructed now.

In the Doldrums. Cessation of White House news during the President's fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico brought out sharply the doldrums into which Washington has dropped in the last month, after what amounted to a Pandora's box of sensations earlier in the session.

There are very obvious reasons for it. In the first place there has been a series of really important news developments in other places—the coronation, the Spanish fiasco, the irritation of Mussolini over the world's discovering that the troops he sent to Spain were not as invincible as the Italians had come to believe, the Hindenburg disaster, etc.

Supreme court enlargement: Suffering from too much wordage. Every conceivable argument on either side has been advanced not once but ten to a hundred times. Moreover, its fate is still in suspense, with very little new development, no sensational flops from one side to the other, the doubtful senators still on the fence, and best opinion as to the probable outcome not having changed for nearly a month.

New taxes: Everybody knows there must be some, sooner or later. Everybody knows roughly that taxes on the wealthy and corporations alone will not produce sufficient revenue. The only question is when they will be imposed.

Cutting the Costs. Economy—cutting government expenditures: Tremendously important, but not frightfully interesting to the average reader. Moreover, it is difficult for the proverbial milkman in Omaha to get worked up over whether economy is achieved by a horizontal cut of ten per cent in all appropriations, or fifteen per cent in such appropriations as the President, in his discretion, may consider proper.

Neutrality: Promised just a few months ago to be a real issue. But at that time there was genuine fear throughout the country that there would be a big European war very shortly, in which the United States might easily become involved.

Government reorganization: This never did excite the public half as much—not a tenth as much—as it did the senators and representatives. The lawmakers have selfish interests, friends in bureaus which might be reduced, transferred or abolished. But the mechanic in Detroit, the steel worker in Gary, and the farmer in Iowa care nothing about it whatever.

Economy Road. The economy road is not so easy for the federal government as the average business and professional man seems to think. In fact it is just about as difficult a thing as one can imagine.

Consider the mental processes of a senator or member of the house, for example, when he tries to decide whether he will follow the wishes of the President, and vote for a discretionary cut of fifteen per cent in all appropriations, or whether he will follow some of the house and senate leaders, and vote for a horizontal ten per cent cut.

The discretionary cut means simply that President Roosevelt could, at his pleasure, make a cut in any appropriation congress might vote, the only limit being that the cut must not exceed fifteen per cent of the total.

The horizontal cut means simply that congress would arbitrarily reduce every appropriation by one-tenth, leaving the President no discretion at all.

In approaching a decision as to which way to vote the congressman knows that both solutions are bad—unbelievably bad. In fact, probably the only thing that could be worse would be not to economize at all!

The discretionary cut theory hits the congressman right where he lives. He knows if he votes for that and should later on want a little mercy shown some particular project affecting his own district or state, he will have to go on his hands and knees to the White House for it.

But when he examines the ten per cent horizontal cut, he finds there are plenty of reasons why he should oppose that. On its face it is unscientific. It is clumsy. It is inflexible. Its surgical cure not only impairs but destroys efficiency in the most unexpected places.

Yet to attempt to discriminate—to have congress perform its logical function of deciding just how much shall be spent by each bureau of the government—is impracticable in the face of the certainty of logrolling. You vote for my appropriation and I will vote for yours. Which always winds up with the total appropriations bigger than ever.

Then there are the personal angles. A senator may believe that economy-inspired cuts should be imposed in bureaus A and B and C. He may be enthusiastic about more spending in X and Y and Z. But it suddenly appears that he has a host of political lieutenants who are employed in bureaus A and B and C. Some of them would lose their jobs if he votes with a majority to cut the allotments of these bureaus.

Privately, most senators and representatives admit that the only way for the federal government to economize is to permit Presidential discretion.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

Zalia Graem glared defiantly at Vance.

"I asked Mrs. Garden what I could do for her, and she requested me to fill the water glass on the little table beside her bed. I went into the bathroom and filled it; then I arranged her pillows and asked her if there was anything else she wanted. She thanked me and shook her head; and I returned to the drawing-room."

"Thank you," murmured Vance, nodding to Miss Graem and turning to the nurse. "Miss Beeton," he asked, "when you returned last night, was the bedroom window which opens on the balcony bolted?"

The nurse seemed surprised at the question. But when she answered, it was in a calm, professional tone.

"I didn't notice. But I know it was bolted when I went out."

He turned leisurely to Floyd Garden. "I say, Garden when you left the drawing-room yesterday afternoon, to follow Swift on your errand of mercy, as it were, after he had given you his bet on Equanimity, where did you go with him?"

"I led him into the dining-room." The man was at once troubled and aggressive. "I argued with him for a while, and then he came out and went down the hall to the stairs. I watched him for a couple of minutes, wondering what else I might do about it, for, to tell you the truth, I didn't want him to listen in on the race upstairs. I was pretty damned sure Equanimity wouldn't win, and he didn't know I hadn't placed his bet. I was rather worried about what he might do. For a minute I thought of following him upstairs, but changed my mind."

Vance lowered his eyes to the desk and was silent for several moments, smoking meditatively.

"I'm frightfully sorry, and all that," he murmured at length, without looking up; "but the fact is, we don't seem to be getting any farther. There are plausible explanations for everything and everybody. Assuming—merely as a hypothesis—that anyone here could be guilty of the murder of Swift, of the apparent attempt to murder Miss Beeton, and of the possible murder of Mrs. Garden, there is nothing tangible to substantiate an individual accusation. The performance was too clever, too well conceived, and the innocent persons seem unconsciously and involuntarily to have formed a conspiracy to aid and abet the murderer."

Vance looked up and went on. "Moreover, nearly everyone has acted in a manner which conceivably would make him appear guilty. There have been an amazing number of accusations. Mr. Kroon was the first victim of one of those unsubstantiated accusations. Miss Graem has been pointed out to me as the culprit by several persons. Mrs. Garden last night directly accused her son. In fact, there has been a general tendency to involve various people in the criminal activities here. From the human and psychological point of view the issue has been both deliberately and unconsciously clouded, until the confusion was such that no clear-cut outline remained. And this created an atmosphere which perfectly suited the murderer's machinations, for it made detection extremely difficult and positive proof almost impossible. . . . And yet," Vance added, "some one in this room is guilty."

He rose dejectedly. I could not understand his manner; it was so unlike the man as I had always known him. All of his assurance seemed gone. Then he swung round quickly, and his eyes swept angrily about the room, resting for a brief moment on each one present.

"Furthermore," he said with a staccato stress on his words, "I know who the guilty person is!"

There was an uneasy stir in the room and a short tense silence which was broken by Doctor Siefert's cultured voice.

"If that is the case, Mr. Vance—and I do not doubt the sincerity of your statement—I think it your duty to name that person."

Vance regarded the doctor thoughtfully for several moments before answering. Then he said in a low voice: "I think you are right, sir." Again he paused and, lighting a fresh cigarette, moved restlessly up and down in front of the window.

"First, however," he said stopping suddenly, "there's something upstairs I wish to look at again—to make sure . . . You will all please remain here for a few minutes." And he moved swiftly toward the door. At the threshold he hesitated and turned to the nurse. "Please come with me, Miss Beeton. I think you can help me."

The nurse rose and followed Vance into the hall. A moment later we could hear them mounting the stairs.

Fully five minutes passed, and then the tense silence of the room was split by a woman's frenzied and terrifying cry for help, from somewhere upstairs. As we reached the hallway the nurse came stumbling down the stairs, holding with both hands to the bronze railing. Her face was ghastly pale.

"Mr. Markham! Mr. Markham!" she called hysterically. "Oh, my God! The most terrible thing has happened!"

She had just reached the foot of the stairs when Markham came up to her. She stood clutching the railing for support.

"It's Mr. Vance!" she panted excitedly. "He's—gone!"

A chill of horror passed over me, and everyone in the hall seemed stunned.

In broken phrases, interspersed with gasping sobs, the nurse was explaining to Markham.

"He went over—Oh, God, it was terrible! He said he wanted to ask me something, and led me out into the garden. He began questioning me about Doctor Siefert, and Professor Garden, and Miss Graem. And while he talked he moved over to the parapet—you remember where he stood last night. He got up there again, and looked down. I was frightened—the way I was yesterday. And then—and then—while

"Incidentally, one of my great difficulties in the case has been to act in such a way, at all times, that her suspicions would not be aroused at any point."

"Her motive was not clear at first," Vance explained, "and, unfortunately, I thought that by Swift's death alone she had accomplished her purpose. But after my talk with Doctor Siefert this morning, I was able to understand fully her whole hideous plot. Doctor Siefert pointed out definitely her interest in Floyd Garden, although I had had hints of it before. For instance, Floyd Garden was the only person here about whom she spoke to me with admiration. Her motive was based on a colossal ambition—the desire for financial security, ease and luxury; and mixed with this over-weening desire was a strange twisted love. These facts became clear to me only today."

Vance glanced at young Garden. "It was you she wanted," he continued. "And I believe her self-assurance was such that she did not doubt for a minute that she would be successful in attaining her goal."

Garden sprang to his feet.

"Good God, Vance!" he exclaimed. "You're right. I see the thing now. She has been making up to me for a long time; and, to be honest with you, I may have said and done things which she could have construed as encouragement—God help me!" He sat down again in dejected embarrassment.

"No one can blame you," Vance said kindly. "She was one of the shrewdest women I have ever encountered. But the point of it all is, she did not want only you—she wanted the Garden fortune as well."

That's why, having learned that Swift would share in the inheritance, she decided to eliminate him and leave you the sole beneficiary. But this murder did not, by any means constitute the whole of her scheme."

Vance again addressed us in general.

"Her whole terrible plot was clarified by some other facts that Doctor Siefert brought out this morning during my talk with him. The death, either now or later, of Mrs. Garden was also an important ingredient of that plot; and Mrs. Garden's physical condition had, for some time, shown certain symptoms of poisoning. Of late these symptoms have increased in intensity. Doctor Siefert informed me that Miss Beeton had been a laboratory assistant to Professor Garden during his experiments with radio-active sodium, and had often come to the apartment here for the purpose of typing notes and attending to other duties which could not conveniently be performed at the university. Doctor Siefert also informed me that she had actually entered the household here about two months ago, to take personal charge of Mrs. Garden's case. She had, however, continued to assist Professor Garden occasionally in his work and naturally had access to the radio-active sodium he had begun to produce."

Vance turned his eyes to Professor Garden.

"And you too, sir," he said, "were, as I see it, one of her intended victims. When she planned to shoot Swift I believe she planned a double murder—that is, you and Swift were to be shot at the same time. But, luckily, you had not returned to your study."

"But—but," stammered the professor, "how could she have killed me and Woody too?"

A half hour later we were all seated in the den again. Heath and Snikkin were just behind him, and the rest of us, stupefied, followed. As I came out on the roof, I could see Miss Beeton running toward the far end of the garden, with Vance immediately behind her. Twilight had nearly passed, and a deep dusk had settled over the city. As the girl leaped up on the parapet at the same point where Vance had stood the night before, she was like a spectral silhouette against the faintly glowing sky. And then she disappeared down into the deep shadowy abyss, just before Vance could reach her.

for a few minutes. Then he spoke.

"I asked all of you to stay because I felt you were entitled to an explanation of the terrible events that have taken place here, and to hear why it was necessary for me to conduct the investigation in the manner I did. To begin with, I knew from the first that I was dealing with a very shrewd and unscrupulous person."

"I was inclined to suspect Miss Beeton almost from the first, for, although everyone here had, through some act, drawn suspicion upon himself, only the nurse had the time and the unhampered opportunity to commit the initial crime. She was entirely unobserved when she put her plan into execution; and so thoroughly familiar was she with every arrangement of the household, that she had no difficulty in timing her every step so as to insure this essential privacy."

"Subsequent events and circumstances added irresistibly to my suspicion of her. For instance, when Mr. Floyd Garden informed me where the key to the vault was kept, I sent her to see if it was in its place, without indicating to her where its place was, in order to ascertain if she knew where the key hung. Only someone who knew exactly how to get into the vault at a moment's notice could have been guilty of killing Swift."

June Bridal Party in Summer Velvet

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUMMER velvet is important fashion news for the bride-to-be who is seeking a radiantly beautiful and out of the ordinary material for the making of her own gown as well as those for her attendants.

No word picturing can do justice to this enchanting fabric, for the loveliness of summer velvet cannot be visualized by the mere telling. Unless you have seen summer velvet you are due for a surprise for it is not all-velvet by any means. Imagine, if you can, a sheer filmy mouseline de soie or chiffon or dainty organza background strewn with exquisitely delicate interwoven velvet designs or motifs, well that's summer velvet.

The idea of costuming the bride and her attendants in summer velvet becomes the more intriguing in that a most fascinating play on color is made possible for the velvet motifs can be any color you choose.

The scheme is worked out in this manner for the gowns pictured. White mouseline de soie patterned with tiny winged motifs of white velvet is used for the youthful wedding gown as here shown. The bride wears pearls and a diamond clip at the low V-shape décolletage. Her bouquet is the new idea—pale lavender orchids carried in a handle of carved crystal, forming a fan effect.

The matron of honor to the right in the picture also wears summer velvet—white mouseline de soie with green velvet motifs posed over a matching green slip. The sash is of bands of matching green velvet and pale yellow. The hat, a new version of the poke bonnet, is in the same green shade with a huge bow and long streamers of wide green velvet ribbon. The matron of honor's bouquet is of palest yellow and white freesias. Her Aris gloves are white glace kid with delicate embroidery in gold thread. Emeralds are set in necklace and clip. White and yellow are worn by each of the other bridesmaids with jewelry tuned to correspond. These frocks can be worn all summer.

Completing the scheme for this summer wedding the bride's mother, pictured to the left, wears the same summer velvet fabric but in a patterning of delphinium blue bows-knots on a silk sheer with tiny flowers of delphinium, with a velvet sash of matching color. When the jacket is removed the dress has a low formal neckline. Her hat is a smart new tricorne of navy straw with tiny flowers of delphinium. The dainty corsage is of lilies of the valley in the center of which are a few delphinium blossoms.

For that "something different" look that brides covet for their wedding pageantry here are a few suggestions. If the bridesmaids have long streamers to their hats a clever touch is to snap one of the streamers about the right wrist under a bracelet bouquet. Then there is the idea of veils for the bridesmaids. These are of tulle in colors related to each costume. They are waist depth and fall gracefully about the shoulders.

SHORT DANCE FROCK

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

When the new short-length dance frock first made its appearance it created quite a sensation. However, it did not take long for it to become a general favorite. The dress pictured is of lovely printed silk chiffon. It accents the slender waistline such as fashion demands—a return to the silhouettes of the long ago. The gown was worn by a prominent society debutante at "The Silk Parade to Waltz Time," a benefit affair recently taking place in New York.

Lanvin Jackets Are Made of Silver or Gold Kid

Silver or gold kid is used over and over again for evening at Lanvin's where flowing robes are trimmed with oriental applications of leather. At the same house are separate jackets entirely of stitched kid which is so soft and fine that it looks like lacquered satin.

LACE FOR SUMMER BRIDE NEW STYLE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The June bride will be fashionably attired this season when she chooses lace for her gowns. With the present vogue for lace for daytime wear, for evening gowns, and for the highly popular house coats and delicate negligees, the romantic appeal of this material makes it a favorite for wedding gowns and bridesmaids' dresses.

Cut on classic lines, the beautiful lace patterns of this season allow for exquisite details of workmanship for the bridal gown. One lovely gown seen recently is perfectly simple in line but has fine details of applied seamings at the point below the hips where the slight fullness starts. The very full train, and the skirt and neck edges likewise, have an applied scalloped edge of lace. This intricate treatment shows to advantage particularly as the veil is quite short and does not fall to the train. In general, these lace wedding coats have shorter veils so that their delicate patterns are not obscured.

Wedding Parties Dressed All in Lace Is Fashion

Wedding parties dressed entirely in lace are in the fashion picture this year. One of the best we have seen is of all-white peau d'ange in a Chantilly pattern for the bride. There were no seams to the dress, avoiding any unnecessary line that might interfere with the beautiful pattern of the lace, and the edges throughout were entirely hand-applied. A matching mantilla head-dress was worn with this wedding gown.

The wedding party, all in lace, made a charming and appropriate setting for the bride. The bridesmaids' dresses were of novelty all-over lace, in pastel shades. The headresses, in contrast with the mantilla of the bride, were formed like a hood, from the collar at the back.

Hints on Tints

Capucine colors will be among the new color accents during the coming season. They have their origin in the various shades of the popular nasturtium.

Poison for Grasshoppers

It appears that the grass hopper situation this year is going to be one of the Donley County farmers chief problems. The best method to fight the grass hopper situation is to use poisoned bran. Poison bran can be prepared and used as follows:

Coarse wheat bran, 25 lbs
Paris green or white arsenic, 1 lb.
High grade amyl acetate 1 ounce
Cane or sorghum molasses

(avoid corn syrup) 2 qts.
Water sufficient to make a moist mash as explained below
Mix the bran and poison together thoroughly. Dilute the amyl acetate and molasses in about two gallons of water. Pour this liquid over the mixture of poison and bran until every particle is moist. Then make further additions of water and mix the roughly until a mesh is obtained that is quite moist, yet so it will fall apart after being tightly squeezed, and so may readily be sown broadcast.
This quantity of mash should be broadcast so as to cover about five acres. A good practice is to mix at night and sow early in the morning before nine o'clock, since the hoppers do not actively feed until the dew dries up. If it is desired to kill hoppers in grass land, sow over the entire acreage to be protected. Where they are migrating from fence rows or pastures into cultivated crops, sow the fence row on a fairly broad margin of the pasture, and also a broad margin of the cultivated crop with the mixture.

Some of the main things to be careful about in handling the poison is:

Do not place the mash in piles. Do not use lead arsenate but use Paris green or white arsenic.

If everyone who is noticing grass hoppers in their fields will try mixing a little poison and start a campaign against the grass hoppers there will be no trouble in killing them. But if one or two use the poison and others depend on the neighbors, the grass hoppers will give trouble. I believe that if every one will do their bit to help control the situation, there will be no trouble with grass hoppers this year.

THOUSANDS said that tires could not stand the terrific grind. They said cars had been built with much greater speed, turns in the track had been repaired with granite-like surface, yet Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires setting a new record of 113.58 miles per hour on one of the hottest days in the history of the Indianapolis track.

Think of the terrific impact on these tires as the cars roared into the treacherous turns and out again. Tons of force straining, pulling, and twisting inside the tire, yet not one cord loosened, not one tread separated from the cord body—all because Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, successfully counteracted the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

You will never drive your car at these record-breaking speeds, but for the safety of yourself and family you need the safest, strongest and most dependable tires. Come in today. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy.
