Rusk-Wells

Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. E. Wells, W. P. Rusk and Miss Mary Hope Wells were married. The bride's father read the ceremony, and only the immediate family were present.

The bride and groom stood before an altar of flowers as the ceremony was read. Fred Wells, brother of the bride, acted as best man, and Miss Ola Ruth, her sister, as maid of honor. Miss Jo Wells, her youngest sister, played the Lohengrin Wedding March as the couple marched in.

The bride was dressed in a long gown of white satin with veil of chiffon. Her bouquet of pale pink carnations, white tuberoses and baby breath was beautiful. Ola Ruth dressed in a blue lace over satin, and Jo wore a blue net over taffeta. The men dressed in conventional dark colors.

A dinner was served by the bride's mother on the happy occasion.

The young couple left next morning for Amarillo and Clovis, N. Mex. They will be at home to their friends at Dumas, where he is employed in the Magnolia gasoline plant.

The bride is a graduate of West Texas State at Canyon, and taught school last year at Pampa.

Mrs. Rusk has a wide circle of friends here who will join the Informer in extending congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple.

Baptist Revival Meeting

The revival meeting at the First Baptist Church closed Sunday night, after a successful series of services under the direction of Rev. H. R. Whatley of Haskell. 25 additions to the church were made, 12 by baptism, and the entire membership was much benefitted by the meeting. Bro. Whatley left Monday for his home, while Bro. Gibbs went to Stamford to assist in a revival.

A baptizing will be held at the church Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

Hands Off Chicken, Modern Code Insists

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it incorrect, according to etiquette, to eat even the slightest bit of chicken in the fingers? I don't mean whether it is correct to take up what can be cut off the bone easily enough, but I am referring to the very small bones from which it is impossible to cut meat loose with knife and fork. Aren't good table manners today more lenient about these foods, especially if finger bowls are provided?

Answer: No, people are less lenient than they used to be. That is, if we go back to the descriptions given us by the writers of long ago, and as copied for instance in the moving picture of Henry the Eighth, who picked up a whole chicken in his hands and tore it apart, our table manners have become positively finicky. The only thing that could soil the fingers and is not tabued by the meticulous are lobster claws. And when such lobster is served, finger bowls of hot soapy water should be provided at once. Perhaps, if this practice were followed when serving chicken, there would be no objection to taking the wings in the fingers.

Address Invitations to Wedding Tactfully

DEAR Mrs. Post: Our families are both large and I really can not include all the children at my wedding, so must end the lists with aunts and uncles. Would you suggest that it might be a good idea to enclose a card with the invitations saying "no children"? Or how should I break the news to the parents without hurting them?

Answer: To emphasize the fact that they are not invited would be needlessly cruel, especially if some of them have been looking forward to a wedding in the family. Merely address invitations to Mr. and Mrs. and say nothing about the Marys and Johnnies. Should you be asked whether the children may come, then explain that unhappily you can not include so many more.

The Bridesmaid's Dress.

DEAR Mrs. Post: (1) I have been told that taffeta is a better material for the dresses at a spring wedding than one in winter time. Is this also true of moire? (2) Also, if a bride wears a simple velvet dress, must her only attendant wear velvet or would she be suitably dressed in crepe or any of the more practical materials which she thinks would be better suited to her needs after the wedding?

Answer: (1) Moire is particularly suitable for autumn and winter. (2) Her dress need not be of velvet. It would be quite all right to have the bridesmaid wear crepe.

White Gold Ring.

DEAR Mrs. Post: I've always liked the plain yellow gold wedding band and would like to have one of this description when I am married. But one never sees yellow gold wedding bands today, that is, not on the new brides. Also, I am wondering whether yellow gold will look well with my other rings, which happen to be set in platinum. What would you suggest?

Answer: Although I myself have a strong prejudice in favor of the yellow gold wedding ring, I think that the bride of today would better have a ring of white gold, for the reason that you yourself give.

Folding the Napkin.

DEAR Mrs. Post: When eating a meal in someone's house, how is the napkin supposed to be left at the table?

Answer: Fold the napkin together loosely and lay it at the left of your place. If you are staying for the next meal, you would be more careful to fold it neatly in its original creases, especially if the others at table make it obvious by the way they fold their own that it is not customary to provide fresh napkins at each meal.

Guests Go First.

DEAR Mrs. Post: When I ask friends home with me to my apartment, after unlocking the hall door should I go first or let them go in first? And does the same answer hold for both women and men friends?

Answer: Unless it is necessary that you go into the apartment in order to turn on a light, you would open the door and stand aside for a woman to go ahead of you. A man would of course follow you.

Tea for Many.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Please tell me whether you think I can use a big silver electric coffee percolator, which has a spigot, as a water kettle on a large afternoon tea table?

Answer: If there is an electric outlet under your table so that no one will trip over the cord, there is no reason why you shouldn't use it.

West Texas Utilities Co.,

Dear Sir:

The purpose of the contest that your Company arranged is one that should appeal to every American woman, for it is true that the facilities for the effective management of the home have, within the past few years, become so notable as to remove -- let us hope, forever -- such of the ceaseless drudgery formerly a concomitant of that necessary field. Science and invention, I am sure, will shortly find ways to eliminate the few remaining onerous duties. It is, therefore, indeed high time that the term formerly synonymous with household drudgery be relegated to the limbo of forgotten things.

Accordingly, I have examined with the greatest interest all the entries that you sent me by airmail. I can not be certain, naturally, that any of them would become the one term that will be received by American women as a permanent and acceptable substitute for the outmoded term housewife.
I think, therefore, that your plan to offer a selected list of prize-winning terms is the wise procedure, thereby suggesting possible lines which may lead to a term -- perhaps altogether new -- that may be generally accepted.

I regret that a great many of the entries seemed to me altogether too flamboyant and fanciful for even brief consideration. Others, tho the contestants may not have realized it, were terms already employed in our language with far different meanings. Others were altogether dependent upon the correct pronunciation for their significance.

My search for the winner of the contest led me to seek a term that was not only new in every respect, but that would be formed with due regard to etymology and with a recognition of the fact that the chief agency in the relief of household drudgery is electricity. This word I found in Neoelectress, coined by Mrs. Ben D. Parker, of Abilene, Texas.

For second choice, I have selected the entry of Mrs. F. B. Probandt, of San Angelo, whose word is Domestician. My third choice is the entry of Mrs. W. B. Bourland, of Oklaunion, whose word is Homeologist. The remaining selections, in the order of my preferences, are attached hereto.

Very truly yours,

Charles Earle Funk
Charles Earle Funk.

The contest was successful because it attracted attention to the improved status of West Texas women. A thousand women specifically said they dislike the name "housewife." However, it is more difficult than we at first thought to find a suitable substitute.
But we like "Neoelectress" better the more we think about it. We hope you will. To all entrants we express sincere gratitude for their help. We only wish there could have been prizes enough to go all the way round!

Do you like "Neoelectress"? N-e-o means new. L-e-c-t-r-e-s-s has the feminine ending and suggests electricity. Taken together, the word suggests a modern home maker alert to this new electric age. Dr. Funk, in his letter, says "the chief agency in the relief of household drudgery is electricity." Thus, we define "neoelectress" as meaning "a modern woman freed of kitchen drudgery by Electric Servants." The name is being copyrighted with that definition.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field
FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Two distinct reversals in public sentiment, utterly unrelated, though both very human, have contributed to President Roosevelt's recent troubles with congress, and promise to make him a lot more trouble in the session to come.

One of these is nation-wide—the other southern. The former is much easier to understand. It is another evidence of that age-old trait of human nature illustrated by the old rhyme:

"The devil was sick, the devil a monk would be.
The devil got well, the devil a monk was he."

When President Roosevelt went into office the country was sick, economically. The chief criticism of the administration he supplanted was that it had floundered along, instead of doing something to correct a bad situation. So the voters were willing to try anything. When Roosevelt came into power, and began doing things in a spectacular way, he aroused enthusiasm. He continued to arouse it for at least two years before there was really a whisper of protest from the folks who had been pleased in the beginning.

Unquestionably there were some defections from his supporters during the second two years, but these were much more than replaced by the people who had come to be dependent on the federal spending policies, both as to farm and work relief, so that his popular victory in 1936 not only exceeded that of 1932, but the congressional election of 1934 as well.

But the dissenters have been growing in number. The emergency having passed, they began to chafe at the continuance of what they had hailed earlier as remedies. During the 1936 campaign the Republicans tried their best to make the people tax conscious. They harped on the pay-roll deduction taxes, and the hidden taxes, and so on until the voters got sick of hearing about it. Certainly the Republicans got nowhere with the issue.

Revolt Likely to Grow

In the first place, the voters did not believe them. In the second, the idea of an emergency was still present. There was not any general conviction that the hard times were definitely over.

But since January all the little employers, especially the lads in the small towns, have been paying those security taxes. So have the workers. And nobody likes to pay taxes.

More important, with the passage of the months since last November has come a general feeling that the emergency has passed. Along with this conviction is a growing feeling that the country would have recovered anyhow, without the drastic Roosevelt cure. Those who feel this way—those who have changed their views since last November—are probably a very small minority of the entire people. Even added to the people who voted against Roosevelt last November, they almost beyond question are in the minority. Most political observers still think that Roosevelt has a majority following in the country.

But the folks who have changed are in evidence everywhere. They are known to their senators and representatives. The mail reaching Capitol hill speaks no uncertain language about the change. To all this in the South is added the fact that party loyalty, and even stronger dislike of the very word "Republican," has made any thought of insurgency unlikely. Then, due to farm benefits, etc., there was a general feeling for the first time since the Civil war the South was getting something from Washington.

The revolt seems more likely to grow than to fade.

Turn Conservative

Significance of the fact that twenty-two Democratic senators voted to recommit the wages and hours regulation bill is more obvious than the deductions to be made about opposition to President Roosevelt on the Supreme court enlargement bill, but the two things are down the same alley.

There are exceptions, of course, such as the fact that Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana was against the President on the court and for him on wages and hours regulation. Most of the Democratic senators who opposed the President on either issue had the same motive. They want to curb the New Deal phases of the administration. They want to force the Democratic party back into more conservative policies and principles. They want to force the nomination of some one more conservative than Roosevelt in 1940, and they want a much more conservative platform than the Brain Trust wing would favor.

There has been a most interesting swing of Southern Democrats just in the last few weeks. Some of the most radical of them suddenly found out something about their constituents. Notable among the spectacular reversals of form have been Senator Hugo L. Black of Alabama, and Representative John E. Rankin of Mississippi.

Not Surprising

Which might not be surprising, Alabama being regarded mostly as a very conservative state, economically and socially, except that Senator Black has been the nemesis of the princes of privilege right from the day the Roosevelt administration came into power in 1933. It was Black who fought so vigorously for the death sentence in the public utility holding company bill, and who obtained rather a reputation as a snooper during the seizure of private telegrams episode.

Mr. Rankin has held firmly in an anti-privately owned utility position several laps ahead of Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska and a few more ahead of President Roosevelt all the way through the New Deal administration so far.

Both have had some very disturbing communications from back home. They have found that many of their influential supporters were far from enthusiastic about the New Deal. They have discovered that attacking the Morgans and the big northern utilities was one thing, but that forcing little manufacturers down in their home states to pay higher wages and grant shorter hours was something else again.

Senator Ellison D. Smith (Cotton Ed) of South Carolina voiced the opinion of a great many southerners when he intimated that the administration, in regulating wages and hours, was attempting to deprive the South of the natural advantages that God had given it, and that the mental attitude of the New Deal would seem to require them to hold God to strict accountability for such unfairness!

The South figures that it has a certain economic advantage in cheaper living costs, and it proposes to hold on to them!

Puzzles Labor Men

Just why President Roosevelt referred newspaper men the other day to the British trades unions act as something worthy of study is puzzling some of his labor advisers no end. Most of the clearest thinkers among them want no part of it. Some phases of it they regard as unnecessary in this country. Other phases they think would be utterly unacceptable to employers.

The Scandinavian plan appeals much more to the particular group in question, including Edward F. McGrady. The assistant secretary of labor is fond of pointing out to friends that you don't hear anything about strikes in Norway and Sweden.

So far as the British plan is concerned, in practical working conditions the industry against which a strike is leveled shuts down until the strike is settled. No attempt is made by employers to put scabs to work, or for that matter to operate at all. Just the reverse, of course, of what has to happen when there is a general strike, and what did happen in England when a general strike was tried.

The present British law forbids a general strike, but, as the young labor experts here point out, that sort of prohibition is unnecessary here for the simple reason that there is no possibility of a general strike. No labor leader of importance favors the idea. Practically every one of them would refuse to co-operate.

The feature of the Scandinavian labor policy that appeals most to some of these young labor experts is that it provides for collective bargaining by industries, and on a country-wide basis. Applied to the recent motor strikes, it would have worked in this way. The motor employees would have served notice on the manufacturers that they wanted this, or that. They would have insisted on dealing with all the manufacturers at once, and concluding one bargain for pay, hours and working conditions for all.

Thus there would have been no differentials out of which some think one motor company has a slight advantage over others in its labor costs and general efficiency.

Expect It to Help

Just how those advocating this plan would have handled Henry Ford in the recent situation is an unanswered question.

Labor leaders think that the wages and hours bill, especially after it has been modified a few times, which they confidently expect, is going to prove a great help with a certain type of employer in labor troubles.

The kind of thing that makes the labor leaders very low in mind indeed is what happened, to cite a recent case, on the Fall River line, where the steamship line simply suspended operation after the walk-out and stayed suspended.

Of course this is an unusual case. Far more usual is the case of an employer who closes down where he has been operating, and then after a while, moves to some other community and resumes business, usually at lower wages and longer hours than he was giving his employees before the strike.

Is Overweight Important?

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON

THOSE of normal weight and many also who are overweight may have the opinion that too much importance is being attached to overweight—its dangers to health and life. If they were to talk for just five minutes to the actuary of any life or sickness insurance company they would learn some startling facts because insurance companies make or lose money on the types or kinds of risks they accept.

One of the first facts the insurance company actuary will point out is the great amount of diabetes among the overweight. He will back this up by showing the figures of Dr. E. P. Joslin, Boston, the outstanding authority on diabetes, who tells us that diabetes is the result or penalty of overweight.

The figures for the death rate of forty-five years is as follows: The percent of overweight to death rate is as follows: five to fourteen, twice the normal rate; fifteen to twenty-four, four times the normal rate; twenty-five and over, ten times the normal rate. These figures tell in most dramatic fashion the penalty for overweight.

As you know, the commonest cause of death after middle age is disease of the heart, bloodvessels and kidneys, because the heart and bloodvessels have the hard work of carrying a large quantity of nourishment to the kidneys to have wastes or poisons filtered out and useful substances retained. Now high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, and defective work by the kidneys all accompany overweight, and the simplest method of relieving unnecessary strain is to reduce the weight and size of the patient. Thus when an individual gets down to, or nearly to, normal weight his chances of developing heart, bloodvessel and kidney disease becomes very much less.

British Expert's Views

Dr. Herbert I. Coombs in the British Medical Journal, in pointing out the importance of overweight in addition to diabetes, heart, bloodvessel and kidney disease, tells us that "arthritis—inflammation of joints—is one of the commonest diseases encountered by the general practitioner, and it is almost always associated with overweight."

Another point brought out by Dr. Coombs, and one that is likely to be overlooked, is the great change in mentality or outlook with the increase in weight. It is generally agreed that overweighters are rather cheerful and good natured but after a period of time this good nature of the slightly overweight degenerates into lack of ambition and a "don't care" attitude toward anything and everything.

Still another point, and one familiar to every physician is the bad surgical results that often follow operations on very fat patients. "Mechanical difficulties of nursing heavy patients and the increased risk of infection when large masses of fat tissue are exposed when the knife is used, are often important factors in working against recovery of overweighters who come to operation for gall stone, diabetic gangrene, and other conditions."

Causes of Diarrhoea.

Figures from private and public hospital clinics show that at least three of four give a history of being constipated. Although these people are on their feet and are not sick enough to be in bed, they can hardly be considered normal.

However, even among those who are normal or not sick, it would appear that at least half, or 50 per cent, are constipated.

It is interesting therefore to read of the other type of cases, that is those who do not appear to be sick, but instead of being constipated are afflicted with diarrhoea.

Of course at times when much fruit is eaten or when something "not fresh" has been eaten, diarrhoea often occurs, lasting for two or more days. But when diarrhoea is present all the time and no excess or over-ripe fruit or other food has been eaten, then the cause must be found to prevent the weakening effects of the diarrhoea.

Dr. A. Richieri, Buenos Aires, in the Argentine Medical Journal, states that diarrhoea occurs very often in all forms of hyperthyroidism, (that is when the thyroid gland in the neck is manufacturing too much juice).

As there may be no other symptoms but the diarrhoea (no great increase in heart rate, no enlargement of the thyroid gland, no bulging of the eyes, no trembling or nervousness), it would be difficult to locate the cause as due to an overactive thyroid gland except for the metabolism test.

Crochet Her a Chic Little Dress

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ONE, two, three!—here they are, a trio of pretty little crocheted frocks worn by a trio of pretty little girls as pictured. And do little folk of feminine gender love the dresses that dotting mothers and big sisters crochet for them! Well, just show this picture to wee daughter or sister or niece or little girl neighbor and we wager that their opinion on the subject will make elders seek crochet hooks, yarns and books of instructions instant, forthwith and without delay.

These cunning frocks are supposed to be party dresses—that's the way the designers thereof listed them on fashion's program, but for our part charming as any one of them would be to wear to a party, we believe your little girl will be wanting to wear her crochet dress every day. Why not? The idea of general wear will be found perfectly practical, workable and demonstrable for it is crocheted of fast dye mercerized cotton yarn that washes like new and is so much easier to launder than a dress that has to be ironed each time. Serviceable, too—almost no wear-out to it!

Speaking of smart styling in crochet fashions for little folks, never have professionals paid so much attention to this angle as during recent years. The result speaks for itself in the three models pictured. There is the charmingly styled princess worn by little Miss Six-Year-Old (possibly she may be seven); anyway the dress shown to the left reaches a new high in swank so far as children's fashions are concerned. It is crocheted of mercerized cotton, and we leave it to you to visualize it in the color your little girl happens to like best. It has puff sleeves as stylish as can be and is buttoned all the way down the front with crocheted buttons a la smartest mode. It really does not take long to crochet this dress and it is delightful pick-up work to inspire you to "improve each shining hour."

Little Two-Year-Old, who stands

centered in the foreground, has on a fluffy-ruffle type of dress with bows on the shoulders and a ribbon run through the waistline of the very full skirt. It is just the sort of be-ribboned dress that makes an adorable child look more so. Why not make two of 'em, one for Sunday-go-to-meetin' dress and one for everyday service?

Party days for a small girl mean ribbons and lace, cambric tea and ice cream and cake. What could be nicer to wear at such festive times than the lacy dress which the cunning youngster to the right is wearing? It is crocheted of delicate mercerized cotton quite to this miniature queen's taste, you may rest assured. It will also prove a boon to mother for it is dependably serviceable for all its fragile appearance, will wash, of course, and all that has to be done is to pull the lacy crochet into shape here and there carelessly with your fingers—doesn't require the least mite of ironing.

Here's a suggestion or two to mothers who are making over dresses for little daughter's play and school wear. Leading Paris couturiers are combining crochet and various materials. The idea would work out admirably in "fixing over" children's clothes. A cloth or sturdy linen dress that needed lengthening could be made attractive by adding desired inches of plain crochet done either in the identical shade of the fabric it is to trim or contrasting it. Make a matching crochet belt of the mercerized cotton and carry out the idea further with crochet buttons and perhaps decorative pockets of the crochet.

NEW SLEEK BLACKS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

To all appearances much is "going black before the eyes" of fashion. At any rate there is nothing in the way of a frock so outstanding in early fall style showings as sleek black gowns of either gleaming satin or of slinky, slenderizing, flattering-to-the-figure jersey which may be either a pure silk weave or of synthetic texture. The vogue for this type of frock is pronounced. Deft drape effects predominate in the fashioning of these stylish all-black gowns somewhat after the manner pictured. Top them with a tall draped toque or one as shown.

NEW FABRIC TRENDS FOR AUTUMN SEASON

Trends in the silks and rayons which Paris fabric houses have prepared for the fall costume collections:

New plain silks have a softer, more velvety touch, a duller surface than before.

Rayons of intricate weaving are dull, pebbled, "crushed," have fine matelasse patterns. Ottoman ribs, plain or fancy, and many novelty surfaces obtained by uneven yarns.

Serge or twill weaves appear in delicate silks or rich metals.

Neon lights have inspired a whole group of lames made with colored metal yarn, also new changeable, mosaic, cashmere and jewel effects using the same colored metal.

Novelty velvets are made with pile that is completely dull or has only a medium luster. Also with printed gold backs or satin backs.

Metals and lames are finely patterned or quite plain, elaborate in texture and often have small Paisley, Persian, Byzantine, Oriental and Eighteenth century designs.

Capes Replace Jackets in Early Ensembles for Fall

First autumn ensembles often replace coats or jackets by capes, and are trimmed with sleek, flat furs. One such is Martial and Armand's three-piece costume of brown wool, already ordered by several smart women. The skirt features front fullness and is topped by a leopard gilet which shows beneath a hip-length circular case of the brown wool finished with a tiny flat collar of leopard skin that is knotted under the chin.

Pleats for Autumn

Autumn will be a season to wear box-pleated numbers with built-up waistlines, and the newest manner of raising a waistline is to build the skirt up at the sides only.

TWO DOWN!!

More than 30,000 paid admissions crowded into Wrigley field, Los Angeles, to witness a benefit ball game between Joe E. Brown's Hollywood comedians and Robert Taylor's Leading Men. During the second inning, the comedy team of Mitchell and Durant insisted on coming up to bat as a combine. Durant on the shoulders of his husky partner. The first ball thrown was hit by Mitchell, who promptly spilled his "excess baggage" and headed out for first base. What transpired, at the first stop, is shown below:

With full steam ahead and shirt-tail behind, pinch-hitter Mitchell reaches first base—followed through by Durant's safe HIT.

Taking no chances with technicalities, Mitchell insists that his partner touch the bag.

This causes a slight argument as to why all of this valuable time should be wasted, when they could be running for—second base. The baseman seems to have dropped the ball—

All the same," chimed in Mrs. Towers, "it's Mr. Cayne who knows what they've got. He'd miss a dish-rag if it disappeared irregular." Towers made a warning sign. "He's got a keen eye, Mr. Cayne, that's a fact. Well, Rachel, I guess I better show you the bedrooms. The missis and I have got to get at that stack of dishes in the pantry." Mr. Cayne's room communicated with his wife's, it was done in black and white and Jacobean linen, heavy and severe. Rachel noticed that there was only one mirror, a relief from Mrs. Cayne's bewildering panels. Then into Holbrook's room, which looked like a girl's—furniture painted white, a gray rug, rose-colored curtains. But there were shelves full of books and Rachel would have liked to read the titles, for these were the only books she had seen in the apartment. Under Towers' direction she folded the bedcovers, laid out slippers, pajamas and dressing gowns, lit bedside lamps. Holbrook had pale gray pajamas piped with rose. Oriental sandals and a dark rose-red brocade robe—Towers sniffed as he displayed them. "His mother likes him to 'doll up' like that," he commented, "not that he needs any encouraging." Mr. Cayne's pajamas were cotton, his dressing gown a worn and weary dark wool. While they were in his room he came to the door. "Is that the new maid, Bert?" he said. "I want to speak to her a minute."

sides, I've seen the bank books. Lena showed them to me and urged me to begin to save, too. They're really sweet, Curt, they're all concerned over my poverty and thriftlessness. We get along awfully well. And you ought to see me in my uniforms—gray poplin in the morning and a nifty gray taffeta in the afternoon, with a little tricky dotted swiss apron and collars and cuffs. If I had a long-handled duster I could go on the stage and sing in musical comedy. And my manner is marvelous. 'Yes, madame, no, madame, of course you're right, madame.' When I leave I'm going to get my picture taken in my afternoon outfit. Vinco could sell it to somebody who makes maids' uniforms for a bunch of money." "I notice that neither your appearance nor your ego has suffered. Apparently you're the belle of the servants' hall. So why all that wail about returning to sanity and a strange household?" Rachel armed herself with caution. "Maybe you're right about my never having had much experience. And then maybe it's because I'm looking at the Cayne family from within and beneath. But— they're all wrong. The son wants to be an artist and his father won't hear of it. The mother sides with the son and what I've noticed is was glad enough of this, for Pink's curiosity once aroused was as far-reaching and thorough as her enthusiasms and her opinions. Rachel sat still and seemed to listen while Pink sparkled and gestured, but she was busy with her own thoughts. The apartment's studied bareness and simple old furniture had never looked so good to her. "I had to learn that by contrast," she thought, "I took it for granted before. Like simple food and Pink's table manners and no heavy perfume about and Pink, even when she's raging, isn't thoughtless of other people's feelings. It all belongs together. Curt belongs, too. But most of all Anne. Curt was right, I've had no variety of experience. Well, I'm getting it now."

Terriss was in time, dry and blank as before. Pink gave him one look and came to instant decision. "I'm going over to the Steeles," she said. "Back about half past ten. What time do you have to check in at your job, Rachel?" "Before twelve. But Curt Elton—" "Oh—a date with Curt! Well, phone me at the Steeles and say good-by." A gleam in interest showed in Terriss' eyes as Pink departed. "That young lady is very full of pep," he commented; then recalling himself to business: "Go ahead, Miss Vincent, give me a general outline and I'll take up special points as they come along. Don't tell me what you think, but what you've actually seen and heard. You said over the phone the other day that the butler and cook both have bank accounts. How do you know?"

"Lena showed me their books. They're in the Bowery Savings bank. He has eight thousand and she has over six thousand. They've each got five thousand dollars' worth of government bonds; I saw those, too. They save practically all their wages. They each carry a thousand dollars' worth of straight life insurance to have real nice funerals, Lena said. I wrote down the numbers of the bank books after I'd seen them."

"Have they talked about the thefts?" "Towers not at all, Lena very little and when she does it's in hints about the disgrace of being wrongly suspicioned and how, if it wasn't for Mr. Cayne, they'd find another place. They simply worship Mr. Cayne. That I'm sure of."

"But they don't care so much for the missis, hey?" "No—I don't believe they do." "She's sharp with them, makes them stand around?" Rachel chose her words. "She requires a great deal of service and she doesn't realize how much work a few extra orders can make."

Terriss frowned. "Mr. Cayne may be easy for his help to work for, but he makes it hard enough for me. He wouldn't let me crack down on the servants, and he's never let me say a word to Mrs. Cayne nor the young man. Either of them ever speak of the thefts before you?"

"No, not a word. Mrs. Cayne is very careless with her jewelry, she has a great deal of it and leaves it about where anyone could pick up a piece or two. The little safe where it's supposed to be kept isn't locked half the time. Mr. Cayne showed it to me one day when she was out. It's a joke, you could open it with a bent pin."

"Do you think Mrs. Cayne even knows about the thefts? I asked Mr. Cayne, but he made me an answer that was neither yes or no, and showed that he didn't like the question. So I was stopped there."

"Why, I don't know, Mr. Terriss, I never thought but that Mrs. Cayne knew about them, but it's true—she might not."

"Has the son any intimate friends, any young fellow he pals around with who's at the house very often? Or has Mrs. Cayne got any of these female hangers-on that most rich women have, in and out, familiar, getting presents of her old dresses and the like?"

"Not that I've seen. The son's had young people in twice for cocktails, in the afternoon before his father got home. Mrs. Cayne goes out a good bit, but it's usually to some big beauty establishment, she's—she's awfully interested in keeping fit."

Terriss looked at Rachel with curiosity. "Does she and Mr. Cayne get along pretty good?" he asked. "They don't agree about the son, but I only get this second hand, Mr. Terriss, from what Towers and Lena say."

Terriss considered. "The son don't go to school?" "That's the trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Cayne. Mr. Cayne wants him to go to college or at least to a business school and he wants to go to an art school and his mother sides with him, so this winter he's gone nowhere. He's awfully spoiled."

"A rich brat, hey?" Terriss considered again. "If I could only talk plain man-to-man stuff with Mr. Cayne! But he won't stand for it. You're doing all right, Miss Vincent, you're not half as dumb as I'd expected. Now you fly at it for another week and concentrate on the family's friends, specially the boys. Get their names and addresses if you can, the names anyway. Don't let up on the servants either; they may be sicker than I think, and their having bankbooks don't prove anything. Ask 'em about pawnshops, tell 'em you've got something you want to hock, show 'em an old piece of jewelry or something to back it up. If they give you any names slip right out and phone me what they say. Ask the chauffeur and the laundress too. The whole four may be in cahoots. See if they've got any private phone numbers written down anywhere and copy 'em for me."

Then Rachel said something she had not meant to say, but which she knew, now, had underlain all her answers to his questions. "I don't like doing this, Mr. Terriss. I wish I needn't go back."

"That's what I've been expecting," said Terriss, slowly and gloomily. "I guessed all along it was just a kind of whim. Young people nowadays got no guts, they don't want to do a job thorough. Any little fancy they take it's a reason for quitting and letting you down. I've been leery of you all along, Miss Vincent, I didn't believe you could stand the gaff. But I did think you'd last longer than three weeks."

"I'm sorry—" she began, but he waved his hand and went on talking. "When I was young a job of work you undertook had to be finished, whether it was fun or not. Fun! I'm sick of the word. You thought all this would be a great big lot of fun and now you see there's some actual labor and thinking involved and that scares you. Okay, you can quit right now, in fact you'd better quit if you're that way."

"I didn't mean that," said Rachel, "I only meant—I wasn't looking for fun, and well—I've tried honestly to do what you want, but I don't think I'm any good at it, it seems so hopeless."

He was tremendously disturbed, his careful mask gone. "It's not hopeless at all. You're doing fine, didn't I tell you so? I didn't intend to speak so severe, Miss Vincent, but I was taken aback, and disappointed! I sized you up to have character! Yeah, character, and class! I realize you're not a trained operative, but you got sense! You got a good memory! You know how to get at people. Look at what you've done with that butler, and cook in this little time! Don't say you're quitting on me when you're doing so well."

that they don't sit down and drag all their thoughts and feeling to the surface the way my—mother—and I always did; they hide them and fight subterraneously, scoring infinitesimal points, or else they have raging arguments—and—oh well, it seems so petty and so unnecessary. And it gets them nowhere.

"It's a very usual situation, I should say. You're taking it too seriously. You're there to find out who stole the cigarette box and Mrs. Cayne's ring and not to practice amateur psychiatry. Why bother about the family quarrels?"

She turned the matter away lightly. "I don't really take it very seriously, Curt, but I'm there under their roof and Towers and his wife talk about them all the time and it does seem a pity."

"Lots of things are a pity. It's a great pity you won't have dinner and go to a show with me—there's something I could weep about."

"Go ahead and weep. I am sorry, but Pink and I are having dinner together and afterwards Terriss is coming so that I can report to him fully."

Curt chuckled. "You sound so important and Sherlockish! A full report oughtn't to take so long. How about it if I call up a little after nine? We could take in a late movie and split a herring at a night club. Don't you realize how much I've missed you?"

"How you flatter, mister! I'd love to gad around a bit, but there again—suppose I run into my esteemed employers and they see I'm leading a double life? Not so good."

"I'll call up anyway. You haven't any other date?" "No." She knew he was thinking of the man she had talked of wanting to evade. She had not seen Oliver Land nor heard from him since the night he had staged his trick to get money from her and she wondered what Curt would say if she told him about that.

He began to talk about other things and kept it up all the way down to the apartment. "Remember, I'll call you up about nine-thirty," he said as he left her, "and I'll find some place not infested with Caynes for us to go." Pink had just come in, she was on the crest of the wave, her immediate superior in her department was about to be transferred and Pink was heading for his place through a dire mesh of office politics and intrigue. She was far too absorbed in her own affairs to want to know about Rachel's and Rachel's

Percentage of Illiterates in Country in 1930 Totaled 4.3 of the Population

For the purpose of the United States census, an illiterate is a person who has reached the age of ten without being able to read and write in any language. On this basis the percentage of illiterates in this country in 1930 was 4.3 of the population. Nevertheless, the United States is probably one of the ten most literate of nations, although close to the bottom of the list. Germany ceased keeping statistics on illiteracy in 1913, when her male percentage as revealed by army recruits was .05. In Canada, according to the census of 1931, the percentage of illiterates in the whole population over 10 years was—unable to read or write, 3.79; able to read only, 0.47. The percentage unable to read or write is raised from 1 to 4 by races other than English-speaking. In France 8.89 per cent of army conscripts in 1924 were illiterate.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them! Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—1/16 inch—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Ask on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Shower

The ladies of the Baptist Church entertained Monday, Aug 30, at 4 o'clock in the home of Mrs. M. E. Wells, honoring Mesdames G. C. Heath and Dallas Milner, who are moving away.

The program theme was friendship. Mrs. Alewine gave an appreciation of Mrs. Milner and her family, stressing their loyalty to the church and community.

Mrs. Gein gave an appreciation of Mrs. Heath, as Mrs. Heath has been president of the Missionary Society for 2 years and very active in the T. E. L. Class. She also was paid high tribute.

We each felt that our loss was another's gain.

Both honorees were surprised when a shower of gifts was presented. Mrs. Heath, in her pleasing manner, expressed her thanks. Mrs. Milner, in a very charming manner, read "I'd Like to be the Sort of Friend You Have Always Been to Me", with few sweet words of love for her friends here. She invited each to visit her in her new home.

Mesdames Clyde Bridges and Bill Seales poured punch. Miss Nita Cuiwell left Saturday for Mercedes where she will teach again this year. She stopped off at Ft. Worth and Dallas for a few days visit.

Mrs. Hickman returned home from Borger where she has been at the bedside of a little granddaughter who has been quite ill.

Mrs. Joyce Armstrong and little daughter left Tuesday for Ft. Worth where they will make their home.

Study Clubs Entertain

One of the loveliest social functions of the season was given by the 1919 Study Club and the Junior Study Club honoring Miss Theresa Webb, in the home of Mrs. W. E. Burden, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The entertaining rooms were attractively decorated with garden flowers. Miss Oley Watkins and Mrs. Fred Watt served punch, cookies, and salted nuts from a beautifully appointed table laid with a large cut glass punch bowl and cups on a beautiful lace cloth with a centerpiece of seasonal flowers.

The program consisted of: Reading, Mrs. Hebert Moffitt; Scout Song, Girl Scout Troop; Piano solo, Humoresque, Mrs. Truman Caldwell.

Vocal solo, A Perfect Day, Mrs. Burden. An appreciation from the 1919 Study club, Mrs. Alva Simmons. An appreciation from the Junior Study club, Mrs. Ross Adamsen, who also presented the honoree with a beautifully bound volume of poems for her faithful service in club work.

Miss Webb, in her own unique manner, expressed her thanks. These seated were Mesdames Webb, Lamberson, Dishman, Caldwell, Ray Moreman, Moffitt, Simmons, Kinslow, Burden, Watt Adamsen, Thompson, Dudley, Ralph Moreman and Bentley, Misses Oley Watkins and the honoree, Theresa Webb. Also Joyce and Gloria Webb, June Kirkpatrick, Jane Ruth Hall, Geraldine Land, and Virginia Watt, Girl Scouts.

A Safety Tip FOR YOUR Labor Day Trip

TAPPING RUBBER TREES ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA

From the Firestone plantations in Liberia comes an ever-increasing supply of the world's finest rubber. Money saved here and in manufacturing and distribution enable Firestone to sell a safer, first-quality tire at lower prices.

DON'T take chances on your Labor Day trip. Protect yourself and family by equipping your car with a set of new first-quality Firestone Standard Tires. Firestone builds extra quality and extra safety into these tires and sells them at lower prices because Firestone controls rubber and cotton supplies at their sources, manufactures with greater efficiency and distributes at lower cost.

PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS — 8 extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the patented Gum-Dipping process.

PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES — because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING — because the tread is scientifically designed.

LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE — because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires.

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON SMOOTH WORN TIRES!

DO YOU KNOW THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children?

THAT a million more were injured?

THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to smooth, worn, unsafe tires?

Section of new Firestone Tire. Note deep grooves and sipes which are able to punctures, blowouts and skidding.
