Mrs. J. G. McDougal

Mrs J G McDougal succumbed in a hospital at Memphis Tuesday afternoon where she spent her last few days trying to regain her health.

As a pioneer she had followed the frontiers of West Texas with her preserher father, coming further west as the frontiers were pushed back by white settlements. Her father was the late Rev J L Pyle, who organized the Baptist church at old Rowe. Her mother died when she was born.

As a companion and mother this fine woman took active interest in making a home for the family and shared the hardships of the farm and ranch without murmuring. As a friend she was loyal and devoted and shared the friendships of all who knew her. They believed in her. As a Christian Mrs McDougal was not a formalist but a loyal supporter of her church and gave of her time, means and influence cheerfully and whole heartedly to its success. She taught a class in Sunday School for more than a quarter of a century.

It was said of her that perhaps she touched more lives for good than any other person in the Hedley community. To her the Bible was the Word of God and she loved and read it a great deal and was comforted by its promises so much during her late illness. Her whole life appeared to be motivated by the Savior whom she embraced while quite young. Thus as she put first things first she was enabled to adjust her life to all other relations and problems without conflict.

The last days of her life were spent for the most part in suffering. She loved life and wanted to get well, but all that her companion and other loved ones could do for her, all that medical skill and modern surgery could provide, failed in the end to restore her health and she fell asleep and passed to her reward. Funeral services were conducted from the First Baptist Church Wednesday afternoon led by her pastor, M E Wells, who was assisted by Bro Osborn and Bro Denison. Interment was made in Rowe cemetery to await the resurrection.

School to Open Aug. 29

The administration of the local schools is anxious to have as many patrons as possible out for the opening of school on the morning of August 29. The opening program will be devoted mainly to talks by persons representing the six different school districts which will be interested in the local high school. Approximately forty eight pupils from Bray, McKnight, Giles, Smith and Fairview will enroll in the high school and effort will be made to have a representative from each of these districts to make a few remarks during the opening exercises. A representative of the Hedley district will have a few words and G. W. Kavanaugh, County Superintendent, will speak.

The opening program will be completed in time for the registration of all pupils during the morning. Buses will return the children to their homes by late noon.

Will you not come and meet your child's teacher and join in with good neighbors?

Hedley Bank Will Be 25 Years Old Next Tuesday

Next Tuesday, August 23, the Security State Bank will be in operation 25 years. They would appreciate you visiting them that day and they will have a souvenir of the occasion for each person who comes in the bank.

On the 21st day of June, 1913, a charter was granted under the name of Guaranty State Bank of Hedley, and on the 28rd day of August, 1913, this bank first opened its doors. The officers were J G McDougal, President; W B Quigley, Vice President; T T Harrison, Cashier; and C D Akers, Assistant Cashier. Of the original officers, J G McDougal, the president, is the only one who has continuously served for the twenty five years, in point of service, Mr. McDougal being among the oldest bank presidents in Texas.

Mr. Quigley served as Vice President, though not active, until his death in 1935.

Mr Harrison, the original cashier, remained with the bank until 1917 and was followed by J D Swift who remained with the bank until 1919 when J W Noel, the present Active Vice President took over the job as Cashier. O L Johnson the present Cashier was elected in 1930 when Mr. Noel was promoted to Active Vice President; Mr. Johnson having served the bank as book keeper and Asst. Cashier since 1919.

Since Mr Akers resigned in 1916 among the Assistant Cashiers are H C Cooper, T O Lively, Robert Read, Mrs. Lola Acord, Ansel Adamson and Mrs. Leon Reeves. Mrs. Reeves is the present bookkeeper, having taken the place of Mrs. Floyd Naylor this year. Mrs. Reeves having worked in the bank most of the time since 1927.

In 1927 the name of the bank was changed to the Security State Bank of Hedley Texas. At that time the capital of the Bank had been raised to $25 000 00 from the original $15,000 00 to meet the growing needs of the community.

In 1929 the Security State Bank purchased the assets of the First State Bank of Hedley and consolidated the two institutions raising the capital to $35 000 00. The Bank now has a capital of $35 000 00, Capital Debentures of $20 000 00, Surplus of $5 500 00 and Profits of $6,871 27 making a total Capital structure of $67,371 27 which enables it to take care of any needs of the community.

This Bank in its 25 years of existence has gone through droughts and floods has seen 4 and 47 cent cotton, has gone through war, depression and bank holiday and has always kept its policy to take care of the needs of Hedley and its community to the best of its ability.

The Bank appreciates your friendship and welcomes your business, realizing as you and the community prosper, so shall they.

We now have a full line of school supplies on hand. Come in and get your supplies before school starts. We have loose leaf binders with the Hedley Owl inscription. Come in and look them over.

25 Years of Service

On August 23rd, just 25 years ago this week, the Security State Bank opened for business. Since that time much water has gone over the dam. Depressions, wars, presidents, have come and gone. The bank and the community have survived them all. We could not have done so without loyal customers who saved their money here, borrowed their money here and used our other services.

And so to our friends old and new and to those whose friendship we hope to make, we dedicate ourselves to another 25 years of service to your interests. Undoubtedly the next quarter-century will bring greater happiness and greater prosperity to us all.

"If you remember when the electric refrigerator first came into general usage, then you know how utterly happy women were over the way it preserved food and provided ice cubes. It simplified kitchen labor. The health problem was greatly solved. But it was only the beginning of the great service Electricity was destined to render. Today every other home served by your West Texas Utilities Company has an electric refrigerator. Every seventh home has an electric range. Over 30,000 have electric irons. Nearly 40,000 have good light, many in isolated communities where power lines were built without hope that they might ever become profitable. you think birling is a game, if you think it's play to stand on a submerged pine log, churning in the water, then think again. You're going to slip, stumble, trip and fall, landing face down in an icy pond while some wisecracking spectator yells—

YOU'RE ALL WET!

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Chips aren't flying so fast these days from the axes of north woods lumberjacks. Between strokes you'll find them talking about a sport called birling (log-rolling to you) and the world championship birling contest to be held at Escanaba, Mich., August 12 to 14.

Nothing is easier than falling off a log. Nor is anything harder than standing on one, especially when it's half submerged in a pond of water and somebody else is on the other end, trying to push you off.

Here's a nimble-footed art that makes toe dancing look like an old man's game. It's strange, surely, that log rollers can be seasoned lumberjacks, big-boned men with heavy shoes who should be more at home on dry land than tripping the light fantastic on a slippery log.

Part of the Job. But they aren't birlers by choice. Lumberjacks discovered long ago that to keep your job in the north woods you've got to have a knack for this apparently senseless business.

In the days when legendary Paul Bunyan was a youngster in knee trousers, lumberjacks first rolled their logs into the river and nursed them downstream to the sawmill. Usually the drive went smoothly, the churning waters carrying millions of feet of timber down to the doorway of civilization. But now and then some obstruction would cause the logs to pile up and it was the birlers' job to skip out under the face of this menacing jam, find the key log, jerk it loose and get back to dry land before he was crushed to death.

With a roar like the collapse of a 10-story building, the jam would loosen itself and go thundering downstream. If the birlers were skilled—and lucky—he would skip over the swaying carpet and get out of danger; if luck or skill failed, he might meet a horrible death between crushing, splintering logs.

Smart lumberjacks soon discovered that it was pretty good life insurance to practice log rolling in their spare time. When the day's labors were finished or the logs had been delivered to the mill, they found a postman's holiday in competing with one another to determine who was "the best man on the log."

Annual Summer Event.

That was the start of competitive birling, a sport that is at once tripping and red-blooded. In a land where the heyday of lumbering has long since disappeared, a few enthusiasts have kept birling alive, gathering annually from the far-flung outposts of their primitive north woods to vie for the championship. There are veterans who remember the invincible Tom Fleming and Al Hubbard who reached their peak in 1898. They remember Big Joe Madwayosh, the husky Indian woodsman who won the title in 1924. They still watch Wilbur Marx, the child prodigy of yesteryears who tossed "Big Joe" into the pond when a boy of 14 summers.

But they cannot believe that birling has become a college boys' sport. So they'll converge at Escanaba from every north woods settlement this year to watch some real lumberjack defeat Joe Connor, the twenty-six-year-old University of Minnesota student who won the crown last year.

Considering its barrel-chested heritage, birling should not be a college boys' sport. But the modern birling match finds veteran rivermen struggling to retain their laurels against lads who never worked on a log drive, who never pulled the key log from a jam. The practical side of birling is foreign to younger rollers but they know the rules of the game which is all that concerns the judges.

The Battle Begins.

And modern birling does have definite rules. A round, smooth and perfectly turned white pine log, 13½ feet long, and measuring all the way from 16 to 18 inches in diameter, is put in the water. Two men wearing light calked shoes mount the log, one at each end.

Then comes the battle, a tempestuous warfare of churning pine in which each man, by spinning and snubbing the tricky log, tries to throw the other into the water. With bewildering speed the timber whirls and stops, then starts the other way. From the river bank spectators see an exhibition of perfect balance, timing and muscular co-ordination. But eventually one man topples and splashes into the creek. As in wrestling, two falls out of three constitute a match.

Birling has flourished since the nineties without the aid of a promoter. But it was not until the lumbermen's exposition at Omaha in 1898 that it became organized as an annual national event. That was the year Tom Fleming defeated Al Hubbard in the final match. In 1900, 1901 and 1902 the tourney was held at Ashland, Wis., after which it was abandoned. In 1914 William P. Hart, Wisconsin sportsman, revived it at Eau Claire.

Birling's Child Prodigy.

Big Joe Madwayosh won his first crown in 1924 and on the sidelines that year was thirteen-year-old Wilbur Marx who decided birling looked easy. He came back the next year to provide the tournament sensation by almost defeating "Big Joe," racing him off the log after 21½ minutes of breathless birling in the second round.

When the next year's tournament opened Marx was again present, merely fifteen years old, but now a well-muscled, seasoned athlete instead of an awkward boy. Losing a third round elimination match in the northwest titular tourney steadied him and he won the Wisconsin state title without difficulty. Twenty-six of the most accomplished log cutters in the game were entered for the world's title and young Marx defeated four of them in swift succession, winning his way through the first, second and third rounds of elimination and the semi-finals.

Then he faced little Billy Girard of Gladstone, Mich., in the final match. Too eager, too confident, he made the mistake of thinking himself speedier than Girard and "Little Billy" raced him off the log for straight falls in the fastest match that has ever been rolled. Feet trod so fast they could hardly be seen; spiked shoes chewed the logs to slivers; "white water" splashed the contestants' legs and both birlers were almost continually on the verge of a wetting.

On to Victory.

But Marx was a steadier birlers the next year and he could not be stopped. At sixteen he won the world's championship against a score of veteran log rollers. He held it 10 years.

But last year the college boy from Minnesota came along and Marx, whom the old time lumberjacks had at last taken to their hearts, lost his title. To what depths has this sport fallen!

This year Marx says he'll regain the championship and the bearded birlers from the northwoods are wishing a real jam-breaking logger would appear to teach all these young upstarts a lesson. But Joe Connor, the college boy, has been spending the summer at a CCC camp making his legs tough and preparing to take on all comers.

Maybe Joe Connor will be defeated, but even then the plaid-shirted lumberjacks won't be completely happy. At last year's Escanaba tournament they rubbed their eyes with amazement and chagrin to see four girl birlers engage in a contest of their own. A few old timers admitted the women showed a speed and style that equalled or surpassed the skill shown by a lot of the semi-finalists in the men's tourney.

Their only consolation, it appeared, was in the memory of Paul Bunyan, patron saint of all log rollers. Paul's wife, the story goes, was the only one able to wet him in a birling match!

Cool, Slim-Waisted Frocks

THESE last few hot weeks will be a whole lot easier to bear if you have some fresh new dresses to wear around the house—cool, slim-waisted styles that are finished enough for shopping and porch wear too. We've picked out two that we know you'll like, one for slim figures and one for large. Both are very, very easy to make, for of course nobody wants to undertake laborious sewing these days. And both are easy to wash and iron. A detailed sew chart comes with each pattern.

Day Frock for Slim Figures. This little dress is right at the top of new fashions, with its gored skirt and shaped square neckline. Notice that the skirt seams are extended above the waistline, to give a little bosom fullness, which makes the dress more becoming. Very short kimono sleeves, just covering the shoulders, give a much prettier line than sleeveless frocks do, and they're just as cool. The skirt has a charming flare. Make this in linen, dotted Swiss, dimity or organdie in a pretty flower print, and you'll love it.

Day Frock for Large Figures. You'll find this straight, well-cut dress one of the most becoming, most slenderizing, you ever put on. It has a deep v-neck and short pleated sleeves for coolness and comfort. It's very easy and unhampering in line, so that you can work in it comfortably. Darts on the shoulders and at the waistline give it an unusually trim, slimming fit. A touch of prettiness is added by ricrac braid and the pointed closing. This is a diagram design that you can make in a few hours, and you'll want several dresses made just like this—in dimity, calico, percale and seersucker.

1558 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material; 9 yards of ribbon or braid to trim.

1533 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material. 1½ yards of ricrac braid to trim.

Success in Sewing.

Success in sewing, like success in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. To help you turn out clothes professional looking in every detail, we have a book which plainly sets forth the simple rules of home dressmaking. The beginner will find every step in making a dress clearly outlined and illustrated within its covers. For the experienced sewer there are many helpful hints and suggestions for sewing short cuts. Send 15 cents (in coins) today for your copy of SUCCESS IN SEWING, a book every home dressmaker will find of value.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HAVE your door space going to waste? There is always the inside of a closet door—even in the tiniest apartment. A pocket like the one shown here gives a place for shoes, whisk broom, hat brush, shoe brush and even a dust cloth to have within easy reach when tidying up the bedroom. A large pocket at the bottom takes care of small pieces of laundry.

This door pocket may be made from 2½ yards of 35-inch-wide cotton material. All the dimensions as well as suggestions for making are given here in the diagram.

There are other doors in every house where pockets of various types and sizes may be used to good advantage. The broom closet door offers a place for cleaning brushes and bottles of furniture polish. Two large pockets on the pantry door—one for clean dish towels and one for soiled ones, have been in use in my kitchen for years. A large pocket of heavy ticking on the inside of the door leading to the basement makes a place for old newspapers that are so useful for many purposes. Pockets on the inside of a door leading to the attic often make a place to keep small cleaning equipment. And here is another thought—even a small wall space in your closet may be used for a

All Is Fair Even If It Is a Dog's Life

He was a pork butcher, and he and his sausages had done very well indeed in the town—until a rival came along and, by undercutting and pushful publicity, started to take all the trade.

Butcher No. 1 was sitting in his shop musing on what the inside of a poorhouse would look like, when a bright idea suddenly struck him.

Changing his clothes as quickly as he could, he hurried to his competitor's shop and, elbowing his way through the crowd of customers, planted a dead dog on the counter.

"Ere y'are, Jack," he exclaimed in a loud voice. "That makes the dozen."

"Why, yes, was there a rumor I had been sick?" Jeff drawled.

"Have you seen Father? He hurried ahead of us to help you."

"No, but I've heard him. Listen."

Three times a revolver barked.

"Sounds like it was up at the head of the street, somewhere near the Golden Nugget," Bob said.

He had guessed accurately. The bullets from that gun had been fired by Norris into the body of Sperm Howard.

"We'd better find your father, first off," Gray said. "He was fighting near the Ransom house half an hour ago. We might take a look over that way."

"My sister is here, too. I want to make sure she's all right."

They moved through the cottonwoods, Gray riding behind Bob. In the shadowy moonlight they caught sight of men approaching.

Gray shouted, "Who goes there?"

The voice of Chiswick answered, "That will be near enough, if you're not looking for trouble."

"We're L C men, Father," Bob cried. "Bob—and Pat—and the others."

Someone in Lee's party let out a yell of delight. In another moment the two groups had mingled.

"You have a wounded man," Jeff said, looking down at a form stretched on a door.

"You should know it, boy," a voice answered. "You were there when I got the pill."

Jeff Gray found himself trembling. He swung from back of Bob and walked forward. For an instant he had not been sure this was not a voice from the dead.

"Is it you, Hank?" he asked. "I thought—"

"Sure it's me. Chiswick and his lads got to the cabin in time to save me."

They carried the blacksmith to the Presnall house and put him into the room next the one occupied by Curly Connor.

Ruth showed up, white-faced.

"Who has been hurt?" she asked.

"Hank Ransom. If you can't sleep, you can stay with Hank and kind nurse him," Chiswick told his daughter. "Can't afford to leave a man. We're liable to be mighty busy when day breaks, and that will be right soon. Our friends from the W J M and the Lazy B ought to be here early. We'll have from twenty to thirty men."

"Is there going to be a fight?" she asked Gray in a low voice.

He answered gravely, "Up to them."

"You mean—a battle?"

"Not if I can help it. If we're strong enough the outlaws will give way. But I mean to capture Howard, Norris, Duke, Mile High, and two or three others. They are desperate men. I wouldn't expect them to surrender tamely."

"They may run away."

"Then I'll have to run after them. Don't worry. He smiled at her warmly. "This job is almost done."

The headquarters of the outlaws were at the Golden Nugget, the cowboys concentrated in the cottonwood grove across the street from Ma Presnall's boarding-house. Since the break of day there had been no firing. Both sides waited. A general battle in the streets would mean the death of a dozen men. Neither party wanted that.

Gray called Chiswick aside. "I'm going up with a white flag to the Golden Nugget. Any minute something is liable to start. We can't have that."

"They'll shoot you down sure," the cattleman protested at once.

"I don't think so," the officer demurred. "Howard doesn't want any massacre. He knows that won't buy him anything."

"What you going to tell them?"

"I'm going to tell them the truth—that I want Howard, Norris, and some of the others. The rest aren't in it. When they know that, the ones we don't want will melt away. They aren't in a sweat to buck the United States government."

"I'll go with you."

"I'd rather you didn't."

"Some of the boys will listen to me who wouldn't pay any attention to you. Five or six of them have worked for me."

"This is my bear-fight."

"It's mine too," Chiswick insisted. "We're busting up the gang that have been rustling my stock."

Jeff gave up with a shrug. He knew Chiswick could not be talked out of a position he had taken. He did not need to mention how great the risk was. The cattleman knew that.

After giving directions to Dan Brand, who was left in command of the cowboy forces, the two men walked up the street toward the enemy. Jeff waved a white handkerchief.

Yorky called from the door of the gambling-house to ask them what they wanted.

"Want to see Sperm Howard," Gray said.

From doors and windows up and down the street on both sides they could see men peering at them. Mile High came into the open.

"You can't see Sperm. He's dead."

Chiswick stared at the lank puncher. "Dead?"

"That's what I said."

This was stunning news. Jeff had depended upon Howard. Villain though the man was, he was a shrewd and wily schemer who used his brains. Sperm knew that wholesale killing in the open would be fatal to his cause. It would be his policy to avoid it and depend upon trickery to escape later. If it was true that he was dead, his influence against explosive violence would be lost. The marshal felt as does a man who has walked into a den of lions under a safeguard from the trainer, to discover too late that the man with the whip is not at hand to defend him.

In the air there was an electric tension such as that which just precedes a storm. Both the officer and the cattleman knew that neither of them would walk back down Main street again unless they did so as survivors of the gun duel that was imminent. Gray felt there might be one chance, not to escape a fight, but to avoid being the victims of a massacre. That was to tell his story, swiftly, convincingly.

"Who's running yore show?" Jeff asked.

Out of the Golden Nugget walked Morgan Norris. "I'm running it, fellow," he said. "If you want to know, I bumped off Howard because he was a double-crossing son-of-a-gun."

Gray spoke, his voice strong and clear, for all to hear. "I've nothing to say to you, Norris, except that I'm going to drag you to prison where you will be hanged for yore crimes. But I'll talk to some of the men you're leading astray. I represent the United States government. We're going to clean up this county. Tail Holt isn't going to be the home of a nest of rustlers, killers, and holdup men any longer. I'm serving notice. The worst of you are going to be rubbed out. The others had better get good right damn now. I'm going to get my men. By noon we'll have fifty cowboys with us. Take my advice and leave this murderer and his crowd. If you don't, you'll get in as bad as they are."

Norris moved forward, his figure weaving as the crouched body of a tiger does. His thin, cruel mouth was set in a straight line.

"So you aim to drag me to the gallows, do you?" he snarled, his white teeth showing. "Me, Morg Norris! Why, you never saw the day, fellow, I couldn't bust you wide open."

Mile High walked into the street to join Norris. In a doorway to the left appeared Clint Duke, a revolver in his hand.

"Put up that gun!" ordered Chiswick sharply.

Norris' hand swept up from his thigh, a Colt's forty-four in it. There was a streak of light, a roar. Five guns blazed. Everybody vanished from sight except the combatants. Lanes of fire crossed. Through smoke men's bodies loomed, shifting to and fro, padding here and there like those of animals. The crash of revolvers—the cursing of men—the sudden scream of one hit—all filled the air with dreadful tumult. A rift in the smoke showed Jeff a man on his knees, snarling oaths, still firing at him. The man was Norris. From the officer's gun flame darted. He felt a stab of pain and gave it no attention. Norris was sinking lower. His head touched the dust. The weapon dropped from his hand.

Chiswick was still on his feet. So were both the other outlaws. Smoke —shouts—oaths—hideous faces looming out of the fog. Jeff met Mile High and felt the crash of a gun-barrel on his hat. He closed with the tall puncher and clung fast to him, swaying with dizziness and hanging to the pistol arm that waved wildly trying to get a shot into Gray's body. Another face came out of the mist. An arm swept up and down. Mile High's grip relaxed. He staggered against a wall and slid down.

The noise of the guns had died down. Men came out from open doors cautiously, no weapons in their hands. Only three of the outlaws had taken part. Norris lay still in the dust. Mile High was unconscious, pistol whipped. Clint Duke had vanished.

"All right with you?" Jeff asked his companion.

"Fine. And you?"

Gray's head was getting clearer. He stepped across to Norris and examined him. The killer was dead.

"Where is Duke?" the marshal asked harshly, speaking to all within hearing.

"He ran into Sanger's," someone said.

Jeff said to the cattleman, "Hang on to Mile High," and walked into Yell Sanger's store.

Duke was trying frantically to unbar the back door. He turned, crouched and panic-stricken, to meet the man advancing on him.

"Keep back!" he yelled, and fired.

A moment later he dropped, a bullet hole in his forehead.

The marshal steadied himself against the counter, then turned and walked slowly back to the street. He looked round on those in sight.

"Any more of you want to bust my wide open?" he asked grimly.

Nobody accepted the invitation. All men knew that law had arrived at Tail Holt to stay.

Jeff gave curt orders. "Every man of you shuck his guns. I'll put one of my boys in Sanger's store to check them when you turn them over. There will be no more helling around. Inside of two-three hours I'll let you know who I want. The rest of you will be free to go."

He put handcuffs on Mile High. Already the cowboys were arriving on the run. Chiswick held up a restraining hand.

"Hold your horses, boys," he said. "Everything is fine and dandy. A few of the dime-novel bad boys got all het up and we had to knock their ears down. The rest of the lads have decided to be good."

Jeff took over the Golden Nugget and the other saloons. None of the Tail Holt gang made any open opposition.

Before the hour was up, a dozen of the rustlers and outlaws were riding into the brush. It was time to be seeking other pastures.

Ruth met Jeff at the front door of Presnall's and drew him into the sitting-room.

"Are you all right—and you and Father both?" she asked anxiously.

"All right," he answered cheerfully. "And our job is done. The boys will eat out of our hands now."

"Frank told me," she cried softly. "It was a crazy thing you and Father did. You promised . . ."

"So I did. We wouldn't have gone if we had known Sperm Howard was dead. But it turned out fine."

"Yes. Yes." She went on, with a little flare of possessive feminine ferocity. "But I won't have you doing things like that . . . now."

"Never again," he promised, smiling into her troubled eyes. "I've been talking with yore father. I'm going to quit the service and go into cattle."

"Thank God."

"You won't be afraid to marry me then, will you?"

Courage was in her eyes like a banner. For better or worse he was to be her man, as long as life lasted. She came to him, with a little gesture of surrender that won his heart.

[THE END.]

Washington Letter to Blair Lobbied for Traders Over Indian Boundary Line

A letter written 170 years ago by George Washington, lobbying for the Virginia traders over a proposed Indian boundary line, came to light recently in the William L. Clements library, notes an Ann Arbor correspondent in the Detroit Free Press.

The British government was about to draw a boundary line west of which no white settlers would be allowed, leaving the territory entirely to the Indians. Some Virginian friends of Washington were furnishing provisions to the British garrison at Fort Pitt and feared that the proposed line would leave part of their route, in what is now southwestern Pennsylvania, in the closed territory.

The Virginian merchants, urging Washington to use his influence with Blair to reach General Gage, were anxious to keep the Cumberland-Pittsburgh route open because their Pennsylvania competitors would not be affected by the proposed boundary line, and Washington was to ask Gage whether three or four supply stations could be maintained along the Virginians' route.

Because Washington thought that Gage would have influence in drawing up the treaty, he asked Blair to place his letter before Gage, urging him to secure from the Indians permission for the supply posts desired by his friends.

The fears of Washington and his friends, however, were groundless, because a report of March 7, 1763, by the Board of Trade, had provided that the boundary should run from Pittsburgh down the Ohio to the mouth of the Kanawha river, and in the subsequent treaty of Fort Stanwix the Iroquois ceded all claims to land east of the mouth of the Tennessee river and south of the Ohio.

Blair had seen the Board of Trade report, but sent Washington's letter to Gage anyway, and soon had a reply that the Virginian trade route would remain open. Unfortunately, four years later, Fort Pitt was abandoned, so that Washington's friends kept their trade route but lost their trade.

Washington's letter instead of a copy, was sent to Gage because Blair was pressed for time.

C. Houston Goudiss Interprets the Modern Conception of Meat

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains Why It Rates As a Top-Notch Food.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
8 East 39th Street, New York City

AMERICANS spend from one-fourth to one-third of their total food budget for meat. In order to discover whether this expenditure is justified, let us examine the nutritive value of meat, and consider its contribution to the diet.

Almost everybody likes the flavor of meat, from the man who instinctively eats the meat on his plate before he touches the other foods. The desire for meat is one of the strongest human appetites.

This Free Chart Makes It Easy to

BALANCE YOUR DIET

YOU will find it a simple matter to safeguard the health of your family by serving a balanced diet if you send for the Homemaker's Chart for checking Nutritional Balance. It lists the foods and the standard amounts that should be included in the daily diet. Contains skeleton menus for breakfast, lunch and dinner or supper to guide you in selecting the proper foods in each classification. A post card will bring you this valuable aid to good menu planning. Just ask for the Nutrition Chart. Address C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

meats, but liver is also much richer in this vitamin than muscle tissue. Vitamin B is present in lean meat, especially lean pork, which has a considerably higher content than lamb, mutton or beef.

Composition of Meat

Meat is a protein food of the highest type. It is useful both for repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily and for building the new tissues that are necessary for growth in childhood. The proportion of protein varies with the kind of meat, and the cut. In beef, lamb and veal, it comprises between 14 and 26 per cent of the edible portion.

The other constituents of meat are fats, water, minerals, extractives, enzymes and pigments.

The amount of fat present is an important factor in determining the fuel value of meat. And the more fat it contains, the less protein will be found in a given unit of weight. The different cuts of pork contain less protein than corresponding cuts of beef and lamb, with the exception of lean ham, lean pork chops and tenderloin.

Meat as a Blood Builder

Both glandular and muscle meats are rich in the blood-building mineral, iron, and meat also contains copper. The glandular organs, particularly liver, have great value in the prevention and treatment of anemia. Pernicious anemia baffled physicians for many years until, in 1926, two noted American scientists discovered that liver contains a principle which stimulates red blood cell formation. This discovery has been ranked with the discovery of insulin as one of the greatest in our times.

Meat also contains a high percentage of phosphorus. It is poor in calcium, however, and this necessary substance must be obtained in adequate amounts from milk, cheese and green leafy vegetables.

The Vitamins of Meat

Lean muscle meats cannot be considered as an important source of any vitamin except G. This vitamin is necessary for the prevention of pellagra, and also helps to prolong the vigorous middle years and to ward off old age. Beef, pork and lamb muscle contain approximately the same amounts of vitamin G, but liver has been found to contain approximately 10 times as much as muscle tissue.

Some vitamin A is found in fat

Digestibility of Meat

In considering the nutritive worth of any food it is necessary not only to analyze its contributions to the diet, but to determine how well its nutrients are utilized by the body. Meat has a high food value because its protein is digested rapidly and thoroughly. Tests show that 97 to 98 per cent of meat protein is digested and absorbed. The length of time meat remains in the stomach will depend upon various factors, such as the amount of fat present, the method of cooking and the degree of mastication. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meat are digested.

Since it is so completely digested, however, meat supplies little bulk, and it is therefore essential that an abundance of leafy vegetables and fruits should be eaten at the same time.

Meat in the Child's Diet

There has been considerable discussion regarding the place of meat in the child's diet. There are the same good reasons for using meat in the diet of the child as in the diet of the grown-up. Moreover, the child's protein requirement is greater than that of the adult, in proportion to his body weight.

At the beginning of the second year, many authorities advise that small servings of tender and finely minced beef, chicken, lamb or liver may be given about three times a week. As the child becomes older, he may have meat more often and as his ability to chew increases, he may be given larger pieces.

Some Fallacies Regarding Meat

Many people believe that veal is less completely digested than other meats. But it has been demonstrated that even very young veal digests as rapidly and as completely as beef. It has also been held that red meats are less digestible and, therefore, less desirable than white meats. There is no evidence to support this point of view.

Someone with a gift for concise expression once remarked: "No meat—no man!" His point was well taken. For considering its delicious flavor, essential food values, and ease of preparation, it is easy to agree that THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT.

Municipal Power Plant

Unwanted

Wichita Falls, Tex., Aug. 10—As is true in San Antonio where officials recently turned down a P. W. A. grant for a municipal power plant, the same is expected to happen here on Aug. 29 when the city council acts upon a recommendation by a special citizens' committee recommending that no election be called on the proposal.

The committee submitted a number of reasons why it would be inadvisable for the city of Wichita Falls to build a municipal electric light plant. The committee was appointed after petitions had been filed asking that the question for a Public Works Administration loan and grant of approximately $1,750,000 for construction of a municipal light plant and water system improvements be submitted to a vote of the people.

Some of the reasons given for opposing the election are:

The federal grant is based on the showing of a bona fide offer to purchase the existing light plant which must be refused by the utility company. This offer has not been made and could not be done until a survey of the existing plant was made.

It would cost the city large sums of money to hire experts to conduct the valuation survey.

If the utility plant accepted the offer, taxpayers would have to pass a bond issue for purchase of the plant which would involve large annual payments for interest and sinking fund.

If the city accepts the present grant and purchases the plant it would force the city into debt by a million or two million dollars, would force a rise in taxes, doing away with the homestead exemption law or seeking new sources of revenue.

Repairs to and additions to the water system, which will increase the indebtedness by $800,000, are more vital.

Present plant has a franchise here until 1951 and competition from a city plant would not be practical or produce lower rates or more revenue.

Federal grant would authorize payment of water plant revenue to pay for the light plant which would tie up city revenues from this source.

People of Wichita Falls have twice voted down like propositions.

We are sorry to report Joe Everett very ill in an Amarillo hospital.

Lump-Sum Payments

Persons entitled to lump sums under the old age insurance program are being paid 3 1/2 per cent of wages received from covered employment after 1936, and up to attainment of age 65 or death. For example, if a worker's wages during this period amount to $1,000, the lump sum payment would be $35. Information concerning the filing of a claim may be obtained from the Social Security Board, 1012 Oliver Eakin Building, Amarillo.
