Notice to Farmers

According to H. M. Breedlove County Agent, compliance for the year 1938 is practically to a close. Breedlove stated that the administrative expense of handling the program in the county for 1938 would vary very little from that of 1937. Handling of 1937 subsidy papers and wheat insurance, even though included in the 1938 budget will not be deducted from any checks as a part of the administrative expense. In other words, Breedlove explained, the expenditures out of the budget are not all charged as administrative expense to the program due to the fact that some were allotments sent to the county for the handling of various phases of the program.

This statement was made by Breedlove due to the fact that many producers have been of the opinion that, due to the vast amount of work that has had to be done in connection with the program, possibly the deduction from the checks for Administrative Expense would be a rather large amount. However, this is not true and the Administrative Expense, deduction, as stated above, will vary very little from 1937.

FAMILY REUNION

A family reunion was held at the home of Mrs. Emma Owens Sunday, Sept. 4. Those present were Will Owens and wife, Geo. Owens and family, Bunt Owens and wife, Henry Owens and family, Buster Owens and wife, Tommy Northcutt and family, all of Amarillo, Gus Owens and family of Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. Tom Owens and daughter of San Bernardino, Calif., Sam Owens and family, Otis Owens and wife and Mrs. Emma Owens, all of Hedley.

After a feast of garden vegetables, fried chicken, cake and ice cream, the afternoon was spent playing ball, eating watermelon and taking pictures.

NOTICE

Marketing quota cards are now ready for cotton producers for 1938. These cards show that the producer has complied with the 1938 agriculture administration program and is eligible to sell all cotton produced by him free of tax. Each producer will be issued one card and will use this card throughout the ginning season. These are available any time before producers start ginning.

NOTICE

County Agent H. M. Breedlove announces that he has application blanks at his office for the shelter belt project, and urges that all interested parties see him at once.

S. S. Adamson, who has been seriously ill in an Amarillo hospital, is reported better as we go to press.

Rev. and Mrs. M. E. Wells are visiting in Pampa.

Parent-Teacher Assn.

The local unit of the Parents and Teachers began their year work on Thursday evening, Sept. 8, at eight o'clock in the high school auditorium. Mrs. O. L. Johnson presided during a brief business session and then turned the meeting to Mrs. J. S. Edwards who acted as leader in the absence of Mrs. W. H. Burden. To open the program, each member answered the roll call by giving his reasons for being a member of the Parent and Teacher Association.

As the first meeting is usually a get acquainted social hour, the social committee planned an old fashioned spelling match. The faculty members made a splendid display of their inability to stand up and spell. Without a doubt, next time, W. G. Bridges will be the first man chosen in a spelling match. There was much more fun than enlightenment.

Later all present were summoned to the home economics room for a real treat of punch and cookies.

It is the urge of the organization that all parents join the Parent and Teacher Association and become active workers for the improvement of our school. We have an efficient corps of officers. Come to help them.

The next meeting will be Oct. 6, 1938. Watch for later announcements of hour and program.

Now that the revival meetings are over, let us all cooperate in having good attendance at the regular services the remaining two months of the conference year. We are trying to make this next Sunday an "everybody go to church" Sunday. We are so anxious to preach to the entire membership of the church at least one time. Please make it possible next Sunday. Do not stay away. May we have the inspiration of your presence? We want you, and shall look for you. Come, bring someone with you. You need the church, and the church needs you.

From Washington's Madding Crowd, Your Congressman Takes His 'Vacation'

Pretty Swell, a Job Like That! But Get Him in a Corner And Your 'Ambassador' to Washington Will Admit His Envious Job Is a $10,000 Pain in the Neck!

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Senator Doakes was on vacation. A few weeks ago congress adjourned for the summer and Mr. Doakes left promptly for home to enjoy a well earned rest. So, having nothing to think about after that hectic post winter with its wages-and-hours bill, its reorganization bill, its farm bill and tax bills, we expected to find the Senator in a congenially expansive mood. That's where we made our mistake.

He wasn't sitting under a tree sipping mint julep, though the day was hot. Instead we found him sweltering in his home town law office, wishing it would come winter again pretty soon so he could get back to the peace and quiet of official Washington.

"These summers are always the same," he complained when we finally got into his office. "Always fences to mend, speeches to make, picnics to attend. And this year, to make it worse, everybody in the state except me is up for re-election!"

Last winter Senator Doakes received his quota of visitors from home and most of them went away from his office muttering, "Pretty swell, a job like that!" To which the senator will reply, "A job like that is pretty swell, can get it, if you can hold it, it doesn't drive you crazy."

How It's Done. Doakes says $10,000 a year and travel expenses, but to get it you must invest a good many years of life shaking the right hand and turning your money in the right and building up your political image by winning a series of jobs. You must dive into the rough-and-tumble school of real politics to learn by bitter experience what the taxpayers like and what your political friends don't like. You emerge a polished politician, like the men who now hold down our 96 seats in the senate and our 435 seats in the house.

But a congressman or senator much more than hold down his seat in the legislative chamber. Indeed, no better refuge for a lazy man could be imagined than slugging through endless hours of debate and filibusters. To keep the folks back home happy (which, after all, is the important thing) our Ambassador to Washington must tend to that endless series of chores concerning Mrs. Jones' pension, Heaville's WPA project and Jim Smith's political job.

Answering his mail is in itself a gigantic job for your congressman. Each morning brings a new parade of protests, pleas and suggestions from that army of helpful constituents who believe in "writing to their congressman." Next comes a glance at the home district newspapers which may or may not have killed him in the back last week. A part of time his secretary announces the Peter Browns and their three children, just in from home to look for him in Washington. They thought it would be nice to drop around and see their congressman.

And, incidentally, he must appear in congress occasionally to lift his voice in praise of, or objection to, a certain measure. Before speaking, he must turn himself into an amateur brain truster, hustling to the congressional library to arm himself with facts and figures that mean something.

This, then, is the life your Ambassador to Washington leads while congress is in session. If you would find you'd need a vacation, at least at we were speaking of it as one homeward bound. Senator Doakes remarked this summer, "A congressman taking it easy is by no means a congressman taking it easy. The first thing he must do on arriving home is call a conference of his advisers to discover how the wind blows. From that conference is plotted a definite course to follow during the summer fore the average summer is over, he will probably make one or two trips back to Washington.

ONE WAY TO SPEND THE SUMMER—Members of the congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority, pause at Chickamauga, Tenn., on a particularly hot afternoon, to inspect one of TVA's dams.

This Year—of all Years!

But the current summer isn't average, just as the last congressional session wasn't average. Since before Christmas the spectre of election probably has hung over the head of your legislator. His henchmen back home early began sending word of the rising opposition forces that had to be combated somehow. Elections are always tougher for the incumbent; he must defend his record against the challenger.

It will be no wonder if your congressman goes back to Washington next winter thankful that his "vacation" is over, because his campaign can be devastatingly tiresome. On parade before the voters will be his personal appearance, his family connections or lack of them, his ability to tell jokes and play the fiddle.

The wizened old heads at Washington, who have held their jobs so long that re-election is automatic, shake their heads at this frantic rummaging around after votes. Says one:

"If those fellows were intelligent, they would do their campaigning in the off year. The voters haven't nearly the depths of dumbness they are credited with. They know they are getting a last-minute pat on the back. Now, I figure I won this year's election last year. A good many of my colleagues went fishing during the summer. I spent two months calling on the voters. They appreciate it, and I expect a good majority in November."

Which is all easy enough to say if you're a George Norris or William Borah, but it doesn't always hold true. Many a congressman has spent every summer at home and given unstintingly of his time to keep the folks happy, yet his troubles just keep growing. Maybe he'll squeeze through the election next November, but if he does there'll be a new crop of patronage seekers on his trail. There'll also be someone hanging around to make sure he keeps those last few promises he made against his better judgment.

Pretty nice, a job like that!

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Save time with mock smoking.

IF SMOKING seems to be time consuming, here is a short cut that saves hours. The first step is to shirr the material by machine. Loosen the tension slightly and stitch in straight rows; then pull up the bobbin thread to gather the material.

You will note in the sketch that some of the simple hand stitches are made over two rows of gathers and the others over a single row. Much of the beauty of mock smoking depends upon the spacing of the rows. The double rows of gathers in the sketch, No. 2 and 4, are 1/4-inch apart. The space between these and the single rows should be about 3/4-inch.

Another important point is the choice of colors and an interesting variety of stitches. In the arrangement shown here, rows 1, 3 and 5 are made in the darkest color by back-stitching over the gathers as in row 5 and then working loop-stitches through the back-stitches as in row 1. Row 2 is a version of plain feather stitching, and row 4 is done in the Creton stitch. Variations of all of these stitches and dozens of others that will be new to you and your friends are fully illustrated in Book 2 offered herewith.

Are you ready for birthdays; and the next church bazaar? Do you turn time into money with things to sell? Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2 has helped thousands of women. It is full of new ideas for things you can make in your spare time. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—Sewing for the Home Decorator. Order by number enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, a leaflet on crazypatch quilts with 36 authentic stitches will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

Strange Facts

Boy's Name on Coronation Chair

THE famous coronation chair in which all English kings sit for their coronation bears the name of a British school boy. The boy's name is carved in the oak seat. Tradition tells that two Westminster school boys made a bet. P. Abbot bet that he would sleep alone all night in Westminster abbey. The boy wanted to prove that he had stayed in the great dark church which contains the royal dust of Edward the Confessor, the bones of Chaucer, Sir Isaac Newton and many other famous men of Britain. In the chapel of Edward the Confessor is the oak coronation chair. In the seat is carved "P. Abbot slept in this chair January 4, 1801."

Only once has the coronation chair been taken from the abbey. The chair dates from the Fourteenth century. Beneath the seat is the famous stone of scone or "Stone of Destiny." It was brought from Scone, Scotland, by Edward the first. On it Scottish kings were crowned until Edward I brought it to London in 1296. The one occasion when the coronation chair was taken from the abbey was during the time of Oliver Cromwell. It was moved to Westminster hall when Cromwell was installed as Lord Protector. The same famous chair was used in May when George VI was crowned in Westminster abbey.

Better Luck . . . ?
Mr. Jones came down to breakfast in a very bad temper. "It's no good!" he stormed at his wife. "I'm going to give that new chauffeur notice. That's twice he's nearly killed me." "Oh, darling," said his wife, "couldn't you give him another chance?"

"You can disregard that vile rumor about the new bathing suit I bought," cries our luscious stenog, Lotta Kerves. "There's nothing to it!"

Giving the Game Away
"Why did you break off your engagement with her?" the downcast young man was asked by a friend.

"Because she has a parrot which says 'Leave off kissing me, George, or I'll tell mother.'"

"Well, I can't see anything in that."

"Ah! But you forget that my name's Charles."

Spite
"Yes," said the bride-to-be, discussing her wedding plans, "the bridesmaids will be Lola Lemon and—"

"But," said a friend, "I thought you didn't like Lola."

"I don't," replied the bride, "but I'm going to be married in yellow and you know how that will match Lola's complexion."

Come Away, Anne
"Oh, Mummy," said wee Annie, "look at that funny man across the road."

"What is he doing?"
"He's sitting on the pavement talking to a banana skin."

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Save Ironing.—If sheets are hung on the line dripping wet the weight of the water pulls them down and removes most of the wrinkles. They may then be folded neatly without ironing when dry.

Hanging Pictures.— Pictures should be hung about at the level of the eye, but since they also are to be hung in relation to the furniture groups, it is sometimes better to hang one below eye level over a low table or desk, or above eye level over a high chest.

Left-Over Juice.—Save the juice from canned pineapple and the liquid from maraschino cherries to use when making fruit punch.

Perspiration Marks.— To remove perspiration marks from white silk, mix some bicarbonate of soda to a stiff paste with cold water. Spread thickly on the parts and leave for an hour or so before washing. This will also remove scorch marks if they are not very bad.

Clean With Soda.—If there is a constant smell of burning when cooking is going on, examine gas burners. They are probably filled with sediment from "boilovers."

Economy Note.—Pieces of ribbon that come on gift boxes may be utilized in making shoulder straps for underwear. Cut them into six or eight-inch strips.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Jeanie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next morning, while Barbara is telling her mother about her adventure, an urgent phone call comes from Mr. Sentry's office after his departure. Arriving home in the late afternoon, Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employe, killed.

"Not much here!" Mr. Sentry said and then: "The police think she was one of the robbers. They're looking for a young Italian who has been paying her some attention; a wild youngster whose father is one of our customers. They found a key in her pocketbook that fits the lock on the back door." He spoke to Ray again. "There are back stairs," he said. "Mr. Loran and I use them on Sundays or when the place isn't open for business. This back door admits to the stairs and our offices. She had this key."

Mrs. Sentry realized that Arthur somehow found comfort in this detailing of the day's events; and she felt a dry scorn at Neil Ray's obvious desire to escape. "Afraid of being compromised," she thought; and she thought defiantly that a good many people would be maliciously pleased because the old firm of Sentry and Loran was thus involved in sudden sensational publicity.

Ray nodded uneasily, and Mr. Sentry went on: "She must have remembered the combination of the safe. It's just an old iron box, bought in my father's time. We never had enough cash on hand to need a real one; and a safe-cracker could have opened this easily enough. But it was opened last night by someone who knew the combination. She probably learned it last summer when she worked for us."

He hesitated, added then, "The police seem to think she let this fellow in, opened the door for him, and opened the safe, and then for some reason they quarreled and he shot her."

Mary said: "It sounds like the sort of ruthless, reasonless things a cocaine addict might do. Don't you think so, Neil?"

Ray did not answer. Mrs. Sentry said, "Don't be so medical, Mary!" She thought: Mary is playing a part! Pretending! I wonder why. And she added: "The office telephoned, Arthur, just after you left this morning. I suppose it was about this?"

"Yes," he assented. "Miss Randall found her, when she got there at eight o'clock."

Mrs. Sentry wondered, shivering in spite of herself, whether any of the women at the Furness luncheon had known; wondered whether they had been watching her to see how she took it.

"It must have been just a few minutes past when they phoned," she said. "Didn't anyone hear the shot?"

Mr. Sentry shook his head. "No. Or at least they haven't found anyone yet who did," he amended. "You see, she was in the hall on the third floor. The hall has no windows, and there's a brick wall between it and the next building, and if the office doors happened to be closed—" He added, "And of course there aren't many people around on the streets down there till early morning."

Mary said: "The poor girl! I hope they get the man. Father, did she have any family?"

"Not in Boston. She came from Dennis; but she'd been living in a room out in Somerville, in a private home, where the husband was out of a job so they had to take in boarders. She'd had work at odd times, a day here, a week there, filling in; but no steady job. The police say she'd been running around with this young Italian; and he was missing today. His father claims he's up in Maine buying cedar apples, but they haven't located him. And—apparently there were other men with whom she was intimate, too."

He shook his head, poured another cocktail, said, as though thinking aloud: "I suppose she was hard up, and desperate. If we'd had any idea, we might have made a place for her, given her something to do. That's the tragic thing about living in a city. Terrible things happen all around you, perhaps even to people you know; and till they happen, you never even suspect. People are all actors, aren't they? They wear a mask, put up a good front, pretend that everything's all right—till suddenly everything is all wrong!"

"No need to make speeches, Arthur!" Mrs. Sentry commented drily.

"It has disturbed me a lot," he confessed.

Mrs. Sentry said: "Nonsense! It doesn't concern us! It happened in your office, of course; but it might as well have happened anywhere. It doesn't concern us at all!" She was speaking more to herself than to him. "We know no more about it than anyone else," she declared, shaping for herself the attitude she would present like an armor to their friends.

He nodded, said no more. Doctor Ray moved toward Mrs. Sentry to say good-by. But before he could speak there were voices in the hall, and Mrs. Sentry recognized Barbara's.

Then Barbara and Linda Dane appeared in the wide doorway. Barbara had an afternoon paper in her hand.

When the sempstress was done with her that morning, Barbara went home with Linda Dane for luncheon. These two and Phil Sentry—Mary, the older sister, had always held herself aloof from their cheerful exuberance—had since childhood been much together; and now that Phil was at Yale, Barbara and Linda were devoted. They went after lunch, in Linda's car, to a moving picture theater; and later they met Bill Cates and Rod Hepburn at the Ritz for tea.

"I Hope They Get the Man. Father, Did She Have a Family?"

When they came out on Newbury Street afterward, screaming newsboys pushed extras in their faces. Barbara saw a headline:

PRETTY TYPIST SLAIN

One of the boys bawled: "Produce House Murder! Read all about it!" And Bill Cates looked at the paper which the boy held, and said softly, in a startled tone, "Hullo!" He bought a paper, folded it in his hand, said: "Barbara, Linda, come along. Let's get out of this."

They followed him toward Linda's car, and Barbara asked gaily, "What is it, Rod? Why the big mystery?"

But he did not laugh. He opened the paper again and looked at it, and they all looked over his shoulder; and Barbara as she read felt something inside her body contract into a crawling, shuddering knot. She thought she was choking, and her eyes ached, and Linda's hand was tight in sympathy and reassurance on her arm, and Bill said, "Gosh, that's rotten!"

Barbara when she spoke did not recognize her own voice. She said, "Give it to me, Bill." She took the paper, read the unbelievable lines again.

"Steady, Barb!" Linda whispered. "It's all right."

Barbara was husky. "I've got to go home, Linda. Mother will need me. She'll be wild. Can we, please?"

"Of course. Here's the car." Bill and Rod helped them in. Bill said lamely: "Don't let it get you, Barb. Just the damned tabloids, making a sensation out of nothing!" Rod said, "Keep smiling, Barb."

"Of course," she told them. "Thanks for a lovely tea. See you soon." The car was moving. "Good-by!"

On the way home, Linda drove and watched the traffic, and Barbara read the story in the paper, reciting to Linda the essentials.

But she was cold with terror at her own thoughts. When she and Professor Brace emerged from the Tunnel last night, her father had passed them in his car, coming from the direction of the office. The dead girl had been found in the office this morning. Killed when? She could find in the paper no answer to that question, and her eyes blurred so that she could not read.

Linda said: "Don't worry, Barb. It just happened to happen there! It might have happened anywhere."

"Mother will be just sick!" Barbara whispered. "She's so proud, Linda! And she hates newspapers!"

"They'll forget all about it in a day or two."

"And father, too!" Barbara shivered uncontrollably. "Golly, Linda, I'm scared."

"Bless you, there's nothing to be afraid of!"

Barbara nodded. "Of course not! I'm not afraid. It's just—unsettling. I'll have to cheer them up at home. They'll be pretty low! Linda, come in with me when we get there. We'll have to put on an act, make them laugh somehow, make them see the funny side—"

"Steady, Barb! You're trembling!"

"I can't help it. And my teeth keep chattering!"

"You poor kid!"

"For Heaven's sake don't sympathize with me or I'll bawl! I've got to laugh or I'll scream, Linda. I am scared, I guess! Golly, I wish Phil was home."

"He'll come when he sees the papers. But Barb, it's nothing. A week from now everyone will have forgotten it. Of course it's pretty tough right now, though." And Linda urged: "Throw that paper away, Barb. Don't look at it any more."

Barbara began to cry without a sound, sitting bolt upright, her eyes exciting thing? We came out of the Ritz with Bill Cates and Rod Hepburn and there were two newsboys just screaming and pushing papers into our faces, and Rod saw your name in one of the headlines, father. So we bought the paper. I think it's perfectly exciting. Did you know her? Is she as pretty as her pictures? I love murders, they're so gruesome! Think of having one right in the family! Look!"

She opened the paper, read the headlines aloud: "Pretty typist slain. Police seek missing lover of dead girl. Robbery and murder—"

Her mother said sharply: "Barbara! After all, it's not 'right in the family!'"

"You know what I mean, mother!" Barbara protested. "I mean we're—well, probably we'll all be witnesses at the trial. I know I'll be scared to death. I wonder if he's good-looking. Father, did you ever see him? This Italian?" She came to sit on the arm of his chair. "You don't need to pretend you're all so calm. I'll bet you're as excited as I am, really."

No one spoke for a moment. Then Neil Ray said uncomfortably, "I really must go."

He rose; and Linda cried as though relieved: "Heavens, it's after six o'clock! So must I!"

Mary went with Doctor Ray into the hall. Barbara looked beseechingly at Linda; but Linda shook her head, so Barbara and Linda followed the others. Mrs. Sentry and her husband were left alone.

He twirled the cocktail glass in his hand, looking at it fixedly, not meeting Mrs. Sentry's eyes. She heard the good-bys at the door; heard Mary and Barbara hesitate, and whisper, and start upstairs. Then she heard Mary say in a low, indignant tone: "You're outrageous, Barbara! This isn't a joke!"

"I know," Barbara agreed, softly. "But you all looked so glum! I tried to put on an act, cheer you up—"

Their voices trailed away. Mrs. Sentry thought that was Barbara, to seek to make a jest out of this. And in very poor taste, she decided. She said to her husband, "Arthur, we must just ignore this!"

"I don't know why it should hit me so hard," he confessed. "But—she looked so little and pitiful, lying there. And of course there were police, and photographers, and reporters around all day. Gus is in New York, so it all fell on me. It wore me down."

"In New York? Mary's going there to dinner tonight?"

"He went over yesterday. Didn't expect to be back till Sunday."

Oscar came to say that dinner was served, and Mrs. Sentry remembered that an afternoon paper was delivered to the kitchen, so the servants already knew; and everyone would know, either tonight or in the morning. All their friends . . .

She said quietly: "Will you call the girls, Oscar? They're upstairs!" He disappeared, and she asked her husband, "Are you ready, Arthur?"

"I'll wash my hands," he decided. She had not, since returning from hearing Sarah Glen, had time to order her hair; and she went to do so, and she thought she and Arthur might go down to their summer home in York Harbor in the morning, and stay till this sensation died. But it would be better not to seem to run away . . .

Mary sat with them while they dined, waiting for Jimmy Endle to call for her. She proposed making excuses, staying at home; but Mrs. Sentry said: "Of course not, Mary! After all, this doesn't touch us! Certainly not any more than it does Mr. and Mrs. Loran, and they're giving the dinner."

Paul Bunyan's Ry. Station Discovered by Small Boy on His Visit to London

The sort of railway station that only Paul Bunyan could have built was described recently by a Bridgnorth small boy who visited London and wrote about it to his envious smaller brother at home, according to a Bridgnorth, England, correspondent in the Philadelphia Inquirer. Written in all seriousness, the letter, which came into the possession of C. N. Turner, of the Associated British and Irish railways, follows:

"The sight of Paddington station is really beyond description. The roof is practically invisible, being 2,500 feet above the platforms, airplanes circling beneath it all day. The roof is made of glass and requires 5,000 men to clean it once weekly in an airship."

"There are so many platforms that it is totally impossible to count them—the length of them is quite five miles. There are motor buses to take passengers from one end of a platform to the other; each bus holds 3,000 people."

"The trains are colossal; each train consists of 4,000 coaches and requires 20 engines to pull it. The trains are of the corridor type and are equipped with motorcycles to convey passengers to lavatories and dining saloons."

"Each engine is 50,000-horsepower and requires 50 men to stoke it. It is necessary to have motor lorries in each cabin to convey the coal from tender to firebox."

"There is a refreshment room at Paddington station which is seven times the length of Bridgnorth High street and four times as wide."

"The station master is as big as St. Leonard's church, Bridgnorth, the biggest man in the world. One cannot fail to hear him coming, as his boots are as big as the North Gate. He walks over the trains without any difficulty whatsoever."

Wild and Domestic Turkeys

It's not such a far cry from wild to domestic turkeys. Spanish conquerors found the first turkeys, closely related to the wild birds, in Mexico. They took turkeys back to Europe around 1530. In 90 years, by the time the Pilgrims came to America, turkeys were common in England. The birds were probably named for their cry of "turk, turk."

Will Your Child Be Ready For School?

Noted Food Authority Outlines a Correct Diet for the Growing Youngster

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York City.

WHEN school closed last June, most parents looked forward to the long weeks ahead when their children could play in the sunshine, get plenty of rest, and build up a splendid fund of vitality to last them all through the new school year.

Some mothers resolved to do everything possible to prevent a recurrence of last season's disheartening colds.

Others planned to look into a blood-building diet that would give Mary or Johnny more pep and rosier cheeks. Perhaps there were teeth that required attention, or a nose or throat condition to be corrected. Now, within a few weeks, the children will be returning to school, or in some cases beginning their school life. Every mother should ask herself whether she has made the most of the opportunities offered by the vacation period.

Have you put forth a conscientious effort toward making your children 100 per cent fit for school? If not, there is still time! You cannot finish the job in a few weeks, but you can make a good start. And you owe it to your children to begin at once. For whether they enjoy school or find it tedious, whether they make excellent records or lag behind their fellows, depends in large measure upon their fitness.

Every child is entitled to good health, safeguarded by high resistance. And in this age of amazing scientific discoveries every child should enjoy these blessings.

Top health and resistance to disease are the result of an intelligently planned and carefully executed health program. It should include proper diet, adequate sleep and rest, an abundance of sunshine and fresh air, freedom from physical defects, and the avoidance of fatigue.

Diet—the Key to Health
Perhaps the most important factor of all is the carefully balanced diet. When planned to take full advantage of modern nutritional discoveries, it will insure normal growth and health, and build up high resistance that is like a protecting wall to safeguard your children.

With our present knowledge of the power of food, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Yet the specter of malnutrition rears its ugly head among children of the well-to-do as well as in homes where money is scarce. For, as a rule, it is not lack of money, but lack of knowledge of food values, or faulty eating habits which are responsible for this tragedy.

Don't Overlook Protective Foods
A child's diet should be built upon a foundation of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Milk takes precedence over all of these because it is an absolute necessity if children are to develop strong, straight bones and sound teeth.

The penalty for breaking this fundamental rule is retarded growth, fragile, crooked bones, decayed teeth and possibly nervousness. How dare any mother inflict such punishment upon her children? A fine amount of calcium, high grade protein, and some of every known vitamin can be furnished so easily by providing children with a quart of milk daily—either as a beverage, or in soups, cream sauces, puddings, cocoa or with cereals.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.

In planning meals for children, it is important at all times to keep the menus simple, and prepare foods so that they are appetizing and easily digestible.

Aids to Good Nutrition
It is important also to bear in mind that the most perfect diet will not provide sound nutrition unless the food is properly digested and assimilated. Adequate sleep and rest, which do away with fatigue, are therefore essential. However perfect the diet, overexertion and undue fatigue, continued, will soon bring about a state of lowered resistance.

In planning a program of daily living that will make and keep your children fit for school, put food first. But consider also rest, fresh air and sunshine, and regular habits. It would be well, too, to check up on the child's general health before he returns to school, so that he will not be handicapped by some physical defect, such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, faulty vision or impaired hearing—any of which hinders the ability.

Never forget for a moment that a child's happiness and success are closely related to his health. All mothers should remember this, for it is no exaggeration to say that THE POWER OF A NATION DEPENDS UPON THE HEALTH OF ITS CHILDREN.

Eggs rank next to milk in importance, because of their protein, iron and vitamins. A child's diet should normally include one egg daily, or at least three or four weekly.

Green, leafy vegetables must not be neglected, as they supply iron and precious vitamins. Yellow vegetables, such as carrots and sweet potatoes are notable as a source of vitamin A.

Fruits, especially the citrus varieties, are important for their vitamin C, which helps to safeguard the health of teeth and gums. However, tomatoes, or tomato juice may also be used as a source of this vitamin. Bananas are an excellent fruit for children. Dried fruits furnish iron and are high in energy values. Fruits and vegetables in general are likewise important aid to regular elimination.

As a rule, school children may have lean meat, fish, chicken liver once a day, and a second protein food, such as cheese or legumes, is usually introduced at another meal.

Energy Foods in Abundance
There must be plenty of energy foods, such as potatoes, rice, macaroni, bread and butter, and cereals, to help prevent the physical fatigue which lowers resistance. At least one starchy food belongs in every meal.

A well-cooked cereal should be provided once daily; in warm weather a ready-to-eat cereal may be used instead. In order to provide an abundance of minerals, and vitamin B, nutritionists place emphasis upon the whole grain varieties.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.
