S. S. Adamson Dies

S. S. Adamson another of Hedley's pioneers passed away Tuesday at his home in Hedley, after an illness of two weeks. He was stricken with heart trouble while in Amarillo visiting his daughter and was taken to a hospital where he remained for a few days and according to his wish was brought to his home.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon at 8 o'clock conducted by Rev. A. V. Hendricks of Terkey. Interment was made in the Rowe cemetery under a mound of flowers which shows the esteem in which he was held. The pallbearers were Zeb Mitchell, Alva Simmons, Jay Hunt, Herman Kirkpatrick, Herbert Moffitt and Leon Reeves. The flower girls were Seretha Gunn, Jack Leach, Mary Raines Bridges, Mildred Cuiwell, Ruby Moffitt, Dorothy Land, Jenimerie Pickett and Pauline Boliver.

S. S. Adamson was born Dec. 26, 1882 in Collins county near Collins, where he grew to manhood and lived on the same place until he moved to Donley county in 1908 settling north of Hedley, which was at that time Rowe. He was married at the age of 28 to Miss Gertrude Skaggs of Collins co. To this union ten children were born. Seven are living: R. L. Adamson of Lubbock, John of Terkey, Orby of Vernon, Anzil of Hedley, Mrs. Mayme Horn of Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. Alma Sims of Amarillo and Mrs. Jeanette Everett of Hedley. One child died in infancy and Mrs. Elpha Young and Mrs. Blanche Boone preceded him in death. He leaves to mourn their loss his companion and the above named children, 14 grandchildren, one great grandchild, many nieces and nephews and one sister, Mrs. Mary Jane Hardin, of Haskell. D. R. Adamson of Post City and Mrs. O. R. Cuiwell of Hedley were his only nephews and niece who were present at his funeral.

He professed religion when about 40 years of age and joined the Methodist Church at Old Union, a little country church near Collins. After moving to Donley county he placed his membership in the Rowe church where it remained until the town was moved. On account of illness in his home he was not permitted to take part in church or social life. He was a devoted husband and father and provided well for his loved ones. He was of a sunny disposition and his relatives young and old enjoyed visiting in his home. He was the last of three brothers to depart this life. One more call from the Death Angel and all that now remains of the family will be gone. Sad, yes, sad to write of our loved ones slipping away. Gone, yes, he's gone, no more will we see him slowly walking to town for his mail and other needed articles, conversing for a short while with friends. He never lingered long on the streets but hurried back to his home and companion by whose side he has walked through the years without a break. Will he be missed in the home? Yes, for there he could be found almost at any time. May the loving Heavenly Father comfort each one of us.

His Niece,
Ela

Hen Nearly Breaks Record

Stephenville, Sept. 24—Here's something to cockle over!

A Rhode Island Red hen won the John Tarleton College egg laying contest today. She had been at it 857 days and stalked up 341 eggs, setting a new world's record for the breed.

The hen, owned by W. C. Mullins of Hedley, lacked only 18 points of tying the world's record for all breeds. The judges went into a huddle and found she had amassed 369.85 points, as egg laying points are reckoned—Amarillo News

Washington Digest Large Pension Schemes Figure in Primaries in Several States

Success of Senator Pepper in Florida and Defeat Of McAdoo in California; Delude Aged and Infirm Voters; Fallacy of Plans Shown.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — A good many Easterners had nearly forgotten about Dr. Francis Townsend and his 30-a-month pension plan until lately they were suddenly reminded by the far South and the West. Sen. Claude Pepper was a Democratic nomination to the senate in Florida largely because of spousal of the Townsend plan and just recently Sen. William G. McAdoo had his public career abruptly terminated because Sheridan Downey, his opponent for the Democratic senatorial nomination in California, proposed and promised some fantastic scheme of paying $30 every Thursday to persons over 50 years of age.

In addition to these results, there have been 12 or 15 candidates for the nomination to the house of representatives who have won in primaries by saying the Townsend plan or the $30-every-Thursday or some other impossible and illogical and unsound pension plan would be put through congress. I cannot describe them all; they are obviously variations of the Townsend plan, and none of them will work any more than the Townsend bubble will work, and each has been used to delude aged and infirm voters whose ballots were needed to swing an election.

It is tragic that such things have happened, and are happening today. The fact cannot be ignored, however, because the conditions are with us. The one thing to do, then, I believe, is to attempt to disillusion those folks who have swallowed the slick words of those campaigners or those racketeers who are preying upon the faith of folks who, through no fault of their own, do not have access to information that shows these schemes to be rainbows. And, as far as history records, nobody on earth ever has found the end of the rainbow where the pot of gold is reputed to be.

I am not concerned about the public career of Mr. McAdoo who has been in public service off and on since 1913. He never impressed me as being any great shakes or a statesman. As secretary of the treasury, he did the job properly about as well as the average political appointee. I never have had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Downey. So I can't comment. Senator Pepper's senate record is a great deal like many another senator's record, and probably will continue to be just so. In other words, here we have average senators—one writing in the aid of the promises about the Townsend plan and the other lying because he stayed away from such promises, although he was thrice blessed by the President of the United States. That situation, along with some letters accusing me of giving the Townsend plan a "lenient treatment" in these columns, seems to warrant a new analysis of the conditions that now confront the country.

It Appears Townsendism Is Not Dead After All

As I said there is evidence that Townsendism is not dead at all. It has formed the basis of a dozen new panaceas, of which the $30-every-Thursday is but an example. It happened that this scheme was proposed in California which, particularly in its southern sections, has a vast population of aged people who have gone there to enjoy the famous climate and have the health that it gives them. Old people are plentifully behind these schemes. That is one of the reasons why Mr. Downey was able to boast more than a million signatures to the petition that made the question an issue in California. And Florida, too, with a fine winter climate, is a fertile field for the racketeers who promote such ridiculous programs. It is a harsh thing to blame the strength of these movements, all of which crop up during depression times, upon elderly people, but it is nevertheless the cold fact that they are the type among whom such schemes are promoted, and because they have votes, the candidates for office stoop to the level of lying further to hopes that never can be fulfilled in that manner.

To show how silly the scheme of $30-every-Thursday is as a campaign issue for Mr. Downey, just as an example—he is a candidate for the United States senate. The pension dream he has advocated is planned as part of the welfare program of the state of California. How Mr. Downey can do anything about it as a member of the United States senate, I can not understand, and I seriously doubt that Mr. Downey can explain it.

Nor will the plan work if made into law without bankrupting the state of California. I doubt that it will work anyway, but assuming that it may work, the state will be assuming a burden that will cost it so much money that the California books will be so far in the red as to cause them to appear with blood. This is a plan of stamps on each warrant so that an actual $1.04 has been affixed by cash payment in a year will stop the transfer of them very shortly. Few storekeepers, for example, will accept them beyond the necessities of their tax payments to the state of California; it is certain also that those who continue to accept them would not pay the face value, and the possessor would be forced into paying higher prices for the things that he buys. That is, the possessor would be buying 50 cents worth of sugar and probably would be handing over a dollar warrant for it. All of this is the result of a lack of confidence among the people in any form of exchange except the currency that is backed and guaranteed by the United States, as has been shown so many times before.

Downey Plan Would Make Trouble for New Dealers

Then, I believe I foresee some other trouble respecting such warrants as Mr. Downey's scheme proposes; not that I think his plan is worse than any others but it serves as an illustration. It is proposed that the possessor put a two-cent state stamp on the warrant for each week in his possession, or 52 such stamps in a year. Well, I imagine that the warrants would be in the hands of many persons who had no cash at all—not a cent. Immediately, there would be a cry to put to have the state supply the stamps free, and it is quite certain that there would be some politicians dishonorable enough to campaign for office on that issue.

Now, assume that Mr. Downey comes to the senate; assume that he is elected over his Republican opponent in November. I seem to see some added trouble for President Roosevelt and his New Deal friends who have been promising too many things and too much of them. Of course, many persons believe that Mr. Roosevelt's methods to date have encouraged all kinds of quackeries because he has talked at length of humanitarianism. He has aroused the minds of elderly persons who are suffering under conditions not of their own making. He has likewise aroused a lot of flabby brained individuals among the younger people who live on illusions. It is made to appear that congressional leaders, seeking to follow presidential policies, are going to be confronted with frequent bulges for national pensions of a kind that no nation can bear.

The number and type of these panaceas ebbs and flows with the economic tide. When business is good and there is plenty of work, when storekeepers are able to sell and people are able to buy, we hear little or nothing of the dream-world children of the Townsends and the Downeys and the others. When there are "hard times" and there are thousands upon thousands without work and food and clothes, those suffering minds become easy prey to the silver tongue.

Pursuing the thought a bit further, it then becomes possible for a movement which demands not $30 every Thursday for persons over 50, but one demanding $40 or $50 every Friday or $60 every Saturday. The amounts can be pushed up and up and the fervor of the suffering under this illusion grows greater and greater. And always, such movements provide the breeding ground for other racketeers who want to promote dissension and dissatisfaction. Always, too, there will be political champions for the "cause" whatever it may be, because there is something, some halo, about public office that will lead men into the strangest views.

President Cannot Dodge Some of Responsibility

Mr. Roosevelt has said with emphasis several times that none of these things will work. He believes they should not be propagated and spread, because he recognizes how easily miserable humanity can be led off at a tangent. It is a type of hysteria, an emotion. The President, however, must not dodge responsibility for a part of it. As I said above, his methods have been conducive to hysteria of several kinds. These panaceas that threaten again to cause grief for his administration are but an outgrowth of the numerous plans that have been given birth by various persons in official position. True, they have been fed by the dregs of hard times, but they had their encouragement first from illogical phases of the New Deal.

Truer words were never spoken than President Roosevelt uttered at Pittsburgh, Pa., in his 1932 campaign when he said: "Any government, like any family, can for a year spend a little more than it earns, but you and I know that a continuation of the habit means the poor house." Adoption of any of the pension schemes, whatever their variation from the Townsend plan may be, means the poor house because there can not be enough taxes levied or collected to meet the need.

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Jonnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next morning, while Barbara is telling her mother about her adventure, an urgent phone call comes from Mr. Sentry's office after his departure. Arriving home in the late afternoon, Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers luridly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. Mary, elder daughter, in love with Ned Ray, young interne at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's. Sentry's partner, with Mrs. Loran's brother, Jimmy Endie, Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mrs. Sentry, and Barbara, alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk. Phil Sentry, son at Yale, is disturbed at the possible implications and suspicion of Miss Wines' absence from her rooms for three days during August.

He decided to go home for a day or two; to surprise them. He dressed, packed his bag, had breakfast, and took a train for Boston. If he had sent word ahead, old Eli would have met him; but since Phil did not do so, there was no one at the station. A taxi would have taken him quickly home, but as though he had himself been guilty of some misdemeanor, he was suddenly reluctant to face them all. To put off the hour of that encounter, he walked over to Trinity Place and waited for a suburban train that would deposit him near his home. He remembered that his grandmother, old Mrs. Sentry, always came out for Sunday dinner and stayed through the afternoon and for supper, and he was glad she would be there. She was always sensible and shrewd.

The train arrived and he got a hard, and after the short run alighted. It was dusk when, bag in hand, he set out to walk to his home, his feet lagging miserably. Then a car pulled in at the curb beside him, and someone called in a laughing tone: "Carry your bag, Mister? Taxi, Mister?"

It was Linda Dane. There had been comradeship between them, a real affection, since they were children. He tossed his bag into the rumble, climbed in beside her.

"Hullo, Lin," he said, gripping her hand. "Gosh, I'm glad to see you!"

"Me too," she agreed. "Where've you been? Where you going? What are you home for?" She hesitated. "Oh, this beastly thing in the papers, of course. Isn't it rotten! I hope they get whoever did it and just—just skin him alive. But it's a shame you all have to be dragged into it!" She touched his hand. "Never mind. It won't last long. I'll take you home. How's Joe?"

"Fine," Phil told her. "Saw him yesterday."

"Wasn't it wonderful that you won? The game must have been just thrilling." She turned into his street.

"Drive around a while, can you?" he asked. "I don't want to go in yet."

She looked at him quickly. "Phil? Are you in a jam?" She laughed softly. "Is it something disgraceful? Shouldn't I be seen with you?"

"Oh, no. I just want to—"

They passed his home without stopping and went on. "Where shall I drive?" she asked.

"Around the park, James!" he told her, grinning; and he asked, "Lin, how are they all taking it?"

She hesitated. "Pretty hard, I'm afraid."

"How's Barb?"

"I was with her when she first saw the papers. She was scared, Phil. But she's trying to—keep them cheered up now."

"Sure! She would!"

"I went home with her. She hoped you would come."

"I thought I'd better." He said: "You and Barb and I will have to stick together. We always have, haven't we?"

"Always have," she agreed. "Three Musketeers."

"You always were the level-headed one. I'm glad I ran into you now. I'll be needing you, Lin."

"I'll be around. But I've got to take you home, now, Phil. I'm due for supper."

"Right! Sorry if I've made you late. I was sort of scared to go in. As if it were my fault."

"Everybody's that way. When anything happens, you always want to say, 'I didn't do it!'"

He chuckled, clasped her hand where it lay on the wheel. "You're a good kid, Lin," he said, a little surprised at himself, wondering why he said this, glad he had said it.

"You used to call me a brat!"

"You used to be one," he retorted. "But you're outgrowing it. I've had my eye on you. Oh, you play around with the crowd, and you can be the life of the party and all that; but I've noticed you keep your head, too. When the ocean waves dash high, you're the stern and rock-bound coast. You'll do to take along!"

She looked straight ahead, smiling faintly. "You need someone to take along, Phil," she said gently. "You're not a very steady craft, yourself, when high seas are running."

"I know. A good time is apt to go to my head. You've brought me down to earth more than once."

She chuckled. "Both feet on the ground?"

"Funny," he reflected, "that you and I have never been—sentimental about each other. I kid around with other girls, and probably you have your moments too. But we don't get that way. I wonder why."

"I wonder," she echoed, eyes on the road.

"We're just darned good friends. But whenever I've got anything on my mind, I like to talk it over with you."

"Me too," she agreed, and swung into the drive in front of his house.

"Here we are, Phil." She stopped the car and looked at him, waiting for him to get out; and he looked at her, and hesitated, and after a moment she laughed softly and asked, "Is this what you're thinking?" And leaned toward him.

He kissed her. "Thanks, Lin."

"Don't Be an Idiot, Phil!"

he said. "That helps a lot. I dread going in."

"Poor Phil. Keep your chin up," she bade him. "And—come see me, 'bye!"

She drove away, and he carried his bag up the steps and—since the door was always locked—rang. Car and Nellie were out on Sunday evenings, so it was Barbara who came to the door.

"Phil!" she cried.

She caught him and kissed him. He felt her tremble and held her and whispered:

"Hey, Barb! You're shaking."

"Oh, I'm so darned glad you've come, Phil," she murmured. "Today's been awful!"

Mrs. Sentry called from the dining room, "Is that you, Phil?" He winked at Barbara reassuringly, and went in.

His mother said, "We're just sitting down." She looked at him searchingly. Phil saw that his father was almost haggard; thought these last two days must have been a strain. "We didn't expect you," his mother added. "Is anything wrong, Phil?"

"Gosh, no," he protested. "I saw the papers, thought you might need me."

"Isn't it exciting, Phil?" Barbara cried.

Mrs. Sentry said sharply, "Barbara! Don't talk like a shop girl!"

Barbara hesitated; she said almost pleadingly: "I'm sorry, mother! I'm just trying to—be the comic relief or something. We're all so gloomy. Can't we be a little cheerful, please?"

"It's hardly a time for cheerfulness," her mother retorted.

Phil, beginning to eat, said hurriedly: "I've only seen the papers. Is there anything that isn't in them?"

Mrs. Sentry answered him. "No, Phil. At least, nothing that we know. Of course the police are doing everything they can. Inspector Irons was here this afternoon to see your father. Something about the key, wasn't it, Arthur?"

Mr. Sentry nodded. "She had a key to the back door, Phil," he explained. "They found it in her pocketbook. The inspector wanted to know whether I gave it to her, but I couldn't help him. I suppose she stole it while she was working for us."

Mary asked suspiciously, "Phil, why did you come home?"

"Oh, I'm just celebrating," he assured her. "That was some game, yesterday! The best I ever saw. I'm still hoarse from it."

"You look as though you had celebrated all night!"

He grinned in an irritated fashion.

"Since you took up nursing you're keen on symptoms! No wonder doctors' families always have something the matter with them, with someone like you around."

There was a moment's silence; and then Mr. Sentry asked quietly, "Sure there's nothing wrong, Phil?"

"No, father. I just felt like seeing you all."

And Grandmother Sentry demanded, "Why shouldn't he come home if he wants to, Arthur?"

Mr. Sentry said, "Well, after all, college is his job right now." The doorbell rang, and Barbara went to answer it. "But of course we're glad to see you, Phil."

There were voices in the hall. They watched the door. Then Barbara came back, pale terror in her eyes. "Father, it's Inspector Irons," she said in low tones. "He—"

The inspector, without waiting, came in past her; and a second man followed him. Mr. Sentry stood up, holding to the back of his chair. The second man stopped at his elbow. Mr. Sentry said, "Good evening, Inspector."

The inspector said, "Mr. Sentry, I'll ask you to come along with me." Phil stared at his father, felt his police car, into the rear seat. Inspector Irons sat on one side of him, the man in plain clothes on the other. There were policemen in uniform in front, and Phil noticed abstractedly the radio antenna, like an old-fashioned buggy whip, projecting above the roof. He thought in a dull way that his father must be crowded in the narrow seat; since the Inspector was a big man, and so was his companion. The car drove away.

When Phil went back into the house, into the dining-room, old Mrs. Sentry was herself again. He asked, "All right, grandmother?"

"All right? Of course I'm all right," she said sharply. "I was all right all the time. I just did it to give you all something to think about. You were standing around like a lot of statues, scared silly!"

"Your color's come back," Phil commented.

"It was never gone," she insisted.

Mrs. Sentry rose, and she said in a low tone, thinking of the servants, "Come into the living-room."

They followed her quietly, not speaking, not daring to speak. The others sat down, but Phil remained standing. His cheeks were still stiff; his lips felt thick and clumsy. Yet—here were four of them, four women, his sisters, his mother, his grandmother. He was the only man; he must do something, say something.

He said, groping: "How about a rubber of bridge? You don't want to go home yet, do you, grandmother?"

Old Mrs. Sentry said sharply: "Don't be an idiot, Phil! Don't try to stick your head in the sand. All our heads. Face the fact! They think your father killed that girl!"

Barbara gasped, looking from one to another, her eyes beseeching them to deny this. Mrs. Sentry made an indignant sound; and Phil argued unconvincedly: "Oh, I don't think so! They probably just want some more information or something. Maybe they've arrested someone and want father to identify him."

"Nonsense! I'm too old to fool myself, or to be fooled!"

Barbara's eyes were streaming, yet she made no sound. Mary was red as flame. Mrs. Sentry said resentfully, "But mother, you surely don't believe—"

The older woman said curtly: "The police aren't fools! If they had arrested Arthur, be sure they had good reason!"

"I hope you won't talk like that before outsiders!"

"Outsiders!" Grandmother Sentry snorted. "Ellen, you're a plain snob!"

"I have some pride!" Mrs. Sentry said sharply.

"This will shake it out of you!" the old woman predicted, almost with a relish. "I don't know whether Arthur killed this girl or not; but it wouldn't surprise me! It's a wonder to me he hasn't got mixed up with some woman long ago. I don't know how he lives in the same house with you and your pride!"

Mrs. Sentry smiled patiently, thinking: She was always a scold, a harrier. I suppose she was pretty, and Arthur's father lost his head and married her. Then she saw Barbara staring at them both through tears, and she protested, "Really, mother!"

Grandmother Sentry said more gently: "There, Ellen, I'm sorry! We can't mend the past now, I suppose. After all—"

She stopped, for tires hissed on gravel, in the drive outside, and while they listened rigidly, someone came up the steps and rang the bell. Phil cried in a great relief, "There, he's back already!" He went to the door, the two girls on his heels.

Noted Inventor Points Out Helicopter Value in Warfare, Should It Be Needed

The helicopter would prove invaluable as a war defense machine should the United States enter armed conflict, Ivan Eremeeff, Philadelphia inventor, believes, writes a Philadelphia correspondent in the Los Angeles Times.

Eremeeff said the vertical-ascending craft "is ideal for observation purposes, for it is not nearly so easy to see from a distance as an observation balloon."

The War department has a complete record of the development and design of the helicopter, the inventor said, and in event of war probably would immediately begin perfection of the peculiar ship.

Pointing out the benefit of the craft's vertical lifting power—it has whirling horizontal blades in place of the conventional wings—Eremeeff said it "can land anywhere, even on a house roof, or in the branches of a tree, and ascend vertically from the same spots."

Because of its ability to ascend straight up, field hospitals could use the helicopter extensively, mainly by picking up dead and wounded from battlefields, Eremeeff said.

The inventor, who supervised the construction of the first successful helicopter for the United States army eighteen years ago, believes that the big problem in helicopter design lies in control. He said as long as the craft remains level, it is under perfect control, but a steep incline will send it crashing to earth.

Eremeeff said he is planning to design a blade for the helicopter which will control the ship as well as propel it.

The Great Pyramid of Egypt

It is believed that the Great Pyramid of Egypt was built by King Cheops in 4700 B. C., and that 100,000 men were employed for ten years in making a causeway 3,000 feet long to facilitate the transportation of stone from adjacent quarries and the same number of men worked 20 years more to complete the pyramid.

The Hood

Assembly

A very interesting as well as educational evening was spent in the high school auditorium, Sept 23. A free moving picture was presented through the courtesy of the Naval Recruiting Office at Dallas. Mr. Hyde, the man responsible for the picture, was dressed in a blue Navy uniform.
Some of the outstanding Navy departments represented were in Spain, Italy and the Philippine Islands. Although the sailors have many tasks to be mastered, they are like the old saying that reads "all work and no play makes Jennie a dull boy." Therefore part of their time is spent with such sports as football, baseball and feet tennis. During adventures are taken, such as jumping the falls, climbing the steep mountains and learning the tasks of a pilot.

You have always heard of the Philippines as being an ideal spot for romance, and I suppose it is because a Spanish wedding was illustrated on the screen.

You are never too old to learn and so it was the case of those who attended this picture. Just ask any of the students and I just imagine that they can give you a few interesting details concerning the Navy.

Hayride

Happy days were here again
last Friday evening when a group of Juniors and Seniors met and declared a hayride. At 8:00 p. m.
the old horses were hitched to the wagon and they were off to enjoy the rest of the evening.

The slow horses finally arrived at Luttrell's grove where sandwiches, cookies and fruit were gobbled by the group. After finishing with the luncheon they started on the homeward journey.
Only four flats were fixed and the horses were starving for water. They arrived home about 11 o'clock and departed for the night.

Girl Scouts

The girl scouts went on a bike Saturday Sept. 17, when they were out on their picnic they had a business meeting and elected the following officers: Miss Lou Johnson, patrol leader; Geraldine Land, assistant patrol leader; Betty Hooker, secretary and treasurer and Chancey Ruth Key reporter. The girls enjoyed following the trail the boy scouts had left for them. Those who enjoyed the picnic were Miss Lou Johnson, Geraldine Land, Betty
Hooker, June Kirkpatrick, Jane
Ruth Hall, Chancey Ruth Key, Dorothy Jean Rieher and their two leaders, Miss Cleek and Miss Bergner.

Steak Fry

On Monday afternoon a very enthusiastic group of young people gathered at Luttrell's grove to fry steak and forget the school aches and worries. We also carried lunch baskets filled with all of the other appetizing foods that one likes to eat at a picnic. We built a campfire and after frying about ten pounds of steak, Mr. Gregg made a large skillet of gravy. We all agreed that it was about the best we had eaten. (I wonder if that is one of those recipes he carried over from last year.) The following all reported a swell time: Mr.
Gregg, Mr. Sweet, Bruce Edwards, Lamar Adamson, Glenn Richardson, Mrs. Owen, Jennette
Clarke, Eddie Mae Land, Mary Rains Bridges, Geraldine Riley, and Virginia Watt.

Facts

Some interesting facts about the fair:

Ines Meek decided that it wasn't nearly so much fun to stand on your head as it was on your feet, especially when in a loop plane.

La Verne Wade said she preferred eating chicken rather than rattlesnake meat.

Ralph Alewine declares he never saw so many tractors in all his life.

Jane Ruth Hall said she had shut her eyes when she rode on the ferris wheel. I wonder what she saw.

Camilla Doherty remarks that she had rather be in a whirl than ride on an octopus.

Chancey Ruth Key said he wanted to see something thrilling just watch a lion chase a man on a motorcycle.

Jerry Hunt declares he has the time of his life. I wonder how come.

Geraldine Land looked into the fair and saw it a very pleasing prospect.

Taxes Sure to Come, Senator Harrison Warns

Federal Deficit of Four Billion Dollars Faces Country; New Sources of Revenue Sought; More Persons to Be Hit

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—It requires a considerable amount of courage for a politician to talk about taxes in an election year and a hopeful sign when one tells the truth about such a politically delicate matter. When Sen. Pat Harrison, the veteran Mississippi democrat, announced the other day at new taxes are coming, therefore, it became a matter of moment. It was significant first that Senator Harrison, speaking as chairman of the powerful senate finance committee, should boldly say there must be new taxes, and it was significant in the second place because Senator Harrison has not always stood shoulder to shoulder with the New Dealers.

But there is another federal treasury deficit of something like $4,000,000,000 staring us in the face, and the size of it indicates that no progress has been made whatsoever in curtailing federal spending. It tells us, too, that the much ballyhooed business recovery of a year ago is yielding less in taxes than had been calculated by the wisest thinkers.

Thirdly, the probable deficit seems to show there was at least some merit in the assertions by Senator Harrison and others in congress last winter that some of the New Deal policies are driving the country further into a hole instead of bringing it out.

Senator Harrison's statements constitute a warning that federal taxes must dig deeper. In fact, he told the country that the government has been taxing to the point where it can not expect any increased returns from the present sources, however heavy the taxes, and that the scope of taxes must be extended and expanded.

More Persons to Be Hit by Federal Taxes

What does that mean? Simply, it means that in any new tax laws that are enacted, congress will include a greater number of persons within the realm of federal tax sources; people who never have paid taxes to the federal government before are going to pay them hereafter. I am referring to income taxes, directly, but the way the picture looks to me, there will be more taxes that are indirect—and they hit everybody. If congress does extend the scope of federal taxation, it will never be any chance of a need budget, and if the future budget, we may as well kick our bureaucratic form of government to hell.

The reason I say there must be additional "hidden taxes," levies that are included in the cost of the consumer such as the cigarette tax, is that Senator Harrison's own statement shows there will be insufficient revenue raised by lowering the personal exemptions under the tax law or by making the tax heavier on those of, say, $10,000 annual income and above. There can not be a very large addition to the revenue gained in that field for the very good and sufficient reason that there are not enough of those taxpayers. Bureau of internal revenue statistics prove that about 60 per cent of the country's income earners have less than $2,000 per family. As the laws now stand, a person who is married and has an income of $2,000 or less need pay no tax. So it is seen that only a mere drop in the bucket of new revenue can be obtained in that direction, wholly because if all of them were taxed the amount still would be small. Yet, any serious attempt to raise revenue to balance federal expenses must include levies on the lower incomes as well as other new taxes that apply generally.

To Search for New Tax Possibilities

Senator Harrison's committee will search through all of the various tax possibilities in the next three or four months. It will have to do that. The house committee always and means, which considers the legislation in the house, will not have the courage to go as far in adding to the tax burden. It never had that much courage for the reason that its members come up for reelection every two years—and, again, taxes are unpopular things for a politician. Thus, we will have to look to the Harrison committee for progress in bringing the nation's tax receipts into some relation with its spending.

The addition of new taxes is a serious matter, yet it appears that new taxes cannot be avoided. We have had our play time, our fun. We have danced; now, the fiddler must be paid. When new taxes are added, the buying power of every person paying the tax is reduced by that amount. But through five years, money has been spent by the government in ways that do not show we have earned drunken sailor the first time in a year.

Waste, wreckage, nit-wit plans and programs—all have cost billions of dollars.

As everyone knows, when new taxes are added, a greater percentage of the country's voting inhabitants are included.

So, maybe the veteran Senator Harrison has a two-fold purpose in mind, and it takes courage for him to have either one of the two ideas because he is in politics. Maybe he sees the necessity for substantial curtailment of federal spending and realizes at the same time that the life of a politician who opposes spending is a hard road. But if the average citizen is touched by some new taxes, he will not be half as anxious to support the candidate who promises pork, projects and patronage—anything that sends money back into the home district. I would just hazard a guess that the amiable and very clever Senator Harrison is going about the latter job in the only way that it can be accomplished.

I give him praise and wish him success, for preservation of our government is of considerably more moment than a few political flies.

This Is No Joke to Bankers of Country

Some time ago, I reported the existence within administration policies of quite contradictory plans. Here is a new one, and one that to me is quite laughable. It probably is not at all humorous to the bankers of the country, whether they be big bankers or little bankers in small towns. Of course, bankers do not always have a sense of humor; nevertheless, I believe they may be forgiven for failing to laugh at this new condition.

To have a clear understanding of the circumstance, it is necessary to line up the several developments in the order of their appearance as government or administration policy.

First, it will be remembered how President Roosevelt ordered all banks closed (and some stayed closed) at the beginning of his administration. He followed that with legislation by congress that placed new restrictions on how the banks could loan money. It was a pretty good law since it prevented some sharp practices of which some bankers had been guilty.

On top of this law, some 10 or 12 months later, Mr. Roosevelt lambasted the bankers for not making loans to business. He charged them with locking their vaults, called them cowards and what-nots, trying to force money out into the channels of trade when there were few business men doing enough business to pay interest on the money they were using.

Then, the urge came for deposit insurance. Mr. Roosevelt was not enthusiastic about any federal deposit insurance scheme, but Senator Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, had developed a terrible desire to have it. He forced it through congress, and Mr. Roosevelt signed the bill. I think the time will come when the country will regret that law, but that is neither here nor there. It is on the statute books, and the federal deposit insurance corporation has a function to see that banks are properly run.

Another Depression Was the Result

There came the time when Mr. Roosevelt's policies failed to work any better than those under President Hoover, and we had another depression on our hands. Mr. Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, either of his own volition or by White House urging, made several speeches and statements to the bankers as the depression got really bad. He sought to stem the tide by persuading the bankers to make more loans. Some of us here got the impression that Mr. Jones wanted the bankers to shove out the money and ask later on whether they could get it back. Anyway, the sum and substance of the situation was that Mr. Jones was urging the banks to find ways to loan money.

Then came the climax, the peak, and the laugh. Hardly had Mr. Jones concluded his series of lectures to the bankers (who, according to the Jones picture, really did not want to make money) when another government agency gets into the play. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation had something to say about the bankers, and Chairman Crowley issued a statement to all and sundry bankers.

Said Mr. Crowley, in substance: Bankers, the FDIC insures your deposits up to $5,000 per depositor; thus they are protected. But that does not mean you can take a chance on unsound loans. You can't take any greater risk than you would if there was no insurance of the deposits. Just remember that, boys; be careful and don't stub your toes! © Western Newspaper Union.

WANT to see what kind of role Clark Gable drew in his early days of making pictures? Then you'll have to go to "Painted Desert," recently made by RKO-Radio with George O'Brien, originally filmed by RKO-Pathe in 1930. Lee Shumway plays the villain originally played by Gable.

By way of delving into the past again—all the still existing sets that were used for pictures made by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were demolished the other day. Some of them were nearly 20 years old. They'll make room for a setting for the next Goldwyn production, "The Last Frontier."

Pity Carole Lombard. When her pal, Alice Marble, our No. 1 woman tennis player, was winning the Eastern Grass Courts championship at Rye, N. Y., Carole had to depend on daily telegrams to inform her of her friend's progress, because the matches weren't broadcast. Luckily for her the last one was played on Sunday—the strain of trying to work while it was going on would have been terrific!

The latest fashion news is to the effect that soon the girls will be wearing adaptations of the styles of 1904—the reason being that Claudette Colbert will soon be seen in "Zaza," and that the clothes she wears in the picture are so fetching that everybody's going to want clothes like hers.

Felix Knight, the young tenor who's being heard more and more often on the air, is going to keep right on until autumn with his nation-wide program that is heard Fridays from 6:00 to 6:15, EDST, over NBC's red network. One of the things he gets excited about, between broadcasts, is the number of young people whose voices are being ruined because they're going to teachers who aren't really good. Says he knows any number of boys and girls in California, where he used to live, who would be successful if only they were properly taught.

But he can't tell them how to go about finding really good teachers—says that he just happened to be lucky; that he heard some people sing who sang the way he wanted to, and hunted up their teacher.

If you happen to be in New York and want to see some of your favorite radio stars when they're off duty, the place for you to go is the drugstore in the building where the NBC studios are located. Visiting movie folks and stage stars haunt the restaurants, but for some reason the radio stars turn like homing pigeons to that drug store.

Did you happen to be listening to the radio while the music from "Carefree," the new Rogers-Astaire picture, was broadcast with Irving Berlin, its author, in the studio? It's nice music, and apparently it's also a nice picture—but still the rumors grow and grow, to the effect that Astaire wants a new dancing partner, and Ginger wants a new leading man.

Fred Astaire

ODDS AND ENDS—Fred Ibbett, a veteran in the field of radio production, declares that his line of work offers the greatest opportunities to young newcomers of any phase of industry. . . . Tyrone Power had a lot of fun on his trip East—one of his engagements being for lunch with Madge Evans. . . . Madge, incidentally, has fallen for the new fad of painting her finger nails white. . . . Remember Julie Hayden, who left the stage for the movies, and now is a terrific hit on the stage? . . . Well, the movie producers are after her again—can't see how it happened that she just never got any good parts when she was in Hollywood. . . . "Four's a Crowd" is a pretty good picture; better put it on your list.

Becoming, Practical Frocks

THE shops are full of beautiful new fabrics just crying to be made up in smart new fashions—and these patterns make it very easy to do your own sewing. When you do, of course, you can have many more clothes because it's so inexpensive to buy your own, fine quality fabrics—and then your clothes, and your daughter's, too, will have that distinctly made-to-order, well-fitted look that's more flattering and smart than anything else.

For Large Women.

This afternoon dress is carefully designed to look well on large figures. The v-neck, cut in one with the shoulders, makes your face look less full. The short, rippling sleeves minimize the size of your forearm—and they're so pretty and graceful, too. The skirt is smooth over the hips, and the bodice has necessary bust fullness. Here's a dress that will be your favorite, when you make it up in the prettiest silk crepe, georgette or sheer wool that you can find.

For Slim School-Girls.

Your daughter will be delighted with the grown-up, slick look of this basque frock, and yet it's just as simple as a school-girl's dress should be. This is the style that growing girls, too thin for their height, look very well in. The high neckline covers up their collar bones, the puff sleeves and flaring skirt have a filling out effect. This style is pretty in so many fabrics—cotton, wool and silk. Especially linen, gingham, challis, jersey and for dress-up, taffeta.

The Patterns.

1563 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5½ yards of 39-inch material.

1464 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 10 requires 2¾ yards of 39-inch material, plus ¾ yard contrasting.

Success in Sewing.

Success in sewing, like success in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. To help you turn out clothes professional looking in every detail, we have a book which plainly sets forth the simple rules of home dressmaking. The beginner will find every step in making a dress clearly outlined and illustrated within its covers. For the experienced sewer there are many helpful hints and suggestions for sewing short cuts. Luxurious Tailored Suits Take Lead in Fall Styles

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SEEING the luxurious three-piece suits or costume suits, as the case may be, fashioned as they are of glamorous woolsens that are radiant with rich autumnal colorings, one realizes what is meant when Paris says "more color everywhere for fall and winter."

The newer woolsens are superbly colorful, so much so one recognizes in them a direct challenge to the supremacy of black which for so long a time has held sway. The colors featured this season are so glorious within themselves and the combinations that designers create are so daring and unusual, inspired as they are by the richness of the purples, the dregs of wine, tawny browns, deep greens and luminous jewel shades and the surpassing loveliness of the teal blue that is so vastly important just now, it is no wonder that "Paris has gone color-mad" as has been said in regard to recent couturier displays.

The color glory that dramatizes the current fashion picture so thrillingly this season is especially noticeable in the new wool weaves that are being fashioned into stunning coats and suits. In consequence suits and ensembles tailored of genuinely elegant woolsens form the basis for every wisely appointed wardrobe in the opinion of those who guide our fashion destinies.

This demand for high quality does not imply extravagance. As a matter of fact the very opposite is true for having acquired through painstaking regard as to fine finesses in every detail a costume that speaks related color and motif a guarantee has been underwritten which carries the assurance of being well dressed for the majority of occasions that crowd into the days of a modern up-and-doing woman's life.

Perhaps the most important thought to keep in mind concerning this season's suits is the fact that they are softly tailored with subtle feminine touches that have in them no suggestion of stereotyped severe "lines." There are many intriguing trimming touches such as bindings of stitched velveteen finishing the edges of gay plaids or leather may be used instead of the velveteen. Then, too, suede and wool fabric often form an alliance. In every event color is played up to capacity. Consider the very charming three-piece suit to the left in the picture. Here is a glowing example of the effective use designers are making of color. Plum-colored imported tweed having a light blue crossed bar is employed for the making of this smart three-piece. The skirt and the piping on the short jacket are of the plum tweed in monotone. The hat is of matching plum suede with stitched brim. Here is a grand chance to wear light blue accessories and a blouse in blue would offer a pleasing change.

To the right, tweed in a mixture of reddish brown and dark blue is used for the whole outfit. A beaver collar is on the jacket. Hat, bag, gloves and shoes are in reddish brown. This is a three-piece that tunes to weather changes perfectly because of the protective cape that may be worn or not at will.

Speaking of capes, considerable emphasis is being placed on cloth evening wraps and the circular cape of fine broadcloth that extends midway between waist and knees (an inspiration of the nineties) is a favorite. Quaint looking indeed but tres chic just the same.

Interest in smooth face velvety surfaced woolsens is being revived. Broadcloth, suedes, zibelines, duvety types have come into their own this season due to the acceptance of old-fashioned styles given new-fashioned interpretation.

Fur-Sleeved Coat

Fashion dictates fur sleeves for winter cloth coats. They are being shown in endless number and the furs employed are apt to be of any type which, of course, adds zest to the mode. In this instance levis silver fox is employed. Special points of styling interest in the mode pictured is the multiple skirt pleats and the wide crushed leather belt.

Dirndl Is Leader

Among Juveniles

The dirndl may be dwindling in popularity with the grown-up fashion leaders but it continues to hold first place in juvenile styles for the coming season. Many coats as well as dresses designed for little girls from three to six years old show the peasant influence.

One coat that is typical of the trend is made of royal blue velveteen and has a fitted basque top to which is attached a very full shirred skirt section. A little collar of gray squirrel fastens snugly at the throat. Another coat similarly styled is made of wine red wool velour and has cordings of the fabric trimming the dirndl skirt.

Leather Hats Are New Fall Fashion

Leather hats have come to town as spice for the fashion menu.

Lily Dache makes them of kid and suede in such colors as elephant gray, rural autumn (a rich maple leaf red) dawn blue (green blue) and beet root (a deep dark red) as well as the regulation shades trimmed with bright colors. She sends them out with gloves of the same color to wear now with dark frocks and later with fall suits.

New Fall Color

"Tabac" brown, more mellow in its tone than most browns, is off to a good start in the early collections. Maggy Rouff combines it with maroon and deep sage green to make a "mosaic" winter coat formed by pieced-together squares of the three colors.

Braid Trimming Is Smart

IT'S so easy to sew a few rows of braid onto a house dress or a little girl's panty-frock, and it's such a smart way to brighten up simple fashions and make them more becoming. Here are two attractive and unusual designs that you'll enjoy making at home, in pretty fabrics of your own selection. Each includes a detailed sew chart to guide beginners.

The House Dress.

Here's a style so becoming and attractive that you'll probably want to make it of thin wool or sports silk for general wear, as well as of percale, calico, gingham for the house. The very short kimono sleeves are just as easy to work in as no sleeves, and much more becoming. Straight panels front and back, gathers at the sides of the waistline only, give this design an unusually good figure line.

The Panty-Frock.

High waistline, puff sleeves, square necklines—they all look adorable on little girls. This flaring frock buttons down the front so that ambitious tots can easily dress themselves in it. This design will be pretty in so many different materials—gingham, challis, percale and dimity. A dress-up version in taffeta will be sweet, too; trim that with ribbon instead of the braid.

1570 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36

His Fault!
"You were right, Henry, and I was wrong."
"Forgive me, dear."

That's Easy
Little Cuthbert—I can never tell which is "d" and which is "b."
Little Betty—Oh, the "b" is the one with the stomach in back.

He's That
Father—Isn't it time you were entertaining the prospect of matrimony?
Daughter—Not quite, dad. He won't be here until eight o'clock.

A gold digger is a girl who takes her fund where she finds it.

Unappreciated One
"What is a dramatic critic, dad?"
"A man who gives the best jeers of his life to the theater."

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.
Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Be It Right
Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.

HAY FEVER

Doctors use LYCAR to give sure, quick relief to all symptoms. This valuable medicine also helps ward off attacks by supplying the body with needed elements. Stop suffering today. Ask your druggist, or send $1.00 to LYCAR, Port Worth, Texas.

Uncle Phil Says:

Most Precious of Triumphs

Who begrudges the joy of a writer who finds the public like what he writes?

If one is an intelligent man, he can enjoy his college education even if it doesn't aid him to make money.

Everyone of us ought to own a small piece of the United States. It is such a solid foundation for patriotism.

Attagirls!

Girls who marry do not make so many miscalculations as you think; but they heroically make a chance.

A philosopher sees the good and bad in everything; and that poll all his decided opinions.

They're Able to Collect

No economic reform that seeks to make it easier for the incompetent, lasts long. The competent demand full pay, sooner or later. No matter how many suckers there are, we'd hate to take one in. We'd feel cheap.

Gold gets men into the outdoors, but does it really inspire in them a love of nature?

TO KIDNEY SCREW UP

Your money back if you cannot get relief from Doan's Kidney Pills. It worms out the trouble and flies away. Ask your

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging headaches, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Doan's Kidney Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Also endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
