Methodist Pastors Meet Brotherhood Meeting

Rev I E Biggs was host to the District Covenant Meeting of the pastors of Clarendon District Rev G T Palmer presiding Opening, Hymn and Scripture reading, Col 3:17; after which some searching questions on personal experience were asked, and each pastor present formulated his answer as to his fitness of a ministry of helpfulness that will be a perpetual benediction. Then came questions as to prayer, Bible reading, preaching and many others, to promote growth in church work. The blessings that will come through such meetings as this one are incalculable.

Beguiling Silk Lingerie That's Styled Dress-Like

By CHARIE NICHOLAS

YOU must have a hobby. Nerve specialists recommend it. They tell us in order to keep fit, stay young and be zestful in life everyone should seek relaxation from the humdrum and routine of life by following up some one subject, some one pursuit of all-absorbing interest.

As for this absorbing pursuit, or "hobby" we know of none so all-prevailing among the fair sex as the love of lace-laden, ribbon-pertied silk lingerie finery. So let's talk about the entrancing negligees and gowns and housecoats and evening bedjackets that this season go to make up an alluring collection of boudoir fantasies as ere intrinsically feminine fancy.

In regard to modern trends it would seem as if the thought uppermost in the minds of current designers is to create negligees that may serve many purposes, rather than be restricted for wear in one boudoir. This movement accounts, no doubt, for the outstanding feature about the new silk lingerie which this season has all the individuality and high styling of a dress.

That our smartest daytime negligees and pastel sheer wools are being over-pleated is a well-known fact. See this manner of styling reflected in the new sheer silken "at home" robes that are worn over matching or contrasting gowns, giving the feminine appearance of the "smoking salts" era of romance. It is requiring yards and yards of pleated silk sheer to arrive at this romanticism but the result is worth the extravagance judging from the enchanting ensemble shown to the right in the illustration. As millinery moves about in this maze of diaphanous pleats the sheer loveliness of this creation is like unto that of a Grecian goddess. This full length coat in mirage blue silk sheer with knotted short sleeves and Grecian lace bust treatment is worn over a trianon rose gown with red bra top appliqued with matching lace.

Again, speaking of lingerie fashions that take on the styling of a dress, wouldn't you think, if we were not telling you otherwise, that the lovely lady seated in the foreground of the group was gowned in a party frock? Fact is this is a boudoir fantasy designed especially for women who like to breakfast in bed or sit pillowed in cushions in luxurious ease. The bolero is of silk sheer lastex quilted and bound with plain satin and makes an intriguing bedjacket to wear with another gown as well as the one here shown. Off with this fanciful bolero and a gown of exquisite pure silk satin is revealed that has a silk sheer top of lastex in quilted effect and plain satin binding matched to the jacket.

A Victorian-inspired boudoir ensemble graces the queenly figure standing to the left in the picture, consisting of a satin gown with a lace yoke and over it a "coat" of matching chiffon, with lace applications and ruffles that cascade all the way down the front, also edging the sleeves. The ensemble comes in such lovely shades as shell pink, palest blue, champagne, and white. The lace is dyed in each case to match the color of the satin and chiffon.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Gives Some Timely Hints on How to Keep Up Fuel Value of Winter Diet; Discusses New Methods for Quick Baking

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

MIDWINTER weather calls for energizing breakfasts to get the day off to a good start . . . energizing midday meals to help keep children and adults functioning efficiently . . . energizing, but easily digested, evening meals to satisfy bodily requirements without over-taxing the digestive system.

In addition to the need for supplying meals that are adequate as to energy values and other nutritional requirements, the homemaker has two other important factors to consider; she must satisfy the appetites of various members of her family . . . and she must keep within her food budget.

Breadstuffs—The Staff of Life

One of her greatest aids in bread in various forms. Breadstuffs, or other foods made from grain, are undoubtedly the largest single item in the dietary of the majority of people throughout the world. They appear in some form at almost every meal. And they are also highly satisfactory as a between-meal lunch for rapidly growing school children.

Breadstuffs are notable for their energy values and for their ease of digestion. They contain some protein and minerals, and under some circumstances, they may also carry other significant food values.

Bread and rolls combine well with milk, cheese, butter and meat. They make good eating and give a comfortable feeling of satisfaction afterwards. Such simple combinations as bread and cheese, or rolls and milk, are highly effective in satisfying hunger. And they go a long way toward meeting nutritional requirements.

A Notable Food Team

Nutritionists have a high regard for the combination of bread and milk. Breadstuffs are generally regarded as a most economical source of energy and protein in the diet. Milk is our most nearly perfect food. And the proteins of milk supplement those found in the grains of which bread and rolls are made.

Children especially should consume some form of bread, toast, or well-baked rolls at every meal. These easily digested foods supply the fuel values that most active youngsters require in abundance. Rolls and bread with a well-baked crust have the additional advantage of encouraging thorough mastication.

During adolescence, the energy requirements are especially high. Boys sometimes eat more than their fathers, and it is desirable that the extra calories be provided in the form of such easily digested and wholesome foods as breadstuffs. This is also an advantage to the homemaker, from the point of view of economy, as breadstuffs rank as one of our most reasonably priced foods. Adolescent girls, on the other hand, frequently develop finicky appetites and strange food habits. They may wish to go to school without breakfast—a practice which must be discouraged as it may lead to undernutrition from which "nerves" may develop.

Adolescents Like Variety

One way to help growing girls to be energetic is to encourage them to eat some form of bread at every meal. This will help to keep up the fuel value of the diet at very little expense.

Mothers must, however, guard against loss of interest in breadstuffs by various members of their families, as a result of monotony. Luckily, there is no reason why this should occur in any home. For it is possible to provide breadstuffs in such a variety that the same kind need not be served twice in succession within the space of one or two weeks.

You can add variety to the diet by preparing bread from graham, whole wheat or rye flour. Rolls can be made from plain or sweet dough. Some of the more popular are Parker House rolls, sandwich rolls, finger rolls, cinnamon buns, butterscotch rolls and pecan rolls.

A New Leavening Agent

Some homemakers may feel that it is too costly to purchase such fancy breads outside the home. And they may feel that they cannot spare the time required for home baking. Such arguments might have been valid in the past. But not any more!

Recently a new kind of yeast has been developed which makes it possible to prepare a variety of hot breads at home—more quickly than ever before. Thus, home baking follows the trend of the times and becomes quick-baking.

One reason why modern homemakers have been reluctant to make bread and rolls at home, I believe, has been the difficulty of obtaining a leavening agent that was both quick-acting and possessed good keeping qualities.

Yeast is the most satisfactory leavening agent for bread and rolls. Heretofore, only two types had been available. Fresh, or compressed yeast, and dried yeast. Both of these products are composed of yeast plants combined with cereal.

Fresh yeast has a higher moisture content, however, and because of this, spoils rapidly. Hence, it must be purchased fresh, kept well refrigerated, and used within a few days. Dried yeast keeps several weeks at room temperature and has, therefore, been regarded as more practical. Its great disadvantage has been that it acts less quickly, owing to the fact that some of the yeast plants are destroyed during the drying.

Keeps and Is Quick-Acting

But nowadays homemakers can buy a new kind of yeast. A new, fast, pure yeast that combines the keeping qualities of dry yeast with speedy action.

This product is a dry yeast that comes in the form of small granules. It softens promptly in water, and is then ready for use. Moreover, it keeps its strength and activity for several weeks, so that it can be kept on hand at all times.

Homemakers can bake whenever it is convenient. And what delicious bread and rolls they can make. Such wholesome combinations as prune bread, combining both white and whole wheat flour with seeded, uncooked prunes . . . refrigerator rolls, coffee cakes, raisin bread, wholesome raised doughnuts, waffles and buckwheat cakes.

It cannot be denied that bread is one of the oldest foods known to man. But just to prove that even our most basic foods may be improved—along comes this revolutionary yeast to provide a leavening that is more satisfactory than ever before, perhaps, to homemakers all over the country.

FERRY'S DATED SEEDS Give a Thought to MAIN STREET

For, in our town . . . and towns like ours clear across the country . . . there's a steady revolution going on. Changes in dress styles and food prices . . . the rise of a hat crown . . . the fall of furniture prices—these matters vitally affect our living . . . And the news is ably covered in advertisements.

Smart people who like to be up-to-the-minute in living and current events, follow advertisements as closely as headlines.

They know what's doing in America . . . and they also know where money buys most!

Plaid Silk Hat

Fashion is calling for color and more color. Milliners are answering the cry, with hats made of plaid surah or taffeta with bags to match. The picture shows how cheerfully the new gay plaid trend ties up with an otherwise all black costume. The use of plaid accents is apparent in many of the new dress and hat collections. Stripes are quite as important and many spring hats are to be seen trimmed with scarfs of vivid plaids or stripes.

Boleros Are Necessary

Take your boleros straight, long, short or with a dash of embroidery. But be sure to consider them as necessities for pepping up an appetite for fashions.

Hooded Coats

Winter coats with hoods will be seen when the snow flies.

See Junk Jewelry In Spring Colors

Junk jewelry, made up in the best of the spring accessory colors, such as the cyclamen range of pinks, fuchsia, magenta red, violet, pastel, and vivid blue, lime green, and golden to mustard yellow, is being used to give a color note to the best winter dresses.

Velvet or silk ribbon bracelets with heavy jeweled plaques at the front are worn in pairs, with a jeweled clip to match them. Enamel clips and clips set with fake stones, in big sizes, are very chic. One of the enamel flower clips is made to represent twin morning glories in fuchsia and blue with a gold stem.

Jeweled hat pins continue to be worn in the new hats.

New Gloves Match Footwear or Bags

Glove, shoe and handbag ensembles of medium price have been launched in one-color combinations, such as purplish blue or rust . . . Basque dresses, molding the figure to the hipbones, are being shown universally for midseason wear.

White dots and stars pepper the black crepe jacket frocks featured by a New York shop as stepping stones from winter crepes to spring prints . . . Cotton plaids are being talked about as "comers" for spring.

Linen Slacks Used

Short ankle-length slacks and very short shirt are in a pure white, silky, thin shantung linen. The yoke pockets and dark scarf are details—high-soled clogs.

Pastels Popular

Pastel shades of blue, mauve and purple are most popular.

In the middle of the first week at York, business called Phil back to town; and Linda of course came with him. That night at home, her father, watching her, discovering her increasing distress, spoke doubtfully.

"I know how you love Phil, Lin," he said. "Your mother and I understand. But—we hate to see your life broken by it. If he feels he must be with his mother—"

"I'll wait," she said.

He shook his head. "That isn't fair," he urged. "Not fair to yourself—or to us, Lin. We've been sympathetic, but—we want you to be happy, some day. Please."

"I'd rather be unhappy, loving Phil, even if I never can have him."

"It isn't even fair to Phil," he insisted; and Linda cried, her self-control for a moment cracking:

"Oh, be still! What do I care what's fair? There's no fairness in it, anyway. Fair? Was it fair for this to happen to Phil? To all of them? Is it fair to me that I can't have him now?"

And then, suddenly contrite, seeing his sorrow, she was in his arms, weeping. "Oh father, father, what am I going to do?"

He held her close. "There, Lin!" he told her. "Sorry. I didn't mean to make it harder. Whatever you do, we're standing by."

"So am I," she whispered. "So am I. But I'm awful sick of it. It's so long, long, long—"

Yet with Phil in the office next morning she managed as always to be steady, reassuring, calm. While he dictated, his eyes rested inattentively on her head, bowed above her notebook; but his thoughts were on his dictation, till as the last letter was done he stopped in mid-sentence, staring at the hair above her brow.

She looked up inquiringly, and he finished the letter; but when she had gone to her typewriter and he was alone, he was troubled and full of a deep, protective concern. Unmistakably, in the dark masses of Linda's hair, there were threads of gray.

He thought, incredulously, that she was no older than Barbara Twenty-one? Twenty-two? She had been, through these months, so composed that it had not occurred to him to think of her as suffering, weary and torn and tired from giving herself without stint so long. She must rest, he decided, must give up the work here; and he considered how to tell her so. When a little after noon, in her car, they started for York again, he began to make an opening for this suggestion.

"You know, Lin," he said, "you've carried me through all this. I don't know what I'd have done without you to talk to. It has helped a lot, just—worrying out loud to you."

If there was bitterness in her smile he did not see it. "Of course," she said. "That's what I'm here for, isn't it, Phil? At least I can do that much for you."

He said, half-smiling: "You keep me going, and I keep mother going. That's what it amounts to."

Her glance flashed toward him almost angrily. "You enjoy feeling that you're—indispensable to her, don't you?" Her tone was a challenge.

"I—suppose so," he admitted. "At least it's a job to do."

"If she told you you were just a nuisance, you'd probably be angry, or hurt."

"Yes, probably."

"You know," she said resentfully, "I think that's often the way. We hang on and hang on, telling ourselves we're important, when as a matter of fact we're just—boring people. I'm not at all sure that we couldn't help more by taking care of ourselves, letting other people go their own road."

He smiled. "You can't mean I've—bothered mother?"

"Well, no one can learn to walk till they get rid of their crutch, Phil." Her tone was gentle now, yet she said: "You've been her crutch. It's about time she learned to walk alone."

"I couldn't leave her, Linda!"

"Oh, I suppose not," she assented briefly. They were at the moment stalled in traffic. When now the green light released them, she meshed the gears with a clashing vehemence that was somehow eloquent, and let in the clutch so sharply that the car leaped jerkily ahead. He said, trying to laugh:

"Whoa! Trying to break our necks?"

"Sorry!" But she did not sound sorry; and she spoke in a sharp decision. "Phil, you'd better tell Miss Randall to find you a new stenographer. I'll stay till she gets someone; but then I'm through."

He had meant, a while ago, to tell her just this; to tell her that he could not let her any longer sacrifice her youth and her happiness to him; to tell her that she must leave him. But now at her word he felt a deep hurt and loss.

"Had enough?" he asked in level tones.

"I'm tired, too tired to keep it up. I may go abroad, anywhere."

"Well, you're wise," he agreed carefully. "Summer's a hot, hard time. But of course, I'll miss you!"

"You'll find somebody easily enough."

"Oh yes, don't worry, Lin. We'll get along."

"People do, don't they?"

"Yes. Yes, somehow."

She laughed mirthlessly. "I've been—flattering myself persuading myself you couldn't do without me."

"Well, you've helped a lot, Lin. Probably I won't realize how much till I have to go it alone."

"Oh, you'll get used to it! And—you'll never learn to walk till you throw away your crutch. I'm tired of being a crutch, anyway."

They were clear of the worst traffic, came to the straight reaches of the Turnpike, sped a while in silence.

"See here, Lin," he protested at last. "You—sound bitter. Mad. That's not like you."

Her lips twisted; he thought they quivered, too, and there was a thickening in her tones.

"Why shouldn't I be bitter, and mad?" she demanded; and then she said: "Oh, I know I've no one to blame but myself!" She stepped on the throttle viciously; the car leaped ahead. "Goodness knows you didn't encourage me! But like a fool I kept hoping—"

"I want to hit sixty, Lin!"

"I want to hit seventy, eighty!" The car was racing.

"Stop it, Lin!" he insisted. "Slow down." And he said, "I'll cut the switch, unless you do."

"Oh, all right." She dropped to a fifty that by comparison seemed like crawling; and she said:

"I've hung on, and hung on, hoping some day you'd want me so bad you'd forget your father, and your mother, and how much she needed you, and everything. I guess I was a fool, that's all. Your mother doesn't really need you, and Barbara doesn't. Nobody needs you but me—" Her voice broke. "I need you awfully, Phil," she pleaded. "Can't you see? And you need me."

He said, staring straight ahead: "I love you, Lin, God knows. But—it isn't only that mother needs me. It's—that nobody—that I can't marry anybody."

She drove on, and he watched the road, and the road sped to meet them mile on mile. Mile on mile, she was an automaton, like one frozen, at the wheel; and his eyes were bleak on emptiness; and the road raced toward them like a ribbon, dove beneath them, so was gone.

He watched the traffic light shine green half a mile ahead; saw it yellow and then red as they drew near. They were close. They were upon it! He cried in quick alarm:

"Lin! Red light!"

Her brakes bit—just in time. They slewed and swerved and skidded to a stop with screaming tires; and a car slid across in front of them with bare inches to spare. The driver bawled something, furiously, and was gone.

The lights changed. Linda, still in that stony silence, meshed her gears and crossed the intersection. She picked up speed; and then Phil cried suddenly:

"Stop, Lin! Slow down!"

She obeyed, staring at him.

"What's the matter?"

Phil laughed, and there was a deep intoxication in his tones. He said, like one awakening, "Why—I must be crazy, Lin!"

"Crazy? Phil, what do you—"

"Sure, crazy! Why, I honestly thought, Lin, that I could let you go!"

Her eyes, probing his, quickened at what she saw. Her head rose, her cheeks were bright!

She looked ahead, as though searching for something. There was a cross-road, of rough gravel. She swung the car into it, drove it bounding up a steep slope till from the crest lowlands spread far and green below them, and they were alone. She stopped there, and stilled the engine, and turned to him, and smiled.

"Now—what were you saying, Phil?" she suggested politely.

"Please—" Then her voice broke, and she could no longer smile, and her eyes were full. "Oh Phil, please—please go on!"

Early in September, Mrs. Sentry suddenly decided to go to Cleveland to see Barbara, and Phil must go along. He and Linda had not told with them, smiling, calling words of farewell. Her eyes held his as the train slid away.

"Well," said Mrs. Sentry then, "it's nice to have you to myself for a while. Of course Linda's sweet; but she's with us so much."

Phil colored, and pretended to look out of the window so that she might not see. "Be nice to see Barbara again," he remarked. "And Dan."

She chuckled. "I have a few things to say to Dan!"

"What about?"

"I haven't told you," she confessed, "but Barbara is going to have a baby. She wrote me last week. That's why I decided to go out to Cleveland."

"But—that's great, mother!" Phil cried. "Is she all right?"

"Of course she's all right! Why shouldn't she be? But Dan's salary is ridiculously inadequate. They can't afford a baby."

He grinned. "Lots of people do, on less!"

"Lots of people do lots of things I don't expect Barbara to have to do."

Phil said cheerfully, "You know, you're secretly hoping she'll need you to take care of her for a while."

"Don't be absurd! My place is with you!"

"Oh, I'd get along," he said, and wished to say, "You know, Linda and I—" But his mother's eyes swung shrewdly toward him before he could speak, and his courage failed; and she smiled at nothing and said:

"Russian Bank, Phil? It helps pass the time."

It was hours later and he was in his berth, undressed and about to turn out his light, when he remembered that envelope Linda had given him, still in the pocket of his coat on the hanger here beside him. He reached up and got it and drew out the contents. There was a note from Linda herself:

Dear—

Take all my love with you, Phil. This letter came to the office addressed to you, after you left today. It's from Mary, so I didn't open it. Since it's addressed to you, I thought perhaps she didn't want your mother to know about it. That's why I was so mysterious.

And my dearest love to my dearest. Come back soon.

Linda.

Bumble Bee Colony May Number Up to 300 or 400; Put in Very Busy Summer

The bumble, or humble, bee is recognized by its large, thick hairy body and long bass hum. The colonies are not numerous compared with those of wasps, or the stingless or the honey bee. A populous colony may number from 300 to 400 individuals, according to a writer in the Indianapolis News. The proportions of sexes and castes of some species have been found to be, in a colony of 120, 25 females, 36 males and 59 workers. The roundish oval cells differ in size and have no exact arrangement. Besides the cells containing the young, the old discarded ones are made to serve as honey tubs or pollen tubs.

The queen bee awakens in early spring from her winter's sleep under the leaves or moss, or in deserted nests, and selects a nesting place, generally in an abandoned nest of a field mouse, or beneath a stump or sod, and immediately collects a small amount of pollen mixed with honey, and in this deposits from seven to fourteen eggs, gradually adding to the pollen mass until the first brood is hatched. As soon as food enough has been collected, she lays the eggs for the second brood. As soon as the larvae are capable of motion and begin feeding, they eat the pollen by which they are surrounded, and gradually separating, push their way in various directions. When they have attained their full size they spin a silken wall about them, which is strengthened by the old bees covering it with a thin layer of wax. When the larvae reach the pupa stage, at which time they remain inactive until their development, they cut their way out and are ready to assume their duties.

The first brood that comes forth usually is composed of workers; about the middle of the summer eggs are deposited which produce both small females and males. All eggs laid after the last of July produce the large females or queens. On the approach of winter, all except the queens, of which there are several in each nest, die.

HEALTH

Injection of "Hardening" substance causes varicose veins to dry up.

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT WOULD be safe to say that at least two of every five adults have varicose veins to some degree—in the legs, ankles, lower bowel (hemorrhoids), scrotum (varicocele) and elsewhere. Fortunately most cases require no treatment as no symptoms are present. There are a great number of cases of varicose veins in the legs, sometimes accompanied by varicose ulcers difficult to heal. Just what should or should not be done is often a problem to these patients.

As a guide to patients and physicians in the treatment of varicose veins, Doctors Howard R. Mather and Alton Osborn, New Orleans, after some suggestions in Annals of Surgery, recommend the use of a light band or tourniquet across different levels of the thigh—upper third, the mid thigh and the lower third. When the patient lies with the tourniquet applied the varicosities—swollen, twisted parts of veins—do not stand out as much as when standing still or walking without the tourniquet, but in certain instances there are different degrees of improvement with the tourniquet at different levels.

Treatment—by injection or operation—is not recommended in advanced age, lowered vitality, pregnancy, tumors or inflammation of veins (phlebitis).

"Hardening" Substance Used

The "active" treatment consists of injecting the veins with a "hardening" substance which causes them to dry up, or removing portions of the veins by operation.

Cases chosen for the injection method are:

1. Early cases with small varicose veins of the calf or lower leg in which the deep veins will return the blood to the heart when the varicose veins are destroyed.

2. Certain cases which refuse operation.

3. Cases where patients dislike idea of operation but are willing to undergo injection treatment at present time.

The combined injection and surgical treatment is used in cases with moderate or severe varicose veins where there are no conditions present which would prevent good and safe results.

Where the condition of the varicose veins is not considered severe enough to require injection or operation, rest, keeping legs up on chair or higher as much as possible, and the use of elastic stockings and bandages is recommended.

Appendicitis Deaths Can Be Decreased

When the death rate for appendicitis in one large city is about three times that of another large city, there must be some reason other than the skill of the surgeons on the staff and equipment of the hospital.

Dr. Mont R. Reid, Cincinnati, in Surgery, states that the lapse of time between the onset of the symptoms and operating appears to be the important factor in determining the death rate. For example, in Philadelphia where the length of time between the appearance of the first symptoms and operation is 49 hours, the death rate is 11 per cent; whereas in Cincinnati, where the death rate is over 30 per cent.

Statistics also show that the taking of purgatives definitely increases the death rate.

In communities where intensive campaigns have been conducted to educate the public with respect to dangers of delaying operation and taking purgatives, the death rate has been greatly reduced and doctors have been forced by public sentiment to adopt the policy of advising immediate consultation with a surgeon in cases of acute unruptured appendicitis.

Early Operations Necessary.

Just as a physician would not refuse to use antitoxin for diphtheria, so should the physician, in light of the knowledge that early operation lowers the death rate in appendicitis, not neglect to advise early operation.

Dr. Reid also states that in his experience when he is sure an unruptured appendix is present, he advises immediate surgery. "It has long since refused the responsibility of 'observing' any case of acute appendicitis. In my practice it must be borne by the patient or his family."

Another point is that while the typical or "usual" signs of appendicitis—pain that starts in region of stomach and then shifts down to lower right side of abdomen—stays there, together with nausea and vomiting—are found in the majority of cases, the appendix may be situated at other than its regular position and so not give the usual symptoms.

A Long Lesson

Life is a long lesson in humility.—J. M. Barrie.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, going up nights, leg pains, swelling—but constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Use Doan's Pills. Don't help the kidneys to get rid of excess poisons from your body waste. They are antiseptic to the urinary tract and tend to relieve irritation and the pain it causes. If you're a busy person, remember Doan's. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Ask your neighbor.

WTU Drivers Win National Safety Award

Typical Driver Posing with Trophy

Driving 184 cars and trucks nearly three million miles in 1938 with less than one accident per 100,000 miles was a feat which won drivers for the West Texas Utilities Company national attention and the safety award made by the Bureau of Safety in a contest between a group of companies of similar size. Serving a territory 45,000 square miles in length and breadth, the West Texas Utilities Company service and supervisory employees, driving cars and trucks, covered a total of 2,916,919 miles last year and were involved in only 24 accidents, few of which were serious and none was fatal. Pictured with the trophy is George Harris, line service truck driver in the Amarillo district.
