The bride wore a lovely teal blue suit with black accessories.

They both attended the Lamesa schools. Mr. Warren is now attending the University of Texas.

Fashionable Silks Stress Plaids, Stripes and Checks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT are you doing about plaids, stripes, dots and checks in print silks for your spring and summer frocks, for your redingotes or bolero costume suits and for the many blouses you will need to complete a smart wardrobe? If you have not already done so, you really should take steps in this matter, for one or the other of these types has practically become a "must" in the up-to-the-minute clothes collection.

Your choice is in no way limited for every type from classic checks and stripes to color-glorified plaids are represented and it's ditto for dots. Quaint checks in conventional sizes and simple two-color treatments which return to vogue with the "southern belle" fashions, inspiring by the movie version of "Gone With the Wind," are at their best in silk, such as taffeta or taffeta-ize silk crepe. These checks are stylish for mother as they are for daughter, and as chic for evening as for day wear. Reminiscent of Civil War days is the dress shown in the right in the illustration. It is of black and white checked silk taffeta with deep square décolletage both front and back. Dainty white lingerie embroidery (most evening costume carries a lingerie touch this season) outlines the squared neckline and trims the sprightly sleeves.

Surah silk is big news. Fashion dressmakers are making a big to-do about this silk, hailing its revival as one of the most significant fabric style trends this season. The new check surahs will delight you.

Cloque Organdy

From now on through the spring and summer season the world of fashion is destined to see myriads of ruffles and flounces. The latest trend is toward the new tiered silhouette. You will see this treatment not only in summery sheers but likewise in light woollens and crepes and crepes, for afternoon wear. The model pictured interprets this new tier silhouette to a nicety in a party frock made of lovely, colorfully printed cloque organdy. If you have not already done so, be sure to acquaint yourself with this exquisite summer fabric. It makes the most adorable dresses one can imagine.

Late Styles Turn To Tailored Suits

In the suit brigade for spring are large groups of very strictly tailored suits which have slightly longer than hip-length jackets and skirts that usually are gored or plaited. Jackets bound around with braid are frequently shown with such suits.

They come in smooth twills or hard woollens, and are rather masculine-looking, but go with blouses which are so sweet, feminine, and dainty that they become girlish in effect.

Shirtwaist Frock Latest for Evening

The shirtwaist-and-skirt theme for evening has quite a following. Some gay spirits have concocted informal dinner gowns by adding a bishop-sleeved shirtwaist blouse of white silk or dotted chiffon to the long dark skirts of their evening tailors. Sometime they link the two with a gay cummerbund.

Others dress for informal home dinners in a long dark skirt and a sheer short-sleeved white organdy blouse.

Detachable Skirt Does Double Duty

Buy your new print frock or make it yourself as you will, but if you want it to do double duty see to it that you add a detachable skirt of dark silk crepe that has a wide crush corselet girdle that buttons about the waist, the skirt open up front to show off the print to better advantage.

To Lend a Lazy Look
The importance of silk lace, not only as a trimming but for entire dresses, is an interesting new note struck by outstanding designers.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Explodes Some False Notions About Food; Warns Homemakers Against Fallacies and Superstitions

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IT HAS been well said that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. This is particularly true of dietary facts, for half-truths can be more misleading than lies.

There should be no place for half-truths, misinformation or superstition in a matter so vital as the choice of food. Yet judging from the letters that come to my desk, thousands of homemakers are being influenced, not by scientific knowledge, but by "old wives tales," and a multitude of fads and fancies which there is not a shred of scientific evidence to support.

Some food fallacies are harmless. Others may be detrimental to health. For they result in an unbalanced diet that deprives the body of substances needed to maintain physical efficiency at the highest possible level.

Misinformation About Meat

Many common and persistent fallacies concern the eating of meat. It is wrongly charged that light meats are more wholesome than dark meats. . . . that veal is not completely digested. . . . that meat is a contributing cause to disease, and many other equally foolish notions. All these misconceptions are in a class with the absurd ideas that eating turnips will make you brave, that lettuce is a cure for insomnia, or fish a food for the brain.

There is no evidence to support the belief that some meats are less desirable than others because they are less completely digested. Tests show that the length of time meat remains in the stomach varies with such factors as the quantity of fat present, the method of cooking, and the amount of chewing it receives. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meats are digested.

Erroneous Ideas About Cheese

Other fallacies that continually crop up in my mail are the ideas that cheese is constipating, and that this good food is not completely digestible. Neither belief is in accordance with the facts.

Numerous tests have shown that when cheese is given a proper place in the diet, it is usually well digested. Moreover, it has been demonstrated that there is practically no difference between cheese and meat with respect to ease of digestion.

As for the completeness with which this food is utilized by the body, studies made by investigators for the United States department of agriculture, demonstrated that on the average, about 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed!

Some few persons may have an allergy to cheese just as they are sensitive to a variety of other protein foods. But that is an abnormal reaction and has no bearing on the use of cheese by persons in normal health.

Cheese Is Not Constipating

The mistaken idea that cheese is constipating doubtless arose from poor menu planning. Cheese is a highly concentrated food. It enjoys the distinction of being the most concentrated source of protein known. Because of this fact, menus containing cheese should be balanced by the inclusion of foods containing bulk or cellulose, such as fruits, vegetables or whole grain breads. When these foods are omitted, it is not the presence of cheese, but the absence of bulk that is responsible for the meal being insufficiently laxative.

Homemakers who have the interests of their families at heart will banish the notion that cheese is either constipating or difficult to digest when properly used. They will give this splendid food a regular place in their menus and thereby provide valuable nourishment at a most economical cost. It is doubtful if any other food provides such a variety of important nutrients concentrated in such a small space. Besides its fine quality protein, cheese is notable for its energy values, for supplying the minerals, calcium and phosphorus, needed for teeth and bones, and as a source of vitamin A.

Don't Make Mistakes About Milk

Not even milk has escaped a variety of groundless superstitions. It is said to be "fattening" when the truth of the matter is Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

"You'll see lots more with me," Clint promised. "This is a bum one, really." And he urged: "Let's start home. We can drive slowly and—be together without so many people round. Unless you want to see the rest of this?"

June—a little reluctantly—professed a complete lack of interest in the film; yet she looked back wistfully as they went up the aisle. Upon their arrival, she had not removed her coat till they reached their seats; but now in the lobby she expected some word from him about her new gown. When he said nothing, merely offered to help her into her coat, she protested:

"You haven't noticed my dress. Don't you think it's nice?"

Clint stood back to survey her, chuckling. "Sure, grand!" he declared. He came close to her again. "But what you wear doesn't make any difference to me, June."

"Asa gave it to me!"

"Asa?" Clint echoed, frowning faintly. "Why?"

She slipped her arms into the sleeves of the coat he held. "He told me to wear it to catch a young man!" she confessed, laughing up at him over her shoulder. "He knows about you and me."

Clint chuckled with pleasure. "It will be my turn to buy pretty things for you soon," he said happily; and her hand tightened on his arm as they went out to the car.

They drove slowly, Clint clinging to this hour; and when they came in front of the great sprawling house at last, he stopped and turned off the lights, and said urgently:

"Let's sit here a few minutes. You don't have to go right in."

"I must, soon," she urged, yet made no move to leave.

They found no great need of words. They were snug in the car, the windows raised against the rain. There was a light in the rear part of the Taine house; and June said, with a ripple of mirth in her tones:

"Uncle Justus is still asleep in his chair. If no one wakes him up, he may sleep there all night."

"Is that his room?" Clint asked, surprised.

"No, he's in the kitchen." Her tone was mirthful. "He likes to warm his feet in the oven door."

"Who's sitting over there?" he asked, nodding in the other direction.

"Aunt Evie and Asa are staying with Grandma Bowdon," she explained. "Rab had to go to Providence."

They felt, rather than heard, a low rumble of sound; and Clint said: "Hullo, that was thunder. I didn't see a flash."

"I did, out of the corner of my eye," she told him. "Off through the woods that way." She pointed past the houses; and she said, and he heard her voice shake: "We had a thunder-shower the night Mother died. A terrible one. And she added:

"Uncle Justus has turned out his light. The thunder must have wakened him." Clint saw that the Taine house was indeed dark now; and then June cried, a sudden tension in her tones: "Clint, look!"

"What?" he asked, surprised; and he stared past her.

There was a faint brightness, in the shape of a rectangle, against the front of the Hurdur house. The brightness assumed color; and Clint reached across the girl to lower the window so that he might see more clearly. That rectangle identified itself as the open front door of the house, outlined in red.

And suddenly this dull red became bright; they saw the flicker of a flame.

They scrambled out together; they started to race across the lawn. As they did so, a car passed along the road behind them, and Clint turned back and shouted:

"Hey, fire! Ring in an alarm!"

He saw the driver dimly, saw the man's head nod. Then he ran after June toward the house, toward that front door through which billows of smoke began to pour. He caught her on the steps, caught her fast; for she would have gone headlong in. And she was crying:

"Grandma! Grandma!"

When Clint held her, she swung to him in terror, beseeching him. "They're in there, Clint. Oh, quick, dear!"

CHAPTER X

Miss Moss had never seen June Leaford, and as she watched Clint's increasing devotion to the girl, during the fortnight after Mrs. Leaford died, this fact sometimes disturbed her.

She said to Tope one evening: "I've been—asking about her, here and there. You know Lissa Thayer. I've spoken to you about her."

"I know her, yes," Tope assented. "Lissa and I have become almost friends," Miss Moss explained. "She knows about Clint and June. He often leaves his car there when he goes in to the cabin. And Asa and Rab buy gas there for their car. She says Rab is—unpleasantly familiar sometimes, too friendly, offensive. She doesn't say much about Asa, but I think she knows him rather well."

Tope reminded her: "Asa went to see her, the morning after Mrs. Leaford died. Remember? We met him in the woods, and you saw him down there."

"I remember," Miss Moss agreed. "It didn't seem to me she was glad to see him, that day. . . . You know—I've been trying to guess who will inherit the Bowdon fortune, now that Mr. Bowdon is dead. And Mr. Hurdur's money, when he dies. Mrs. Leaford would have been Mr. Hurdur's heir, you know."

Inspector Tope stared at her. "You could outjump a kangaroo, Mrs. Tope," he said, in a deep admiration. "You're three jumps ahead of me." He rose. "You've given me enough to think about to keep me awake," he said. "And I had as much as I could stand already. Let's go to bed."

Hours later, however, something disturbed Miss Moss. Her eyes opened and she lay listening. Inspector Tope here in the bed beside her was sleeping. Then she heard again the sound which had roused her a moment ago.

It was the doorbell, ringing in a long peal, shrill and imperious.

In a swift haste she snapped on the shaded light beside her bed and found dressing-gown and slippers. Then the doorbell rang again, and Inspector Tope woke and asked:

"What's the matter?"

"Someone at the door," she said softly. She went out along the hall to the living-room, and heard the Inspector bestir himself behind her, but she did not wait for him. She came to the front door and opened it; and she uttered a low ejaculation of surprise and of dismay.

For Clint stood there, with a girl in the circle of his arm; and they were both smoke-begrimed, their faces sootied and dirty and streaked with water. Also, Clint's forehead was red and inflamed in a streak across above his eyes, and his eyebrows were singed, and she saw in that first glance an angry blister on the back of his right hand.

He said grimly: "Miss Moss, here's my June. I've brought her home!"

"You're hurt!" Miss Moss cried. She remembered to welcome the girl too. "Come in, both of you, Miss Leaford—"

June whispered: "His hands are burned! I wanted him to stop and get them fixed, but he wouldn't. Oh, take care of him."

Tope uttered a low ejaculation; he stood blinking in the light. There was a moment's silence; and then Clint, his arm still encircling June, added slowly:

"Mr. and Mrs. Hurdur—we got them out; but—"

Miss Moss saw June shudder and tremble, and she spoke commandingly.

"Come in," she directed; and as they obeyed, she shut the door behind them. "Miss Leaford, are you hurt too?" she asked.

"No, no," June told her. "You must fix Clint. I'm all right."

Miss Moss nodded. "Don't try to talk," she insisted. "Clint, sit down. Miss Leaford, come help me. Soda, I think, is as good as anything. He needs to be cleaned up, too. And you'll want to wash your face, I expect."

"I don't matter," June said. "But Clint protested with a wry smile: 'Now, sweet, it's just this blister on my hand. That's nothing at all.' They found in the end that he had in fact suffered no more than minor burns on his hands and wrists, and that flame-stroke on his brow."

"I wrapped a wet handkerchief across my mouth," he explained. "To keep the smoke out. Had my hat on, and that helped too."

Miss Moss said cheerfully: "You've no more eyebrows now than a baby, Clint; and not much in the way of eyelashes." She was busy tending him.

Clint whispered, through set teeth: "That's a lot more comfortable." Miss Moss ached for him. He grinned at June, said then to the older woman: "This sweet kid has come to live with you for a while, Miss Moss. It won't be long. Just till she comes to live with me."

Miss Moss looked at June, and saw in the girl's eyes something like a plea for forgiveness; and June said softly: "He's talked so much about you. I know you must be hating me."

Miss Moss smiled fondly. "No, dear," she said gently. "No, I'm glad for both of you."

Inspector Tope chuckled. "Well, now that's all settled, to the satisfaction of the womenfolk," he suggested. "How about me? Miss Leaford, do you mind if I ask what happened? You mind telling me?"

June shook her head. "No," she said in a dull tone. "No. I'd rather talk, I think, than not." She made an uncertain gesture. "I'm—I feel as though I were walking in my sleep," she confessed. "It doesn't seem real to me."

Miss Moss said briskly: "We'll have a cup of chocolate; all feel better. June, come help me, will you?" She led the girl toward the kitchen, called over her shoulder:

"Inspector Tope, let Clint rest till we come back. I want to hear."

But Clint said: "I don't want to rest." His tone suddenly was grim. "Let's go with them, Inspector," he suggested; and Miss Moss saw them come on her heels. In the little kitchen, while she was busy about the electric stove, Clint sat on the sink and drew June close beside him; and these two told what there was to tell.

"I'd taken June to see a picture," Clint explained. "But the picture didn't seem to mean much to us, so we left early, drove back to her house. And—parked outside for a little while."

"We sat there talking awhile, and then she saw that the house was on fire."

Tope nodded; and June explained: "I must have left the front door open when I came out, or else I didn't latch it and it blew open; because we saw the flames in the front hall." And Clint continued:

"So we started to run toward the house. A car passed, and I shouted to the driver to ring in an alarm. By that time June was on the front steps. I caught her just in time. She was going in. The smoke was pouring out of the door, and there were flames inside; but she told me Mr. and Mrs. Hurdur were in there."

He held June closer, and she watched him with wide eyes.

"It was raining," he explained. "I wet my handkerchief in the rain, and wrapped it over my mouth and started to crawl in the hall. But the smoke drove me back, and then June said they slept in the wing, on the ground floor; so we ran around the house to the windows of their room."

He hesitated, then went on: "The windows were shut, and the curtains were drawn, but some of the curtains were on fire. The windows were all shut tight. I managed to climb up and break the glass, with my pocket-knife for a hammer. I reached in and sprang the catch and pushed the window open. I guess that's when I burned this hand; because when I opened the window a gush of flame came out in my face, and I let go all holds and fell."

He looked at June.

"I fell on her," he said. "She was right under me. I fell on top of her."

Finds Death Trees, Feared by Indians, Tribesmen Also Claim Aid in Gambling

"Trees of death," gnarled shrubs which are held in superstitious awe by Indians, have been discovered in a lonely canyon.

John W. Hilton, authority on desert lore, has disclosed that he found the trees after a long fight to overcome superstitious fears of Indians.

The sap of the "tree of death," or elephant tree, is believed by the Cahulla Indians to be a deadly poison for doing away with enemies quietly, Mr. Hilton said.

They also believe, he said, that in the hands of medicine men it can drive away evil spirits and that, if prepared and used properly, it gives extra keen perception in playing pinochle and other gambling games.

The recently discovered trees are believed to be the farthest north on record.

"Knowing better than to ask direct questions about the fabled trees, I had to wait until some Indian told me about the whole affair," Mr. Hilton said. "Finally the son-in-law of a very old and powerful medicine man claimed to know where the tree was and agreed to lead me to the spot for $5."

"High up in the canyon we stopped, but the Indian, saying that the wind was blowing toward us from the tree, took a zig-zag course up a mountain so as to approach the tree from behind. But our search was fruitless. The guide decided that the tree did not wish to be found, and we went home."

"Later, however, a young educated Indian took me directly to the tree."

"The Indian guide stabbed the trunk of the tree and a blood-like substance oozed out."

Mr. Hilton then carefully plucked sample sprouts from the bush and took them to the government date gardens at India, where experts identified them as Bursaria microphylla, or elephant tree.

The term "Kowtow" Chinese

The term "Kowtow" is derived from the Chinese ceremonial act of prostration as a sign of homage, submission or worship. The word is formed from ko, knock, and to, head.

To the emperor the kowtow was performed by kneeling three times, each act accompanied by touching the ground with the forehead.

Liver Filters Poisons From Blood Stream

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

SOME years ago I found myself writing very often about the liver and gall bladder. I felt that as the liver was really the king of the organs (from the standpoint of work and of health), I could not write too often about it. I decided to write about the liver about four to six times a year.

As mentioned before, the healthy liver keeps us free from many symptoms that would make life miserable because it filters poisons from the blood, stimulates bowel action, thus getting rid of wastes, stores up sugar for future needs, puts right fat foods into condition to be digested and helps to build the blood.

Naturally when the liver itself or its adjoining gall bladder containing concentrated bile is disturbed the entire body feels the effect; the skin may be jaundiced, stomach upset, gas pressure, the head aches, the bowel is constipated, the nervous system becomes dull or depressed.

So much can an upset liver and gall bladder upset appetite, digestion and bowel movement that physicians agree that most disorders of appetite, stomach and intestine are not caused by any condition in the mouth, stomach or intestine but by these disorders of the liver and gall bladder.

Animal Bile Used.

As these disorders interfere with the manufacture of bile, many physicians are using preparations of bile obtained from animals in the treatment of disorders of the stomach and intestines.

Dr. J. M. Winfield, Detroit, in the Michigan State Medical Society Journal, records his use of dried bile (obtained by drying pig bile in high vacuum) in 27 cases in which there appeared to be no loss of bile in the patients (by drainage) but in which there were symptoms which might have been due to a lack in quantity or quality of bile in the intestine during digestion.

The chief symptom for which the dried bile was given was loss of appetite. When the feeding of bile proved helpful the increase in appetite was evident usually within a few hours. Also the other symptoms usually present—belching, gas distension (fullness) and constipation—were corrected in the majority of cases.

It should be remembered, however, that bile pills or capsules need only be taken by those unable to exercise.

Allergic Persons Inherit 'Tendency'

A few years ago a physician doing special work in allergy—sensitivity to certain substances—used about 23 different substances in making the skin tests. Among these substances were ragweed, goldenrod, horse hair, cats' fur, eggs and whole wheat. Today he has over 400 different substances and it is likely that in the days to come there will be many more found that cause hay fever, asthma, head aches, eczema, hives, stomach and intestinal upsets and other symptoms.

This sensitiveness (allergy) to various substances runs in families just as do tuberculosis, rheumatism and other ailments. It is now believed that almost two out of every three sensitive or allergic individuals have inherited this "tendency"—not the ailment itself. Thus the grandparent may have asthma, the parent hay fever, and the grandchild eczema. There is no said to be a "hay fever, asthma, eczema complex" in some families.

Cause Can Usually Be Found.

The point to remember is, of course, that these sensitive individuals, although they have the "tendency," will not suffer with any of these ailments—stomach upsets, asthma and others—unless they eat these foods or breathe in these substances. Many drugs, soaps and face powders are responsible for symptoms. There is always some definite substance causing the symptoms, and this substance or substances can usually be found if searched for long enough. This may mean, as mentioned above, a great many skin tests or other tests before the offending substances are found.

The tests are made by making tiny scratches on the skin—usually the forearm or thigh—and the substance in the form of a powder or paste is applied to the scratch.

By avoiding the food or other substances causing the symptoms the individual would like to avoid these symptoms. However, as many of these substances must be eaten to sustain life or cannot be avoided because they are in the air and are breathed into the lungs, treatment is given by injecting these offending substances under the skin.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Wash Chamois Often.—Chamois in which silver is stored away should be frequently washed, if the silver is to be kept bright.

Lustrous Glassware.—Laundry blue added to the water in which glassware is washed will give the glass an added luster.

Washing Hint.—Never use soap on white silk. The soap should first be dissolved in water before laundering is begun.

Keep Chocolate Cool.—The white coating which sometimes appears on cakes of chocolate is caused by keeping the cakes in an over-warm place, where some of the fat melts and comes to the surface.

Use Mop on Linoleum.—Sweeping oilcloths and linoleums wear them. An oiled mop or dry mop is much better to use on them. A coat of wax frequently applied helps to preserve both oilcloth and linoleum.

Keeping Cream Fresh.—Cream will keep fresh for a day or two if placed in its carton in a basin half filled with cold water. Muslin placed over the carton with the ends touching the water will help.

Eyeopener for Texas

The following article was clipped from the Alford News and is printed by request of friends:

Editor Star Telegram: The 46th Legislature has been an eye opener to the citizens of Texas. The eyes of Texas have been focused on Austin this year as never before in the history of the state.

The men we sent to Austin to represent us promised to co-operate with Governor O'Daniel. Instead of co-operating with him, they have fought and opposed him at every turn. They seem to have forgotten the overwhelming vote that swept O'Daniel into the Governor's mansion. Those friends are still backing him; not only those but a host of others are for him now. The people "back home" are thoroughly disgusted and feel the whole bunch should be thrown out.

The daily papers are losing friends by the stand they have taken against Governor O'Daniel. People feel they are being slapped in the face, and they resent it. I never have seen the state so aroused over the political situation as it is now. The more slurs and slanderous reports the daily papers, the radio, and legislators hurl at Governor O'Daniel the more friends he gains.

This Legislature has spent the greater part of its time fighting the Governor, blocking every thing he does and says. We believe in and want what Governor O'Daniel stood for and that is why he got the votes he did. Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court, in a recent radio talk, said the people of the United States knew what they wanted, and they generally got what they wanted. We, the people of Texas, spoke last July, and we'll speak again. We'll get what we want if we have to vote out every man who votes "no" to everything Governor O'Daniel wants passed. We are watching their votes.

It has been suggested that we not only wait two years, but get up a petition now, call an election and vote them out.
