Despite the Churchill visit and the impending campaign in Burma, conditions inside India still remain one sore spot where Anglo-American relations, frank and friendly as they are, could stand some cleaning up. All of the President's special ad- favoring the wild turkey as a navisers have brought home more or less the same reports. They include: Laughlin Currie, member of finally the choice fell to that true the White House staff; ex-Undersecretary of War Louis Johnson; Special Ambassador Billy Phillips. Latest evidence of Indian sore spots is a report to Leo Crowley, new Economic Warfare administrator from his New Delhi representative, John Fischer, who writes:

"The government of India, the British army, and many Indian businessmen view the opening of an OEW (Economic Warfare) office here with frank and deep-rooted suspicion. This suspicion is not directed at us alone; it falls on all American representatives in India.

"The American Mission was established here in 1941 in the face of considerable reluctance on the part of the government of India. (Previously the United States had not been ermitted even a consulate in New Delhi.) The OWI, OSS and even lend-lease representatives have told us that they have been received here with open misgivings-and in the case of the first two agencies, sometimes with hostility. Before our arrival, the government of India raised a number of questions regarding our mission with the American Mission

"We have reason to believe that our movements have been under close observation, both here and in England, and that surveillance is likely to continue.

Reasons for Coolness.

"There seem to be two main reasons for this attitude," Fischer reported to Crowley.

"1. The fear that American representatives may send to Washington, through channels not subject to British censorship, information concerning the internal situation in India. This, the government of India seems to believe, might stimulate American sympathy for the Nationalist movement and criticism of the government's ineffective administrative techniques.

"2. Fear of American post-war commercial competition. This concern seems to be shared alike by the British and many large Indian businessmen. It has been so pronounced that the mission thought it expedient, shortly before our arrival, to assure the government that concerned with trade promotion.

Today the life and liberty of the American Eagle, symbol of strength and courage, is rigidly protected by a Congressional Act of 1940, providing a fine of $500 and six months' imprnsonment for capturing or harming this King of Birds. As John James Audobor wrote more than one hundred years ago, "It is one of the most inspiring wild creatures."

The design for the Great Seal of the United States was drawn by William Barton, with slight modifications by Sir John Prestwick, English antiquarian. The eagle is represented "displayed," with wings outspread and feet extended. In his talons he holds a bundle of thirteen arrows, denoting power in war and readiness to fight for the preservation of freedom; and an olive branch with thirteen leaves and berries, indicating a love of and desire for peace. Borne on the breast of the bird without any other supporters is the escutcheon, denoting that the United States is self-reliant and independent. The upper part of the shield, known as the chief, is blue, representing the power of Congress and standing for justice, protection and vigilance. The red and white stripes below represent the thirteen original States, all joined in one solid, compact whole and kept closely united by the chief.

The white stands for purity and the red for courage and valor. Over the head of the eagle is a circle of light or glory, representing the sun as the source of spiritual strength. Surrounding this is a cloud symbolizing the protection and guidance of God. The constellation of thirteen stars in a blue field indicates that a new nation is taking its place and rank among other sovereign powers. The eagle holds in his beak a scroll with the motto, "E Pluribus Unum." (One for many). Recognized as he emerged one night from a theatre, Douglas was besieged for autographs. You hear lots about grapefruit and oranges in the Lower Rio Grande Valley but your columnist met one man there whose interest is lemons. When the average person speaks of something as being "lemon-colored," he means a light yellow-but actually lemons are still green in color when they are ripe, as tests show, according to C. P. Melton of the Tex-Lem Co., Mercedes. Also the lemons hold up longer if marketed when green. (Gradually, the color will change).

Melton considers that the lemon industry in the Valley began, for practical purposes, only 12 years ago, when three Chinese emon trees, of the Meyer variety were set out as an experiment. The industry has grown until, this season, 100,000 cases will move to market. In size and in low price, these Texas products are superior to those from California

TO RELAX RATIONING OF FARM MACHINERY

Agricultural officials have been closeted for several days working on an announcement which will be good news to farmers. They are planmachinery.

Relaxation will take two forms. One will be to permit farm machinery companies more latitude in distributing their products to different parts of the country. The other will be to take certain machines definitely off the ration list.

Although plans are not quite complete, it is probable that most farm machinery will be unrationed from now on except tractors, combines, hay bailers, beet lifters and similar mechanized equipment. In general, tractor implements will be taken off the list, though tractors will stay on.

It will still be necessary for farmers to go to their ration boards to get permission to buy certain farm machinery, but this will be only for the purpose of making sure that they are legitimate farmers and really need the equipment. The old system of strict rationing on most farm machinery will go by the boards.

Hitherto, farm implement compa nies have been required to distribute their products equally throughout the United States, so that some counties where little wheat is raised have received as many binders as counties in the middle of the wheat belt. Or in some cases, too much cor. machinery has been sent to counties where little corn is raised, while corn belt counties have been slight-

The new order will permit farm implement companies to use more discretion in order to avoid ineffi-· · · / A / cient distribution.
