Red Army Drives Toward Baltic Sea; Partisan Forces Ban Jugoslav Ruler; Allied Heavy Bombers Smash German Gun Installations in Northern France

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

PACIFIC JITTERBUG: - Doughboys on captured Makin island in the Central Pacific watch somber little native hula dance.

EUROPE: Blast Rocket Guns

While U. S. and British troops battled the Nazis at close quarters in southern Italy, waves of Allied bombers rumbled over northern France to smash at German rocket gun installations. Both on the U.S. Fifth and British Eighth army fronts in southern Italy, doughboys and Tommies en-gaged the Germans in hand-to-hand fighting, Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's men fighting for mountain peaks flanking the road to Rome, and Gen. Bernard Montgomery's warriors striving to clear the path to the highway hub of Pescara.

As reports continued to seep into Britain and the U. S. of the Germans' new rocket gun capable of hurling an explosive charge of from 7 to 21 tons about 20 miles, Allied bombers combed the French chan-nel coast around Calais to blast at the installations for the new weapon. Ban King

Charging that the war minister of the Jugoslav government-in-exile had made a "lasting" deal with the Germans and organized civil strife against patriotic elements, Josip '(Tito) Broz's communist backed Partisan forces forbade King Peter's return to the country until after the war. Broz's action followed the attachment of U. British and Russian King Peter officers to his staff, as a result of the Allies' preference for the Partisan forces over King Pehave ter's Chetniks because they been offering the Germans more resistance.

Further, Broz's political council canceled all treaties and international obligations of King Peter's government, on the supposition it no longer was representative of the

VETS:

Discharge Pay

To every vet discharged after 18 months of service overseas would go $500 under provisions of a bill passed by the senate and sent to the house for consideration.

Vets serving abroad for 12 to 18 months would be paid $400 and those less than 12 months, $300. Vets with 12 months or more service in the U. S. would get $300, and those with less than 12 months, $200.

In the house, 44 representatives have organized for higher discharge payments, favoring Rep. William Lemke's bill providing $100 on release and up to a year's pay. RUSSIA:

Match Wits

.Russian and German generals matched wits along an 800-mile front as winter fighting flared to major proportions in the east.

While the Reds surged into German lines guarding the Baltic region, the Nazis threw strong tank forces against the Russians on a 400-mile stretch further to the south. Thus did one attack act as a lever against the other.

The Russian drive was concentrated on reaching the shores of the Bal-tic sea: (1) to cut off Nazi armies for the general said: "There is no in the Leningrad region from those in the Leningrad region from those to the south, and (2) to cut off shipping at present helping supply them pects to go to Washington in the near

RAIL STRIKE: FDR Intervenes

Seeking to avert a strike of 1,450,-000 railroad workers which threatened to tie up the nation's whole transportation system, President Roosevelt acted to bring the unions and owners together, while orders were drawn for U. S. operation of the lines in case negotiations failed.

Following a suggestion of FDR, the basis for compromise seemingly ay in payment of overtime to the rail workers after 40 hours, instead of after 48 hours as has been the

For the 350,000 operating employees of the roads, the overtime pay coupled with a flat four cents an hour wage increase, would result in an average hourly boost of eight

Besides the eight cents an hour for which they threatened to strike, the 1,100,000 non-operating rail employees also proposed overtime pay over 40 hours. Under their terms, their average hourly increase would exceed eight cents.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC: Things to Come

A thorn in the Allies' shipping lanes to the Southwest Pacific, Japan's Marshall islands took heavy poundings from U. S. army and navy planes, while off to the New Britain area, Yankee airmen blasted the enemy's supply centers of Wewak and Cape Gloucester.

In both cases the destructive aerial bombardment presaged ground action. As a springboard for future ground operations, U. S. troops stood on the Gilberts, to the south of the Marshalls, and in New Britain, doughboys recently landed at Arawe consolidated their positions and poised to the north, looking toward the Cape Gloucester region from which the enemy has been supplying its embattled troops on New Guinea to the east. To meet the Allies' challenge to their whole defensive system in the Southwest Pacific, the Japs strengthened their air forces throughout the area, and poured in supplies for their troops.

Stays on Job

"MacArthur for President!"

A rallying cry for some politicians, a popular topic for the man on the street, these three big words have tended to color the 1944 presidential picture. Recently MacArthur talk received two strong stimulants: First, there was the war department's ruling that there was no bar to any officer accepting a political nom-

Second, the rumor gained currency that the cocksure chieftain of the Southwest Pacific was preparing to return to the U.S. for conferences in Washington, D. C.

BOLIVIA:

New Government

First order of business on the new Bolivian revolutionary government's calendar was compensating survivors of the 19 striking tin miners shot by troops under direction of the ousted Gen. Enrique Penaranda last December.

As calm was restored in the country, U. S. withheld recognition of the new government, to determine whether it was a successful pro-Axis coup in view of the fact that the guiding light of the movement, Paz Estenssoro, was once locked up in connection with pro-Nazi activities.

U. S. interest, in Bolivia centers around its rich tin and quinine resources, among the last left to the Allies following Japan's occupation of Malaya and the Indies. The revo-lutionists flave expressed a desire to continue favorable business relations with the Allies, a matter on which General Penaranda himself had hedged.

STORAGE:

Seek to Ease Glut

With U. S. food storage facilities crammed, many meat packers have been selling pork products below ceiling prices or in carload lots at a discount. At the same time, it was revealed that the War Food administration prepared an order restricting storage of such meat specialties as hogs' heads, bones, ox tails, tripe, hearts and liver to 10 days without permit.

Meanwhile, WFA extended its price support of $13.75 per hundredweight to 270 to 300 pound hogs, because, (1) packers have been buy-ing bargains outside of the 200 to 270 pound support range and guaranteed weights have been piling up in the yards; (2) farmers have been sending 200 to 270 pounders off to market to get the $13.75 top.

CORN BORER: New Treatment

Irked by the corn borer's damseka, Ill., hit on the idea of curbing the pests by making the stalk of the plant distasteful. A soil expert for a fertilizer concern, Bell worked for three years on his project, reaching the point where he planned to submit his product to the University of Illinois' agronomists for testing. Mixing commercial fertilizer with combinations of minor plant food essentials, Bell spread his product over 11/2 acres of a 42-acre corn plot infested by borers. Shortly after, it was seen that the borers began leaving the treated tract, which yielded 22 bushels more than the other acres. Although the compound absorbed by the stalk is unpalatable to the borers, it is not toxic to livestock, ests showed.

GREAT BRITAIN: Migrations Planned

Actual contacts of many Britons with the many parts of the kingdom's far-flung empire have aroused their interest to resettle in Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa after the war.

Circulating among the population, numbers of soldiers from the dominions have acquainted Britons with opportunities existent in their countries, and British youth now being trained in South Africa have interested folks about its wealth and climate in letters home. But while dominion representatives in London have been besieged by inquiries as to taxes, education and resettlement financing in their countries, the dominion governments themselves were said to be chiefly concerned with reemployment of returning war vets before immigra-

On the other hand, it is pointed out that many of the other 35 million taxpayers will wind up the year owing the government, and will have to make additional payments. Many refunds. it was said. will be small.

Seed Supply Adequate for 1944 Victory Gardens

"Will there be seed enough to go around?" is again a vital question in the minds of the nation's Victory Gardeners as Uncle Sam asks for a substantial 1944 increase over the 21,000,000 vegetable gardens raised in the United States last season.

A confident answer comes from Ferry-Morse Seed Co., largest growers and distributors of garden seeds in the world.

"We are ready for a sizeable increase over last year's output of seeds for Victory Gardens," they declare, "in spite of tremendous weather handicaps and labor shortages,"

Seed of some varieties of certain vegetables is still on the short side, but this is a situation which is bound to occur even in normal times. Wise and experienced gardeners, however, know that if the dealer does not have the variety he has been accustomed to getting, there is always another of equally excellent quality to take its place. Among the snap beans, for example, there are several round-podded varieties differing but little from each other in form and growing habits. All are stringless, and in flavor and texture it puzzles even the experts to tell thom spart. The same is true of flat-podded an variaties and of numerous varieties among other vegetables.

"Plant plenty, waste none" is a slogan which should be incorporated into every home gardener's thinking as he plans for his 1944 garden. While every Victory Gardener should grow as big a crop of vegetables as is practical to meet the needs of his family, buying more speak than is necessary will be a definite detriment to the War Food Program. Any seeds laft over from early plantings should be sown as repeat plantings or saved to sow in the fail garden. They should be stored in a dry place, such as a tight-covered fruit jar, until time to use.

As during the past successful season, Victory Gardeners will do well to confine their gardening efforts to the standard vegetables, especially those that can or store to good advantage. During 1943 approximately 4 300,000,000 jars of home canned vegetables and fruits were put up in this country. The government hopes that this figure will be surpassed in 1044. While the supply of vegetable so its sufficient for America's Victory Gardeners, wise and efficient use of them is of vast importance.

Big Wheat Carry-Over

The wheat carry over in the US on July 1, 1943 was 618 million bushels and for July 1, 1944 is estimated at 300 million bushels, ac sording to the Bureau of Agricultaral Economics This is in sharp sontrast to the 40 million for 1918 and 85 million for 1919 Large supplies and reduced exports have made available record quantities for feed and industrial alcohol production in this war.

Getting the Most from your ictory Garden

Starting plants from seed indoors is the first step to success in relaing tender vegetables such as pepper, eggplant and tomato. Attempting to sow seed directly in the open too often brings disappointment.

When four conditions of indeer planting are met—proper soil, temperature, moisture, and planting depths—a home gardener can easily produce a stand of healthy plants he would otherwise have to buy at many times the price of the small amount of seed needed.

Suitable soil plays a big part in giving spedlings a healthy and fat or shallow box nearly filled with garden soil and topped with half an inch of clean builder's sand is a highly successful method used by Ferry-Morse Seed Co. in indoor planting at their Michigan Seed Breeding Station. The sand allows the tiny seedlings to break through easily, and there is little danger of too much moisture standing at the base of plants, a condition almost sure to cause that fatal disease—damping off.

The garcen soil beneath the sand gives the young roots a firm, moisture-holding foundation and supplies plant food until they are large enough for transplanting.

Sow seeds a little less deep indoors than when planting directly in the garden, keeping the flat where it is dark and cool until seeds sprout. Then, bring it into the light, protecting with a glass covering. Remove the cover occasionally to give the seedlings air. As they grow larger, thin out the weaker members, keeping only the sturdiest plants for transplanting into the open ground.

and spoonful OF GREASE

Are Mighty Weapons in this War!

Superiority in the air .. the prerequisite to victory on the battlefield ... can only be attained by the use of hundreds of planes, bombers and fighters. These planes must be armed. The fighter must have thousands of rounds of machine gun bullets; the bomber must have bombs, fifty pounders or block-busters.

YOU, an American housewife, can help arm these planes. The spoonful of waste grease you pour into the empty tin can is a mighty weapon of war. The grease you save and sell to your local grocer goes into the making of nitroglycerine... the basic explosive used in bombs and bullets.

Our job here at your electric service company is to furnish the power that turns the wheels that makes the planes that carry the bombs and the bullets which your kitchen helped to furnish. The job of producing planes to secure and maintain superiority of the air is a job that only American industry backed by power produced in business managed, privately owned electric companies could accomplish.

Seven-eighths of all power used in war production is produced by companies operating under the American system of private enterprise.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO By VIRGINIA VALE

'AIL RUSSELL hasn't seen

GALL RUSSELL Harris for her brother George for two and one-half years; he's a bugler in the army, stationed in Alaska. As she's been a movie actress less than a year, he's never seen her on the screen, though her third picture, "The Uninvited," is now in the editing stage. So she's send-ing him all the glamour art of her-self that she can lay her hands on, to prove to him that the spindlylegged junior in Santa Monica high whom he left behind him is really a movie actress now.

Dinah Shore's getting a new daddy-Charles Winninger of "Show Boat" fame, who'll be her father in the new picture, "Belle of the

All of the casualties on "Suspense," the CBS thriller, aren't confined to the script. When Orson Welles guest-starred recently, he broke his ankle as he entered the echo chamber, a box-like compartment used to give voices a ghostly Dame May Whitty stepped right out of her role as Pierre Curie's mother in "Madame Curie" to testify on juvenile delinquency before Senator Pepper's U. S. senate sub-committee on wartime health and education. They say she was just as delightful there as she is in the picture, especially when telling of her prewar experiences in arranging country vacations for London's underprivileged children.

Sammy Kaye was the second Hol-lywood celebrity to back the "Dance With a WAC" program, which originated with film producer Charles R. Rogers. When Rogers was in Palm Springs on location for "Song of the Open Road" he arranged for the male members of his cast and crew the air WACs stationed at the army's desert transport command Mischa Auer's collection of pets is becoming a problem. He had 30 hens and a rooster, and recently re-ceived two dogs, a Newfoundland and a Yorkshire terrier. Wally Ford gave him the Newfoundland, which weighs about 200, and he named it Heddy. The terrier was Mary Astor's gift; it weighs a scant 2½ pounds, and he calls it Tallulah. Joan Davis and Jack Haley of the air waves are dashing from one picture studio to another these days. After Joan's appearance in "Around the World" RKO signed her for two pictures a year, and she's also un-der contract to Paramount for two. Jack Haley was originally all set for RKO's "Up in Mabel's Room," but had to drop out because of other picture assignments.

As chairman of the Malibu rationing board, Warner Baxter took over in the days of sugar distribution; he stuck through coffee and gasoline, but wanted to resign when he re-turned to the screen to star in "Lady of the Dark." He was persuaded to stay, merely appointing a temporary vice chairman, and completed his picture work in time to come back and face the canned goods situation.

It's the way things happen—to some people. The other night "Big Town" Director Jerry McGill went over to see his friend Fred Bethel, the "Here's to Romance" director, on broadcast night. He was much impressed with the looks and voice of Marcia Neal—and the result of that chance meeting is that Marcia has a part in McGill's new Broadway play, "Compromise."

ODDS AND ENDS—A national comic book publisher is trying to interest Fibber McGee and Molly in a monthly feature strip based on their amusing experiences.

Cass Daley, who introduces the song, "He Loved Me Till the All-Clear Came," in her new picture, "Riding High," has received requests to sing it in five different languages for overseas broadcasts.

Mythical George Spelvin Has Played 1500 Parts

No American actor has appeared in as many stage parts as the mythical George Spelvin, a name first used in 1907 on the program of "Brewster's Millions" as pseudonym for an actor who played two roles, says Collier's. Both play and player were so suc-cessful that producers have employed the name ever since in their playbills for men portraying two or more characters.

By now, "George Spelvin" has probably played 1,500 parts and given 150,000 performances.
