SOUTHWEST PACIFIC: Jungle Fighting

Like the story of every other is-land in the South Pacific, U. S. troops have had to fight for every inch of ground on tropical New Guinea, where landings have placed doughboys in possession of the air strip on Cape Gloucester and a beachhead at Arawe.

With the enemy dug well in the ungle, U. S. dive bombers and artillery helped clear the way for the infantry as it edged forward through the dense brush about Cape Gloucester. In similar terrain at Arawe, the enemy also fell back grudgingly.

While doughboys clawed forward in New Britain, other elements of the U. S. Sixth army beat south-eastward along the New Guinea coastline toward a juncture with Australian troops driving north-ward. In this sector, the Allies aimed for the big Jap shipping base of Madang, supply point for their coastal positions.

Only hours after a dispatch from Guadalcanal had announced that pudgy, 30-year-old Maj. Gregory ('Pappy') Boyington had shot down his 26th Jap to enter the selective list of U. S. air aces, his mother received word in Okanogan, Wash., that he was missing. With a mother's faith she said: "I am confident he is all right and he will show up somehow, some-

Called "Pappy" because of his comparatively older age among the younger marine fliers, Boyington was a picturesque daredevil. Once, "Pappy" purposely led a squadron a Jap airdrome, circling the field slowly and daring the enemy to come up and fight. When they did, 'Pappy' nailed three.

STRIKES:

Increase in '43

Almost 14 million working days were lost through strikes in 1943 compared with 4 million in 1942, records of the bureau of labor statistics indicated.

Approximately 3,337,091 workers were involved in the estimated 3.737 walkouts, which topped the 1942 total of 839,961 men idle because of 2,968 strikes.

Last year's strikes doubled the 1927-'41 average of 1,945, but it was pointed out that the depression prevailed during that period, and because of scarce employment walkouts were less frequent.

EUROPE:

Piaster Defenses

Flying over an 800-mile front, Allied bombers rapped hard at German defenses and industries in western Europe preparatory to the heralded invasion.

But in Italy, bad weather restricted Ailed progress over the mountainous terrain, and equally bitter resistance in the future loomed with the discovery that the Germans were constructing another "Siegfried line" of concrete and steel several miles in depth, and just to the north of their present positions.

Continuing the softening up process of western Europe, swarms of U.S. and British bombers and fighters lashed at German factories, the important naval base of Kiel, air reportedly have erected rocket guns. price its contracts.

AGRICULTURE: Hogs Pour In

Shipment of 476,500 hogs within a 3-day span recently in comparison with 278,400 for the same period a year ago, reflected crowded conditions in 12 leading middlewestern markets, with only choice 200 to 300 pound pigs attracting $13.75 per hundredweight.

Many hogs were left unsold as daily trading closed, and fearful that animals might contract pneumonia with snow and colder weather, some packers urged farmers to curtail shipments, while embargoes were imposed at other centers.

Tight labor conditions restricted packers' capacities, and in Chicago, at least 200 soldiers from the labor pool of a nearby camp were sent into the packing houses to help out.

RUSSIA:

Tangle in Poland

Russian armies forged deeper into pre-war Poland in flaming action on the eastern front, overrunning territory the Reds claimed as their own, but the Polish government-in-exile insisted must remain part of the country.

As the Russ surged forward into pre-war Poland, Gen. Nicholas Vatutin threw out a spearhead to the southwest, aiming toward the entrapment of 500,000 Nazis from the rear in the big Dnieper river bend. The Reds entered pre-war Poland at a time of heightening tension over their claims that the White Russian and Ukrainian provinces of the old state were racially related to Russia. Reportedly headed for Washin ton, D. C., to seek U. S. support for the Polish government in exile's case for retention of the territory was Premier Stanislaw Mikolajzyk.

WAR PROFITS:

Want Strict Control

Recommendations to change the present government procedure of recapturing excessive profits on war material by rewriting old contracts, were bitterly opposed by Senators Walsh (Mass.), LaFollette (Wis.), Lucas (Ill.) and Connally (Texas).

Two recommendations particularly opposed would exempt from pres-

In the first case, the senators said, one company with orders for a standard commercial article did six times the business of the 1935-'39 period, yet would be exempt from repricing.

In the second case, the senators said, one machine tool company whose product, of course, does not actually appear in finished war fields strung over northern, and the channel coast, along which the Nazis ness, yet would not be forced to re-

COLLEGE FOOTBALL:

No Deaths

For the second time in the 12 years he has compiled statistics on college football deaths, Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood of Purdue U. announced no fatalities due to football in 1943.

Possibly because of a lack of sufficient amounts and quality of equipment, nine deaths were recorded in high school football, Dr. Eastwood Fatalities in the sport have gradually decreased since he started his survey in 1931, when 31 deaths were announced, Dr. Eastwood said. Since most deaths have been due to head injuries, he suggested that grid leaders look into possible use of new crash helmets designed for military use during the present war.

As the national committees under Frank Walker of the Democrats and Harrison Spangler of the Republi-cans studied convention sites, the Office of Defense Transportation de-clared Chicago was the city least likely to upset train schedules, since regular line sleeping cars with 11,368 beds terminate there, compared to 7,129 in New York.

CANADIAN WHEAT:

To Increase Imports

With approximately 350,000,000 bushels of U. S. wheat expected to be fed to livestock during the current feeding season, an additional 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 bushels will be brought in from Canada, according to government sources.

Because U. S. railroad cars will be sent into the interior of Canada this winter, from 25,000,000 to 50,-000,000 more bushels of wheat will be imported than otherwise possible, due to the freezing of the Great

Although the heavy dairy and poultry producing areas of the Northeast have bettered their feed situation, feed grains are needed in the drouthy south central regions, and protein meals are scarce in the southwest range districts. The total supply of feed concentrates was estimated at 169,000,000 tons.

SOLDIERS' VOTE: Urge Uniformity

While congress wrangled over whether the federal government or the individual states should control soldier voting in 1944, the war and navy departments recommended that applications for absentee ballots be distributed by the services and local officials accept such applications any time before election

Other recommendations made by the army and navy were that voting material be designed for air car-riage, and that a serviceman's vote be acknowledged by an officer no lower in rank than sergeant.

Ballots must be distributed to the servicemen by mail, the depart-ments said, and although it is the army and navy policy to assist sol-diers and sailors in voting, "nothing must interfere with the . . . primary obligation to wage a victorious war.

RAIL TRAFFIC

The nation's railroads broke all transportation records last year, both for passengers and freight, Volume of freight hauled was 14 per cent above 1942, the previous high, and passenger traffic shot up 58 per cent over the preceding year.

Average load of freight per train was 1,116 tons, another record. Per car load was 41 tons. Average volume of passengers per car was greater than ever before. An increase of about 20 per cent in gross revenue is expected

When to Plant Your Victory Garden

"Sow too early and you waste seed; sow too late and you waste time," runs a valuable bit of oldtime garden advice. But most Victory Gardeners are eager to get even more definite information about when to plant.

Consulting experienced home or market gardeners in the community is one practical way of learning the proper time for sowing seed of various vegetables. For a home gardener who wants to figure out his own planting dates, however, Harm Drewes, Super-intendent of Ferry-Morse Seed Breeding Station near Detroit, Michigan, offers a method.

"The first thing to know," says Mr. Drawas, "is the average date of the last hard frost in the particular section in which you live. This knowledge can be secured from local weather bureaus, State Agricultural Experiment or from data compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. Then, using that date as a basis, you can work out a preity safe planting schedule."

In normal years, Mr. Drewes ex-plains, seed of radish, lettuce, peas, spinach, beets, carrots, mustard and turnip can safely be sown two to three weeks before the average date of the last hard frost in spring. Planting time within those two or three weeks depends largely upon soil conditions. If a handful of soil from the garden feels slightly moist and crumbly, it is ready for seed sowing. If it packs like a mudpie, the Victory Gardener must wait a few days longer.

Tender crops such as beans, corn, cucumber, okra, and squash must usually wait a week or two after the average hard frost date before seed is

"It is always wise to wait a week or two after the average last frost date before setting out tender young plants which have been started earlier indoors," Mr. Drewes advises. "Among them are eggplant, pepper, and tomato. Select a cloudy day for transplanting. or do the work in the early morning or evening so that the seedlings will have a chance to recover somewhat before the sun shines on them. If they must be set out in sunshine, see that they are shaded from the heat for awhile."

Although "Lil Joe" completed 55 missions before coming in on two motors and blasted beyond repair, she is probably little different from many other gallant American bombers which are daily helping paralyze Nazi war production.

We have a special interest in the career of "Lil Joe" because it was piloted by one of United's men of war on many of its 55 missions, and on the last raid to the Ploesti field, heart of Nazi oil production.

Now at home fellow workers of the pilot of this famous plane are buying War Bonds to help replace "Lil Joe" and the other gallant planes being sacrificed in the battle for freedom. They are taking this means of paying tribute to United men in uniform—and to help make possible the neverending line of planes, ships, tanks and guns that soon, we hope, will mean victory for freedom-loving people.

Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.-WNU Release NEW YORK.—Nearly 50,000 soldiers from this war have joined the American Legion and by so much the efforts are advanced of National Com-Invites New Vets mander To Take Overthe Warren

American Legion Hendry Atherton to induce the new veterans to "take over and make the organization theirs." And Atherton knows that if the new veterans do come in they will cer-tainly take over, for they will outnumber the men of the last war three or four to one, at least.

Atherton, a 52-year-old lawyer, came up slowly to his No. 1 spot in Legion affairs. He was a charter member of a post in his home town of Stockton, Calif., but he was seven years winning the post commandership. And while steadily busy for the state Legion he was seven more years getting into the national picture. He became a member of the Americanism Commission in 1933. It was, however, as national defense chairman that he really stepped out. He traveled for weeks, and 7,000 miles, in a pre-Pearl Harbor survey of the nation's defenses.

He was early, but slow in the army, also, although he ended up with a good rating. He enlisted three months after marrying. A lieutenant shortly, he went overseas and finished a captain. Before the war he had quit railroading for a correspondence course in law. When the war was over he hurried back to Stockton and hung out his shingle. The law has been good enough for years to support the family of six pleasantly. He has three sons and a daughter. Two of the sons are in this war, with the air corps.

WITH a little luck, Col. Edgar S. Gorrell might have made prophetic Nostradamus look like a guy guessing a daily double. A

Col. E. S. Gorrell month and a half ago the May Well Shout colonel said, 'It's a Bull's-Eye' out in Okla-homa City, that bombing raids on Germany in the next 45 days would be decisive. Only the bombers can say by how far the forecast missed. But from this corner it seems close. Another bomb here, another there, a couple more Unter den Linden and the colonel will qualify.

The short, solid colonel is a subdued sort of fellow. Only his brown eyes snap. His voice is usually toned down to tete-a-tete volume. At West Point he was called Nap, and not because he reminded anyone of Napoleon. The colonel finished at the Point when he was 21, back in 1912, hurried into the air corps and flew a plane in the M for Villa. When the First World war caught up with us he went to France and wound up with cur Distinguished Service Cross, the British DSO and the red ribbon of France's Legion of Honor. Nowadays he speaks as the czar of all civilian air lines. He has been president of the Air Transport association for years. The job came to him not long after he quit the army back in 1920 and it has made him known the world over. An evangelist of air travel, he has traveled everywhere. Always by air; and never without a safety belt. He has worked hard to erase danger from

IN THIS uncertain corner a shadowy notion still lingers that "logistics" ought to have something to do with argumentation. Lieut. Gen. This Supply Genius Gordon

Is Never Too Late Lindsell With Too Little was never fooled in the same way. And that may be one reason why he becomes boss of transport and supply in the fresh war that Lord Louis Mountbatten is getting ready for the Japs in Southeast Asia.

Sir William knows, maybe, more about military transportation and all the curlycues of logistics than any other couple of British generals. Give him just a little time to figure and he will scheme out a scheme that might move anything, even Heaven and earth. On time, too! He kept his supply trains bumping the heels of Montgomery's fighting divisions all through the race after Rommel.

The British minister for war calls Lindsell a supply genius. If he is he is self-made. Nearly 60 now, he has been in the army since he was 19.

His record for a long while was just that of one more officer among many. Son of a colonel who had married a lively Irish daughter of

HE film critics of New 1 York's newspapers voted Paul Lukas the best actor of 1943 for his performance in "Watch on the Rhine" (at the same time voting the picture the year's best), but they were a little late. Warner Bros. had handed Lukas a tribute of their own some two weeks earlier for the same performance; theirs was a long-term contract. His first picture under the new contract will be "Night Action." It is based on an original story by Norman Krasna, with George Sklar doing the screen story.

The Warners came out very well in those film critics' voting sessions-Ida Lupino was voted the year's best actress for her work in "The Hard Way," with Katina Paxinou as runner-up for her performance in "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

IDA LUPINO

Jean Pierre Aumont, Metro star whose last film before joining the Fighting French was "The Cross of Lorraine," relays the following letter from General De Gaulle concerning the film: "I congratulate you for having shown such a beautiful pic-ture, the active participation in the resistance of all Frenchmen under the cross of Lorraine. It is fitting that this silent and bloody war be put before the eyes of our true friends, particularly those of the United States of America." There's a laurel wreath worth having. War's effect on Cupid: there's a scene in "Riding High" where Doro-thy Lamour and Dick Powell are shown standing on a boatlanding in Technicolor moonlight. Dick tries a tentative kiss. "I can't make out," says Dottie, "whether you are careful, indifferent, or just plain dumb."

"Oh," replies Dick, "those were just tracer kisses. I think I have the range now."

This year starts promisingly for Marjorie Riordan, who has the coveted role of Bette Davis' daughter in "Mr. Skeffington." Her contract was purchased from Sol Lesser by Jack Warner following her hit in "Stage Door Canteen."

Euline Martin was only three weeks old when her mother took her to the RKO studio to play Ginger Rogers' baby in "Tender Comrade." Producer David Hempstead asked her mother to get the infant a social security card. "Euline already has a card," was the reply. "This is her second picture. When 16 days old she played in 'Buffalo Bill.'"

Greta Christensen, Chicago high school girl, got her contract with RKO through posing for department store advertisements. Dare Harris, 17, was striking pins in a bowling alley when he was seen by the talent scout for Vanguard Films; he makes his screen debut in Selznick's "Since You Went Away." Looks as if all roads lead to the movies nowadays.

The greatest radio scoop of the war, according to the Associated Press, was made by marine Sergt. Roy O. Maypole, when he made his radio recording of the historic land-ing at Empress Augusta bay on Bougainville island. The recorded broadcasts will be released to the public through marine corps headquarters in Washington. Maypole's the for-mer producer of CBS' wacky "Missus Goes A-Shopping."

Resemblance to Frank Sinatra brought good luck to ex-marine Harry Landers. Discharged from the service after being wounded in action, he got a job as a studio laborer. His next job was as standin for Sinatra in "Higher and Higher." When the singer left the troupe he asked that Landers be kept on as a dress extra—Producer Tim Whelan then gave him a minor role in the musical.

ODDS AND ENDS-Vox Pop is soliciting listeners over the air for opinions on the outstanding interviews and permarried a lively Irish daughter of an admiral, he was commissioned a lieutenant in 1903. He had become a captain when the First World war opened, and when it closed he was only a major, although one with the DSO, the MC and the Croix de Guerre.

HOW to cut a flared dressing table skirt without fullness at the top, is something worth knowing. You may be making a smartly tailored affair of white pique with pink bindings and buttons, like the one shown here.

The diagram shows how to make a pattern for half of the skirt. The center front may be placed on a fold of the goods in cutting if there is no front opening. Cut the paper by the dimensions in the diagram. Mark point A in 14-inches from the upper left corner. Measure up from the lower right corner a distance equaling the length of the skirt from A to tee left edge of the paper and mark point C. Connect these points with lines drawn.
