Try Atom Power In Locomotive

Engineer Says Formula Uses Mercury and Steel to Supply Energy.

BELLEVILLE, N. J. - A New York Central railroad locomotive will roll up on a siding here soon and work will begin to convert it to atomic power-drive, says the Associated Press.

Ralph Lucas, chief engineer for the United States Industries and Development company, Elmira, N. Y., said the locomotive would be fitted with a mercury turbine employing a formula for disintegration of mercury and steel atoms.

He said "One teacupful of the mercury atoms, exploded, would run a locomotive, pulling 120 freight cars, for 45 round trips between New York and San Francisco."

Formula Patented.

Lucas said the locomotive would be run onto a siding of the Belleville plant of the concern and that he would build his workshop around

He obtained a patent on the formula in 1939, he said, to manufacture electronic power by fusing steel and mercury through intense heat created by electronic disintegration of the mercury and steel atoms. Lucas said the formula produced a controllable disintegration of the

The turbine, Lucas said, works this way:

"It has a 300 horsepower gasoline driven engine, generating 220 volts alternating current, which is in-creased to 1,440 volts direct current by transformer coils. This, in turn, creates an electron discharge between two electrodes in an eight inch thick steel casting which will withstand 500,000 pounds of pressure per square inch, although it will use only 350,000 pounds.

Generates Great Power. The horsepower generated from that atomic pressure will be 350 times greater than that created in the ordinary locomotive.' Lucas estimated that a 300 horsepower engine, working with a heavy freight load, would use up an average of five gallons of gasoline per

Lucas said he believed the turbine would be ready for installation in about four months and that experiments with the locomotive would last for six months to a year.

Lucas, now a resident of Newark, is a native of Elmira. He was graduated from Rensselaer Polytechnic institute, Troy, N. Y., has worked as research and engineering specialist with the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company, the Watervliet, N. Y., arsenal, and the Curtiss-Wright cor-poration at Buffalo, N. Y.

Army Setting Up Plan To Breed Dogs for War

WASHINGTON .- The army is setting up a peacetime program to breed war dogs as it does horses.

The war department announced the plan, at the same time canceling its request for donations of dogs.
Under the new program, the army will place breeding degs with civil-ian breeders and select the puppies best suited for military needs. The dogs will be used as sentries in occupation armies and for experiments in developing new uses for dogs in

The army now contemplates using six breeds, German shepherd dog, boxer, airedale terrier, dobermann pinscher, rottweiler, and giant schnauzer.

The original stock will be selected from the best available in this country, England, Holland, Belgium and

Theft of Federal Property Serious

FBI Handled Grave Problem With Usual Skill.

WASHINGTON .- One of the gravest problems with which the FBI was confronted throughout World War II was the theft of government prop-erty. Millions of dollars in irre-placeable tools were lost, and it is to the credit of American industry that this tremendous drain was not allowed to impede our war effort.

During the fiscal year 1945, theft of government property convictions showed an increase of 182 per cent over the same 1943 period. In all, there were 1,815 convictions in this category in 1945, compared with 1,143 in 1944 and 643 in 1943—an alarming increase indeed.

Three civilians were sentenced at Boston for stealing emergency rations and equipment from lifeboats and rafts being outfitted for the United States navy. Their activity, had it not been detected, could have been the direct cause of starvation of shipwrecked men. At Albany, N. Y., a captain in the quartermaster corps was sen-tenced for stealing government-pwned trucks and tires for his own profit. An army sergeant and three civilians were convicted in the same case.

Approximately $7,800 in stolen government property was recovered with the arrest of a war worker in the East. In his home the FBI found enough screw drivers, flashlights and other small tools to stock a hardware store. In another instance a war plant employee took home a pocketful of nails each day. The FBI recovered 800 pounds of nails, in small paper sacks, hidden under his porch

Other FBI investigations involved the theft of $15,000 worth of equipment from a Florida army air force training school and $20,000 worth of brass valves used for emergency repairs of warships in New York.

Severe penalties are provided for these offenses. Persons guilty of stealing property belonging to the government or being manufactured by private concerns under army and navy contracts face a maximum of five years' imprisonment and $5,000 Those receiving stolen property are subject to the same penal-

Atomic Plane Safeguard On Reverse Propellers

CALDWELL, N. J. - Reversible propellers were installed on the B-29 Superfortresses that dropped the first atomic bombs on Japan to equip them to land in less than is required for a single-engine fighter plane, the Curtiss - Wright cor-poration, propeller divisions said re-

Robert L. Earle, vice president and general manager of the propeller division, said the atom-bombcarrying planes were among the first equipped with reversible propellers.

The new propellers gave the plane an auxiliary braking system whereby the angle of the propeller blades could be reversed completely giving a reverse thrust once the plane was on the ground.

Banking Troubles Set Low Record During War

WASHINGTON .- There were fewer banking difficulties during the war than at any time in the nation's history and since May, 1944, no insured bank has been placed in receivership nor has any depositor experienced a loss from the closing of an insured bank, it was disclosed recently by Chairman Leo T. Crow-ley of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation.

Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency, announced meanwhile that the assets of national banks on June 30 were nearly 82 billion dol-lars, an increase of 5.6 billion dol-lars since last March 20. Deposits on June 30 were nearly 77 billion dollars, an increase of 8 per cent since

Heating Safety

One of the most notable innova-tions in safe heating is the wet base boiler in which water circulates under the ash pit. The fact that the boiler can be placed on a combustible floor is of interest in connection with the trend toward the basementless house. In such houses it is often desirable to install the boiler on a wooden floor in a utility room or kitchen. Other safety features of modern boilers are foot-treadle door openers, ball-shaped, air-cooled handles and side shakers, making it easier to open and close door's.

Bath Banishes Blues According to etymologists, the English word "bath" comes indirectly from a Greek word meaning "to drive sadness from the mind. Which goes to prove again that the classic Greeks were a modern people and that they knew the full value of bodily cleansing. Bathe frequently and thoroughly, and thus "drive sadness from the mind."

Plan Baths

If the man of the house has been accustomed to taking his daily shower in the morning, reserve this time for him. The children might bathe in the evening, alloting the time according to their ages and when they go to bed. The younger children might be bathed before dinner, older children later. Plan your own bath for whichever hour will give you the most relaxation.

The Golden Stool

By ETHELYN PARKINSON McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Features.

A T THEIR first breakfast in Linwood, Ellen Hamilton asked anxiously, "John, will you look up your Uncle Comstock? Or shall we wait for him to call?"

John's lip twitched. "Let's get settled first, dear. And aren't you expecting Lucille Smythe and her father soon? You'll be busy."

"John, I'll certainly have time for Uncle Comstock."

Ellen set out to find him that day. He wasn't in the phone book, so she consulted the city directory. Comstock Whitney Hamilton resided at 33 Reber street. Ellen took a taxi across the river, down Main street, across another rather smelly little river, to a strangely rural looking community.

"You must be wrong," she said to the driver. "I'm looking for the residence of Mr. Comstock Whitney Hamilton.

"That's it, ma'am." He pointed to a tumble-down cottage. "But," he grinned, "if you want to see old Ham', look for him in front of Pete's Place at the east end of the bridge. He's held down a bench there for twenty years."

"Are you sure you're not mistak-en?" Ellen asked frigidly.

"Ma'am, everyone in Linwood knows those old fixtures in front of Pete's-swappin' lies and spittin'. There's old Ham, old Joe Horner-' "Never mind," Ellen said. "Take me there.'

That night she said to John, "You should have seen how overcome poor Uncle Comstock was. I felt so ashamed! Your own uncle, sitting on that hard old bench with those horrid men! It's weeks since he's seen a barber. He was speechless when I told him who I was, that we're living on Prospect avenue and that we insist on his moving in with I don't suppose he dreamed anyone would rescue him.' John blinked. "Are you sure we can make him happy?' "Oh, yes! He'll love being in this house, having nice clothes and knowing really congenial people."

John smiled. "Set a frog on a golden stool. . . . "What's that?"

"Nothing," John said. "When do we move him?" Ellen considered. Lucille Smythe would be in town the next week on her way east. She was a bit snooty. Her father would be with her-he'd once lived in this town. Ellen had seen pictures of Lucille's father, a dignified old gentleman with a pointed white beard.

"Uncle Comstock will come at once," Ellen said firmly.

They left Uncle Comstock's cottage just as it was. He wouldn't need anything there. He was silent on the way to Prospect Avenue. "He's simply bewildered," Ellen whispered to John.

Uncle Comstock looked sweet in his new clothes. Ellen supervised the barber's work. A white mustache and pointed beard made him positively distinguished. After dinner he said he wished he'd brought his plug of chewing tobacco. Ellen patted his hand. "Darling, John has some good cigars." He smiled wistfully.

He did just as Ellen said. "I wonder what he's thinking." Ellen sighed. "He seems so pitiful and wistful, doesn't he?"

"More every day," John said. Lucille was due on Saturday. At ten she phoned from the station. Ellen found her quite upset. "I've lost Daddy. He went out to talk to the baggage master-and now he's disappeared!"

They looked about and gave up. John met them for luncheon and they shopped. There was a bus tieand they walked across the bridge for the Prospect Avenue bus. As they approached Pete's Place, Ellen saw five or six old "fixtures" on the bench. She thought of poor Uncle Comstock and shivered.

Suddenly her blood froze. Uncle Comstock was sitting right there with the others, chewing tobacco Desperately, Ellen walked and talked fast, calling Lucille's attention to a landmark across the street. They were safely past when Lucille exclaimed, "I've dropped a package!'

"I'll run back," Ellen said quickly. Then her heart sank as she saw a man rise from the bench, pick up something from the curb and start toward them. But it wasn't Uncle Comstock. It was another old "fixture" who approached them.

"Why-Daddy!" Lucille gasped. "I didn't see you. What are you doing here? Getting the latest on the town?" She laughed nervously. 'Daddy always talks to everyone. Come along, Daddy!" He was very dignified, but he looked pitiful, wistil. Lonely. Like Uncle Comstock. "John," Ellen said later, "what's the rest of your little poem, 'Set a frog on a golden stool'?"

"Guess," John grinned.
"Is it, 'Back he'll hop into the pool'?" "Exactly."

"Well, it's true," Ellen admitted.
"We'll let Uncle Comstock have Pete's bench again," she smiled.
