Congress Gets Control Proposals Which Would Curb Wages, Prices; Doctors Offer Public Health Plan

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONTROLS:

Needed or Not?

The administration at Washington has made its move for price and wage controls.

It has asked congress to place ceilings on prices which threaten to go above last December's level. it also has proposed creation of a six-man board to regulate wage in-

Already, however, it was becoming increasingly clear to the people that constantly shifting factors are changing so swiftly that some of the major points in the administration's legislative program may be-come obsolete before they are called for consideration.

FOR INSTANCE, the downward trend in prices would indicate that a proposal for price control, except in some few isolated cases, might even appear ridiculous. Consequently, continuing decline in prices would naturally knock out any validity of wage hike demands.

The sincerity of the administration in this respect might be open to question, but not seriously so. Practical politicians and people who realize the need for application of politics in government profit dures will understand that whether the government actually wants what it asks is somewhat beside the point.

The real point is that these measures were pledged by President Truman in his campaign, and it was as early as inauguration day that administration leaders stated publicly they meant to implement campaign pledges in every way. Now the administration is going through the motions of seeking to have adopted all the legislation the President promised the voters when he was a candidate for the office.

A QUICK RUN-DOWN of the administration's legislative-potential will show that civil rights, tax increases, outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and socialized medicine, all admittedly needing some treatment, are in for a rough time in congress.

That being the case, it is difficult to understand how Mr. Truman and his advisers could make price and wage controls stick should be no apparent need for either.

PUBLIC HEALTH:

Physicians' Plan

There would be discussion of motive, of course, but whether actuated by the belief that socialized medicine was an undesirable alternative, or by a sincere desire to widen their field of service, America's physicians had come up with

OBVIOUSLY, the plan was a counter move in the developing signatory were attacked. battle over socialized medicine and in it one could see some concession to the bureaucratic ambitions which, it is claimed, motivates the socialized medicine effort.

First, the doctors through their board of trustees, urge creation of a federal department of health, with cabinet status, which would be authorized to promote the general welfare by aiding and fostering programs in the field of health. This department also would contribute to individual, family and community well-being.

Briefly, the program would in-

PROMPT DEVELOPMENT of diagnostic facilities; health centers and local public health units; health centers and hospital services; comprehensive health education programs; integration of veterans' medical care and hospitalization with other medical care and hospital programs; greater emphasis on the program of industrial medicine, and adequate support, with funds free from political control, of the medical, dental and nursing schools and other institutions necessary for the training of specialized personnel required in the pro-vision and distribution of medical care.

In its scope the doctors' program read like Mr. Truman's "bold new program" for betterment of world living. But its very generalities and extent might be the factors to doom

With immediate medical care the greatest need of too many Americans unable to pay for it, the panawould have to be immediate and visual. Examined, even close up, the doctor's plan appeared to offer little toward the solution of the issue of socialized medicine.

DEFENSE PACT:

Gilded Lily

There were puzzling things going on in Washington as the proposed north Atlantic security pact came up for discussion.

As any schoolboy knows, only congress can declare war. Yet Senator Vandenberg of the foreign affairs committee was quoted as saying that if any pact were drawn he expected such a pact to "reserve to congress the complete right of decision" on what to do about an armed attack.

THAT STATEMENT of Vandenperg's amounted to nothing more than a thick coat of gilt on the lily. The pact could do no less than "reserve" such decision, because the constitution of the United States is quite clear as to what governmental body in the United States has the authority to declare war. The constitution does not relegate that power to a senate committee or to the state department.

The point is made only to highlight the trend of official thinking in federal circles. Despite the con-stitutional provision, Senator Vandenberg and apparently those who draft the pact, are "willing" to let congress make any decision on going to war.

There were other puzzling factors connected with the pact. Both Senator Vandenberg and Senator Con-nally declared that signing the pact would not commit this nation to war in the event another pact critical queried, what would be the use of the pact?

The senators had an answer for that one-an answer reminiscent of American thinking before Pearl American Medical association's Harbor. They pointed out that, as Vandenberg put it, "in my opinion the mere formal recognition of this community of interest in the event of an armed attack on the Atlantic community-without another word in the treaty-vould be an infinite assurance against World War III."

What the senator was intimating in effect was that with the United States a signatory to the pact, any nation would be afraid to jump either on the U.S. or another mem-

THE SENATOR'S MEMORY seemed to be waning. Japan wasn't "afraid" to attack Pearl Harbor. That was World War II. Germany wasn't "afraid" to sink the Lusi-tania. That was World War I. The 'fear'' bulwark hadn't done so well on two occasions.

Did Senator Vandenberg have some special information, or intuition, that it would work better to prevent World War III?

About reaching 102 . . . well, the lady who did it, Mrs. Katherine G. Lyon, said she was in favor of exercise and fresh air.

"It's all a matter of chewing your food properly, and getting plenty of fresh air. Anyone who is 102 years old and can't walk at least two miles ought to go to a doctor and find out what's the matter with them . . . I'm always

United Gas workers wage a continual battle with Nature to maintain this highway under which moves the fuel that serves hundreds of towns and industries of the Gulf South. ## Simplicity, Harmony Outstanding On Tables Set With Taste, Care

By Ertta Haley

ARE YOU PROUD of the dishes and cloths and napkins which you use for setting the table? Or, are they just a jumble of all sorts of dishes which you've had in the

If you really want to add beauty and graciousness to your home, one of the best ways in which to do it is to set your table for mealtimes with attractive and beautiful dishes and their proper accompaniments.

Just in case you're worried as to how the new table settings can come out of the budget, it's important to point out that the project need not involve a lot of expense. Quality dishes are within everyone's reach, and as for tablecloths or doilies and napkins, these might possibly be made at home with little or no outlay of actual money.

It's important to have certain colors and patterns in mind before starting this project. Decide what you like and be certain what you have chosen is in harmony with the furnishings in the home.

Homes done in simple modern early American, and some colonial types call for simple table settings. For the more elaborate period types of homes, you'll want to choose table settings that are in harmony with the style of the period.

If you're in doubt about what to choose, remember that a simple type in subdued colors will blend with almost any decorative scheme Select Table Background

To Harmonize with Dinnerware If you have chosen a subdued yellow set of dishes, your best choices for tablecloths will include soft green, several shades of blue, brown and of course, white, either plain or touched with any of the already-mentioned colors. If your dinnerware is a soft green, the best choices are rose, maroon pale lavender, yellow and brown for the background.

For those of you who like floral types, select those colors for background which match or complement the main colors in the dinnerware.

Silverware and glassware, too, should be in keeping with the dinnerware as well as the background tablecloths or doilies.

Here are Sources For Tablecloths

It's easy, of course, provided you have the money to buy tablecloths and doilies for table settings, but it's fun to see what you can do at

Be Smart!

Never again need you be accused of wearing a necklace merely for ornament's sake, for now it has a utilitarian side as The new double duty idea is a highly ornamental necklace that is attached to a strapless evening dress to hold it smartly place. The designs of the matching necklares and matching bracelets are pace setters, too; for example, in the sketch shown is a cluster of grapes of simulated pearls against rhinestonestudded leaves, combined with

Contemporary Design

This lovely design in contemporary American pottery has simplicity in every line. It is a fine example of the new trend in American dinnerware, light in weight, yet strong and durable. It comes in subtle, pastels that are a favorite for casual, informal living and for that pleasant, relaxing supper after the rush of the Worn tablecloths can frequently be cut down to rectangular shapes to make doilies. Perhaps the old napkins will even serve with the "new doilies." Cotton bags, sheets, pillow cases and cotton remnants can frequently be converted into doilies. Dye them if it makes them more attractive, apply a light starch and press carefully.

For simple table settings, use a fine, hand-hemmed edge, a narrow edging of good lace, a bias trimming or a fringe.

Study Dinnerware Style Before Choosing

American dinnerware is now more plentiful than at any time since pre-war days and you'll find many attractive new lines stressing a spirit of individuality. Intensive research, increased output and ower costs have combined to put quality wares within the reach of every family.

There are certain differences in ware with which you should be familiar before buying. All of the following types are made by American potteries: vitrified china, semivitreous ware, often called fine earthenware, and pottery.

Basically, the ingredients and methods of making are much the same for all three, but variations in processing and firing give different characteristics to each

China, for example, is the most delicate of dinnerware. It is transucent, meaning that when you hold plate to light, you can see the outline of your fingers through it. It may seem fragile, but is actually strong and durable. China is vitrified, which means that the ware has been made entirely non-porous and non-absorbent.

Because of its delicate beauty. china dinnerware has long been identified with the formal or semiformal occasion, but it may be used in almost any sort of table setting, especially if the simpler patterns are used

Semi-Vitreous Ware Is Non-Absorbent

In style and beauty of pattern, semi-vitreous ware has the same qualities as china. In processing and texture it is different. Semi-vitreous ware is molded somewhat thicker than china and is usually fired at lower temperatures. It is not vitrified and is not translucent. However, it's an especially sturdy ware, capable of withstanding much wear and long use. The deep glaze completely seals the surface and makes the ware non-absorbent.

Usually, semi-vitreous ware is less expensive than china. It is made in patterns which are entirely suitable for formal settings and many more which are right at home in less formal surroundings.

Much of the gay, colorful new dinnerware, which strikes a note of informality is known in general usuage as "American pottery." Basically, it's a semi-vitreous ware and is no kin to the imported rough native ware commonly known as pottery. Such native ware is rough in texture, made from coarse clays, fired at low temperatures and thinly glazed.

Many of the most popular patterns for casual, informal occasions are in American pottery. The ware is deeply glazed, chip-resistant and sturdy. Only because of its simplicity, gay patterns and informal patterns is it called "pottery."

Because of its economy, American pottery fits well within the family budget. For this same reason, many families have the pottery for luncheon and breakfast service in addition to their dinnerware service of china or semi-vitreous ware.

Whatever you have, take some precautions against misuse. Cups should be hung whenever possible, and plates may be stacked or placed on racks. Ch and semi-vitreous ware plates e stacked with pieces of fela

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: "My bedroom has two doors with opposite faults; when unlatched, one will not stay open, the other will not stay closed Can this be corrected by adjustment of hinges? Is it something an amateur can do."

ANSWER: The trouble in both lower hinge is not directly in line with that of the upper hinge. To check on this, use a plumb linethat is, a string with a small weight tied to one end. If you hold the loose end of this at the bottom of the upper hinge pin, the weight will show you which hinge needs resetting. The door originally was set with the hinges in line, and the trouble has come because of settlement that has somewhat distorted the door frame. It may be that moving one hinge will be enough, although possibly a small adjustment of both hinges will be easier.

When you have decided what to do, open the door part way, and jam books or blocks under the outer corner to take the weight. You then can remove the hinge pin of the hinge that is to be shifted and do whatever is necessary. Take off the hinge plate on the door frame, and pack the screw holes with wood putty. You might find it necessary to place a shira (in the form of a piece of cardboard or a thin piece of wood) under the offending hinge.
