AN ANGLOMANIAC.

My lady fair went over the sea, And when'she came back to her own countre She scorned the land of the brave and free and sighed for an aristocracee.

She said that we had no leisure class; That our company manners were green as grass; Our society only a vulgar mass, Which had certainly come to a shocking pass.

On our uncouth speech she laid great stress, And her horror she couldn't at all express When she heard us repeatedly say, "I guess," And constantly call a gown a "dress."

Our civilization was sadly new And our men of culture decidedly few And almost completely lost to view Because of the work they needs must do.

t was wretched form to be all in trade And put us down on a lower grade, Where true nobility wouldn't have staid Unless it had been handsomely paid.

She shuddered to see a coronet On low democratic locks of jet Which might have been most fittingly set On the brow of some duchess (deep in debt).

Easy to set up; easy to start, and easy to keep go ng. Recommended by all Which they madly pursue at a reckless pace.

Here is a beautiful and true story, full of pathos and suggestion: A family man discovered once upon a time that he was being robbed of small that he was being robbed of small sums of money. At length, one of mischief. The town was settled quickly to see a small figure creep past the bed to the chair where his coat lay. It took out his pocketbook, abstracted a bill and stole silently away. He recognized his own son, a little boy. The next day the father called the child to him. "I have been thinking," he said pleasantly, "that I shall want your help in my money affairs. I am going to make you my treasurer, if you will do that for me. Here is my purse. It has $50 in it. Now, when I want to pay for any-thing at the house I shall come to street and seek diversion in the outyou." After that speech and that er scenes. Stay by the Sheep.

Our thoroughbred sheepmen are about the only men today that are giving the advice to farmers to stay by the sheep. Whether they. have a selfish motive in this or not I do not say, though some may read their articles and say that they have their money in them and want to get out without too great a loss is why they advocate this. I am not a breeder of thoroughbred sheep; I sold all the full bloods I had last fall, as I was offered a good price, and as grades are very cheap, and I believe the future is not far off when sheep will get on their feet again. I could take the money in a few and put in a larger number and let them improve while the industry was down, so I would be ready to r ap the golden harvest when it comes. So I have no sheep to sell. I receive a number of letters from sheepmen and they all hang their hats on the same nail-that the present Corgress has killed the sheep industry. On this subject

About the 3rd or 4th is a danger period. Earthquakes are caused by the same forces that cause tornadoes. These pent up forces sometimes find vent through an earthquake or sometimes through the tornado. Tornadoes and earthquakes usually occur at the same time, but when the earthquake is great the tornado is small and weak, and when the later is great the force of the earthquake is lessened. Electricity is the force, the earth becomes over charged or plusly charged, and the only relow barometers, which are of all grades, from a gentle disturbance to the terrible tornado.

We, as a class, all jump from one industry to another, hunting the best. When we get it in o our heads to go out of one businers into another we let all hold go and mske a grab. It is just this way with sheep. Some of our sheep men are so determined to go out of sheep that they are nearly off ring to give them away, or they will sell, a few for so much and throw in a large number for good count. Something has hit them hard. They are rushing every head into market. Some of them are in such poor condition that they will hardly make a shadow, and we all know on a poor sheep the picking is scarce and very poor quality. And at the present time we cannot imagine how fast some of our Western sheep men are unloading, but lief is by electricity passing off into Gran, of Asherville, Kan., in the space. This must occur through Kansas Farmer, says that a few years ago there was from 12:000 to 15,000 sheep in his township, but

This means of escape from the This is only one case in the hundreas in the West. And this is the foundation to the argument that there is money to stay by our sheep, for when the time comes for sheep to go up in price, the demand is going to be so far ahead of the supply, and the price is bound to be high, and the farmer who stays by his sheep will be the lucky man, financially. It will where the electricity tears its way sheep back where it was a few years ago. All these years the profits will be large. > A Voice Heard Twenty-eight Miles. Mr. William Elkins is one of the ers about South Point. He was ones a flatboatman and took produce to a famous singer. He had a wonder ful voice, and while floating down stream used it to arouse melodious echoes from the banks.

Mr. S. Ward of this city, who flatboated with him between 1853 and 1859, declares that the people on both sides of the banks and for miles along the river would come out to hear Mr. Elkins when he had a song going. His favorite tune was "Dixie," and he rolled it out with a thunderout voice that always aroused the country round. A friend of the singer once declared to him that he had heard his voice on a certain occasion on the Mississippi in Louisiana and recognized it at a distance of 23 miles. Mr. El'ans sings no more on the river, but the echoes of former songs must still be faintly sounding among the hills that once shook with them.-Ironton (O.) Republican.

Among his "clients" was one of the "chosen people," a young broker. One day the business he had to transact was on so small a scale that he took it to a less famous house

Rothschild soon heard of the transaction-he had a way of hearing of New Orleans, and in those days was everything done on 'change-and when next he met the broker he rebuked him for not coming to the house of Rothschild.

"Oh, sir," answered the broker, "I thought a matter of 18 pence too small to bring to your house." "Ah, but bishness is bishness," re-
