AT MOTHER'S FEET. Soothing songs they were and sweet

When the bright day stole away In the twilight calm and gray, Came like music, low and sweet, Tales I heard at mother's feet. Oh, those tales at mother's feet, Told ere time had grown so fleet, Tales or fairies bright and gay, Whiled the evening hours away.

With her dear hand on my head, Softly fell the words she said, Telling me of him who died On the cross for me. Oh, the hours pure and sweet That I spent at mother's feet!

Evening prayer whispered low In the dear, aim long ago— Was there ever prayer so sweet As that learned at mother's feet? —Minneapelis Housekeeper.

The Prefect and the Constable. It was reported that if Vaillant were led to execution the anarchists would attempt to throw a bomb at the foot of the scaffold. Bodies of policemen were told off to patrol the neighborhood of LA Requette prison, and the approaches to the somber edifice were strictly guarded. We are even told that M. Lepine, the prefect of police, was determined to see or himself that his orders were rigdly executed.

Accordingly one night he appeared on the Place de la Roquette carrying under his arm a suspicious looking parcel. A police officer, failing to recognize the prefect, came up to him, dogged his footsteps at every turn and finally decided to take him into custody "Ha! ha! the men are doing their duty," said the prefect to himself. That was all he wanted to know, and he told the constable who he was. But the best part of the joke is that the policeman refused to let him go. "You, the prefect of police? That's your little joke, I presume." And, as a matter of fact, the high func-

The Camel.

The fifteenth century pilgrim, Felix Fabri, so exactly expresses my centiments about camels that I will quote his remarks. He says:

The Read and Feet.

The connection between the head and feet is well known. A hot head is ordinarily relieved by a hot foot bath. So cold feet tend to congest the brain and other internal organs. Sometimes cold fect are caused by tight lacing or tight fitting shoes. But it is as much a suicidal act to hasten death by compressing the lungs or the feet as by compressing the neck with a rope. Sometimes cold feet are caused by the matter of overshoes and wet feet

A wife gave her husband a sealed letter, begging him not to read it till he got to his place of business. When he did so, he read: "I am forced to tell you something that I know will trouble you, but it is my duty to do so. I am determined you shall know it, let the result be Echind the Flag.

-America.

A paragraph in a local newspaper on the importance of displaying the national colors on the school buildings and urging the selection of a color guard of several boys in each school to raise and lower the flag each day calls to mind an incident which occurred not long since on the occasion of some public school exercises. Mr. Harrison Hume was making an address before the pupils, in which he referred to the national emblem and the reasons why we

Parsley.

Parsley was used by the Greeks as a funeral plant. "To be in need of parsley" was a common euphemism for death. On one occasion a Greek army was marching out on a campaign, when four mules laden with parsley were encountered. The whole army was panic stricken and refused to go any farther.-Exchange.

The shout "cha-a-a" of day the charger of an officer follows dr/vers rings through the streets like his coffin to the grave. It made a sensation in the midst of the busy traffic, perhaps because there has been so much said about anarchist bombs lately. My cabman jumped a little, but quickly recovered himself and said, "Vostra salute, signore." Sometimes the church bell rings violently as though for a fire. One looks for the engines, but it is only a funeral, and the white clothed bearers, with holes cut for eyes in their masks, come round a corner with the painted or embroidered catafalque on their shoulders, preceded by the priests and acolytes.

Above all noises the donkey's frequent bray prevails. I cannot get used to it. It always sounds like comething else. In church one Sunday I thought I heard an old well windlass groaning and squeaking with its roughly turning axle. Poor, dear little donkeys! If they get any comfort out of their braying, they are welcome to it, for it is about all the comfort they have. When one sees a little fellow, the size of a calf, pulling a good load of furniture and a lazy master on a big two wheeled cart, or nine heavy trunks and two men, or another with paniers and a boy twisting his tail, it seems like a very human voice of patient woe and rebuke that comes out in that bray. "Floating a Duffer."

A friend of mine informs me that it is the easiest thing in the world to float an absolute duffer as a genius of the first class. He tells me it is only a matter of time, money and judicious advertisement. Of course the first and second elements are undoubtedly necessary for the adequate exploiting of the third. But, given these conditions, he says that he will undertake that a man of little education and no particular ability may take his stand as a man of the highest importance in any line he may choose to adopt. If this be the case it is a pity a company is not formed to take the matter up and work it. The Booming society would be a very good title for such a corporation, and as there are plenty of nobodies with money who are anxious to persuade the world they are men exceptionally distinguished there would be probably every chance of such a project becoming a paying concern. If the chairman and directors happened to be acute students of human nature, the shares in such a company would doubtless soon be at a premium.-London Graphic,

Early Use of Sugar. The sugar cane and its uses have been known in India, its native home, from time immemorial. It is perhap the earliest source from which sugar was produced, and all other modes of manufacture have been borrowed from or based on it. The early classical writers knew sugar vaguely as son. "honey of canes." To the Greco-Roman world the sugar cane was the reed which the swarthy Indians delighted to chew, and from which they structions-J. M. Carlisle. extracted a mysterious sweetmeat. It was the Arabs-those great car riers between the east and westwho introduced the cane in the middle ages into Egypt, Sicily and the for St. Claus' horse (the cult of Odin having been transferred to St. Claus), south of Spain, where it flourished abundantly until West Indian slavery and a person convalcement after a drove it out of the field for a time and sent the trade in sugar to Jamaica and Cuba. Naturally you can afford to undersell your neighbors when you decline to pay any wages to your laborers. Egyptian sugar was carried to London in Plantagenet times by the Venetian fieet, where it was exchanged for wool, the staple product of mediæval England.

Early in the sixteenth century the Glasscock. cane was taken from Sicily to Madeira and the Canaries. Thence it found its way to Brazil and Mexico, to Jamaica and Haiti. Cane sugar was well known in Italy about the second century and has been common in England since the Tudor period. The spacious days of great Elizabeth had sugar for their sack, and ginger was hot i' the mouth, too, as we all well remember.-Cornhill Magazine.
