IS WORTH A THOUSAND

THEORIES.

Every Tontine policy issued by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, twenty years ago, whose Tontine period expires in 1893, has a PRESENT JASH SURRENDER VALUE-

GREATER THAN THE SUM OF THE PREMIUMS PAID

Note (1) that this return is during the lifetime of the assured, and (2) that it is in addition to the protection afforded by the assurance during the twenty years.

This is true, whether the policy was issued at the low rate charged in cases where it is expected in the beginning that premiums will be paid FOR LIFE, or whether it was issued at the higher rate, providing for the payment of premiums for twenty years only.

The largest returns are shown on policies issued on the 20 Year Endowment form, which in some instances show a return of THE TOTAL AMOUNT PAID IN PREMIUMS, with INTEREST EXCEEDING SIX PER CENT. PER ANNUM.

The Leopard and the Kid.

To illustrate how perfectly he had the animal under control, Professor Bach of Berlin put a live kid in the cage with a leopard. Then the professor fixed his glittering eye on the savage beast and willed that he should remain quiescent. There was something wrong with the thought transference, for the leopard immediately changed his spots, and so did the kid. A bleat, a growl and a crunch, and the illustration was ruined.—Berlin

A Woman's Name,

It is said that the practice of the wife's assuming the husband's name at marriage originated from a Roman custom and became common after the Roman occupation. Thus Julia and Octavia, married to Pompey and Cicero, were called by the Romans having taken the scalp.—Pittsburg Julia of Pompey and Octavia of Cicero, and in later times married women in most European countries signed their names in the same manner, but omitted the "of."

English Dances.

The early appearance of dawn in England marks a striking difference between London dances and those given in America. It is true that in Philadelphia daylight often comes before the ball is over, but it is toward the end, and the darkened windows shut out every glimmer of day. In London, on the contrary, the dawn is at 2:30, and instead of keeping it out it is welcomed and the windows are opened wide. Frequently the cotillon is begun in broad daylight. And thus those fair dancers whose faces no longer wear a natural bloom Prescriptions carefully Compounded retire before the sun, and some men complain that its merciless illumination of their dress suits makes them look like waiters. But the pretty girls are said to look prettier than ever, and no dance is really brilliantly gay until the sun shines on it.-Philadelphia Times.

Camp' was published anonymously in The Overland Monthly, of which I was the editor," says Bret Harte, "San Francisco would have none of it. A month later, however, by return of mail from Boston there came an important letter. It was from Fields & Osgood, the publishers, and addressed to me as editor. It requested me to hand the inclosed note to the author of 'The Luck of Roaring Camp.' The note was their offer to publish anything he chose to write Sonora, upon his own terms. This became known, and it turned the tide of criticism. Since Boston indorsed the story, San Francisco was properly proud of it. Thenceforth I had my own way without interruption.

Here is a hypersensitive English sister who thus voices her emotions in the advertising columns of the London Post:

Patrick Flanigan was a witness in a case where truthfulness compelled him to give some testimony against the man on trial, who was a particular friend of his. Patrick's ordinarily rich brogue had recently been rendered more than usually unintelligible by an accident to which he referred with feeling in the course of his testimony.

He was frequently called upon to repeat his answers, which were evidently made under protest, and between these constant requests and the long words with which the air of the courtroom seemed to Patrick to be filled, his anger rose and his confusion steadily increased.

"Don't prevaricate," said the judge at lest as Patrick returned a sun prisingly incoherent answer to a ques tion addressed to him

HE GOT THE QUARTER.

A Ride That Proved Quite Expensive For a Tricky Stage Driver. Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, the well known scientist of Philadelphia, tells an anrasing story of a scene witnessed in New York one day while riding in a Fifth avenue stage. "A lady gave the driver a coin," said Dr. Dixon, "and received change for a quarter. She informed the driver that she had given him a half dollar, but the Jehu wouldn't have it that way, and the woman had simply to lose 23

"A moment or two later, however, a well dressed, highly respectable fooking male passenger, with a rather pallid face and a physique by no means athletic looking, tendered the spicuous, but afterward bites show the whole transaction and knew she given. After some persuasion the woman was induced to take the money, and shortly afterward she and all the other passengers except myself and the man who had produced the cash left the bus. When we arrived at the end of the line, the strauger walked up to the driver, and in courteous but firm tones said: I saw that lady give you a half dollar. I gave her the quarter, and I want you to give it to me.'

"A volley of oaths was the only answer, which, however, was cut short by a well directed blow from the fist of the passenger, and the driver went down. He got up with another shower of profanity and made for his assailant, but promptly went down again, the blow this time landing full on his jaw. When the driver got up the second time, he gave up the quarter. But the passenger wasn't through Tve split my gloves on your said, and I want $2.50 to

Horseflesh at Metz. The bulk of the horses lived in so sorry a fashion that it was a mere farce to divide their poor carcasses into the three categories of first quality, second quality and "fillet." They fell dead of debility and leanness on their way to the slaughter houses. It is easy to imagine that the "bouillon" and cutlets from such steeds were not strong in nourishing qualities. And yet these starved anatomies were the only source of meat in the city during September and October. About 50 of them were daily consumed. The price of the meat was never very
