FSC annual meeting set for Saturday Election results to be announced

Results of the Fort Clark Springs' Board of Directors election will be announced Saturday at the association's annual meeting.

Seven candidates will vie for three seats on the Fort Clark Springs' Board of Directors.

Three members of the Board of Directors are seeking reelection - Elizabeth "Betty" Gibbs, David Gonzalez and Santos Yerena.

Other board candidates include Ella Mae Chambers, Robert Moore, Herb Senne, Jack Simpson and Jack Workman.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday and the meeting is slated to begin at 10. A barbecue for members is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. at the swim park.

Board President George Cowart will give a state of the association address and Jim Heath will present the general manager's annual report.

Betty Gibbs will present the Member of the Year award and Genell Hobbs will recognize the outgoing directors.

Six candidates file for school election

Six candidates have filed for the Brackett ISD School Board of Trustees election, and five citizens are seeking seats on the Brackettville City Council.

Both elections will be held on May 1. Filing for positions on each ballot ended last week. The deadline for write-in candidates was Monday, and none filed for either election.

Seeking positions on the Brackett ISD School Board are Ken Curry, Robert D. Fuentes, Ronnie Hobbs, Henry J. Lutz, Michael D. Schuster, and Beverly Wright. Two at-large positions will be filled in the election. Each position has a three-year term. Brackett ISD School Board incumbents Steve LaMascus and Jim McDaniel are not seeking reelection.

The positions currently held by Aldermen J.J. Guidry and Wes Robinson are up in the Brackettville City Council election. Each position has a two-year term.

Guidry announced that he would not seek a second term. Martha E. Ward McDonald and Julie Fuentes Molano both filed for Place 1, which Guidry currently holds. Tomas Gomez Jr. and Ida M. Flores will challenge Robinson for the Place 3 position on the City Council.

Early voting for both elections begins April 14.

County to implement job descriptions, pay scales

By J.J. Guidry
News Editor

Kinney County officials have agreed to implement job descriptions and pay scales for county employees.

The Commissioners Court voted to authorize County Judge Herb Senne to negotiate with Allison, Bass and Associates in order to develop appropriate job descriptions and subsequent grade and step recommendations at this month's meeting.

"It's something that is really needed," Senne said. "It's something that we look forward to implementing from a county standpoint. The employees of the county have indicated it's something they look forward to having implemented.

"I feel like all governmental-type organizations need to have some way to identify what the jobs are and have a way to evaluate the performance of each individual that is working within that job description.

"The first step is to have job descriptions for each person that is employed by the county. The second step is to arrive at a grade - pay, in other words - and step, which is an incremental thing that occurs over time assuming that a person's performance within increments is satisfactory."

Local officials consulted with a commissioner from Bandera County about the plan.

"Bandera is kind of a pioneer," Senne said. "We're following suit because the results that they are getting have been excellent."

"Bandera is the only rural county in Texas that has a grade and step system in place, which they started at the beginning of this fiscal year. They did look for and obtain outside services of a consulting firm to develop job descriptions and then to evaluate those job descriptions to establish grade and step for each of those job descriptions," he added.

Senne will negotiate with the same company that provided the services to Bandera County. The county has $10,000 budgeted for the development of job descriptions and a grade and scale system.

"We would hope that we can save some bucks by having access to Bandera's information," Senne said. "Even though we have budgeted $10,000, it's the hope of the Commissioners Court and myself that we don't have to spend that much."

Officials seek public input on goals at forum tonight

A local forum will be held tonight to discuss local issues that have a direct impact on Kinney County.

The forum, which is being sponsored by the Kinney County Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas A&M University System, will be from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Nutrition Center.

"The greatest resource we have is our residents," County Agent Robert Elledge said. "And the only way we can provide viable information and service to our clientele is by addressing issues that are of importance to our community. This forum is a planning tool, which we will use to identify issues that are pertinent to Kinney County over the next three to four years."

Issues to be discussed at the forum will include agriculture, health, education, water and youth.

"The main objective is to obtain information that is considered crucial or critical to our county," Elledge said. "However, other issues may come up during the meeting that are different from those listed above."

"All will be considered and voted on by the participants of this meeting and ranked according to a priority status," he added.

A team approach will be used during the forum to achieve a list of goals with possible solutions by dividing the participants into small groups. Each group will summarize the needs and goals which they consider important by the conclusion of the meeting.

After a four to six week period, a followup focus forum will be held to discuss those issues identified by the participants of the open forum. The following meetings will be used to summarize and devise a plan for the county.

"Our goal is to have a plan in place, so that it can be implemented by the year 2000," the county agent said.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service, along with the Texas A&M System, is sponsoring forums in all 254 counties state-wide with one aim in mind.

"That outcome being to develop a list of prioritized issues which will be used to develop state wide issues as well as our own here in Kinney County," Elledge said.

"Our goal is to identify those issues that you and your fellow residents think will have a major impact on our community's needs such as: family needs, local businesses and community development," the county agent added.

Petrosky wins life science honors at fair

Amanda Petrosky won best overall honors in the life science division at the Del Rio Regional Science Fair last week.

Petrosky, a senior, was among seven Brackett students placing at the regional competition.

Petrosky won first place in the life science division at the high school level and B'Ann Gomez finished in second place.

Seth Moore and Chris Petrosky finished in first and second place, respectively, in the physical science division at the high school level.

In the high school earth science competition, Albert Lattimer took first place honors and April Crumley was second.

Dana Bonner finished in second place in the physical science division in the Grades 3-5 competition.

JIM BOB ALTIZER - A REAL COWBOY

In 1998, a memorial fund in honor and in memory of Jim Bob Altizer and Blanche Altizer Smith was established.

Jim Bob and his wife, Minnie, got into the ranching business in the 1950s. Because of a long drought, Jim Bob had to support his ranching land with winnings from roping at rodeos.

He became an expert roper and a world champion for both calf roping and steer roping.

You can find him in the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Smith, Altizer's sister, was at his side helping him shoulder to shoulder. She was a Girls Rodeo Hand a member of the Cowgirls Hall of Fame. Together they reached out to cowboys both young and old.

In the '80s, Altizer and his friends held ropings every October in Del Rio. Ropers from all over the country came to see if they could out-rope the world's best roping champions.

Altizer donated all of the proceeds, over $90,000, to the West Texas Boys Ranch.

He was a true believer in helping this ranch in its goal to give young boys a fresh start. He often took these young boys out personally on hunting trips. He has played a vital role in the success of the ranch. Even today, his memory and his financial assistance are strong at work.

The West Texas Boys Ranch is a real working ranch that not only provides a home to 40 school age boys, but it offers guidance, structure and opportunities through a family-based program.

Located 17 miles west of San Angelo, over 1,300 boys from across the state have called the 963-acre ranch home.

In 1947, the San Antonio Optimist Club, several civic groups, organizations, foundations and individuals joined together to establish the Boys Ranch Co-op of West Texas. The name was later changed to the West Texas Boys Ranch.

The ranch depends on these organizations for financial support.

Through almost 50 years as a basic child care facility, the ranch has operated solely from the charitable contributions of people like Altizer who want to help these boys.

In 1997, Altizer died at the age of 65 and Smith followed in 1998. Their legend lives on in the Jim Bob and Blanche Altizer Smith Horse Endowment Fund.

This fund makes it financially possible for boys to learn the responsibilities of horse rearing, riding, training and maintenance. These boys are taught skilled horsemanship and the intrinsic values of horses.

"These kids are riding every day," said Jim Kavanagh, president of West Texas Boys Ranch. "Because of the Altizer endowment, we are able to fully utilize our horse program."

"We are so grateful for all the funds that have made our continual 52 years of service to the boys a success," Kavanagh added.

The ranching tradition has been carried on through his wife and the children of Altizer.

Minnie now handles the Altizer ranch and Sherry, their daughter, lives and works on her ranch in Sonora, Texas, with her husband, Ben.

The Altizers' son, Mac, and his wife, Kathy, own a successful rodeo producing company. In 1998, Mac won an award for best rodeo producer in the country.

In 1998, The Bank & Trust helped the endowment fund with a contribution of $20,000.

"We think the ranch is a great place for boys to grow and learn," said Bill Cauthorn, chairman of The Bank & Trust.

"We want to help our future generations to get a good start in life," Cauthorn added.

Jim Bob Altizer was on the Board of Directors for The Bank & Trust for 25 years and also served as a founding director of Westex Bancorp Inc., holding company of the bank.

The Bank & Trust hopes that the friends of the Altizers throughout the country will contribute to the endowment and keep it running, Cauthorn added.

Want to hear an Aggie joke?

By Steven R. LaMascus
Contributing Writer

My family and I just returned from College Station. We went there for a much too rare visit with my daughter, Lindy, and as usual we had a grand time.

One of my favorite things is eating, and College Station has a plethora of good places to gorge. Everywhere we went, the people were friendly and helpful, and I kinda like the color maroon.

Saturday night we went to watch the Aggies beat the heck out of Iowa State in baseball. We visited and went sight seeing and, in general, had a wonderful time. (Lindy had a crush on the catcher, but don't tell her I told you.)

Our routine when we go to visit always includes our family going to church together on Sunday morning. This is something that has been very hard for me to adapt to, that is, going to church without one of my daughters, and I take advantage of every opportunity.

The church Lindy attends now is very large. And we just about got lost in the throng of people. I suspect there were around 500 worshippers there that morning. The singing and the service were very inspiring. The pastor is a dynamic speaker and the message was both cogent and applicable.

I enjoyed the service in spite of the fact that the church probably had more people in it than are present in Brackettville on a Saturday night. But something kept nagging at the back of my mind. It wasn't anything bad, just a feeling that something was vastly different here. I couldn't place it until just before the end of the service. Then it hit me - it was the young people.

In most churches I have attended over the years, there has been a preponderance of people over the age of 30. I don't really know why, but it is a fact nonetheless.

A bad joke I heard once said that the reason was that the older folks were studying for their final exam. I guess that is as good a reason as any, but it is still a disturbing trend. However, it is a trend that is not present in College Station.

Say what you want about A&M, but they are doing something right. As I looked around me, I saw a sea of young faces. I would guess the average age was less than 25.

I felt like Methuselah in comparison. And while I don't like to be so forcefully reminded of my advancing age, my heart was filled with pride that my daughter was attending a college where so many students took the time to get up on Sunday morning and go to church. That was even amplified when I found out that the church holds three services each Sunday. They have so many young people attending that they cannot all get into the church at once. And this is a big church.

A&M is renowned far and wide for its traditions. Everything there has a reason, and everything is traceable to a historic event.

Aggies are bulldog loyal to each other. They have a sense of humor that is unmatched by another college (where do you think all those Aggie jokes come from anyway?).

They are conservative in their thinking and unyielding in their pursuit of excellence. I could go on, but you get the picture.

As I thought of all these things, something else hit me. That sounds rather like Christians, doesn't it? I guess traditions and historical events are important in the modern world after all.

And there are more important things to teach than pure academics. If all colleges and schools recognized that, what a wonderful world it would be.

In an age when insipid, liberal gruel is the in thing to teach, A&M seems to be an island of sanity in a sea of perversity.

How to spend your 'dash'

Allen William Orr was taken off life-support Tuesday. It was a decision that this fine, strong family had to make. You see his body was well, but a spinal meningitis infection attacked his brain and brain stem less than a week ago.

Allen had been a teacher in Morton for five years before moving to be principal in Texhoma. As of April 1, he would have been acting superintendent of the school system.

Allen was 27 years old. His partner in life was his wife, Nikki, who is a fine teacher in Texhoma. He leaves memories that are too good and strong to be cut down by his swift departure from this earth.

Allen is the brother of my daughter-in-law, Della. My face is filled with tears as I write. Allen's mom, Joyce, found this reflective, positive message on the Internet and sent it to family members several weeks ago.

The timing of the message is almost prophetic. It gives us all something to hang onto. The author is unknown, and it is called "How you spend your dash."

I read of a man who stood to speak at the funeral of a friend. He referred to the dates on his tombstone from beginning to the end. He noted that first came his date of birth and spoke the following date with tears. But he said what matters most of all was the dash between those years (1971-1999).

For that dash represents all the time that he spent alive on earth, and now only those who loved him know what that little line is worth. For it matters not, how much we own; the cars, the house, the cash. What matters is how we live and love and how we spend our dash.

So think about this long and hard. Are there things you'd like to change? For you never know how much time is left that can still be rearranged. If we could just slow down enough to consider what's real and true, and always try to understand the way other people feel.

And be less quick to anger, and show appreciation more, and love the people in our lives like we've never loved before. If we treat each other with respect, and more often wear a smile, remembering that this special dash might only last a little while.

So, when your eulogies' being read with your life's actions to rehash, would you be proud of the things they say and how you spent your dash?

Spend it well. In a sad moment, my world is brightened by the way Allen, supported by Nikki, spent his dash. Take the time today to check out your dash.

Boating accidents, injuries slightly down

AUSTIN - Texas Parks and Wildlife (TPW) statistics show that 44 boating-related fatalities were reported in Texas in 1998, compared to 66 the year before. The number of accidents and injuries were down slightly. TPW records statistics by its fiscal year, which runs Sept. 1 through Aug. 31.

Although the number of fatalities is significantly lower than in 1996, TPW game wardens do not attribute the decline to any one factor.

"Over the years, we've noticed a pattern in which the number of fatalities may increase one year, then decrease significantly the next year," said Jim Robertson, TPW law enforcement director. "Of course, our goal is to eliminate fatalities and injuries and promote safe boating practices. We will continue the summer saturation patrols on waterways."

During patrols last summer, Texas game wardens were encouraged by the number of boaters who were aware of and in compliance of new boating laws.

The new regulations include mandatory education for certain boaters, a minimum age for personal watercraft operators.

"The public seems to be very supportive of these new regulations," said Carlos Vaca, TPW boating law administrator. "Game wardens out on the water found that a majority of boaters were aware of the new laws and responded favorably to our enforcing them."

A Little On The Wildlife Side By Henry Lutz Kinney County Game Warden. Includes Game Warden logo and a bird illustration.

Vaca pointed out that fewer personal watercrafts (PWCs) were involved in accidents. Of the 303 vessels involved in accidents this year, 95 were PWCs; compared to the 128 PWCs out of 334 vessels involved in accidents in 1997.

What did not change was the percentage of 26 to 50 year old operators involved in accidents. Nearly 60 percent of the operators in that age category were involved in accidents. The experience level of the operators was not a factor.

"These numbers stay the same year after year," Vaca said. "It's a misperception that young adults with little boating experience are involved in a majority of the accidents."

"The reality is that your average adult male, who is perhaps on the high end of the operator experience scale is more likely to be involved in an accident. This should serve as a wake-up call to everyone out there who thinks it only happens to those other guys who are less experienced."

Game wardens made contact with 545,681 people in 194,149 boats between May 1 and Sept. 7, and issued 8,399 water safety citations. Boating while intoxicated (BWI) enforcement continues to be a priority for game wardens during water safety patrols. From May 1 through Labor Day weekend, game wardens made 213 BWI arrests, up from 189 cases in 1997 and 168 in 1996.

"This does not necessarily signal an increase in drinking while boating," Robertson said. "It is a result of more experience with a relatively new law, better training of our law enforcement officers, cooperation with other law enforcement agencies, and hard work by game wardens."

The Brackett News adds new outdoors columnist

By Steven R. LaMascus Gunsmoke and Campfires

For those of you who don't know, my real avocation is an outdoor writer and photographer.

I write and publish a number of articles each year in various state and national outdoor magazines on subjects as diverse as land usage, fishing, camp cooking, and various aspects of the shooting sports.

I have been granted the privilege of writing a weekly (at least most of the time) column for The Brackett News.

This column will, I hope, cater to the wants and needs of the local populace and answer questions you might have about the outdoors. I hope this will compliment the already cogent and informative column of my good friend, Henry Lutz.

You can submit questions to: Gunsmoke and Campfires, c/o The Brackett News, P.O. Box 1039, Brackettville, Texas, 78832.

I became an outdoorsman through genetics. That is, my father, his father, etc., were outdoorsmen.

The LaMascus family in America is reported to have originated with two French brothers who came over long before the American Revolution to work as trappers for the Hudson Bay Company. Consequently, I didn't have a chance!

As a matter of fact, my first memory is of my Granddad LaMascus taking me hunting along some nameless creek in North Texas. We lived practically on the banks of the Red River and small game in the early '50s was abundant.

I remember hunting rabbits, squirrels, quail, and doves. I'm sure I was a tremendous bother to my parents and grandparents with my incessant requests to "take me hunting, please, huh, pleeceee!"

Your Horoscope by Natasha

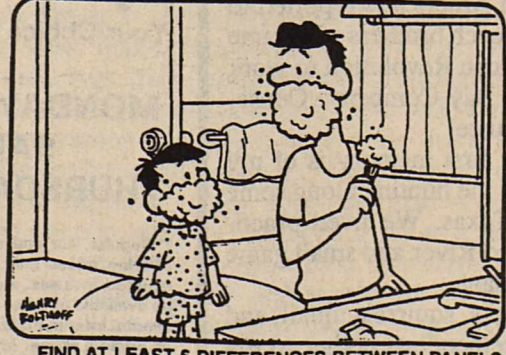

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Your positive now and in the next four weeks or so about your prospects for making money and adding to your reputation in career matters. This week, however, money could go out quite easily.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Loving ties will feel especially close this week, but this could be marred by rumors and misinformation. You'll be quite popular and busy socially this coming month.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
You'll soon be busy with a research project. After a hectic social period, you'll want some time for yourself.
Family requires your greatest attention over the weekend.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Welcome news comes from afar and pleasure interests are happily accented. You do need care, however, not to spend money foolishly. The next few months finds you self-confident.
LEO (July 23 to August 22)
You'll be excited about your career prospects. However, this is not the time to work on them. Be careful not to overindulge in the pleasures of food and drink this weekend.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
This is a good time for getting together with friends and loved ones.
A mental pursuit will intrigue you in the coming month. Tact and diplomacy are needed at the workplace.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
An important domestic project will be on your agenda in the coming weeks. Inwardly, you're at peace with yourself, but exercise good judgment about spending, particularly during the weekend.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Soon, you'll be
