Herndon named to water board

Tootsie Herndon has been appointed to fill a vacancy on the Groundwater Conservation District Board of Directors.

By J.J. GUDRY
Editor

Tootsie Herndon has been named as a board member for the Kinney County Groundwater Conservation District. The appointment was made by the Commissioners Court during its monthly meeting on Monday morning.

Herndon is filling the board seat left vacant by Darlene Shahan, who resigned as a director after being hired as the district's general manager.

"This was more or less to keep things from an uproar and on a level pace," Cecil Smith, board president, said of Shahan's resignation.

Senne and Commissioners Pat Melancon, Nat Terrazas and Francie Wylie all approved the appointment. Commissioner Joe Montalvo was absent from the meeting.

"I appreciate your vote," said Herndon, the mayor pro-tem of Spofford. "I will do my best. I have a real interest in water due to the fact Spofford didn't have any until we got a pipeline and began purchasing water from the City of Brackettville."

"Water is very important — and it is all over the state. We all should be interested in the water," she added.

All of the water board members, including Herndon, will be up for election in November.

"I know this is short-term, but beginning next month we start our permitting process. I must have a quorum," Smith said. "It all was supposed to happen in the month of July, so everybody on the board set up their business to be here in July. Hadley (Wardlaw) had set some business up in August, so he will not be here. I'm sure we're all aware Chuck Hall's grandson is ill. He may not be able to be there.

"This appointment will give us a little leeway for keeping a quorum for this process which is starting in August," he added.

The board seat is a county-wide position. The only requirements are that the director be a registered voter and resident of the county.

The county advertised the vacancy in The Brackett News and asked that interested citizens submit a resume. County Judge Herb Senne said the county received only one resume by the July 7 deadline.

"I'm not implying that it has to meet that deadline," Senne told the court. "It's a good procedure to have a deadline set for individuals to submit their resumes for appointment."

Directors to discuss election

By J.J. GUDRY
Editor

The Kinney County Groundwater Conservation District is slated to order an election during its monthly meeting, which is slated for 4 this afternoon in the district courtroom in the Courthouse.

Tootsie Herndon, who was appointed to the water board by the Commissioners Court on Monday, will also take the Oath of Office during today's meeting.

All seven of the directors — Herndon, Chuck Hall, Don Hood, Dub Miller, Christopher Ring, Cecil Smith and Hadley Wardlaw — are up for election in November.

The water district is paying the county $1,000 to have the candidates for the water board included on the ballot for the general election in November.

Filing is already underway for candidates to apply for placement on the ballot. Candidates can file to run for the water board through Sept. 9.

The board will consider two resolutions today. One is a request by the Texas A&M Extension Service to install a weather station in the county. The second is in support of a USGS study on the Pinto Creek watershed.

The agenda also includes an update on Ring's efforts for monitoring wells and the general manager's report.

Garcia threatens city with petition

By J.J. GUDRY
Editor

Beverly Garcia threatened the Brackettville City Council last month with a petition to change the form of government the city follows.

Garcia told the aldermen she would circulate a petition to abandon the city manager form of government unless there were "immediate, drastic, dramatic changes."

However, as former Councilman Wes Robinson pointed out, the council is under the aldermanic form of government, as dictated by state law, not the city manager form of government.

Mayor Joe Garza Jr. allowed three citizens to provide public input regarding the hiring of a new city secretary during a special meeting last month.

Garza allowed Garcia to speak, who then threatened the aldermen.

"I can petition to abandon the city manager form of government. Clearly, it's not working," she told the council.

"And I have it on good opinion from a former city manager and also a county judge, that the downfall of city government began when the mayor began to be less active and turned the running of the city over to the city manager. Thus began the downfall of the City of Brackettville," she continued.

"The city manager has been allowed to run the city without supervision, or even with supervision, lack of stewardship on the part of the City Council — I have to say former City Council, since you are all new.

"Such as, for instance, when the city is on the verge of bankruptcy, you don't give Christmas bonuses using taxpayer dollars. You don't have a Christmas party at the El Paso Grill using public funds.

"I plan, unless I see some dramatic, drastic changes, right now, soon, I will petition this community to abandon the city manager form of government as it exists now," Garcia said.

Robinson then pointed out the fallacy in her comments.

"You're not underneath the city manager form of government — you never have been," he told the aldermen. "It requires a vote by the citizens of Brackettville to do that."

"The council did vote to go the city manager form of government in the late '70s, but it never went to a vote before the people. You are not underneath that form of government," Robinson added.

Councilwoman Lydia Tipps then asked Garcia how she knew about the Christmas bonuses and party for employees.

"Some people, like myself, don't know about it," she said.

Garcia offered to answer the question, but the mayor did not allow her to speak.

"That item is not on the agenda so let's not get into that right now," Garza said. "If you would like to make that an agenda item in the future, we can do that."

Garcia did request that the issue be placed on a future agenda.

Blount and Harris resign from BISD teaching staff

Brackett ISD officials have hired four new teachers in the past two weeks, as well as accepting the resignations of Rod Blount and Jennifer Harris.

"We are fully staffed as of right now, but we may have a few more resignations," Brackett Superintendent Bobby Templeton said Monday night during the Board of Trustees regular meeting.

In addition, Ken Newman has resigned as counselor at Brackett High School to take a similar position at Eldorado High School. His resignation, however, has not been formally accepted by the Board of Trustees.

Newman was hired by the Schleicher County ISD Board of Trustees as its high school counselor on Monday night. That same night, Eldorado officials hired J.J. Guidry, editor of The Brackett News, as a middle school history teacher. He will also coach high school football, girls' basketball and softball.

During a special meeting on June 28, the BISD school board accepted resignations from Blount, a coach and junior high history teacher, and Harris, a home economics teacher.

During Monday night's regular meeting, Steven Hutcherson was hired to replace Blount. He will be coaching and teaching high school history, and Charlie Marquardt will move to the junior high to teach history. Brackett High School Principal Paula Renken announced.

Yolando Rueda will take over as the home economics teacher. She will also continue to teach sixth grade social studies.

"Yolando Rueda is very excited about teaching three sections of home economics," Renken said. "She has started cleaning out at the home ec cottage."

"Her goal is to make the program one that prepares students for the work force. Her experience in this area is invaluable. She would like to use this year as an opportunity to promote the program and recruit more students," she added.

Also hired were Sunni Jones Cates, severe and profound special education; Laurel Plunk, second grade; and Belinda Schroeder, fifth and sixth grade.

My grandson is home again. He was home, then back to the hospital, now back home again. He still has a lot of obstacles to overcome. But he will.

It may take all of my lifetime, but he will be OK. He will heal. His body will mend and grow and get better every time his little heart beats.

My other grandkids came to spend some time with Grandma and I over the Fourth. I had lots of fun. I know they did too.

We watched fireworks. We burned sparklers. Tanner told his mother, "I make a fire!" He's at that age of wonderment. His whole world is full of awe.

Some kids like to go to bed with some sort of security device. Tanner does too.

Other kids have a blanket, a favorite toy, or some other item to hang onto just before falling asleep.

shoes. He has to have his shoes held tightly in his little fists or he'll not venture into dream-land.

I wonder why that is? Maybe he wants to be ready in case his Mom and Dad come to get him.

Perhaps he is eagerly anticipating the morning's events. He can barely wait for dawn. As soon as it's light, he's moving.

I guess he got that from me.

I've always been an AM type person. I am at my mental, physical and social peak just as the sun comes up. But it doesn't last. I fade very quickly.

But I could be wrong.

U.S. celebrates the 35th anniversary of man's first footsteps on the moon

On July 16, 1969, three men began a voyage that would forever change our world, and mark their place in the history books. They were aboard the Apollo 11 spacecraft that launched from Cape Kennedy with a simple mission objective: "Perform a manned lunar landing and return safely."

On July 20, just four days after jettisoning into orbit, Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin became the first humans to step foot on another planet. Their lunar module, Eagle, touched down in the Sea of Tranquility on the Moon, while the third crew member, Michael Collins, the pilot and navigator for the mission, orbited above in the command module Columbia.

The first words uttered on the moon, "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind," have become synonymous with space exploration and the innately American drive to continue that spirit of discovery.

The two astronauts traversed the moon's surface collecting the first ever lunar samples, taking photographs and conducting experiments.

Four days later they reentered the earth's atmosphere, splashing into the Pacific Ocean where they were greeted by the aircraft carrier, Hornet, a beaming President Nixon, and a nation overflowing with goodwill, pride and patriotism.

I was a young television reporter in Houston when I covered the heroic Apollo 11 astronauts and their families during the 1969 moon landing. Since that time, I've been an enthusiastic backer of manned space exploration. In my 11 years in the Senate, I've worked hard to ensure America keeps pushing the envelope — maintaining our space program as a top priority, and assuring our technological edge in the world continues.

Our world has changed significantly since Neil Armstrong took the giant leap for mankind 35 years ago, and many of the changes have been fueled by discoveries made in space. Microchips, satellite communication, cordless appliances, CAT scans and guided missiles were all advanced by the knowledge we gained in space.

Even that initial lunar landing produced discoveries such as the knowledge that the Moon is lifeless, containing no living organisms, fossils or native organic compounds, enabling us to learn more about the world that surrounds us. After the Space Shuttle Columbia disaster last year, we've been forced to reevaluate our space program and infuse NASA with a renewed mission and objective for the future of space exploration.

This year, President Bush unveiled a new vision for NASA, committing the U.S. to a long-term human and robotic program to explore the solar system, beginning with a return to the Moon that will enable future explorations of Mars and other destinations. His proposals offer tremendous potential to further research in energy, geology and other fields. This spring the robotic rover, Opportunity, discovered that there was once water on Mars and therefore possibly life.

And all the while, NASA has continued its missions into space. Just last month, the Cassini spacecraft successfully entered orbit around Saturn.

The mission, taking place 934 million miles away from earth, and with the cooperation of our partners at the European Space Agency and the Italian Space Agency, began seven years ago when the craft first left Cape Canaveral in 1997.

For the next four years, the Cassini will orbit Saturn, executing 52 close encounters with seven of the planet's 31 known moons. This mission is just one slice of the amazing work being conducted by the scientists, researchers and astronauts who strive to keep discovery in the forefront of our consciousness.

This month as we celebrate the 35th anniversary of man's first footsteps on the moon, we commemorate Apollo 11, the pioneers who manned it and the great spirit of discovery that still dwells in us today. It also reminds us that staying in the forefront of space exploration will help us grow the economy and maintain defense prowess.

With an ambitious plan in place, the 21st century could bring untold discoveries.

Internet pharmacies not worth safety risk

Recent news reports have mischaracterized the results of a government report on Internet pharmacies, misleading many readers to believe that buying drugs online is safer.

In fact, the report — released by the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO), the investigative arm of Congress — contains disturbing information about the growing amount of medicine purchased over the Internet, and the associated risk to consumers.

It's important to clarify these findings and the safety concerns they present. Some of the highlights of the June 17 report, entitled "Internet Pharmacies: Some Pose Safety Risks for Consumers," include:

- Significant problems were found with the handling and authenticity of drugs shipped. Some lacked the necessary refrigeration, or arrived in damaged or unconventional packaging.

- One shipment that was supposed to contain the pain medicine OxyContin was received in a CD case wrapped in brown paper, devoid of warning labels or instructions. Another was shipped inside a sealed aluminum can enclosed in a box labeled "Gold Dye and Stain Remover Wax."

- Two-thirds of the drugs the GAO attempted to buy were easily purchased without a prescrip-tensibly Canadian web sites aren't guaranteed, either.

The Washington Policy Center recently noted that the drugs they sell to Americans can actually be from Iran, Argentina, South Africa or Brazil. In addition, the FDA has a commission investigating imported drugs from Canada.

While the Internet has helped to connect society in unprecedented ways and led to the growth of a genuine global marketplace, it has significant limitations — particularly a vulnerability to fraud and abuse.

In no area is it more critical to recognize and guard against these weaknesses than pharmaceuticals. The GAO acknowledged as much, concluding its report by stating, "It is notable that we identified these numerous problems despite the relatively small number of drugs we purchased." These are not isolated incidents.

Lives are literally on the line. Take the tragic story of Ryan Haight, a 16-year-old honor roll student in La Mesa, Calif., who died from a mixture of hydrocodone, morphine, Valium and Oxazepam obtained from Internet pharmacies.

The experience of University of San Francisco professor Rick Roberts, diagnosed with AIDS in 1988, provides another cautionary tale. Several months after starting treatment with a new drug, he began to notice a stinging sensation at the injection site.

After months of intensive lab work, it was discovered that he had received two different types of counterfeit medicine: one was 1/16 of the strength of the growth hormone that he was supposed to be taking, and had been contaminated. The other was a hormone produced by pregnant women.

As a result of research and development of new pharmaceutical products, we have made tremendous strides in treating conditions that previously offered patients little or no hope. We cannot compromise this progress by allowing potentially unsafe products to enter our drug supply.

The Medicare Modernization Act of 2004 is beginning to provide relief to seniors who are struggling to purchase affordable drugs. Discount cards are available and provide $600 in transitional assistance for low-income beneficiaries. The full, integrated drug benefit will become available in 2006. These efforts will reduce the costs of prescription drugs without creating new risks for consumers. As tempting as the low prices of Internet pharmacies are, the risks are far higher, and not worth taking.

HOROSCOPES

by Charles Cooper

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you feel the need to seek out someone's advice, resist this. What you're told is ultimately not helpful. Instead, stick to your gut instincts. LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) While you're delighted with something you've been promised, don't celebrate just yet. This person was exaggerating. Ultimately, this will go unfulfilled. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're right to think that a certain new acquaintance is charming. However, don't let the charisma fool you. This person is just feeding you a line for ulterior purposes. SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) In general, it's smooth sailing this week at work. On the personal side, if purchasing a gift for a friend, be sure you know what this person likes. This weekend, you'll need to be flexible with social plans. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) While you're tempted to ditch work and kick up your heels this week, don't give in. You have prior commitments to keep. The weekend is the best time for pursuing recreation activities. SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'll want to devote some time to a home improvement project. However, avoid a tendency to overspend. Be realistic about the type of home you have. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's not a good week to take unnecessary risks. This could mean gambling or risky stock ventures. Instead, keep that checkbook closed and credit cards locked up! CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You have a tendency this week to overindulge in food and drink. If so, be sure you correct it quickly. Some things can become very bad habits and hard to break at that. LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're a bit annoyed with someone you lent money to. It seems the person is taking too much time to pay you back. Don't be shy; ask for what's due you. AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're always up for a good time. However, weigh the various social invitations you've received carefully. If not, you could wind up having a pretty boring weekend. VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're disappointed that a social event you'd planned falls through. However, it's a good week to catch up on domestic chores. If possible, enlist the aid of offspring. PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're not at your communicative best this week. However, you'll speak more loudly with actions than words. Just show the boss what you can do! c) 2004 DBR Media, Inc.
