The patio and a portion of the Tigers open District parking lot of the Burger & Shake Restaurant was remodeled Monday night as the Kinney 4-H covered them with hundreds host of pumpkins in preparation for their first attempt at hosting a fund-raising pumpkin patch.

The pumpkins were originally expected to be delivered on Oct. 14, but had to be rescheduled after the trucking company fell behind on their schedule. "I'm just glad they're here," said Anita Ertle, owner of the Burger & Shake, "We waited for what seemed like forever for them to get here, but it's for the kids and it was worth the wait."

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month Return to flight and leadership

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. This is a good time for us to learn and remind ourselves about the serious facts surrounding this disease and to look ahead to the promising news about breast cancer research. The widespread impact of breast cancer is staggering. Every year, almost 184,000 American women are diagnosed with breast cancer and more than 44,000 will die from the disease. These are not just faceless women. They are our wives, our mothers, our sisters and our daughters. Breast cancer has become the leading killer of women aged 35-44. Breast cancer is not just a war fought by the families directly affected by it. It is evyear breast cancer costs this country $6 billion in medical costs and lost productivity.

I am proud to sit on the House Appropriations Committee which funds breast cancer re- ing each year from breast cansearch. Cancer research is a naery American's war to win. Each tional priority. That is why Congress has consistently provided necessary and ample funding to expand breast cancer research through the National Cancer no one can afford to take a "that Institute and the National Institutes of Health. The good news is that researchers are making exciting new strides in breast cancer research. Genes responsible for inheritable breast cancer have been isolated. New drugs like tamoxifen lower the risk of developing the disease in high risk women. And scientists are developing a better understanding of the cancer cell itself. We now have the armor and weapons needed for the fight against this disease. There's still a lot we don't know about breast cancer. But what we do know is that early detection and treatment is essential to winning the war against this terrible disease.

The number of women dycer is declining. The experts tell us that this is a direct reflection of the recent increase in early detection and treatment of breast

THE NEXT CHAPTER IN THE GREATEST CHRISTIAN FILM SERIES EVER! "For the Lord himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trumpet of God and the dead in Christ will rise first. Then we who are alive and remain will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, so we shall always be with the Lord." First Thessalonians 4:16-17

One day Jesus Christ will return for his own and millions will simply vanish into thin air. Millions more however, will remain on earth to endure the final tribulation of man. All men will have only two options: go with the Lord on that tiply as we proceed with research planned for the ISS.

In order to complete the assembly of the research station, we must be able to continue to fly the space shuttle, which is the only vehicle capable of carrying these heavy pieces.

The U.S. has invested over $25 billion to develop and maintain the space station.

Our scientific and international partners have also made large investments in the ISS over the past 16 years.

· It would be regretful for this nation to fail to meet our international and scientific commitments by turning away from completion of the ISS at this

Too many resources would be wasted and too many potential discoveries lost.

Clearly, we need the research about the effects of long-term exposure to the space environment on humans done on the ISS to prepare for the return to the Moon and eventual missions to

That research provides knowledge and helps us understand and also treat common medical problems of a similar nature, such as osteoporosis, muscle atrophy and bone demineralization.

Developments evolving through current research being conducted on the ISS include an advanced diagnostics ultrasound which can assist with diagnosis of bone marrow loss and muscle

Autonomous robotic arms have been developed which can be applied to fields ranging from human-collaborative medical surgery, physical therapy, rehabilitation and emergency response to chemical, biological and nuclear materials.

Over 80 such experiments have already been conducted aboard the ISS or are underway

- showing real results with direct application to improving life and health for all of us on

I have passed legislation through the Senate to ensure the maximum return on our nation's investment in the ISS by designating the U.S. portion as a National Laboratory Facility. This designation provides a mechanism to identify creative ways in which non-NASA participants can join the space station research community and potentially bring non-NASA funding and expertise to help support and sustain the ISS as a functional laboratory.

The ISS can be the vehicle for increased cooperative research activities between the National Institutes of Health and NASA, between Universitybased consortia and both commercial and international research partnerships.

These new assets can enable NASA to concentrate its limited resources on pursuing the exploration of the Moon and eventually Mars.

The number of nations with human space flight capability is growing. Recently, China launched its second manned flight into space. If we stall, we risk relinquishing our leadership role in space exploration. This will affect our capabilities in science, technology and medicine.

NASA's investment in engineering, science and mathematics helps the U.S. compete with foreign countries and is key to ensuring our nation's future will be prosperous and secure.

Even more, our willingness to support space research will determine if we will have the most capable military in the world through the 21st Century.

Attorney General Abbott announces arrest of sex offender featured on "America's Most Wanted"

AUSTIN - Texas Attorney time, a retired Canadian couple General Greg Abbott today announced the arrest of a fugitive being featured on "America's Most Wanted." The Attorney Randall Brunson for violating his parole, worked with the U.S. Marshals Service to provide information for the national TV crime program and its Web site.

Brunson, who was convicted in 1997 in Travis County for sexually assaulting his four-year- his wife quickly alerted old daughter, was featured by "America's Most Wanted" in late September. A subsequent tip convicted sex offender was on from a couple living in Jalisco, Mexico, indicated Brunson was living in the area. The Attorney General's office and the U.S. Department of Justice worked with Mexican officials to detain and transport him back to Texas. He was turned over to officers with the Fugitive Unit, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and the U.S. Marshals Service on Monday at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport. "Many people have been hurt by this sex offender, including his own daughter, and I am pleased he is back in custody," Attorney General Abbott said. "I am deeply grateful to 'America's Most Wanted,' the brave couple who provided this crucial tip, and U.S. and Mexican authorities for helping us locate this man and bring him back for what I hope will be a long stay behind bars in Texas." "America's Most Wanted" highlighted Brunson during its Sept. 24 broadcast and on its Web site. Around the same
