

GET YOUR NEW SPRING SUIT

NOW--and have the Pleasure of Wearing it the whole season

Last year's clothes won't do, however fine the woolens. They look their part. Lines are wrong, seams wrong, lapels wrong, stitching wrong, pockets wrong, sleeves wrong. The general appearance is very different from the new fashion plates, and the colors are passe. The art of tailoring is steadily progressing--this season's clothes are not only different--they are more pleasing.

The picture shows one of the newest and most fashionable models. The "LONDON"--a graceful, handsome Suit with a distinctive style that's all its own. Especially made for the swell "Young Men's" trade by that peerless Master Tailors and Designers, Schloss Bros. & Co. of Baltimore and New York.

All the latest shades and colorings here--new Greys, Olives, Browns, Blues and the fancy "Elephant" tones--in smart mixtures, plaids and pencil-stripes. Come in and see these beautiful suits--special offerings at $15, $18 and $20

MEN'S AND BOYS' OUTFITTERS.

A HAND AT WHIST.

The Story of the Result Put Bridge Yarns in the Fish Class.

At an uptown bridge whist party a man member told this story while the company was taking a bite between rubbers: "I had heard of a man holding a complete suit, but I never saw it until last week. I was invited to play at Dr. Blank's home, and it was my deal at the start of the second rubber. I looked at my cards and could hardly believe my eyes. There were thirteen cards all of the same suit. 'Gentlemen,' said I, 'this is embarrassing. I hate to make the trump.'

"Why?" was asked.
"Well," said I, "if I were playing with people who knew me less well I would dislike to show my hand."

"Now, after all this fuss, what do you make it?"

"Hearts," said I.
"Quick as a flash the man at my left said, 'I double,' and then I realized that in my excitement I miscalculated my hand--I had all diamonds. They made a grand slam and said a few things to me also."

The day after he had told the story the man received a postal card on which this was written:

"The old rule that an affidavit should go with every fish story and a pepsin tablet with every piece of amateur mince pie has been changed to include bridge whist stories in the fish class."--New York Tribune.

SPANISH THRONE ROOM.

Outrivals in Splendor Anything of the Kind in Europe.

The throne room of Spain outrivals in splendor any in Europe.

The ancient throne stands in the apartment known as the room of ambassadors. The decorations of this apartment include vast crystal chandeliers, huge tables inlaid with precious marbles, vast plate glass mirrors, gildings, rich hangings and above all the painted ceiling representing the long line of Spanish kings in the various picturesque costumes of the provinces. Here Spanish kings receive on state occasions, and here, too, their bodies lie in state after death. The throne is of rich velvet, embroidered. Around it are grouped four great silver lions with their heads turned away as if guarding the occupant. Four broad steps lead up to the throne room from the polished floor of the room, and the crimson covered footstool is in itself a work of art. In this room have been gathered for ages curios and gems from Spanish possessions the world over at a time when Spain was mistress of the world. And here in front of the throne hang chandeliers of rock crystal which have for generations been the envy of other European rulers.--Pearson's Weekly.

Witchcraft in India.

The belief in witchcraft is widespread in India, especially among the tribes low in the scale of civilization. The ojha, or exorcist, is an important member of the community. His mummeries and incantations impress not only the lower classes, but even orthodox-Rajputs and Kayasths. He is paid to denounce witches, and, with the cunning of his class, he usually chooses harmless old women whose existence is rather a burden upon the village. Some of these women, however, have an implicit belief in their powers for evil as the villagers themselves. Murder frequently follows the denunciation.

"Whipped" From a Lunatic Asylum.

Among the amusing anecdotes told of parliamentary life Sir Henry Drummond Wolff in "Rambling Recollections" gives the following as an example of skillful "whipping":

"At the time of an important division a member happened to be confined in a lunatic asylum. Every vote was necessary. Arrangements were therefore made to deliver him at the house at the moment required, and he was received by the 'whip' of his party, who induced him to walk through the lobby by preceding him with a stick of barley sugar in his hand. This I believe to be a perfectly true story."

Jack Ketch.

Jack Ketch has long been a synonym for the public executioner and is derived from Richard Jaquett, who formerly owned the Manor of Tyburn, now the ground upon which stands the marble arch and where the Bayswater and Edgware roads meet.

Here some few yards westward of the arch stood Tyburn tree, and to it and to the tender mercies of its owner and presiding genius, Jaquett, came the highwayman or the horse thief or the housebreaker in a tumble from Newgate.--London Mail.

At the Bargain Counter.

"That sharp tongued Miss Redpepp has been saying some mighty mean things about you and your wife."

"What for instance?"
"Says you picked her up at a bargain counter."

"Great Scott, I did! She was the prettiest girl that ever stood behind one."--Chicago Tribune.

THE WORLD OF HOMER.

Ancient Idea of the Earth and Its Margin of Water.

Let us consider for one moment what the idea of the world was—not, indeed, at the earliest period of which we have any knowledge, but at the dawn of written history or of written history among that Indo-Germanic people whose descendants have overspread so much of the earth. The world of Homer was a small, flat surface, in which civilization was hemmed in by foreign races, who again were surrounded by a great ocean or river over which no man had ever passed. The world of which Homer had any definite notion was Greece—a Greece which hardly extended as far as the Balkans on the north and which scarcely included the Levant and the islands in the Aegean sea. No doubt he had some general acquaintance with a world beyond these narrow limits. He knew, at any rate, some of the leading features of northern Africa. He had heard, as was only natural, of Egypt, whose civilization had made such marked advances and was exercising so much influence. He had some knowledge of the great river on whose recurring floods Egypt depends for her prosperity. He had even heard of the pygmies and of the Ethiopians who dwelt higher up its stream. Some reports had reached him of southern Italy. But it is hopeless to attempt to fit the geography of Homer to the actual facts. If a man were to search today for the precise spot on which Captain Lemuel Gulliver was wrecked in the first of his famous voyages he would find that the Lilliput of Swift was in the heart of Australia, and much in the same way, to quote Mr. Gladstone's language, "the key to the great contrast between the outer geography of Homer and the facts of nature lies in the belief of Homer that a great sea occupied the space where we know the heart of the European continent to lie."

It is another indication of the smallness of Homer's world that the ten years' war, of which he has given us the concluding episode, was not, as even Herodotus has described it, one of the opening chapters of the great struggle which has endured throughout historic times between east and west, but a contest between men of common origin. It is not a mere poetical license which makes Greeks and Romans address one another in the same language. Yet the world of Homer, small as it seems to us, seemed large to him. Compared with the mighty oceans which men now traverse the Mediterranean is but a little landlocked sea. The Mediterranean of the "Iliad" was only the Aegean, yet for Homer it had terrors which the Atlantic has not for us.—Sir Spencer Walpole in Contemporary Review.

Mutually Helpful.

Husband—Smileson's wife is away, and I'm going over there this evening to cheer him up. Wife—Why don't you bring him here? Husband—Well, I'm not feeling very well and need a little cheering up myself.

Might and Mane.

Tom Hood, the punster, once described the meeting of a man and a lion, and in doing so he said, "The man ran off with all his might and the lion with all his mane."

Manner is much. A man always looks better when he carries himself well than when a couple of friends are trying to carry him.

Wichita Theatre
"THELMA"

SEE The Land of the Mid-Night Sun
The Rainbow Bridge

The Sinking Ship

15—PEOPLE—15 A Company of Merit. PRICES 25c and 50c.

After reading carefully the Dallas News and the Fort Worth Record's accounts of the speech of Senator Bailey at Dallas Tuesday night, one can hardly make up his mind as to whether the crowd of 6,000 people hissed the senator from the platform and broke up the meeting, or that it was the result of a genuine love-feast, and his admiring friends just simply "smothered him with love" and would not permit him to make a speech.

"Thelma," Marie Corelli's world famous and powerful novel. This beautiful play will be presented by the Woods Sisters big company at the Air-dome theatre tonight. The company carries all the scenery for the production, including the "Rainbow Bridge," "The Sinking Ship," etc., thus making it complete in every detail and positively the strongest play seen in Wichita Falls for years. Seats are selling fast at Ralph Darnell's. Get in line. A large audience witnessed the performance last night and were more than satisfied.

"In other words, the inherent power of this republic not delegated to the Federal government resides in the States and the people. They are the original soldiers of sovereignty and yet the present administration maintains the doctrine of inherent sovereignty in the government. It claims that it possesses a jurisdiction broader than that outside of the constitution and the power to rule subject colonies and subject people unrestrained by constitution. Today the government of the United States denies the existence of the constitution and its immunities to our island territories. It is claimed that if the government at Washington is restrained in its functions by the people of the declaration and the guaranties of the constitution, the American government cannot assume among the nations of the earth its proper station as a world power. My answer is that if the people of the United States do not continue to dwell under the principles of the declaration and enjoy the guaranties of the constitution to protect their liberties and sovereignty, the American people will cease to be a world power.

"The present contest is on the issue plainly raised by the present government. Does sovereignty in America reside in the government or in the States and the people?"

"A government of unlimited powers means a people and States of a dependent powers.

"A people and States with sovereign powers implies a government of restricted and delegated powers. No nation can have both. The American people must make their choice. Shall we have a sovereign government or sovereign States and a sovereign people?"

The Empty Law and the Open Door. Illinois has a law forbidding dram shops to be open on the first day of the week.

Chicago has a mixed population, a majority of whom hold the European rather than the New England view of Sunday. For twenty years or more saloons there have been open on that day. No doubt if the question were submitted to the people—as supporters of Sunday saloons proposed doing at this spring election—the major voice might approve the existing condition. Both candidates in the last mayoralty contest said they would not close saloons on Sunday.

Of late an association has caused the arrest of a number of saloon keepers for violating the State law. Nine such cases have been tried at this writing. In each case, we believe, evidence that the defendant kept open saloon on Sunday was clear. In each case the judge instructed the jury that, if the defendant kept open saloon on Sunday, he violated the law and must be found guilty; and in every case the jury either acquitted the defendant or disagreed.

Commenting upon this, a Socialist journal observes:

"Here is a precedent that will be found to our advantage. As the class struggle grows warmer arbitrary arrests of workmen will be more frequent. Every man arrested should demand a jury trial, and every socialist (juror) should assert his right to judge whether the enforcement of the law in the case before him is for or against his own class interest, and act accordingly."

"A law that cannot be enforced seems to us a mighty poor asset for any community, no matter what it deals with. —Saturday Evening Post."

Do most people neglect their timepieces?

Yes, both watches and clocks are usually allowed to run until they will run no longer.

How does this affect them?

It unduly wears the more delicate parts.

This must surely injure them?

It does. The time-keeping qualities of a watch or clock depend upon the treatment it receives.

MELEE IN HOTEL LOBBY.

Supporters and Opponents of Senator Bailey Come to Blows.

Political discussions resulted in a free for all fight in the lobby of the Oriental hotel last night, in which several men were knocked down or fell down in their scramble to get out of the area of hostilities.

Dr. George R. Tabor, former State health officer, while standing near the clerk's desk, was struck in the face and knocked down.

Foster, one of the clerks of the hotel, was struck in the right side of the face with a handbell and received a painful gash. One or two other men, whose names were not secured, were knocked down. Whether this was accidental or intentional could not be learned.

Following Senator Bailey's speech at the Fair Grounds a number of his supporters and opponents gathered at the Oriental hotel. Discussion of the campaign, the senator's speech and the result of the election became general, and bets were offered.

Dr. Tabor and Henry D. Lindsey of Dallas became engaged in a heated argument, but were separated. Later they met again and the discussion was resumed, in which other parties joined. A third party joined the discussion, and soon thereafter the newcomer struck Dr. Tabor. Then the melee became general, for a moment. Those who did not want to fight were fighting to get out and those who were looking for trouble were getting some.

Young Foster and his brother, clerks at the hotel, rushed out to quell the disturbance, and Foster was hit on the side of the face with a handbell, which had been snatched from the counter.

He staggered for a moment and fell senseless. He was picked up and carried into the office of Frank L. Irvine, where he was revived. It is not known who struck him.

In a very brief space of time the lobby was deserted. All who had been engaged in the fight disappeared.

Police were summoned, but by the time they got across the street quiet was restored. No arrests were made.

Senator Bailey was not in the lobby at the time, having retired to his room immediately after coming back from the Fair Grounds.—Dallas News.

Caught With the Goods.

D. Pettycourt, ex-city marshal of Cache, was brought in from Wichita Falls, Texas, where he was caught by the officers riding one of Post Oak Jim's horses and leading another. He also had a saddle and bridle belonging to Homer Edward, the forest ranger. They were taken from his horse in Cache. Pettycourt will be held in jail to the next term of court for horse stealing.—Lawton Democrat.

New Use for Waste Paper.

Technical World.

The writer gathered together a number of old Sunday supplements. Shades of Julius Caesar, famous for laconic dispatches, what verbosity characterizes our literary efforts of today! Those Sunday supplements, vari-colored, voluminous, formidable, according to avoirdupois measure at least, rose mountains high in kitchen corner and cellar. The cry of the housewife was "Burn 'em up, for pity's sake."

But a more poetic fate was in store for the Sunday sups. They have destined to be soaked and ground to pulp and transformed into picturesque designs for the home.

It took a lot of soaking to soften those Sunday sups to the required consistency. They had to be left in water for three days and nights before it was deemed desirable to continue the experiment with them. After this prolonged soaking the paper was found to be in shape to permit its being pulled apart into shreds small enough to be passed through the domestic meat grinder.

This was the second process. After it came through the meat grinder, the paper had assumed a greenish hue, quite artistic and attractive, and the shreds had become small particles of pulp, soft and pliable. With this material the experiment was tried of fashioning figures. They looked very pretty and odd, but something was wrong. The mass would not bind. Its cohesiveness was lost when the pulp dried. It simply disintegrated and crumbled apart.

The pulp was soaked again, and this time some liquid glue was mixed in with it and the mass kneaded together until sufficient material of the combined kind had been prepared for another experiment. The figures fashioned of this material—simply paper pulp and a little liquid glue, held as firmly as cement.

Davy Crockett's Retort.

Washington Herald.

When Davy Crockett sat in the national legislature as a representative of the State of Texas he had many clashes with men of more education, but less wit, than himself, said William H. Haines of Philadelphia, as he started to tell the following incident at the Cochran last night: "It is told of him that one day, while standing in front of his hotel in Pennsylvania avenue, a swarm of mules trotted, by under the custody of an overseer from one of the stock farms in Virginia. A congressman from Boston, who was standing near-by, directed Crockett's attention to the unusual sight, saying: 'Hello there, Crockett! Here's a lot of your constituents on parade. Where are they going?'

"The celebrated hunter looked at the animals with a quizzical look, and then, turning to the other said quietly, but with great emphasis: 'They are going to Massachusetts to teach school.'"

The city council of Milton, Wash., has passed an ordinance taxing bachelors $5 a year.

T. E. Bolton, marshal of Kenmore, Ohio, despairing of having his salary of $25 a year raised, resigned.

Ralph Richardson of Madison, Wis., has a restaurant on wheels which cost $2,000. The vehicle has stoves, chairs, is lighted by electricity and has a telephone. Cooking is done on a large scale.

James McCormick, a patient in the city hospital in Cincinnati, was being choked to death by a piece of potato lodged in his throat, when a surgeon showed a silver tube through the obstruction and the man's life was saved.

George Petonak of Marysville, Ill., who had secured two marriage licenses and had been jilted, made sure the third time by taking his sweetheart to the license clerk, and the trio went to the office of a justice, where the knot was tied.

A chicken thief in the Huttonville (Pa.) jail, inducing Sheriff Thomas to go inside a vacant cell, locked him up, and, dressing himself in the sheriff's best clothes, drove to the house of a deacon, where he represented himself to be a friend of Thomas, saying the officer couldn't "get away from the jail at present."

OPTICAL ILLUSIONS.

Striking Examples That May Be Observed in Daily Life.

Doubtless every one has observed while traveling by train that the trees or houses in the distance appear to be speeding along in the same direction as the train, while the nearer objects are fast receding. Many, too, have observed that the top of a level wall built on a steep incline appears to slope upward in a contrary direction to the hill itself at nearly the same angle to the apparent level, and some have curiously regarded the ghostlike gliding and vanishing of dark shadows while passing a double row of fencing, but the following are not so commonly remarked:

One might stand for several minutes watching the revolutions of the cups of an anemometer—for measuring the velocity of the wind—and still be puzzled as to the real way they are turning round. Gaze up at them when there is an uncertain breeze blowing. They revolve rapidly, and you are perhaps perplexed as to their direction. As the wind subsides you would expect to find it easier to tell the direction by the slower revolution; but, as a matter of fact, the difficulty is increased. With the varying speed your first impression is that such and such is the direction. A moment later you reverse that idea, and the longer you gaze the more it seems as if they are spinning round erratically in every possible direction, whereas, of course, they can only turn one way.

Standing immediately beneath a high wall of a building—the longer the wall the better for practical demonstration—many would aver on looking upward that it was not exactly perpendicular, but inclined toward them in a threatening manner. This illusion is the effect of perspective and would be seen to better advantage if you stood between two such walls which faced each other at short distance. — New York Telegram.

THE GONDOLA.

Its Gliding and Guiding Through Venice's Intricate Canals.

The gondola is so perfectly adapted to its purpose that it is like a sentient thing in the gondolier's control. It obeys the slightest impulse of the oar. Through the narrow and intricate lanes of Venice, with the sharp and baffling turns, it glides with unerring accuracy. The boatmen have about ten different calls by which they announce their approach, as they come to a corner, the turn they will take in a crowd, their way to right and left and all that. And these calls, half song, half cry, echo day and night, and yet so musical are they that they seem to be merely a part of the brooding silence of Venice.

Indeed the wonder of Venice is how all things—the city and the sea, the boats and the people, the songs and the sky—combine to make one perfect whole, careening and idle as one of Petrarch's sonnets, which one I care not. Here even death is not merely somber. It is friendly and familiar as well. I saw them put old Paolo to bed for the last time. He had been in his prime a stout gondolier of the traghetto of Santa Sodal, near the Rialto, but in old age was a ragged "hooker" of the gray. In his quarter, however, he was a respected man. Indeed to be old or to be a child is among the gondoliers a title to tenderness and respect. And so when a good man dies in the poorer quarters the neighbors combine and hire a brass band to celebrate his virtues. — Vance Thompson in Outing Magazine.

Sturgeons' Backbones.

From the dried backbone of sturgeon, which has the appearance of macaroni, an excellent Russian soup, called vesiga, is made. It is excessively nutritive and invigorating, almost as much so, indeed, as the famous beche de mer (not mer), otherwise the trapang, or edible sea slug. It is collected in large quantities throughout the Indian archipelago, especially to the eastward, for the China market. There are many varieties, such as the large scarlet trapang from Macassar, the Kuroke trapang from Borneo, the great black trapang from Leuconia and many more. Properly prepared, this is absolutely the most inspiring soup there is and is as superior to turtle as the latter is to water gruel. It costs about $2.50 per pound.

- Is drapery always clinging?
- Is sweetness always cloying?
- Is a ruffian always burly?
- Is one always within an inch of death? Why not two inches?
- And why, why, why, is a conclusion always foregone? — Cleveland Press.

MELEE IN HOTEL LOBBY.

Supporters and Opponents of Senator Bailey Come to Blows.

Political discussions resulted in a free for all fight in the lobby of the Oriental hotel last night, in which several men were knocked down or fell down in their scramble to get out of the area of hostilities.

Dr. George R. Tabor, former State health officer, while standing near the clerk's desk, was struck in the face and knocked down.

Foster, one of the clerks of the hotel, was struck in the right side of the face with a handbell and received a painful gash. One or two other men, whose names were not secured, were knocked down. Whether this was accidental or intentional could not be learned. It seemed that in the excitement men were not particular who they hit.

Following Senator Bailey's speech at the Fair Ground a number of his supporters and opponents gathered at the Oriental hotel. Discussion of the campaign, the senator's speech and the result of the election became general, and bets were offered.

Dr. Tabor and Henry D. Lindsey of Dallas became engaged in a heated argument, but were separated. Later they met again and the discussion was resumed, in which other parties joined. A third party joined the discussion, and soon thereafter the newcomer struck Dr. Tabor. Then the melee became general for a moment. Those who did not want to fight were fighting to get out and those who were looking for trouble were getting some.

Young Foster and his brother, clerks at the hotel, rushed out to quell the disturbance, and Foster was hit on the side of the face with a handbell, which had been snatched from the counter.

He staggered for a moment and fell senseless. He was picked up and carried into the office of Frank L. Irvine, where he was revived. It is not known who struck him.

In a very brief space of time the lobby was deserted. All who had been engaged in the fight disappeared.

Police were summoned, but by the time they got across the street quiet was restored. No arrests were made.

Senator Bailey was not in the lobby at the time, having retired to his room immediately after coming back from the Fair Grounds.—Dallas News.

Caught With the Goods.

D. Pettycourt, ex-city marshal of Cache, was brought in from Wichita Falls, Texas, where he was caught by the officers riding one of Post Oak Jim's horses and leading another. He also had a saddle and bridle belonging to Homer Edward, the forest ranger. They were taken from his horse in Cache. Pettycourt will be held in jail to the next term of court for horse stealing.—Lawton Democrat.

New Use for Waste Paper.

Technical World.

The writer gathered together a number of old Sunday supplements. Shades of Julius Caesar, famous for laconic dispatches, what verbosity characterizes our literary efforts of today! Those Sunday supplements, vari-colored, voluminous, formidable, according to avoirdupois measure, at least, rose mountains high in kitchen corner and cellar. The cry of the housewife was "Burn 'em up, for pity's sake."

But a more poetic fate was in store for the Sunday supps. They have destined to be soaked and ground to pulp and transformed into picturesque designs for the home.

It took a lot of soaking to soften those Sunday supps to the required consistency. They had to be left in water for three days and nights before it was deemed desirable to continue the experiment with them. After this prolonged soaking the paper was found to be in shape to permit its being pulled apart into shreds small enough to be passed through the domestic meat grinder.

This was the second process. After it came through the meat grinder, the paper had assumed a greenish hue, quite artistic and attractive, and the shreds had become small particles of pulp, soft and pliable. With this material the experiment was tried of fashioning figures. They looked very pretty and odd, but something was wrong. The mass would not bind. Its cohesiveness was lost when the pulp dried. It simply disintegrated and crumbled apart.

The pulp was soaked again, and this time some liquid glue was mixed in with it and the mass kneaded together until sufficient material of the combined kind had been prepared for another experiment. The figures fashioned of this material—simply paper pulp and a little liquid glue, held as firmly as cement.

Davy Crockett's Retort.

Washington Herald.

When Davy Crockett sat in the national legislature as a representative of the State of Texas he had many clashes with men of more education, but less wit, than himself, said William H. Haines of Philadelphia, as he started to tell the following incident at the Cochran last night: "It is told of him that one day, while standing in front of his hotel in Pennsylvania avenue, a swarm of mules trotted by, under the custody of an overseer from one of the stock farms in Virginia. A congressman from Boston, who was standing near-by, directed Crockett's attention to the unusual sight, saying: 'Hello there, Crockett! Here's a lot of your constituents on parade. Where are they going?'

THE EDUCATED MAN.

Not All of His Knowledge Comes From Books and Schools.

The most important part of education comes from intercourse with people. From this side comes the education in love and duty and service. The actions of people stimulate imitation and emulation. By these men grow in power and skill. From observation of the character of people men form ideals of character for themselves and are transformed thereby. Herein lies the consummate educative power in Christianity—the transforming power of the divine man.

According to this new idea, education is not merely receiving, but giving; not learning alone, but doing. The educated man is open eyed and open minded, quick to respond to influences from without, learning from all his experiences and growing in power as he grows in knowledge. Charles Kingsley said of his father that "he possessed every faculty but the faculty of using his faculties." He was not an educated man, although he was a very learned one.

Education is an individual matter.
No two men can be educated alike in manner or degree. They respond to different influences and grow in different ways. One becomes educated by way of schools and colleges and life, another by life alone. The measure of a man's education is the measure of his use in the world.—George W. Martin in Boston Globe.

A COSTLY NAP.

Slumber That Led to the Death of King Charles I.

In the middle of Holborn once stood an inn, the George and Blue Boar, and there took place an incident which entirely changed the whole tale of England's history.

As twilight was falling in October, 1648, a very tired post boy mounted on a sweating horse pulled up outside the old inn. The lad knew nothing of the importance of the letters which lay in his post bag. His orders were to convey them to a point on the Great North road, where he would be met by other messengers.

But Cromwell's spies had followed him from the south coast, for England's liberty depended upon his dispatches miscarrying. The boy had some supper and afterward fell asleep, his head pillowed on his post bag.

While he slept Cromwell's men took the bag and found in it a letter from King Charles I. to the Scottish generals arranging for his rescue, an immediate advance on London and the arrest and execution of Cromwell and his friends. That same evening Cromwell had the fatal letter and determined on Charles' death.—London Tit-Bits.

Fish, Pen and Ink.

"One year I found a lot of cuttlefish that ran into the surf," said a worker on one of the California beaches. "I was riding along the beach, and I got a pole and rode into them and killed about twenty, I guess. Some were eight or ten feet long. I hauled them up and showed them for four or five days in my whale tent; then I sold them to the fishermen, who salted them down for bait, taking out the bills, eyes and pens, which I sold as curios. Each cuttle, besides a sac of indelible ink, had a pen a foot long, a beautiful object, as delicate and fragile as a feather pen. The eyes when hardened looked like pearls, and they are mounted as pins. The bills are chestnut color and look like a parrot's bill."

What Was Left.

"Mostly of Chicago" is the way a man described his residence. His characterization seems reasonable. When he was six years old, he cut off one of his toes with a scythe. When he was eight, he shot off two joints of one of his fingers. He ran away from home when he was fourteen, and the frost of a winter night took off three more toes and the tip of his nose. At twenty-five he lost his entire right foot. A drunkard half breed bit off an ear in the Klondike, a Dakota corn sheller took his left forearm, and since then he has lost three fingers, a joint from another finger and one eye.—Youth's Companion.

Almost a Death Struggle.

A large crowd had gradually formed around the two fashionably dressed and oblivious young girls, and at one time it seemed necessary to separate them.

"What can it mean?" said the stranger who had just come up.

"It took me," said the man addressed,
"some time to learn; but, as I understand it now, one girl has been six months in Europe, and while she was gone the other one has learned to play golf, and they are trying to tell each other about it."—Life.

Flattered.

Editor (to Miss Oldgirl, age about forty)—Your work shows promise, but do you know, madam, good literary work is seldom done by a woman until she is thirty or thirty-five? Several years hence you will be able to write acceptable articles. Miss Oldgirl (as she leaves)—That was the most delightful man I ever met.

Private Theatricals.

In some private theatricals a fugitive from justice was supposed to escape from his pursuers by concealing himself under a table. The table was small, and the terrified fugitive was somewhat lengthy.

The commander of the pursuing party rushed on the stage and fell over the legs of the man he was searching for. Picking himself up and ludicrously rubbing his shins, he convulsed the audience by exclaiming in true dramatic style:

"Ha, ha! The dastardly villain has eluded us again!" — Philadelphia Inquirer.

How Red Herrings Came.

The first red herring was accidentally produced in England many years ago by a fisherman who, having a surplus of fresh herring, hung them up in a smoky shed to dry and then forgot all about them. When he looked at them some time after he found that they had changed in color. The king, to whom the fishes were presented, was so interested that he gave permission to the fisherman to exhibit them around the country as strange monsters.

His Nerve Good.

Dissatisfied Committeeman—You made a dismal failure in your effort to please our audience. I shall not pay your fee in full.

Egotistic Lecturer—Oh, indeed, you must, sir! I assure you I worked much harder than I should have had to labor with a less difficult audience. Besides, think how much rarer a sight I have given you by failing than I should have given if I had succeeded!—Lyceumite and Talent.

Not Unlikely.

The following appeared recently in a schoolboy's essay:

"A long time ago England was once a foreign country. England has much coal beds. When it is finished we shall have to use our brains for fuel, and it will be scarce."—London Pick-Me-Up.

Early impressions are not easily erased. The virgin wax is faithful to the signet, and subsequent impressions seem rather to indent the former one than to eradicate them.

The Financier and the Waiter.

Years ago Senator E. W. Carmack was editor of the Nashville Democrat, a paper that had a precarious life and flickered out on Thanksgiving Day.

When the staff came around on Thanksgiving afternoon, Carmack met them with the announcement that the paper was dead and that they were all without jobs. This was sadder than it seems now, for the paper had not been paying salaries for some time.

"Boys," said Carmack, "it's all over. The sheet is dead. But we shall not want for a Thanksgiving dinner. How much money have we?"

A search of all pockets showed $4.70. "Plenty," said Carmack, "come with me."

They went to the best restaurant and sat down, and Carmack ordered a sumptuous dinner, with turkey and everything to make it complete. After the dinner was over and the diners were smoking the best cigars the house had, Carmack called the waiter in his grandest manner and said:

"Boy, you have served us admirably. We are more than pleased. Here is a small sum to compensate you for your trouble and as a slight token of our gratification."

"Thank yo, boss," grinned the waiter; "thank yo; but how about this yere check for $19.70 for that dinner you-all just had?"

"Boy," exclaimed Carmack, "what is your status here? Are you a waiter or are you the financial manager of this concern?"

"Deed, boss, Ise only a waiter."

"Well, then," said Carmack, "don't trouble yourself about the financial affairs of the place. Leave that to the manager," and he stalked out followed by the feasted staff.

But he paid when fortune smiled again.—Saturday Evening Post.

After Police Justice Pollard of St. Louis had fined Frank Jasinski $500 for maltreating his wife and seven children and adjourned his court, he passed his hat around among the spectators, collected $17 for the woman, giving $5 himself.

J. F. Dickey, beating his way on a train in Indiana, saw a man killed, which unnerved him that he declared he would never steal another ride, and, descending from the train, he started to walk 300 miles.

When his superior officer saw that Patrolman Finegan of the Deer Street station in St. Louis had made twelve complete trips around a water tower he suspected something was wrong and arrested him.
