

MAY ENJOIN WORK ON SEWER SYSTEM

Following the protest of property owners on the north side of the river residing within the corporation limits, near the proposed outlet for the new sewer system, at the council meeting last night it developed that a movement is on foot to institute injunction proceedings against the sewer outlet being established at that point or any other within the corporation limits of the city.

It is stated by several property owners and residents of that vicinity that they will place the matter in the hands of a lawyer today with instructions to apply for an injunction whenever the contractor starts work on the outlet.

The claim is made that when the river reaches a low stage after the sewer is in operation that the sewerage will drift and lodge along the sandbars in that vicinity and will be a nuisance and a menace to the health of those residing in that vicinity.

MORE DETAILS OF DAMAGE.

Special to the Times.
Vernon, Tex., June 2.—In the storm here Sunday afternoon, which blew many houses from their foundations, the home of O. B. Dowdy was demolished and Mrs. Dowdy was seriously injured. Among other buildings wrecked was the Christian church.

Many outhouses were demolished and windmills were blown down.

The wheat crop, as well as all other crops were damaged from ten to twenty per cent.

Practically every house in West Vernon was damaged.

The wind came from the northeast and was of a tornado type. All who could do so took refuge in storm cellars during the storm.

Jefferson Davis, Our Chieftain

For 100 years Jefferson Davis has made an impress upon this nation, and in the nineteen years of his silence he still remains our beloved and revered chieftain.

Tomorrow, June 3rd, an anniversary which all Texans delight to honor, it is well to consult the record and renew familiarity with the reasons for the greatness of Jefferson Davis, and realize anew all his worthiness of the high esteem, the confidence, the affection of a loyal people whose allegiance has never wavered and whose children will never let the fires of remembrance burn low.

Jefferson Davis was not infallible; he erred sufficiently to prove his humanity and to seal his kinship to man, but no earthly character was ever more impeccable.

He was not a scientist; nor was his intellect of colossal proportions; his haughty and independent bearing offended dignitaries, his judgment was ferociously criticized, he was accused of prejudices, a narrow viewpoint, and of harboring grudges; but if these faults (which his friends could not detect) were real to his enemies, surely they were far outbalanced by virtues accorded him by all who knew him—friend and foe alike.

Jefferson Davis lived truth, courage, chastity, generosity, courtesy, bravery, fidelity, and as son, brother, master, friend, husband, father, churchman, was irreproachable. His modesty, gentleness and affectionate tenderness made him very lovable, and won the devotion of all who came within touch of his personality. Until the end of the Confederacy he was a merry companion, given to innocent practical joking, which made the atmosphere about him always cheerful and gay. From the spring of 1865 he was very serious always, though too sincere a Christian and too wise a philosopher ever to appear gloomy.

Mrs. Davis begins the biography of her distinguished husband in this way: "Jefferson Davis was born in 1808. He died in 1889. During the intervening period of four score years, by his stainless personal character; by his unflinching and unselfish devotion to the interests of the South; by his unsurpassed ability as an exponent and champion of her rights and principles, as well as by his distinguished public services in peace and war, and by his high official station, he was universally regarded both at home and abroad, as preeminently the representative of a great era, a great cause, and a great people. The era is closed, the cause sleeps, but the people survive, and revere the memory and mourn him dead, whom living they delighted to honor. It is for them I write this meek and vindication of his political actions, in vindicating him I also vindicate them; for he spent his long life in their service, and was rewarded with their love and confidence from his cradle to his grave." In two large volumes Mrs. Davis tells of a man who magnified every office from infancy to old age, and though ever in the limelight of publicity, maintained his integrity against all odds, and remained to the close of the drama clean, sincere and upright.

Throughout all his years Mr. Davis' home life may stand as a model, his loving obedience to parents; tender consideration for brothers and sister; faithful affection for wife and children; consistent Christian walk, may well be cited for emulation.

His career as a soldier was especially brilliant and makes a story of intense interest. He graduated from West Point in 1828 and as second lieutenant of infantry was sent to St. Louis and from there to Fort Crawford. A western paper published this statement:

"Jefferson Davis was the first lieutenant in Wisconsin. In the year 1829, when a lieutenant in the First regiment, he was detailed to ascend the Mississippi with a company of men in bark canoes, and stopping at the first pine forest, to cut, raft and float a sufficient quantity of timber down the river to build a fort at what is now called Prairie de Chien."

From there the company went up to the mouth of the Chipewna, and descending that river to Menomonee now stands, went into camp, and the white man's ax was then heard for the first time in Wisconsin.

In 1835 the snows of the Northwest had affected Mr. Davis' eyes and his health being no longer robust he resigned from the army after seven years of pioneer and Indian warfare, the narrative of which would engross the most exacting reader of chronicles of adventure. Mr. Davis was further adding to his laurels—as an orator and statesman in congress—when, in June, 1845, Colonel James Roush brought the news to Washington that he had been elected colonel of the First Mississippi regiment on the eve of its departure to Mexico.

Upon President Polk's declaration of an existing state of war, Congressman Davis, and Senator Calhoun, without any knowledge of each other's point, had declared simultaneously in the house and senate that the right to declare war rested alone with congress.

President Polk offered Mr. Davis the place of either major general or brigadier general, but Mr. Davis held that the commander of volunteer troops should be elected by these troops and that when the elective rights of the volunteers ceased the appointing power should be the governor of the State whose troops were to be commanded. Thus did he forego a proffered honor in maintenance of State's rights.

Twenty-Four Years

We have passed the 24th milestone in our existence as a Bank in Wichita Falls. This Bank having been organized May 15, 1884.

Twenty-four years ago Wichita Falls was a frontier town with one railroad outlet via Ft. Worth. No farmers in the surrounding country, with practically no rural districts and surrounded by sheep and cattle ranches on all sides, and people looked upon the town as only a temporary stopping place.

The organizers of this Bank were among the first to foresee the future development of this country, and today Wichita Falls is a bustling city of 6,000 people, with railroad outlets in seven different directions, rapidly forging to the front as the commercial metropolis of this section.

During this time we have grown from a small beginning to a large and successful business.

We have endeavored to keep abreast of the times, providing for ourselves every modern appliance and up-to-date system to facilitate our office work, providing for our depositors every safe-guard known for their protection and security.

We have given freely to every deserving charity; contributed to every enterprise that would tend to improve or bring trade to our City.

We enjoy the confidence of the people of this community, and take this opportunity to thank our customers whose patronage has helped to make the last year the largest and best in our history.

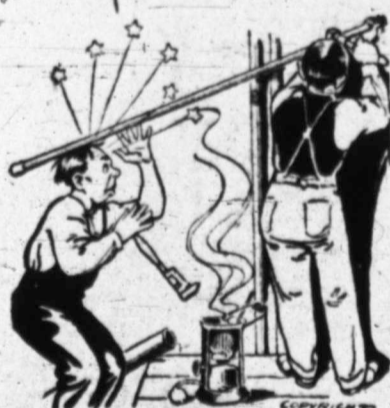

WE ARE HERE TO STAY.

position, for his men the Whitney rifles hurried gladly to follow where-being first used by the Mississippians became known as the Mississippi rifles.

There is no brighter page in the annals of soldiery than that which tells of Colonel Jefferson Davis in Mexico. In the charge at Monterey he was the hero and the peerless Mississippi rifles hurried gladly to follow wherever he led the way. He saved the day at Buena Vista and received the wound which made the crime of shackling his feet in Fortress Monroe of twofold blackness.

The flag under which he fought during his service in Mexico was draped about the bier of our chieftain when in 1889 his body lay in state to be viewed by a sorrowing people. This bullet-riddled banner to whose renown he had added such luster belonged to a foreign country (Mr. Davis was never again a citizen of the United States after resigning his seat in the senate to follow Mississippi in secession), but because of his noble service to that country under its proud folds it was permitted to lie at last over the stilled heart to which it had been inexpressibly dear.

Colonel Davis went on crutches two years after Buena Vista, suffered ten years from the wound and limped to life's close, especially after manacles abraded the injured member.

On his return from Mexico in 1847 President Polk appointed him brigadier general for "valor and efficiency," but he again declined the honor and sought the quiet of private life. Within two months after his return home Governor Brown appointed Colonel Davis to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Jesse Speight, the legislature and the people enthusiastically endorsing the governor's appointment.

Pale and emaciated from the nervous pain consequent upon his wound, and supported on two crutches, Mr. Davis took his seat at the first session of the Thirtieth congress. He was received most cordially and was honored in every way by the body.

Part of the grandeur of this nation's past was made by his great speeches from then until the democratic party of Mississippi required him to resign the senatorship to be defeated in a race for governor of the State. After which he had a few happy peaceful months with his robes and loved ones at Briarfield.

At the urgent solicitation of President Pierce he became secretary of war in 1853, where he remained four years with pronounced influence. He was again elected to the senate before his secretaryship expired and remained there until his resignation to go with Mississippi into the Southern Confederacy.

Reaching Jackson Senator Davis found a commission from the governor Pettus making him major general of the forces of Mississippi dated January 25, 1861. In a conference regarding arms when Mr. Davis said they would need more than they could secure, he feared, Governor Pettus answered: "General, you overestimate the risk."

Mrs. Davis says: "The messenger with the notification that Mr. Davis had been elected president and Alexander H. Stephens elected vice president of the Confederate States, found him in our garden assisting to make rose cuttings; when reading the telegram he looked so grieved that I feared some evil had befallen our family. After a few minutes' painful silence he told me, as a man might speak of a sentence of death. As he neither desired nor expected the position he was more deeply depressed than before. He assembled his negroes and made them an affectionate farewell speech, to which they responded with expressions of devotion, and he left next day for Montgomery."

Mr. Davis had used all his influence for a reconciliation between the North and South; he had prayed and pleaded for it, and foresight of the inevitable filled his great, warm heart with foreboding. He wished to be with the army and supposed that his pre-eminence being known, his tenure as president would only be temporary, his choice for president being his close friend and West Point classmate, Albert Sidney Johnson.

The historic facts of his presidency are fairly well known, as are the horrors of his imprisonment, with the cowardly release, and also the after years of creeping age in beautiful Beauvoir, the gift of a generous friend, Beauvoir, where the Mississippi veterans now find a peaceful haven.

Senator Davis' eloquence may be read by all men, for it adorns congressional records. Colonel Davis' heroism should be a matter of pride and emulation to all American youths. President Davis' career is told in history where all may become familiar with the facts. The story of his incarceration has been told conservatively by the surgeon commanding Fortress Monroe. Marse Jeff's admirable association with his slaves may be learned through many printed narratives and their letters of condolence at his death. Many personal friends still live to bear witness to the genial sweetness of his disposition and manners.

The Southerner who believes in himself and his heritage from noble sires should see that his children read with understanding "Life and Reminiscences of Jefferson Davis by Distinguished Men of the Time," Mrs. Davis' "Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States," and "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government," by our chieftain's own hand, who thus gives to us this priceless legacy.

To the women of the Confederacy, whose pious ministrations to our wounded soldiers, soothed the last hours of those who died far from the objects of their tenderest love; whose domestic labors contributed much to supply the wants of our defenders in the field; whose zealous faith in our cause shone a guiding star undimmed by the darkest clouds of war; whose fortitude sustained them under all the privations to which they were subjected; whose annual tributes expressed their enduring grief, love and reverence for our sacred dead; and whose patriotism will teach their children to emulate the deeds of our revolutionary sires. These pages are dedicated by their countryman, Jefferson Davis.

The third day of June let us renew our vows to be worthy of our inheritance and let us prove our lasting gratitude to those who have gone before by efficient generosity to those who are left, and by honoring our country, our State and ourselves while garlanding our heroes with fadeless laurels.

The President has signed the bill making an appropriation of several million dollars for the erection of public buildings throughout the United States. Among the 1st Wichita Falls comes in for a $50,000 appropriation for that purpose. The Times does not know how soon the money appropriated by the government will be available nor has it any idea as to where the building is to be located. Perhaps there are those in this city who have kept in touch with the matter and can give more information on the subject. If so, the Times will be glad to make public any information they may communicate to its readers. It makes this request because it is a matter in which the general public is interested and regards it as information to which all good citizens are entitled to be in possession of.

A State prohibition rally is being planned to take place on June 25th. As yet, the place for the holding of the rally of the "drys" has not been decided upon, but it is said that either Dallas, Fort Worth or Waco will be selected. At this rally four governors will be present, as follows: Governor Campbell of Texas, Glenn of North Carolina, Noel of Mississippi and Haskell of Oklahoma.

Jose Harris, deputy collector at San Antonio, has lost his job, presumably for his act in holding the State Republican convention recently held at Fort Worth. Colonel Jose can now devote most of his time to his paper and can divide his time in roasting others than Democrats.

BOLIVIAN INDIANS.

The Majority Are Semi-intoxicated From the Cradle to the Grave.
The Indian women of Bolivia are usually superior to their lords in actual intelligence; also in age, as a rule. They earn the larger share of their mutual "living" and take the lead in most things.

As recognized head of the house the Bolivian Indian wife is much more likely to thrash her comparatively timid spouse than he is to thrash her. In the markets, when produce has to be disposed of, she can drive a far better bargain than he could; she can carry as heavy burdens, endure as much privation and physical toil, labor, chew as much coca and drink as much strong drink.

Little or no money passes among the Bolivian Indians, their mediums of exchange being whatever they may make or the labor of their hands. They will eat when not hungry, drink when not thirsty, sleep when not sleepy, anywhere and any time when opportunity offers, "against the time of need," as they say. The majority are in a state of semi-intoxication from babyhood to the grave, alcohol being used on every pretext, freely as their means will allow, on occasions of births, deaths and feast days—the last named being remarkably frequent.—Boston-Globe.

HIS COAT OF ARMS.

It Was Fairly Earned Since He Descended From a King.

A man applied to the college of heraldry for a coat of arms, says a writer in the Cornhill Magazine, and was asked if any of his ancestors had been renowned for any singular achievements. The man paused and considered, but could recollect nothing.

"Your father," said the herald, aiding his memory, "your grandfather, your great-grandfather?"
"No," returned the applicant; "I never knew that I had a great-grandfather or a grandfather."

"Of yourself?" asked this creator of dignity.
"I know nothing remarkable of myself," returned the man, "only that, being once locked up in Ludgate prison for debt, I found means to escape from an upper window, and that, you know, is no honor in a man's escutcheon."

"And how did you get down?" said the herald.
"Odd enough," retorted the man. "I procured a cord, fixed it round the neck of the statue of King Lud on the outside of the building and thus let myself down."

"I have it!" said the herald. "No honor! Lineally descended from King Lud! And his coat of arms will do for you."

They Won the Pool.

It was certainly reprehensible, though one cannot but smile at the bold trick played one night by half a dozen men in Paris. These individuals rang at the door of a private house, and before the servant could announce their arrival the leader had donned an official scarf and introduced himself as a police commissioner, seized about $1,000 which was lying on the table as stakes in a game of poker, saying he would not trouble the host and his guests to call at the office that evening, but would be obliged if they would do so the next morning. The "commissioner," with his escort, politely departed. When the players dutifully called at the office the next day, their visit created visible surprise, and they learned, to their disgust, that this police commissioner of the night before had tricked them and their $1,000 had been carried off by a gang of thieves. So much for playing poker and having an uneasy conscience!—Boston Herald.

An Easy Word.

This is what happened to a Glasgow workman when he tried to make his wife's home life happy by reading the police news to her as contained in his evening paper. In due course he reached an interesting trial for assault; the report of which concluded as follows:

"This case was held over until tomorrow, as the presiding magistrate said he found considerable difficulty in pronouncing sentence."

"Dear me," commented the reader's wife, "he cannot have been a man of much education, surely, or he would have found any difficulty in pronouncing an easy wee word like that."—Dundee Advertiser.

A Bit of Advice.

This is a bit of advice offered by the Gunglson Gazette:

"Young man, if you should come across a girl who, with a face as radiant as a sunflower, says as you appear at the door, 'I will be busy for half an hour yet, for the dishes are not washed.' Just squat right down on the doorstep and wait for her, because some other chap may come along and secure the prize, and right there you will have lost an angel."

The Grave of Adam.
 April 1 was marked on old calendars as the "Memorial of Adam." The orientals relate that Adam, when dying, charged his children to bury his body, embalmed with myrrh, incense and cassia, in the cave of Al-Kanuz, near paradise. When they quitted the place they were to convey his body to the center of the earth, whence would come salvation to his posterity. This is said to have been done by Noah and Melchizedek, who reburied him on the sacred hill of Calvary.—Chicago News.

Pleasant.
 The two men talked for a time in the train.
 "Are you going to hear Barkins' lecture tonight?" said one.
 "Yes," returned the other.
 "Take my advice and don't. I hear he is an awful bore."
 "I must go," said the other. "I'm Barkins."

Positive Proof.
 Patron—How can you tell whether a couple are married or not?
 Hotel Keeper—If he orders two whole portions, they are not; if he orders one portion for two, they are.—Judge.

FACTS ABOUT PRODUCTION OF COTTON IN U. S. IN 1907

Bulletin 95, which has just been issued by the Bureau of the Census, consists of a report on the production of cotton in 1907, prepared under the supervision of William M. Steuart, chief statistician for manufactures, by Mr. Daniel C. Roper, expert chief of division. The report is presented in four divisions: (1) Annual cotton production in the United States, as returned by ginners and delaters, distributed by States from 1899 to 1907 and by counties from 1903 to 1907, with statistics as to annual production compiled from trustworthy sources for previous years, beginning with 1890; (2) world's cotton production in 1907, by countries; (3) the growing, harvesting, and handling of cotton, with illustrations; and (4) statistics as to the manufacture of cottonseed products.

During the ginning seasons of 1907-8, as for the two previous seasons ten preliminary statements of cotton ginned to specific dates were issued. The present report gives the aggregate figures for the whole cotton crop, and covers the ninth consecutive year for which statistics of cotton ginned have been collected and published by the Bureau of the Census.

Production 11,375,461 Bales.
The finally revised figures for the crop of 1907, expressed in equivalent 500-pound bales and including linters show a total production of 11,375,461 bales. This represents a falling off from 1906 of 2,220,037 bales, or 16.3 per cent, and is 2,304,493 bales less than the crop of 1904, the largest on record; while it falls short of the average production of the last six years by 345,914 bales.

Of the total production in 1907, 4,679,009 bales, or 42 per cent, came from the territory west of the Mississippi river, while the States east of the Mississippi contributed 6,696,452 bales, or 58 per cent. This is in marked contrast with 1906, when 53.2 per cent of the crop came from west of the Mississippi and 46.8 per cent from the States east of it; in 1905, however, the corresponding percentages were 41.6 and 58.4 respectively. The variations are caused very largely by the fluctuations in the size of the crop in the States west of the Mississippi, as the difference between the largest and the smallest crop in the eastern States during the last three years was but 298,970 bales.

Texas Shows a Falling Off of 44.9 Per Cent.
The State representing the largest cotton crop in 1907, as well as in every other year since the inauguration of the ginning reports, was Texas, with a total of 2,360,478 bales. This represents an enormous decrease from 1906, however, amounting to 1,921,346 bales, or 44.9 per cent. As a result of this decrease Texas produced only 20.8 per cent of the total for the country, as compared with 31.5 per cent in 1906 and 24.9 per cent, which represents the proportion contributed by it to the aggregate production of the last six years.

Other States showing large decrease are Louisiana and Arkansas, which reported losses of about one-third and one-fifth, respectively, as compared with 1906. The new State of Oklahoma reported 882,984 bales, a loss of about 4 per cent, which, however, was so insignificant as compared with the losses shown by other States that Oklahoma actually advanced from seventh place to sixth in the quantity of cotton produced.

Georgia Reports But 504,639 Bales Less Than Texas.
Georgia ranked second in the quantity of cotton produced in 1907, with a total of 1,855,789 bales, representing 16.3 per cent of the total production for the country and an increase of 229,459 bales over 1906. As a result of this increase and the large decrease shown for Texas in 1907, Georgia reported but 504,639 bales less than the latter State, against a difference of 2,655,494 bales in 1906. Mississippi ranked third in 1907, with 1,504,307 bales, or 13.2 per cent of the total for the country, followed by South Carolina, which advanced from eighth place in 1906, with a total of 1,142,244 bales, and Alabama with 1,132,966 bales, or 10 per cent each of the total crop.

Grade of Crop Estimated as Middling.
During the earlier part of the season the weather conditions were very unfavorable for the cotton crop, as a cold backward spring was responsible for the poor stands, stunted plants, and a late start, and later excessive rainfall, especially in the Western States, followed by drought, threatened disaster. The weather during the latter part of the season was, however, very propitious, and practically the entire crop was harvested in good condition. The average grade being estimated as middling. The boll weevil occasioned considerable damage in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, but growers are gradually becoming more efficient in holding this pest in check.

Eastland and Taylor counties, the production increased during this period from 47,622 bales to 206,979 bales. Large additions have recently been made to the cotton acreage in Oklahoma through the reclamation of new land and from the disposition of former wheat growers to change to cotton because of insect pests.

Attempts are also being made to raise cotton on irrigated land, and the apparent success of the undertakings of this kind in Texas and New Mexico justifies the belief that the quantity of cotton raised by this means may materially increase in the future. It is thought that by careful attention to seed selection and methods of cultivation a cotton fiber of superior characteristics can be raised in this portion of the United States. It has been demonstrated that Egyptian cotton can be grown in the hot, dry portions of Southern Arizona and in Southern California.

Cotton Ginned to Specific Dates.
The percentages of the crop of 1907 ginned to the respective report dates are as follows: 1.8 to September 1; 13.9 to September 25; 40 to October 18; 55.4 to November 1; 66 to November 14; 75.5 to December 1; 84 to December 13; 90 to January 1; and 93.5 to January 16. The season was relatively late; in 1905, 47.6 per cent of the crop was ginned by October 18, and in 1904, 47.7 per cent, while in 1902 the corresponding percentage was 53.7.

The statistics of cotton ginned are computed from ginners' returns. The crop of 1907 was reported from 873 counties in 16 States. Of these counties 791 were canvassed by 725 special agents of the Bureau of the Census. The remaining 82 counties were canvassed by mail. The agents are given six days in which to visit the ginners and secure returns of cotton ginned. Summaries of these are wired to the Bureau on the last day of the canvass, and on the following day these summaries are added and the results telegraphed over the country. The individual card reports of the ginners, upon which the agents base their summaries, are also forwarded to the Bureau and used as a check against the wired summaries. During the past season the reports were published at 10 a. m., instead of at 2 p. m., as in the previous year, with the resultant advantages that there has been no unnecessary waiting for the reports on the part of the trade interests, and that there is no room for accusations of improper use of the information, as no business is transacted on the cotton exchanges between the close of the canvass and the publication of the returns.

5,687,730.718 Pounds of Lint Cotton Produced.
The total gross weight of the cotton reported from the crop of 1907 in the United States was 5,687,430,718 pounds. The total lint computed amounted to 246,538,261 pounds, leaving the quantity of lint-produced as 5,441,192,457 pounds. The quantity of cottonseed produced was estimated at 4,952,462 tons.

Average Weight of Bale 502.2 Pounds.
Careful records of bale weights were returned by the ginners, from which it has been ascertained that the average gross weight of the bale for the total crop, counting round as half bales and including linters, was 502.2 pounds, compared with 510.9 pounds in 1906, 54,030,736 Pounds of Sea Island Cotton. The production of Sea Island cotton during 1907 amounted to 86,875 bales, with a gross weight of 24,030,736 pounds, as compared with 57,559 bales, weighing 22,281,989 pounds, in 1906. The average gross weight of the bale was 391.6 pounds. The only States producing Sea Island cotton are South Carolina, Georgia and Florida; of these Georgia ranked first, with a production of 44,713 bales, or more than one-half of the total crop.

Average Prices.
The average price per pound of upland cotton of the crop of 1907 was 11.46 cents; of Georgia and Florida Sea Island, 24.27 cents; of South Carolina Sea Island, 35.59 cents. The average price of cottonseed per ton was $17.63. The average price of upland cotton marketed prior to April 1 have ranged from 8.20 cents to 12.16 cents per pound during the six years beginning with 1902, the average price for 1907 being exceeded only by that of 1903.

Estimated Value of Crop $700,956,011.
The estimated total value of the crop of 1907 was $700,956,011. Of this $605,963,532 represents the value of the upland cotton produced, $8,566,844 that of the Sea Island, and $87,325,575 that of the seed. There was a falling off in aggregate value as compared with 1906 of $20,691,226, but this was due solely to a decrease of $28,809,795 in the value of upland cotton, as the value of Sea Island cotton and of cottonseed increased $2,128,693 and $5,989,876, respectively. The average value of a bale of upland cotton for the five-year period ending with 1907 was $57.30, as compared with an average of $31.75 for the corresponding period ending with 1899, an increase of $25.55 per bale.

ported the largest number of active ginneries, 4,567, or 16.6 per cent of the total, but ginned only 16.3 per cent of the crop; while Texas, with 14.5 per cent of the active ginneries, ginned 29.8 per cent of the crop. The average number of bales ginned per active establishment in 1907 was 494, against an average of 457 in 1906. The difference is occasioned by the fact that the production in 1907 was largest in those States having comparatively small establishments.

Exports Amounted to 8,225,237 Bales.—One of the most interesting tables in the report is that showing the production, consumption, exports and imports of cotton for the United States for each year from 1789 to 1907, inclusive. A realization of the great development of cotton growing in the country is given by the fact that in 1789 the total production of the country amounted to but 238 bales of 500 pounds each, and that the exports for the year beginning October 1, 1790, were but 379 bales, compared with 8,225,237 bales for the year commencing September 1, 1906.

United States Produced Two-thirds of World's Factory Supply.

The second part of the bulletin gives a brief summary of the present status of cotton growing in all of the countries where it is carried on to any extent. The total world's production of cotton for mill consumption in 1907 was estimated at 16,512,185 bales of 500 pounds net, of which the United States furnished 10,882,385 bales, or 65.9 per cent. British India, which ranked second, produced but 2,444,890 bales, or 14.8 per cent. Numerous efforts have been made in recent years to develop new fields of cotton production, but it will be years before the United States will no longer be required to furnish the greater part of the supply, if indeed that time will ever come.

Growing and Handling of Cotton.—The third part of the report contains a short discussion of the methods of growing and handling cotton in the United States, and includes several illustrations. An interesting table is presented, comparing weather conditions during the growing season of 1907 at selected stations of the Weather Bureau with the average for a number of years. It appears that these conditions were in some of the States very unfavorable for the crop, a fact which probably explains the large falling off as compared with 1906.

A brief discussion of transportation charges is included in this part of the bulletin. It is estimated that the average total freight charge from the hands of the producer to the cotton merchant at Liverpool for 1907 was 88 cents per hundred pounds, not including terminal charges; this rate being obtained by adding the average rate from the farm to the shipping point (16 cents), the average railway rate from the local shipping point to the port (40 cents), and the average ocean rate from the United States to Liverpool (32 cents).

Value of Cottonseed Products $66,134,859.

The last part of the bulletin deals with the cottonseed products industry both in the United States and in the world at large. The total number of cottonseed oil mills in the world in 1907 was 873, of which 786 were in the United States. The industry in this country has developed greatly since 1859, when there were but 119 establishments, reporting a value of products amounting to $13,235,947. In 1907 the quantity of seed crushed was estimated at 2,564,873 tons, or 51.8 per cent of the total quantity produced and the total value of products at $65,134,859. The products were estimated to include 103,045,820 gallons of oil, 1,343,989 tons of meal and cake, 926,705 tons of hulls, and 428,243,639 pounds of lint. In the year ending June 30, 1907, 8,814 tons of cottonseed, valued at $209,493; 41,880,204 gallons of oil, valued at $1,074,492; and 679,484 tons of cake and meal, valued at $17,062,594, were reported as exported from the United States to foreign countries.

We will appreciate your next month grocery account.

The Adored One.

He is a confirmed bachelor. In fact, his attitude toward women is almost that of a misogynist. His particular bete noire is a new acquaintance of his sister, Miss Blank.

He met her in the street the other day and, seeing no way out of it, stopped and spoke to her. She saw how he was fidgeting to get away and said:

"You seem very preoccupied. Ah, I know! You are thinking of the one you adore."

"I adore no one," was his stiff rejoinder.

"You can't deceive me. I know you are deeply in love. Besides, your sister showed me a photo of the object of your devotion only last night. It isn't a type I admire. But, there, every one to his taste. I won't tell any one. Goodby."

And before he could reply she was gone.

When he reached home he said to his sister:

"What girl's photo did you show Miss Blank last night?"

Then it dawned upon him what Miss Blank was driving at.—London Scraps.

A Tiny State.

The miniature republic of San Marino is a mere dot on the map of Europe, being the smallest state in the world as well as the oldest independent republic. Its area is thirty-eight square miles, only little less than twice that of the island of Manhattan.

It lies entirely in Italy, but is wholly independent. Its situation is on the easterly side of the Etruscan Apennines and about twelve miles from Rimini, on the Adriatic sea. The frontier is only twenty-four miles in length, and the population would make only a small city ward, numbering less than 12,000.

There is no public debt, and the annual expenses met by taxation amount to $80,000. The country has bronze and silver currency, coined by Italy, 158,000 lire of the latter and 105,000 of the former.
