FIRE AT KANSAS CITY

LOSS OF $300,000—BLAZE IN NELSON MORRIS & CO.'S PACKING HOUSE THIS MORNING.

WATER HINDERS FIREMEN

Packing House Stood in Flooded District and Fire Apparatus Could Not Reach Building.

By Associated Press. Kansas City, Mo., June 12.—Fire started at daylight in the mill and a half dollar packing plant of Nelson Morris & Co., at Kansas City, Kansas, and by 9 o'clock had progressed so far that the entire building will be destroyed. At that hour dynamite was being used to stop the flames.

Two laborers have been killed and another perhaps fatally injured. The plant is in the flood district and is entirely surrounded by water.

The fire was started by an explosion in the chemical department and the flames spread rapidly.

Because of the flood, the firemen were unable to reach nearer than two blocks from the building with the apparatus.

Telephone communication is impossible on account of the flood and it is hard to get an accurate estimate of the damage up to this time.

Later—At 11 o'clock this morning the fire in the big packing house was under control and the loss is estimated at about $300,000. The blaze was confined to the cold-storage room and the meat house, both of which were destroyed.

22,000 LESS IDLE CARS.

Report Shows Big Increase of Freight Cars Now in Use.

New York, June 11.—A decrease of over 22,000 in the number of idle freight cars during the latter half of May is shown in the fortnightly report of the American Railway Association just issued, but dated May 27.

On that date there were 381,779 idle freight cars against 404,375 on May 13, the date of the previous report. This makes the second consecutive decrease in idle cars, the previous report having shown a reduction of about 9,000 cars from the maximum of 413,328, reached on April 29. This latest decrease was due to the removal of over 40 per cent or about 8,000 cars to the shop list, indicating that the railroads have begun to repair a large number of idle freight cars, but it is not to be inferred that the actual decrease in traffic has been sufficient to require the use of all these cars.

A further large part of the decrease is explained by the fact that the gradual resumption of bituminous coal mining has called back into service a good many coal cars, which were made idle by the suspension of work a few months ago. The number of idle box cars did not vary materially during the last half of May.

BALL TEAM WILL PLAY AT FREDERICK MONDAY.

The Wichita Falls baseball team will go to Frederick for two games on next Monday.

The local team is comprised entirely of home players and no salaries are paid. For an amateur team they have a strong line-up, and while the wet grounds have prevented them from getting as much practice and team work as they ought to have had, the team is in fair practice and will give the Frederick team a hot contest.

As soon as the grounds here become thoroughly dry, Manager Darnell will arrange for games on the home diamond.

RANDLETT OFFICIALS CORRAL THE BOYS

Randlett, Ok., June 10.—Constable Jack Gray of this place has been waging a merry war on the boys who are inclined to imbibe too much bug juice and play the fascinating game of "draw." Several arrests have been made in the last few days and justice court has been merrily grinding. Two boys who came over from the Texas town of Burk Burnett, where they had secured their booze gave Mr. Gray a run for his money yesterday, but after an exciting chase of a couple of miles they were overhauled and made a neat little contribution to the court fund.

TAKES HER OWN LIFE

WOMAN TERRORIST, ORDERED TO ASSASSINATE KING AND EMPEROR, SUICIDES.

REFUSED TO OBEY ORDERS

Then Fearing the Awful Vengeance of Her Fellow Terrorists, She Ends Her Own Life.

By Associated Press. London, Eng., June 12.—A dispatch to the Standard from Reval reports a tragic incident which recently occurred there. A school teacher committed suicide two days before the meeting of King Edward and Emperor Nicholas. It developed that she was formally connected with revolutionists who, finding that she was to be admitted to the platform, ordered her to commit a "terrorist act," and rather than commit the act, and to escape the vengeance of the terrorists, she committed suicide.

ACTIVITY AROUND ABILENE.

Two New Railroad Lines are Being Promoted—Deal for Townsite.

Abilene, Tex., June 11.—The surveying crew of the Abilene and Northern Railway started to work here yesterday morning on the proposed line to Winters. In the meantime the promoters of the Abilene and Ballinger railway are not idle. They closed a deal yesterday for seventeen miles of right of way and three townsites. One of these transactions for a townsite involved a deal of $10,000 cash. This town will be located in the famous Jim Ned Flats, in the southern part of Taylor county.

ROBBERS RAID CUSTOM HOUSE AND KILL FIVE MEN.

By Associated Press. Tiflis, Morocco, June 12.—Ten robbers, heavily armed, invaded the custom house here yesterday and killed the official in charge and his four assistants, decamping with $12,000. The police pursued the robbers, killing three of them, but the others escaped.

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT

SOUGHT BY DEFENDANT CHARGED WITH VIOLATION OF CITY FIRE ORDINANCE.

VALIDITY OF ORDINANCE

Is Attacked in Action Brought Before the Court of Criminal Appeals at Austin.

City Attorney J. T. Montgomery and Attorney L. H. Mathis have returned from Austin, where they went the first of the week in connection with the habeas corpus petition of Tom Cain, which they argued before the Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday.

The petition for habeas corpus results from the complaint filed against Cain for an alleged violation of the fire ordinances of Wichita Falls as it concerns the erection of buildings within the fire limits of the city.

Complaints were filed several weeks ago against Mr. Cain, A. Newby and Walter Allen, charging them with a violation of the ordinance in the construction and maintaining of a building at the rear of the Billy Keys saloon on Ohio avenue.

After Marshal Gwinn had served the papers for Cain's arrest, a petition for habeas corpus was filed, and in this manner the case was gotten before the court at Austin.

The defendants claim that the fire ordinance of the city of Wichita Falls exceeds the authority given by the State constitution and the statutes.

On account of the attack upon the validity of the ordinance, the case is of general interest in Wichita Falls. The court will probably give a decision the first of next week.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT ST. MARY'S COMMENCEMENT.

The third annual commencement of the Academy of Mary Immaculate was held at the Aldome theatre last night and the program was one of unusual excellence and was enjoyed by a large crowd.

The graduates were the Misses Helen Smith, Frederick Hyer, and Gertrude and Theresa Miller.

The program as published in yes-formance of the pupils was a fitting compliment to the excellent instruction given at St. Mary's academy.

Among the visitors at the commencement were the Rev. Fathers Goessens of Henrietta, and Nolan of Fort Worth.

STAY OF EXECUTION GRANTED TO BILLIK

He was also accused of causing the deaths of five other members of the Vrzal family.

Mrs. Vrzal, the mother of Mary Vrzal, committed suicide when arrested as an accomplice of Billik. The deaths of the members of the Vrzal family all occurred within a period of two years.

The motive alleged for his crimes was the possession of life insurance money in each case.

The letter further stated that the troops expected to pass through Wichita Falls on the 16th of June.

USED HEROIC METHOD

MAN BITTEN BY RATTLESNAKE CUTS FLESH AND PACKS SALT IN THE WOUND.

ENDURES INTENSE PAIN

But Saved His Life By the Expedient and His Fortitude.

John Cunningham, a farmer living about ten miles west of town, resorted to heroic measures Tuesday afternoon to save his life from the bite of a rattlesnake.

Mr. Cunningham, it is reported, was shocking wheat when a venomous rattler fixed its fangs into his leg a few inches below the knee.

The victim was miles away from any physician and was thrown upon his own resources to save his life. He employed means which few men would have thought of and which still fewer would have had the nerve to endure.

After tying a string about his leg above the bite and twisting the knots tightly over the arteries to prevent the diffusion of the poison, Mr. Cunningham cut a strip of flesh several inches in length from about the wound, and packed salt in the raw flesh around the bite. As rapidly as a packing of salt had been soaked with the blood and poison, a new application was put on and this treatment was kept up until a physician could be called.

The application of the salt to the raw flesh caused the patient the most intense pain, but with great fortitude he endured it, knowing that his life was at stake.

He is now reported to be out of danger and Dr. W. H. Walker, of this city, who was called to attend him, says that the victim undoubtedly saved his life through this heroic measure.

FIRST LEGAL EXECUTION

in State of Oklahoma Was Conducted at Frederick This Morning.

Special to the Times. Frederick, Ok., June 12.—This morning at 6:30, Sheriff Frank Carter of Tillman county conducted the first legal execution in the new State of Oklahoma.

Frank Ford, a negro, was hanged for the murder of his wife.

The negro went to his death very quietly. He made a short talk, saying that he had been well raised and taught better, but that evil associates got him started wrong and that he had not tried to control his temper and this brought him to the scaffold. He smoked a cigarette just before the fatal noose was put around his neck. The negro's neck was broken when he dropped.

The murder was said to have been a very deliberate one and Governor Haskell refused to commute the punishment.

Several hundred people attended the execution, which was conducted very well.

The paraphernalia used was the same as that used at Vernon, Texas, when a preacher named Morris, also a wife murderer, was hanged several years ago.

HEAVY RAIN FALLS IN DALLAS.

High Wind and Lightning, But No Serious Damage Was Done.

Dallas was visited yesterday by a heavy downpour of rain that flushed the gutters and taxed the capacity of the storm sewers. The accompanying wind reached a high velocity at times and caused some apprehension in the minds of many people, but little or no damage was reported in the city proper other than that shade trees suffered in some localities.

The electrical display was vivid, and the flashes of lightning were followed by sharp and heavy detonations in several instances. In a few cases the electric lights were put out of commission for awhile.—Dallas News.

A TIMES WANT AD BRINGS RESULTS

ANNUAL INCOME OF $100,000 IN ALFALFA

Texas boasts of the "alfalfa king of the world," one single farmer whose annual income from his alfalfa crop is $100,000 a year, twice the salary paid the president of the United States. His name is R. E. Smith and his place is not far from Sherman, Texas. He started in life as a lawyer and about fourteen years ago began the raising of alfalfa. His first patch consisted of but five acres, and the yield was so great that he saw possibilities of a harvest beyond that of the law. Consequently he set to the task of learning, and by a long series of carefully conducted experiments, the best methods of alfalfa growing.

He began to increase his acreage year by year, building up step by step as he succeeded in mastering the various influences that affected his crop. Even when he reached the point of having one hundred acres in alfalfa he was looked upon as one of the big growers. Two years ago he increased his acreage to one thousand and his income that year was $78,000; since then he has added four hundred acres and increased his income to $100,000. He places no limit on the acreage that he may ultimately reach, as he has a big farm and is acquiring land in addition.

An interesting thing about this great alfalfa farm is that the crop is grown without irrigation. Most of the alfalfa in the southwest is grown with irrigation and there is an old theory that the plant will thrive on bottom lands. On this farm it grows not only in the valley, but on the hills, and has an equal thickness in both places.

Alfalfa differs from most vegetation in that it enriches instead of depletes the soil. Not long after it has been planted even the barren spots begin to support this kind of plant.

The first cutting of alfalfa of the season on Mr. Smith's farm takes place in April, the last cutting is usually in December. The total is generally four times to the year. The yield will average a ton to the acre for each cutting, and the average price is $15 a ton. An additional income of $18 an acre is derived from the yield of seed. It sells at 10 cents a pound, sixty pounds to the bushel and one acre will easily average three bushels.

Mr. Smith has also made careful experiments as to the best method of feeding and fattening stock on alfalfa. "I have run," he said, "1,500 head of hogs on an alfalfa pasture without a single case of sickness, have topped them off for ten or fifteen days on corn and sold them at 6 cents a pound, each hog weighing from 225 to 250 pounds. This is what you call turning alfalfa into money, especially as in some fields I have grazed 500 head of cattle, 200 head of horses and 150 Angora goats."

Mr. Smith claims that as a pasture and forage plant alfalfa is very reliable. It is a leguminous plant which draws free nitrogen from the air not only for its own support, but fills the soil with it until, scientists declare, that one year's growth of alfalfa is equivalent to putting $15 worth of fertilizer on the soil. Mr. Smith says that the wheat he has planted in the field where alfalfa has been grown is much greener, more virile and productive than wheat grown on other lands.

Alfalfa is also being raised very largely in southwest Texas, especially in the territory about San Antonio. Here a milder climate and the equal fertility of soil gives from eight to nine cuttings a year with a ton an acre at each cutting. John Closser, sheriff of Hidalgo county, is also an alfalfa grower of great skill, having hundreds of acres in this remarkable forage plant. During the preceding year he cut nine times, a ton to the acre, and realized an average price of $16 a ton.

The great success of this plant has aroused interest in it in Texas. It is one of the easiest plants to cultivate, and if properly cared for one planting will last eight or ten years, the only work required being to cut it. The plant is an old one in this city however, having been grown in Central and South America as far back as 250 years ago. However, the modern culture of it is a recent thing and at the present rate of expansion it bids fair to become the chief forage crop of this section of the United States.

ELECTRICIANS

HINTS FOR MILADY.

There is another attempt to bring back the smooth coiffure and the results so far are beautiful. The hair is artistically arranged over foundations, to be sure, though it is brushed back as evenly as ever hair was brushed into straight orderliness on the head of a Japanese belle. Nor is the cushioned portion severely round and plain, for often the hair shows a roll over the forehead, possibly two, and the side parting is noticed. The coils are arranged high, and the smooth braid little rolls or straight switch encircles the knot of hair. The wisps of hair, either a blessing or a great nuisance to many, will be touched with brilliantine, brushed back and pinned to the hair. The very short fringe is trained to "go back" and is often slipped underneath and pinned with a tiny invisible hairpin. If this is impossible, the hair is curled backward by being rolled all on one direction over the curler and when so curved it fits naturally over the pompadour or clings better to the rest of the hair. The style is particularly good for the tallor dressed girl who wears the large sailor hat.

For the Hair.

If your hair is dark you can dampen it with cold tea before rolling it on the curlers and it will remain in curl a long time. Do not roll the hair too tightly over the rolls or it will be wiry looking. It does not injure the hair, but is very beneficial to those who have falling hair. The blonde can use water containing a little lemon juice—one teaspoonful of juice to a glass of water. Dampen the hair with it and roll loosely on the curlers. Sugar and water is equally good or sugar and alcohol, although sugar must be sparingly used.

Nowadays milady has taken a fancy to the new French stationery, which is delicately tinted, and which has the envelopes lined with tissue paper of the same delicate shade. In the flap of the envelope, where the seal should be, the paper is cut to form milady's initial. Nothing could be daintier, while it has the additional advantage of being fairly inexpensive.

This season you should fasten your hat with a fastener which has two points designed to be pinned underneath to the bandeau, and two prongs to be thrust through the topknot. Two of these will serve to hold your hat securely in place, no matter how enormous it may be.

The latest way of preventing elbow sleeves and long gloves from parting company is to use a pair of tiny silver clasps. The top of the glove is fastened to the bottom of the sleeve, thus doing away with the ugly gap so frequently seen.

Sometimes milady is forced to do a little cleaning and fixing up, and so for her convenience some accommodating man has invented a dustpan designed to save her from being obliged to get down upon her hands and knees. It has a metal arrangement just large enough to admit the toe of milady's shoe, and a triangular piece underneath which raises the back at an angle sufficient to insure the front being exactly level with the carpet. In this way the dirt is gathered up with very little inconvenience.

Scented hairpins are the latest novelty. The knot at the top of the hairpin is fitted with a spring, which, at the slightest touch, releases the miniature array of perfume. The idea is to always insure absolutely fresh perfume, for, however fine a scent may be, it is apt to become stale after being exposed to the air for several hours. It is quite easy for a woman to put her hair or to replace a hairpin, and this is all that is necessary to release the perfume. Hairpins are made in gold for blondes, tortoise shell for brown hair, dark amber for auburn haired women, and silver for the gray locks.

WHAT FULL RENDITION DID FOR CLAY COUNTY.

We hear that the assessor and commissioners in Clay county, in their anxiety to have full renditions, are assessing their best lands at $40 per acre. Last year the commissioners court of Clay county raised the assessment from $5,182,615.00 in 1906 to $1,101,233.00 and reduced their county rate from 65 cents to 28 cents, expecting the State to make a sufficient reduction that the people would have no more taxes to pay. The results, however, did not bear out their expectations, for the tax-payers of Clay county paid $30,085.00 State and school taxes, as against $22,669.00 for 1906 and the county got only $23,334.00 as against $34,190.00 in 1906. The net result was that the tax-payers of Clay county, including district school-taxes, paid $64,410.00 for 1907 as against $63,667.00 in 1906, and a much larger proportion was sent to Austin than the preceding year. We doubt very seriously if our neighbors in Clay county will approve of these results when they get to understand them.

Of course, the heavy rains and high waters made our farmers, merchants and business men generally blue for a time, but now things are looking better. Eighty per cent of the wheat and oat crop in this section of country will be harvested, and the prospects for a good corn and cotton crop are improving daily. It is believed by those in the cotton business that between 15,000 and 18,000 bales of cotton will be raised in Wichita county this year, which is about three times more than was produced last year. Merchants are beginning to smile and are anticipating a prosperous year. There are more laborers employed in this city than ever before, and the number is increasing daily. The work of putting up more and better business and residence houses is being pushed for all there is in it, and every new house now under construction, of which there are at least fifty, has from one to a dozen applicants to rent or buy. And yet Wichita Falls is not a boom town. She has the natural advantages and the railroad facilities for the building of a big city, and to this is due her persistent growth and prosperity, which is gaining steadily. More than $250,000 will be spent this year in the construction of new buildings alone, and so long as the country continues to settle up as rapidly as now with energetic and thrifty home-seekers there is but little danger of the town getting ahead of the country.

We offer you nice fresh tomatoes at 35c per basket. Phones 232 and 432. NUTT, STEVENS & HARDEMAN. 26-2t

CUBE ROOT.

Do You Know the Method of Extracting It Without Pain?

Think of the inestimable value of knowing how to extract cube root! Ah, there is the priceless boon! Knowing that has saved us money many and many a time, to say nothing of the social blunders it has assisted us to avoid. Do I know yet how it was done? Certainly. I know it just as well as if it were yesterday that I studied it. You take the number whose cube root is paining it so that nothing but extraction can relieve it, put it down on a piece of paper or on your slate and divide it off into periods of three figures each. Write 4-11-4 to the left, multiply that by 300, divide it by something, then pour some red ink on your handkerchief, tell teacher you have the nosebleed and go home.

That's the way I usually did it. No doubt it is done much the same way by the ingenious youth of the present generation.

Is there a successful man living today and holding up his head among other successful men who cannot painlessly extract the cube root without giving the number an anesthetic? If so, he should be ashamed of himself. He is a freak, and he attained distinction by a fluke. Some day the muck rakers will get to probing around, and when they discover that he can't extract the cube root of anything his career will be ended and his gray hairs will sink in sorrow to a dishonored, Jimson grown grave. The jails and asylums are filled with vacant faced and craven hearted wretches who never learned the way to remove a cube root, no matter if the number containing it was threatened with blood poison. They don't know whether to run a horsehair loop down its throat, as in the case of gapes, or whether to use tweezers.

Let us try to impress upon our children-by precept-the importance of cube root extraction, but let us have business elsewhere in case they ask us to show them how.—Strickland W. Gillian in Chicago News.

Sometimes Worse.

A young lady was recently visiting an editorial office and being shown around by the editor. Approaching a case of drawers upon one of which was the label "MSS." she said, "Now, how would you pronounce that?" "Oh," said the editor, "sometimes we pronounce it muss and sometimes mess."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Contradiction.

"That young doctor is a queer contradiction."

"In what way?"
"He has an exceedingly good temper, and yet he is lacking in patients."

TESTIMONIALS

In my judgment, this company is managed by some of the most wide-awake, progressive business men in our State; not only men of high character, but of strong financial ability. I am personally acquainted with several of the officers, and I believe The American National Life Insurance Company has a great future and deserves the patronage of all citizens of Texas. J. A. KEMP, President City National Bank, Wichita Falls, Texas.

I am much pleased to have investigated your company and I consider it a favor to be able to become a policyholder in your company.

In view of the upheaval in insurance matters in New York City recently, it has demonstrated to me that the time has now come for a great insurance company in Texas, so the people of Texas can retain their premiums at home, instead of sending them outside the borders of our State. Your company, assisted by such men as you have associated with you in this company, is sufficient guarantee to any one seeking a policy, that the money will be paid to his family after he is dead and gone.

Yours very truly,
FRANK KELL, President.

American National Insurance Co., Galveston, Texas.

Gentlemen:—I had the pleasure of meeting your representative, whom I found to be a most thorough gentleman, and also a thorough insurance man. I had explained to me the policy now being written by the American National Insurance Company, and I candidly say it is one of the best, and so strongly did I think so, that I took a policy for $5,000. I consider it the best of all I have, and I carry several. I am glad to see the strong men of Texas taking stock and pushing this company, as there is nothing like keeping Texas money at home. Be sure to keep the good work going, and also keep your agent at work in this part of the State, where he will not only help your company, but my friends also. Yours truly, OTIS T. BACON.

As stated to you personally a few weeks ago, I believe that your Texas company is a better proposition for one to insure in than any of the old line Eastern companies, for several reasons.

The first of many reasons is that the gentlemen who are officers and directors of the American National Insurance Company are thoroughly known to the people of Texas to be clear, clean-cut, honest business men.

Another reason is that the premiums paid to the Texas company will be invested in Texas.

It is a pleasure for me to take out a policy with your company today.

East African Highlands.

The young Englishman, he the officer or settler in the east African highlands, cuts a hardy figure. His clothes are few and far between. A sun hat, a brown flannel shirt with sleeves cut above the elbow and open to the chest, a pair of thin khaki knickerbockers cut short five inches at least above the knee, boots and a pair of puttees comprise the whole attire. Nothing else is worn. The skin, exposed to sun, thorns and insects, becomes almost as dark as that of the natives, and so hardened that it is nothing to ride all day with bare knees on the saddle—a truly Spartan discipline from which at least the visitor may be excused. Strand Magazine.

Whales.

The largest of all mammals are not the elephants, but the whales. A large elephant weighs about six tons, but the largest whale reaches the immense weight of 150 tons and would furnish four carloads of flesh and blubber. About forty different kinds of whales and dolphins are known, and although they live in the open sea and look like fish, they are not fish at all, but are true mammals, breathing air and feeding their young on milk, like cows and horses.

FOR REALISM.

Robert Louis Stevenson's Injunction to a Small Nephew at Play.

A story about Robert Louis Stevenson not generally known, according to the New York Sun, is told by Mrs. Stevenson's grandson, Austin Strong.

When Mr. Strong was a little chap Mr. Stevenson liked to sit propped up in bed to watch him at play in the next room. And often it happened that the bigger boy of the two would make suggestions for the make believe games and insist that they be carried out too.

One day Austin had arranged some chairs in a row, playing that they were ships, and he, standing on the front, was the captain. For a long time he proudly walked the deck of his vessel, encountered pirates and weathered all kinds of storms until he felt the floor positively heave under his feet.

Mr. Stevenson looked on in perfect silence, but complete absorption, no doubt playing the whole thing much the harder of the two. Finally Austin got tired of his vessel, climbed off his chair and began walking across the room to some object which had attracted his interest.

This was too much for his uncle. Still deep in the game, Mr. Stevenson rose in his sickbed and shouted excitedly at the recalcitrant sea captain: "Swim, — you, swim!"

A WARM RECEPTION.

It Gave the Hungry Preacher an Appetite For Dinner.

Before accepting an invitation it is as well to be sure it is given in good faith. After an afternoon service held many years ago in a certain village in Scotland the preacher, a stranger, who had officiated, accompanied one of the elders of the congregation home and was introduced to his wife. The good man having asked the clergyman to stay to dinner, the latter, after a little pressing, consented.

The good lady hurried off to prepare for the unexpected guest, and, seeing as she thought, her husband washing, as was the custom in those days, at the family sink, she seized the family Bible, approached stealthily from behind and brought down the ponderous tome upon his bald pate, exclaiming: "Tak' ye that for bringing hungry preachers here to dinner every time they come to the parish."

As soon as the assaulted one could get the suds out of his eyes he looked about him and, after thinking the matter out, concluded that the old lady had made a slight mistake. She, too, came to the same conclusion when, on returning to the parlor, she beheld her husband patiently waiting for his reverend friend!—Dundee Advertiser.

A Case For Hurry.

There is a good deal of cheer on life's journey if it be made with a contented heart. —Vandyck.

PSYCHIC FORCES.

Their Existence Proved, Yet Scientists Cannot Grasp Them.

I have seen enough to make me believe in Zoller's fourth dimension, but I don't. My mind is so constructed that such wonders as we meet in seances produce very little effect on me. They are as normal to me now as the popping of corn or the roasting of potatoes. But as for belief—well, that is not a matter of the will, but of evidence, and the evidence is not yet sufficient to bring me to any definite conclusion. In fact, in the broad day and especially the second day after I have been through one of these experiences I begin to doubt my senses. Richet speaks of this curious recession of belief and admits his own inability to retain the conviction that at the moment of the phenomenon was complete. "No sooner is the sitting over than my doubts come swarming back upon me," he says. "The real world which surrounds us, with its prejudices, its scheme of habitual opinions, holds us in so strong a grasp that we can scarcely free ourselves completely. Certainty does not follow on demonstration, but on habit."

Maxwell says: "I believe in these phenomena, but I see no need to attribute them to any supernatural intervention. I am inclined to think they are produced by some force within ourselves." Just what he means by that I can't precisely explain. It's harder to understand than the spirit hypothesis. He goes on to say that, while he is certain that we are in the presence of an unknown force, he is convinced that the phenomena will ultimately be found orderly, like all other facts of nature. "Some future Newton will discover a more complete formula than ours," he prophesies. "Every natural fact should be studied and, if it be real, incorporated in the patrimony of knowledge." He then adds, with the true scientist's humble acknowledgment of the infinite reach of the undiscovered universe, "Our knowledge is very limited and our experience young."—Hamlin Garland in Everybody's Magazine.

What Displeased Him.

Two hunters were making their way across a lush meadow after a rain. The ground was moist and soggy, but their feet by quick stepping could be prevented from sinking more than ankle deep.

Suddenly the one in advance disappeared up to his neck in a narrow stream that, owing to the luxuriant growth on the bank, he had observed only as he stepped into it. With difficulty he pulled himself out and began wringing the water from his garments.

"Well, darn a country," he remarked, with feeling, "where they set their creeks up edgewise and hide 'em in the grass."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Don't Confuse Pure Olive Oil With Cheap Substitutes

Pure olive oil has a medicinal value that is truly wonderful.

It produces a rich, red blood which in turn produces a clear, smoother, healthful skin and beautiful complexion.

Being a blood builder it is naturally a flesh builder too. These qualities are the result of certain chemical deposits which are found only in genuine olive oil.

No cotton seed oil substitute, no matter how carefully refined has these qualities, and the taste is so different too. Olive oil has an agreeable, slightly bitter taste, while the substitute has a rank, rancid taste that is very disagreeable.

The Lesson of Hoke Smith's Defeat. Special to the Times.

Fort Worth, Tex., June 12.—L. B. Shook, manager of the Bureau of Publicity, Legislative Committee Texas Commercial Secretaries' Association, issues the following today to the daily press of the State:

Practically every newspaper in the State of Texas has drawn a lesson from the political downfall of one of the South's best known public men—Hoke Smith of Georgia.

Up to the time he began his campaign for the governorship, Hoke Smith was regarded as one of the most conservative leaders of the South—one who could always be relied upon to look at the final bearing of a measure upon the public weal before advising its adoption. He was regarded as a man to be relied upon when emergencies arose.

But, alas! When the gubernatorial bee got into his bonnet, he threw aside his former ideal of conservatism and launched a campaign of radicalism that he calculated would appeal to the prejudice of the masses, and which did land him into the coveted place. His life of conservatism brought to his support many voters who could not believe that his anti-election tirades against the developing agencies of the State meant more than the usual campaign buncombe.

But when he took the helm of the ship of State, the people of Georgia soon saw that their governor meant all that he had said in his campaign, and even more.

The world knows what this radical course did to Georgia, and what Georgia, as a result, did to Hoke Smith at the first opportunity, and comment is unnecessary.

We want to ask the press of the State, and especially the newspapers that have been sensitive to criticism of a few of the laws backed by the present State administration if they cannot see the handwriting on the wall, as illustrated by the Georgia political revolution? Is it not possible that the people of Texas might rise in their might and, like those of Georgia, cry out "Hold, Enough?"

We want to ask the men who are before the people for legislative honors to study the meaning of the Georgia election, and then ask themselves whether it is not probable that in their zeal to regulate public service and other corporations, the Thirtieth Legislature may have gone a little too far?

Is there not in the "Fewer Laws, Better Laws" movement evidence that the people of Texas disapprove of radicalism?

What is the meaning of the unanimous endorsement of this movement by the Texas State Press Association in its recent meeting? The bankers of Texas, the men who keep their fingers on the public pulse, would not give their unanimous endorsement to this movement, as they did last week in their State convention, without a reason, and within the last few days the State Retail Merchants' Association, also in convention assembled, added their endorsement to those already named.

The people are behind the "Fewer Laws, Better Laws" movement, despite the fact that officialdom is charging it up to "the interests."

The people, "the plain people," started this crusade and are paying the freight, not a dollar coming from any "interest."

The public is not going to be fooled long by the false charges made by those who, we hope, have made them from a lack of knowledge as to our objects and purposes. There is and can be produced no evidence to support such a charge.

More than one hundred and fifty thousand voters of this State read the articles sent out by this bureau in last week's newspapers and double that number will read those sent out next week.

The light is spreading. Many good men were made to suspect this movement by unfounded charges, but the truth is gaining ground and will ultimately prevail.

More than fifty candidates for the legislature and many of the members of the Thirtieth Legislature have written to this committee that they are with us.

Everything encourages us to believe that a better day is dawning for Texas.

"Fewer Laws" in future and a few emendations of those now in force will make "Better Laws" for Texas.

The Merry Widow

CHAPTER III. The Garden Fete.

THE gardens of Mme. Sonia Sadova's villa, just outside Paris, were gayly decorated for a lawn fete. The grounds were dotted with laughing groups of brightly dressed men and women, for Sonia had particularly requested that all her Marsovian guests wear their picturesque native costume, and the result was a veritable kaleidoscopic carnival of color, a perfect riot of gorgeous hues and striking figures. Ambassador Popoff, his long, lean figure draped in vivid green, was pacing the alleys of the garden near the entrance gate, pausing nervously now and again to await late arrivals in search of some one. At length he descried the man he sought. Nish was just bustling into the grounds, and the ambassador at once beckoned to him. "Now, then, Mr. Nish," cried Popoff as soon as the little clerk had shambled within earshot, "I told you to

"De Joldon!" exclaimed Danilo. "Impossible!" "Why impossible, pray? I think I have as good eyes as any man. I think, sir, I can detect love when I see it. And from the way De Joldon looks at the widow—why, man, I don't know a single thing that doesn't point toward his being in love with her. If—"

"If I may say so, your excellency," put in Nish, shuffling nervously. "I think I could tell you of a 'single' thing, or, rather," he added, chuckling, "when I say 'single' I mean 'married.'"

"Mr. Nish," interrupted Popoff, "if you can stop wriggling around like an inebriated centipede long enough to talk plainly, will you do me the honor to put your blitherings into plain words?"

"Well, your excellency," stammered Nish. "I happen to know M. de Joldon is already head over heels in love with a lady who has a husband. He—"

"Mr. Nish," thundered Popoff, "you are demeaning yourself to the contemptible act of talking scandal! Are you aware of that, Mr. Nish? If so, go on talking it and tell me who she is."

"You fool!" whispered Danilo in Nish's ear. "Everybody but the ambassador himself knows it is Mme. Popoff whom De Joldon loves. Be careful!"

"Well, Mr. Nish," repeated Popoff majestically as he eyed the squirming clerk with lofty majesty, "I'm waiting to hear the name of the lady that De Joldon is in love with."

"He neglected to tell me, your excellency," sputtered Nish.

"Then," decided the ambassador, "I shall discover her by diplomatic means, and when I find who she is she shall use her influence to lure De Joldon away from the widow. Prince, will you help me in this?"

"Leave it all to me," suggested Danilo, with startling willingness. "Don't try to learn her identity yourself. Let me attend to the whole matter."

"All right," consented Popoff. "It will be a good lesson in diplomacy for you. Perhaps I can put you on the right track."

The ambassador drew an ivory fan from his pocket.

"Last night at the embassy ball," said he, "Nova Kovitch, who used to be one of my attaches, brought me this. He was crazy with jealousy. He'd just picked up the fan; said it was his wife's and that some man had written 'I love you' on one of the sticks. He was going home to beat his wife and make her confess who the villain was when I persuaded my wife to save poor Mme. Nova Kovitch by pretending the fan was her own. Ah, but my wife is a born diplomatist! Nova Kovitch was convinced, and I pocketed the fan for future reference."

Danilo took the trinket from Popoff's hands and read the penciled inscription.

"Who?" he said on impulse, "this is De Joldon's handwriting! How does it happen that he—"

"Then," squealed Popoff in triumph, "it is Mme. Nova Kovitch he loves. The whole thing is absurdly simple when a brain like mine is brought to bear on it!"

Delighted with his own astuteness, the ambassador pattered off to join the other guests, leaving Danilo, fan in hand, blankly facing the astounded life clerk.

"Nish," observed the prince, "do you suppose it's possible De Joldon can be in love with Mme. Nova Kovitch as well as with Mme. Popoff?"

"I'd—I'd like to think so," murmured Nish as he started faithfully off in the wake of his chief. "I'd like to think so. It—it would make it less exclusive, less of a monopoly. And to think his excellency never recognized his own wife's fan! Where ignorance is bliss why read up on divorce laws?"

Laying the fan on a nearby table, Danilo was turning away when a voice behind him called mockingly:

"Still in retreat? So you are afraid of me!"

Whirling about, the prince faced Sonia. She was bewitchingly pretty in the black and gold Marsovian dress that snowed to fullest advantage every willowy line of her figure.

"I'm not retreating," he contradicted, "only skirmishing in light cavalry fashion."

"And you are going away like that? Oh, you stupid man!"

ALL HER MARSOVIAN GUESTS WORE THEIR PICTURESQUE NATIVE COSTUMES.

bring Prince Danilo here and not to leave him for an instant until—"

"He wouldn't let me stay," explained Nish. "He says he won't come. He's giving a party—if I may say so, a very gay!"

"And for the sake of a lot of pleasure seeking idlers the prince refuses to obey my orders and come to Mme. Sonia's?"

"Yes, your excellency. He positively refuses to come. And when I say 'positively' refuses I— here he is now!" Danilo, resplendent in the uniform of a Marsovian captain of hussars, strolled nonchalantly forward, with a careless nod that quite ignored the ambassador's glare of reproof at his lateness.

"I understand, prince," began Popoff coldly, "that you positively refused to obey my—"

"So I did, so I did," assented Danilo cheerfully. "But at the last moment I changed my mind and my clothes, and here I am. I've postponed my party for an hour or so. You see, I remember my promise to help you scare away from the widow any Frenchman who seemed inclined to make love to her. That's why I came."

"Good!" approved Popoff, rubbing his hands gleefully. "Very good! And where do you expect to begin?"

"With the most dangerous suitor. Who is he?"

"Well," replied Popoff confidentially, "I've had my eye on her, and it seems to me that De Joldon—" ing to hear the name of the lady that De Joldon is in love with."

"He neglected to tell me, your excellency," sputtered Nish.

"Then," decided the ambassador, "I shall discover her by diplomatic means, and when I find who she is she shall use her influence to lure De Joldon away from the widow. Prince, will you help me in this?"

"Leave it all to me," suggested Danilo, with startling willingness. "Don't try to learn her identity yourself. Let me attend to the whole matter."

"All right," consented Popoff. "It will be a good lesson in diplomacy for you. Perhaps I can put you on the right track."

The ambassador drew an ivory fan from his pocket.

"Last night at the embassy ball," said he, "Nova Kovitch, who used to be one of my attaches, brought me this. He was crazy with jealousy. He'd just picked up the fan; said it was his wife's and that some man had written 'I love you' on one of the sticks. He was going home to beat his wife and make her confess who the villain was when I persuaded my wife to save poor Mme. Nova Kovitch by pretending the fan was her own. Ah, but my wife is a born diplomatist! Nova Kovitch was convinced, and I pocketed the fan for future reference."

Danilo took the trinket from Popoff's hands and read the penciled inscription.

"I can't tell what you mean," he answered, puzzled.

"And I shan't tell what I mean," she rejoined. "By the way," she added, "how do you happen to be here? You declined my invitation."

"I'm here," he replied bluntly, "because I'm making it my business to get rid of every Frenchman who shows signs of proposing to you."

"But why?" she asked in wonder. "For my own amusement; that's all."

"You—you don't happen to be in love with me yourself?" she asked, a tinge of wistfulness in the light mockery of her tone.

"Certainly not!" he retorted, with suspicious promptitude.

"You're very, very rude!" she reproved. "But since you don't love me you ought to be able to give me good advice about accepting a man I really want to marry."

"Oh!" growled Danilo, chagrined. "Then there is some one you want to marry?"

She nodded.

"Whoever the man is, he's after your money," he sneered.

jealous?"

"Jealous?" he raged. "Jealous? I jealous? That's a good one!"

Words failed him, and he staid away to a nearby summer house, where he paused, lost in seeming contemplation of the little building's architecture.

The neglected fan lying on the table caught Sonia's eye. She picked it up idly and opened it. The words "I love you" met her gaze. Quickly she glanced at Danilo.

"I understand," she murmured to herself. "He vowed he'd never say it to me, so he's written it."

Noting that Danilo's back was toward her, she furtively lifted the fan to her lips and kissed the written words. Then as she restored it to the table she whispered:

"Just the same, I'll make him say it. He shall!"

She crossed to where he stood.

"Have you nothing to say to me, prince?" she asked.

"Only one thing—goodby!"

"Goodby!" she echoed. "You're—you're not going?"

"I leave Paris tomorrow morning—by the first train—forever!"

"Then you won't be here, after all, to dance at my wedding?"

"No!"

"But you promised. And now, I suppose, I shall never see you again, for when I'm married I shall live in Paris."

"I thought you were more patriotic," she sighed. "It seems hard that you should turn your back on your native land, marry a Frenchman and settle here."

"Yet it is what I have decided," she answered. "This is probably the last time I shall wear our native costume or dance our wild national dances. Today's fete is a sort of farewell to old times."

"No; our dances and costumes would not appeal to a Frenchman. Who is it you are going to marry?"

"The engagement isn't announced yet," she evaded.

"Then," he returned, with a shrug, "I suppose I shall never know, for I leave early tomorrow."

"And you won't dance at my wedding?"

"I've told you I would not."

"If you won't," she cried, a sudden inspiration flashing through her mind and lighting her pale face to dazzling beauty, "dance with me now!"

She stretched out her slender white arms with an allurements that no mortal man could resist.

SPIRIT LAND MESSAGES.

Do They All Really Come From Minds of the Living?

Perhaps all the so called messages from the dead come from living minds. I mean the minds of those about us. Dr. Reed, a friend of mine, once arranged to go with a patient to have a test sitting with a very celebrated psychic who claimed to be able to read sealed letters. Just before the appointed day Reed's patient died suddenly of heart disease, leaving a sealed letter on his desk.

The doctor, fully alive to the singular opportunity, put the letter in his pocket and hastened to the medium. The magician took it in his hand and pondered. At last he said: "This was written by a man now in the spirit world. I cannot read it. There isn't a medium in the world who can read it, but if you will send it to any person anywhere on the planet and have it read and resealed I will tell you what is in it. I cannot get the words unless some mind in the earth plane has absorbed them."

That would seem to prove a sort of universal mind reservoir, wouldn't it? Isn't that a staggering hypothesis?—Hamlin Garland in Everybody's Magazine.

A DISCARDED THRONE.

Louis Napoleon's State Chair, Which Was Not Used.

On the eve of the Franco-German war when the Emperor Louis Napoleon entered upon the conflict which ended so disastrously to himself and his countrymen a couple of strangers appeared at a German town. They brought with them a large packing case, which on their arrival was carried to a hotel. Here the unknown visitors remained some time and eventually disappeared without paying their bill, which amounted to a considerable sum.

The landlord, whose curiosity had often been aroused with reference to the possible contents of the case, at last determined to open it, and on doing so found a handsomely designed and richly upholstered state chair. This was adorned with the French Imperial arms, eagle and Louis Napoleon's monogram, and beneath it was a musical box which played when the cushion was sat upon.

It is supposed that the throne—for such it is believed to have been—in the event of success attending the French army was to have been used by the emperor at Berlin after the capture of the German metropolis. Fate, however, spoiled the imperial plans; hence the sudden and precipitate flight of the custodians of the chair. The widow of the hotel keeper a few years later sent it to England, where it eventually found a purchaser.—Stray Stories.
