Republicans Speak at McKinney.
Special to the Times.
McKinney, Tex., Oct. 26.—J. N. Simpson, the republican gubernatorial nominee and W. H. Atwell, republican candidate for attorney general, spoke here today to a large crowd. They declared that the republican outlook in this state was better than in any previous year.

Can You Place These Parties?
A party with family, living at Sylvester, Texas, writes the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce if he can place him with a farmer having a large acreage of cotton to pick and where he can continue to stay and undertake farming on halves. Anyone being able to place this family along the lines noted will please communicate with the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

A farmer from Howland, Texas, who has been in communication with the secretary relative to renting a farm suitable for six hands to manage, arrived in the city last Saturday and is looking up a location. Anyone wishing a reliable and capable man, as this party has every appearance of being, can get into touch with him by conferring with the secretary.

Heavy Freight Movement.
Every car and engine on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad that can be pressed into service is now being used by that line in hauling an unprecedented volume of freight. Not since the freight shipments were curtailed by the panic a year ago has there been anything even approximating the amount of freight now being handled. Extra crews are being put on every day and even with every available wheel of its motive power department moving, the Denver is working overtime to keep up with the business that is coming to the road.

Frosts Will Cause Cotton to Open.
The frosts of the last few nights will be a benefit instead of damaging the cotton crop, is the general opinion of both the farmers and the buyers. The frosts have been heavy enough to stop the growth of the plants and will cause the bolls to open, whereas if there had been no frost the crop would not have reached maturity.

That earthworms as well as squirrels may add the forester is the novel suggestion of an American naturalist. Dry maple seed are drawn into worm burrows, where they sprout, and it is believed that some of them must survive in favorably moist seasons.

INSTANTLY KILLED.

Harvard Goodman Dashed to Death on Revolving Shaft.

Special to the Times.
Jacksonville, Tex., Oct. 26.—Harvard Goodman, aged 24 years and unmarried, was instantly killed here last night while putting a belt on a rapidly revolving pulley at the Jacksonville oil mill. The belt caught in his clothing and his body was hurled around the shaft many times before the machinery was stopped. Both arms, both legs and his skull were broken. Goodman lived in Van Zandt county.

MACADAM ROAD.

Denton Begins Important Municipal Improvement at Big Cost.

Denton, Tex., Oct. 26.—More than half a mile of macadam has been completed on North Locust street, being built on the model road plan of rock after a thoroughly prepared foundation, and then covered with gravel, which quickly forms a conglomerate as hard and as smooth as asphalt. The road is costing $5,000 a mile and half a mile more is to be built now.

SAY SUBMISSION WILL NOT CARRY

Special to the Times.

Special to the Times.
Austin, Tex., Oct. 26.—The railroad commission today amended the commodity tariff applying to cotton seed and their products, placing Dallas in a direct line of transit shipments originating at Mexia, Corsicana, Waxahatchie with destination for the south. The Talkative Man.

New York Sun.
"I find," said a talkative man, "that there are times when it is better to keep one's mouth shut, when talking doesn't pay, but on the contrary."
"Things had been quiet, you know, in politics—almost, as you might say, stagnant—and then this cyclone struck us and men spun around and shook their fists at each other and shouted 'Liar!' 'Horse Thief!' 'Cannibal,' and all sorts of things and the atmosphere was full of bricks and clubs and there was a general shindy all around, and the more oil you poured on the troubled waters the higher the waves got and the more things boiled."

"This, you know was something like electricity in the air; something doing, and life was worth living with everybody figuring, and there was something to talk about, and day before yesterday, when I sat down in my dentist's chair, I asked him what he thought about it all. Things have surely got a little cyenne in 'em now, don't you think? And he said something and I answered back and we talked and talked, I doing most of the talking, I guess, for half an hour or so, and then I says to him:

"But, say, I'm taking up too much of your time, ain't it?"
"No, oh, no," he says, "got at all, not at all. I charge for time, you know, on this work I'm doing, and I charge this all up to you."

"Well, do you know, at that I closed right up? I mean I sat back and opened my mouth, and kept it open and didn't say another word—not there. I do love to talk, but there are times when I don't find it profitable, and that appeared to be one of them. Don't you think?"

Byers is Excited.
"We had a thrifty and prosperous community before the natural gas excitement began," said A. W. Byers, founder and godfather of Byers, on the Wichita Valley, twenty-five miles north of Wichita Falls, talking at the Seibold yesterday, "and now with these great gas gushers all around us—we hardly know how great our prospects are. Some of the producing gas wells are within easy piping distance of our town and gas from those wells is being used under the engines which are logging new wells within a mile and a half of Byers. With the cheap fuel which these wells will give, we can offer attractive inducements for many kinds of manufacturing. We have shale, which I am told is just right for brick, sewer pipe and tile, so there seems to be a good chance for plants of that kind."—Fort Worth Record.

Thought Him a Mollycoddle.
John D. Rockefeller rebuked a Cleveland reporter one day for swearing, says an exchange.
"Don't swear," he said; "say 'durn' or 'pshaw.' There is as much comfort in those mild words as in the reddest oath. I know," said Mr. Rockefeller, "that such is not the prevalent opinion. But it is a wrong one, as expressed the other day by my caddy."
"My caddy had just been around with a minister. After I drove off I said to him:
"What kind of a payer is the minister, Joseph?"
"Joseph snorted.
"Him? he sneered. 'He'll never make a golfer. Do you know what he says when he misses the ball?"
"No. What does he say?" I asked.
"He says, 'Tut, tut!' Joseph sneered.

Two staple crops from the same ground in the same season is the record of J. C. Hopkins, a progressive farmer living in the Red river district about ten miles north of Wichita Falls.

Two Crops in One Season.

From a twenty-three acre tract Mr. Hopkins in June harvested a crop of fall oats which yielded 40 bushels per acre. As soon as the oats were off the ground he planted June corn and today brought to town a sample of that crop, which he says has made not less than twenty-five bushels per acre.

In addition to harvesting two profitable crops, Mr. Hopkins says he now has a good stand of volunteer oats on the land, which will make excellent fall and winter pasturage.

TEXAS AT THE 1909 EXPOSITION

Special to the Times.
Seattle, Wash., Oct. 26.—The report that Texas is certain to be well represented at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition next summer has been received with much gratification by the directors of the fair and the people of the Northwest. Texas, like the three great North Pacific States, is an empire in itself and has as much interest to the people of this section as any State in the Union. Likewise there is much in this country that will interest the Texan.

There are thousands of Texans in this country, and throughout Alaska and the Yukon. The early gold discoveries attracted many, while the lumbering and grazing resources have seen many Texans engaged. But it is to the future that Texas can look with anticipation. When the Panama canal is completed, great ocean going vessels will load with Texas products and carry them without transshipping directly to the wharves on Puget Sound. The incalculable water power that will be in time developed from the streams flowing down the west side of the Cascade mountains will result in the establishment of great manufacturing plants where the cotton of Texas will be made into sheetings, shirtings and other goods for the use of the people of this country as well as for the millions that live beyond the Pacific. It is this future development which attracts the interest of the Northwest to Texas. It is felt that there is a bond of interest that has marvelous possibilities and that both are indispensable to the other.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition was conceived by its originators for the purpose of showing to the people of distant parts of the United States the manifold opportunities and possibilities of this section, to teach the people that Alaska and the northland are not the ice bound, uninhabitable places that the early school books taught, that there is something tangible and definite about the Pacific Northwest which will in time make it one of the busiest and happiest sections of the United States. The men of the Pacific Northwest believe as firmly as they believe anything that the time will come not so far distant when this part of the United States will be the most favored of the entire section. They believe now that it has other sections beaten in many respects, and they feel that it will win in a lot more. But in order to realize the hope, other parts of the United States will be called upon to contribute, in people, materials and products. Thus it will be a mutual benefit and where the Pacific Northwest gains, also will the other sections gain. And no part of the country has as much to gain as Texas.

The slogan of the exposition directors is "Ready on the Opening Day." All exposition records will be broken in this respect. The permanent and larger and more extensive temporary work is 70 per cent advanced towards completion. The work which yet remains to be done is largely in the construction of temporary buildings which can be run up in two to four months, and in the final work of the landscape gardeners. When it is stated that ten of the exposition buildings are ready to receive their exhibits and equipment and three others will be finished within two months, it can be realized that the slogan is no dream.

The government board which handles the $600,000 appropriation made at the last session of congress is now on the ground and the contractors are submitting their bids for the numerous buildings. The collection of the government exhibits from Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines has been under way for months, so that no delay will be experienced in getting the displays in place. The various States that are to have buildings are actively at work. Oregon has her building finished. California will be under roof in two months and the exhibits will begin to arrive in February. Missouri, Utah and New York are ready to start work. The Chicago building is planned. Other States, especially Montana, Utah, Nebraska, Michigan, Pennsylvania and North Carolina are awaiting legislative action and can start work the day after the bills are signed, as the climatic conditions permit work all the year round. The three buildings to be erected by Washington are under way and the various concessionaries on the Pay Street, the amusement boulevard, are at work.

The first announcement of railroad rates has been made and gives a $50 round trip from St. Paul and Missouri river points with an ample time limit. Rates to intermediate and more distant points will be in proportion and remarkably low. Every condition points to success; in fact, there seems no doubt but that the 1909 exposition will break all records and fulfill all expectations.

Ousting the Stiff Collar.
Detroit News-Tribune.
The turnover collar and stiff tailored tie has kept a firm grip on popularity despite all efforts to oust it from favor.

The beauty doctor declaims against it on account of injury to the neck, which French fashion makers consider it lacking in feminine softness and tempt us from our allegiance with all sorts of fascinating neck novelties.

The latest tempter is the made stock in every color and cut. These closely resemble the crush collar worn several years ago. They are made up in soft liberty satin in any shade, drawn tightly to a boned foundation. It is finished at the top, or at top and bottom, with a fine plating of muslin, de sole or net of any becoming depth. These ruchings, by the way, should be shunned by the fat-faced, short-necked woman; the soft, drooping effect is unbecoming, especially at the throat line.

Often the narrow ruching is used at the top of the stock, while the bottom is finished in a stiff bow in front, with several pointed ends. Or a narrow velvet ribbon is brought around the throat, ending in a knot and three long tasseled ends.

Smart-looking stocks are made of mill or sheer Japanese linen, embroidered in colors or self tones. These are shaped high at the sides and are put smoothly over a boned foundation. Sometimes they have two overlapping stole-like ends of the embroidered mull edged with lace for a tie. Again they have a shaped band around the lower half of the collar in a contrasting color of silk.

The lower band has rounding points in front, which are separated about an inch and a half to show the embroidered collar beneath. The two parts are connected by narrow velvet bands coming under the silk and buttoned through with two fancy buttons on each side.

To the bottom of the stock is a long tie of the embroidered mull, finished in a plaiting of net. This is just the width at the top of the space between the edges of the silk band.

big railroad systems and other important industrial enterprises which had declared their neutrality in the early stages of the campaign.

3. The extensive use of federal and State patronage in the doubtful States, particularly New York and Ohio, where the full pressure of the administrations, both State and national, is being exercised in the interest of the republican ticket.

4. Disappearance of the "sulks" among republican leaders in New York and Ohio.

5. The revival of business in Western factories and the promise of continued operation in the event of Mr. Taft's election.

Bryan Counts on These.

The democrats base their confidence on these grounds:

1. The protest against Rooseveltism.

2. Dependence of the labor vote, 90 per cent of which is believed by the democratic managers to be for Bryan.

3. The belief of the democratic managers that the great army of the unemployed, estimated at 1,300,000, will vote for Bryan.

4. The united condition of the party in all of the doubtful States.

5. The failure of the independence and socialist parties to break the ranks of the democratic party.

The full high power batteries of both parties will be trained on New York Monday. Bryan will head the democratic corps of artillerymen and Taft will be the chief projectile operator of the republicans.

THE FIGHT FOR FAME.

Man's Heroic Effort to Clutch the Priceless Jewel

His way was in a bloody lane where clanking caissons splashed along, his goal the line where blazing guns laughed out their song of death. On, on, on he went. His ears were filled with sounds of quick commands, bugle blasts, discordant drums. No fluttering fear was in his heart, no thought of home, no specter of the dread despair that waited at the hearth if he never came again. To him there was no terror in the sabre's flashing blade, no warning in the bullet's deadly hiss. Youth trod all reason underfoot; ambition saw all glory overhead. On, on he went to woo and win his bride, the priceless jewel—fame!

Another in a garret sighed for fame. Crusts were his portion and his raiment only rags. Hermit-like he toiled alone, nor cold nor hunger ever daunted him. He marshaled all his hosts, and visions came and went. On, on, he toiled. In the snowflakes that drifted in and touched his hands he read a message from the world without, all white, all cheerless. Still as a chrysalis his fancy wove and spun and made its garments, wondrous, then burst in splendor on a waiting world.

Both fought the fight, each in his way, one for a heroic shape of bronze, one for the epitaph, that all the ages in the dust of time might know "he did and died."—Wade Mounifort in Era Magazine.

Hay on Church Floor.

A curious custom is annually observed at Old Newton church on St. Switzin's day. The church is dedicated to St. Switzin, and on festival day the church is strewn with hay. Many years ago some donor left a field to provide money for bread which is distributed four times a year. The tenant of the field has to supply the hay to strew the church. The custom is supposed to have originated from the fact that on festival Sunday the parishioners wear new boots, and the idea of the donor was to have the hay laid down to stop the squeaking incidental to new footwear.—London Standard.

According to the election forecast issued yesterday by the New York Herald, Taft is sure of 280 electoral votes, 78 more than is necessary to make him the next president. It concedes that Bryan will get 165 electoral votes, and says that 47 electoral votes are doubtful—21 of them being favorable to Bryan and 26 with Taft leanings. It will be seen from these figures that even if Mr. Bryan should get all of the 47 votes conceded to be doubtful by the Herald, he would still fall short of the presidency by 29 votes. But, on the other hand, Chairman Mack, for the democrats, says that every poll of doubtful States which has been made, the returns indicate a change of from 25 to 50 per cent in the vote which was cast for Roosevelt in 1904, and which will be cast for Bryan in 1908. Chairman Mack's list of States called doubtful differs materially from the New York Herald's forecast. The Herald takes out of the doubtful column the States of New York, Ohio, West Virginia and gives them as sure republican States, while Chairman Mack says they are doubtful and favorable to Bryan. The Herald's figures also differ from the forecast issued by the World, which, while conceding that the State of New York is leaning towards Taft, says its postal card poll shows that the majority for the republican candidate will be less than 25,000. It must be taken into consideration that 1,600,000 votes are to be cast on November 3rd in that State, in the event anything like a full vote is to be polled, and that postal card polls are generally conducted in the interest of the candidate or the party which the paper that is taking it favors. The Herald is bitterly opposed to Bryan, while the World is inclined to favor him, though in 1896 and 1900 it vigorously opposed his election. Walter Wellman of the Chicago Record-Herald has made several forecasts and every one of them has shown that Bryan is steadily gaining ground, and in the event this gain of strength was kept up by the democratic candidate his election would be assured. Mr. Wellman, personally, is a republican and favors the election of Taft. The Chicago Record-Herald, the paper for which he writes, is an independent republican paper. All things considered, the chances of a democratic victory on November 3rd are more favorable today that they were one week ago, and it begins to look now as if Mr. Bryan will undoubtedly receive a majority of the popular vote cast, though he may not get the necessary number of electoral votes to elect him to the presidency.

BROOM CORN A SUCCESS.

Bray Farmer Sells a Shipment of This Product at $65 per Ton.
Clarendon Banner-Stockman.
Some time ago the Banner-Stockman had an item concerning the yield of broom corn grown by G. A. Oiler of Bray, in the eastern part of Douley county, embodying a statement by Mr. Oiler to the effect that after twenty years of experience in raising this product in the north he finds Donley soil and climate better adapted to the plant than any he had ever seen. We note that last week Mr. Oiler shipped five tons to Wichita Falls, where he found a market for it at $65 per ton.

If a number of our farmers would go into the broom corn business along with Mr. Oiler, Mr. Gerner and possibly one or two others to whom the culture of this valuable product is now confined, market facilities would better themselves and the disposal of the corn, which is now the most difficult feature of its culture, would be made easy. Even with a market so far off, with its consequent trouble in marketing, broom corn is bound to be a profitable crop at $65 per ton with a yield of a third to a half-ton per acre.

COFFEE

Yes there is a big difference in coffees. Just as there is in apples or potatoes.

Some coffee plantations are particularly favored as to soil, climate and cultivation and you can imagine that such a plantation would produce a better grade of coffee than a less favored plantation.

Revere Brand

The soil, climate and cultivation on these coffee fields all combine to make Revere Coffee the most perfect coffee produced. It's really worth more than we charge for it.

Ring the Breakfast Bell.

An American family who had experienced the difficulty of obtaining and retaining the services of a reliable kitchen girl while on a visit to Ireland became acquainted with a promising young girl and brought her back home with them.

In a few weeks she was installed in her new home and made acquainted with her new duties. Among other things she was told that it was customary when breakfast was ready to be served to ring the breakfast bell. Her "all right, ma'am" came in such a confident tone that her mistress gave the matter no further thought.

The following morning at 6 o'clock the family were rudely awakened by the violent ringing of the front door-bell. Thinking that a messenger must be waiting with some unusual message, the gentleman of the house did not stop to dress, but hurried down in his night robe and opened the door. The new kitchen girl awaited him, her face beaming with a beautiful smile of triumph. Bowing low, she said in her rich Irish brogue, "Breakfast is ready, sor."—Los Angeles Times.

Diamond Cutting.

It is said that before the fourteenth century no one knew how to cut and polish diamonds. They were esteemed for their marvelous hardness, but not greatly admired for beauty. There is a tradition that a journeyman jeweler in Flanders, Louis Van Berghem, discovered the art of cutting diamond with diamond. But it is probable that he only made some notable advance in the art since associations of diamond cutters had existed in France and Flanders from the fourteenth century. Louis Van Berghem's most famous achievement was the cutting and polishing of a huge diamond belonging to Charles the Bold. Charles was so delighted with the result that he rewarded the artist liberally and declared that the diamond would now serve him for a bedroom lamp. This jewel, which was found on Charles' body after the battle of Nancy, is still in existence and celebrated under the name of the Sancy diamond. Youth's Companion.

He Gave Them Latin.

Once, before he was president, Andrew Jackson was making a political speech in some obscure campaign in a backwoods Tennessee district. His address was very well received, but somehow there did not seem to be exactly the enthusiasm wanted for the occasion. Having vainly tried to "warm up" his hearers, the general was just going to bid down when the chairman of the meeting plucked him by the coat-tail. "For the Lord's sake, general, give 'em some Latin!" he hurriedly whispered in the speaker's ear. "They won't think you know anything at all if you quit like this. Smith, the opposition candidate, talked Latin to 'em half the evening."

Old Hickory rose to the situation. Advancing to the edge of the platform, he extended his arm and thundered out: "E-piuribus unum! Sic semper tyrannis! Inheas corpus!" The audience roared with applause. The credit of the orator was saved, and the Jackson ticket won out in that county.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Cute Mr. Davis

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]
The cute Mr. Davis figured out that to get safely away with a fortune belonging to some one else he must make himself all over. He must wipe himself out and create a new character. It was a matter requiring a good deal of consideration. One slip in the programme and the whole machinery would be thrown out of gear. When taking his position he had a fine mustache and a pair of whiskers. He cultivated them and let them grow at length. He had prominent ears, and he made them more prominent by combing his hair in a new way. His speech was naturally brisk and contained a slight lisp. He cultivated the briskness and the lisp. He had bushy eyebrows that met in the middle. He called special attention to them as a heritage from a strong race.

In the two years and a half that the cute Mr. Davis was getting ready for his grand coup he learned to speak the German language of a professor. He gave a wrong name, lied about his occupation and let it be understood that he was going to Germany as agent for an American machinery house. He managed in one way and another to become better acquainted with the country for fifty miles around than any drover or peddler. Through a second party he bought a log house and a few acres of land in a poor farming district where settlers were far between and let it be understood that a German professor was to occupy it in time to make experiments in chemistry of the soils and in geology. In his own room he donned certain garments and posed before his mirror. His brisk speech in English became a sort of drawl in German. In place of his perfect gait he cultivated a slight limp. He learned something of the rudiments of chemistry and geology. He knew what chemicals to buy to stain his face and hands and give him a swarthy look. He knew what change would come about when his whiskers and mustache disappeared.

Mr. Davis would have to ride fifty miles to his retreat when his coup came off. He could go by any one of a dozen trains, but he shook his head. Before the event was ready he had bought a horse and buggy and knew every foot of the road. He had hired a room under another name in a different part of the city, and what he needed for the metamorphosis was there days in advance of the event. The programme was gone over again and again. There was no flaw in it. The cute Mr. Davis would disappear off the face of the earth some day, and how the smart detectives were to connect Professor Schmidt with the late cashier was more than he could give them credit for. He tried hard enough, because that was his destruction or salvation, but he had to pronounce his programme simply perfection.

The great day came at last. The cashier went to the bank with the large deposit for years—that is, a couple set him down at the bank, but ten minutes later he was out on the walk and hurrying away. He reached his rooms, changed into his disguise and then shaved himself. Then his eyebrows were thinned out, his hair combed according to programme, and the cute Mr. Davis drew a long breath and said to himself that he defied all the detectives on earth to identify him. The rest was dead easy. A German who spoke broken English drove out of town behind a gentle horse, and no one gave him any attention or cared whether he went. At the country inns where he put up no one had any curiosity about him. When he reached his house he found that his nearest neighbor was two miles distant and a Russian Jew at that.

The cute Mr. Davis had figured that his dropping out of sight would create a sensation. He was right. For the first twenty-four hours it was thought he might be the victim of foul play. Then the bonding company began to hustle for other clues. The regular police were called in, and the reward offered brought scores of private detectives into the game. Inside of three days everybody had settled down to the belief that it was a case of "skip," and all work being done was based on that theory. Never was there a hotter hunt for an ambler. The Mr. Davis had committed murder the chase would not have been half as vigorous. Within a week the whole United States was on the watch for him, and copies of that photograph with the whiskers were flying about like leaves in a gale. At the end of a month the army of detectives had to turn in their reports with the words "No clew" attached. It was believed that the criminal had escaped to a foreign country.

The cute Mr. Davis, alias Professor Schmidt, figured on making use of his retreat for a number of months and then assuming some other guise in some other part of the country. All went well with him for a number of weeks, and then one day a rough-head of a boy who was hunting for a lost calf approached the house to ask for information and heard a man singing a song in good old fashioned English. He had been told that the occupant was a German. He went away and reported his "find," and it got to the ears of a constable, and from thence to the sheriff and the detectives, and a week later the cute Mr. Davis was dragged out of his burrow, identified after awhile and is today serving the state on a ten year sentence. He was over two years building up a programme without a flaw, and yet a boy who could not read or write or tell the time of day knocked it into a socked hat in half an hour.

Carnegie to the Front.
Houston Post.
The statement that President Roosevelt has induced Andrew Carnegie to give $100,000 to the republican campaign fund accentuates the importance of what Mr. Bryan has been saying with respect to the collection of a monster fund to be used on the day of the election. It also accentuates the importance of what Senator Culberson and others have said with respect to the attitude of the republican party toward the steel trust.

Nearly all of Andrew Carnegie's vast fortune consists of steel securities and the market value of these securities depends upon the retention of the outrageous schedules of the Dingley law. Mr. Carnegie cannot, of course, expect any favors of Mr. Bryan or the democratic party. Both are irrevocably pledged to reduce the tariff by which the Ironmaster's fortune has been wrung from man unwilling public.

Now, why does Carnegie, at the president's request, give $100,000 to the republican fund? Does he expect in return the continued favor of the republican party? And has he been assured that no scheme of tariff revision will be permitted to touch steel in the event of Judge Taft's election?

Like Mr. Harriman, Mr. Carnegie is a practical man and it may be he balked at his munificent contribution until he received some assurance that no scheme of republican tariff reform urged by Taft will include steel. Indeed, the country will infer that the republican party, headed by Roosevelt, is again at its old tricks of selling favors or campaign funds.

Not only Mr. Carnegie, but J. J. Hill has been taking an active interest in raising money from predatory wealth for the uses of the republican committee. And all this money is to be turned loose on election day in the hope of corrupting a sufficient number of voters to carry the election.

As Mr. Bryan has pointed out, the principal work of the campaign is over. All of the literature has been distributed and nearly all of the speeches have been made. Why all this money is to be used in one or two States in the final hours of the campaign, if not for the purpose of corrupting voters?

And do not the people observe the sources of the republican slush fund? Do they not see that their enemies are working hand-in-hand with the republican party to prevent the reforms which the public conscience is now strongly insisting upon? Are they willing to permit these evil forces to prolong the present era of graft, corruption, extravagance, monopoly, militarism?

If the people permit the election to be bought, what expedient will they hereafter resort to when other attempts are made to correct public abuses? If the use of money is to prevent an honest verdict, then we will have to admit that the suffrage is impotent to remedy abuses that must be remedied if the republic is to live.

"All are Meteors With a Different Name."
"We wither from our youth, we gasp away—
Sick, sleek: Unfounded the boon—
slaked the thirst,
Though to the last, in verge of our decay,
Some phantom lures, such as sought at first—
But all too late—so we are doubly cursed.
Love, fame, ambition, avarice—'tis the same.
Each idle, and all ill—and none the worst.
For all are meteors with a different name.
And death the sable smoke where vanishes the flame."
In all probability, for millions of years, the sun has risen to bless us by day and the stars have twinkled through the evening twilight. Each of us, during our short stay, have watched in our own way, the repetition of yesterday. Men have dug and delved, studied and worried, they have searched and theorized on the origin of man. They have polluted and deluted the sacred laws with their poor mortal theory of evolution; the opinions, the theories, the deductions, the figures and the facts are varied entanglements, intricacies and perplexities, based on personal opinions. But as varying, as far apart as they may be as to the origin of humanity, they are all agreed as to our destiny.

The poet Byron understood humanity, as a study of the above extract will show:—With each birth a destiny is fixed; a fate is sealed; we may be kings and queens, presidents or leaders of men, or we may be only their subjects. Whatever our station in life, "All are Meteors With a Different Name." But from the first day of our existence, we are all pushed by the ceaseless, unchanging roll of time. "Though to the last" even when we begin to bend under the weight of years "some phantom lures, such as we sought at first." But, alas! Some day, somewhere, our sun of life must sink to rise no more. Each of us, either long or short our lives, have felt the twang of a broken chord, caused by the hand of death. Each has bowed to this immutable law: our heart has been broken (as it were) by the death of loved ones. But, alas! It must be so! We can do nothing but mourn their departure, try to perpetuate them by keeping their names and deeds engraven in the hall of memory, erect at their last resting place some beautiful and lasting memorial. Out of respect, in loving remembrance of father, mother, brother or sister, 'tis the last and only duty we can perform. We would say to you, with all due respect, do your duty and place the order now. Wichita Marble Works, 818 Indiana avenue. 144-61

TO BE LIVELY WEEK.

The Democrats Will Be Active in Three States.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 26.—The democratic party will make a whirlwind finish of the campaign in New York, Indiana and Ohio next week. Four special trains have been engaged for the speakers, who include leading democrats in the nation. Mr. Bryan and others will campaign up and down New York State. Arrangements have been made for two specials in Ohio and an equal number in Indiana. These trains begin a schedule today which lasts throughout the week. Every section of the two States will be traversed, giving the speakers an opportunity to address practically the entire population.

Vice Presidential Candidate John W. Kern will be aboard train No. 1 in Indiana, which will be known as the "National Special." Mr. Marshall, the democratic candidate for governor, will make a trip on the "Indiana Special," which is train No. 2. Speakers of National reputation, who will be aboard the two trains during the course of the week, are Thomas F. Gore, the blind senator from Oklahoma, whose eloquence stirred the Denver convention to a record-breaking demonstration in behalf of William Jennings Bryan; ex-Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, who served in the late President Cleveland's cabinet; ex-Senator Charles A. Towne of Minnesota, who is now a New York democrat; Representative Mark Smith of Arizona, Judge Knox of Minnesota and Congressman Rainey of Illinois.

Judson Harmon, the democratic nominee for governor of Ohio, will be aboard the "Judson Harmon Special" in Ohio. The other Ohio special will carry a distinguished number of democrats of both State and National reputation. They will alternate throughout the week with some of the speakers assigned to the Indiana specials. Among the speakers assigned to the Ohio specials are Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia, who was a member of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet; ex-Senator Charles A. Towne, Governor Sanders of Louisiana, J. W. Tomlinson, chairman of the bureau of organizations at democratic national headquarters, and Congressman Jack Beall of Texas, Rainey of Illinois, Henry of Texas and Clayton of Alabama, who was the permanent presiding officer at the Denver convention.

The four trains will be operated under the direction of the speakers' bureau of the national and the two States committees. A feature of this plan of campaign will be the distribution of literature from the national and State headquarters on all four trains.

Frank Herring of South Bend, Ind., who has been here conferring with the speakers' bureau, will be in charge of the Indiana specials. The itineraries are to be arranged at a meeting to be held today in Indianapolis, at which Chairman Hernden of the Indiana speakers bureau, will be present.

"The Indiana Special" will follow the itinerary previously arranged for Mr. Marshall, the democratic nominee for governor. The use of the special train will enable him and the distinguished democrats who accompany him to address the voters morning, afternoon and night.

Gave Him All the Lot.
"So that is your final word?" said the rejected one. "Very well, then, Arabella. In your presence I will end the life you have blighted."

He drew forth a small bottle labeled "Poison," drank off the contents and fell senseless at her feet. Did she sink beside him sobbing with remorse? No. She hastily left the room and in two minutes had returned and was kneeling beside him. Then she forced between his lips the following: Half a cup of turpentine, one pint of milk, a cup of warm sea-weeds, a tablespoonful of aromatic ammonia, a cup of black coffee, a glass of mustard and water, a gill of vinegar, the juice of a lemon, the beaten whites of six eggs and a cup of flour and water.

"Algernon," she observed coldly as he slowly opened his eyes, "it is evident you had forgotten that I am a graduate of a correspondence course in first aid. My one regret is that, as I could not on the instant ascertain whether you had taken an acid or an alkali, I was compelled to administer all the antidotes I had learned."—London Scrap.

A Picture Romance.
It is said that one of the most beautiful ladies in French society today was first revealed to her husband on the walls of the salon. It was while visiting the salon in 1878 that the youthful Marquis de C. was struck by the childish beauty of a young girl one of the prominent figures in a picture of a village fete. Her tumbled golden locks, her dancing blue eyes and the freshness and graceful abandon of her figure so fascinated him that he sought out the artist and learned from him that the "little witch" was the daughter of a poor peasant near Avanches, where the picture was painted. To seek out the peasant and to make the acquaintance of his fascinating daughter, child of nine summers, was soon accomplished, and the marquis lost his heart even more completely to the real than to the pictured maid. With the father's approval he had the girl educated at one of the best schools in Paris, and nine years later, on her eighteenth birthday, the maid of the village fete blossomed into the still more lovely Marquise de C.

Baffling Old Age.
We have it on excellent authority that a hundred years' time people will only suffer from old age just as we do now from bronchitis or tonsillitis or some other preventable disease. "I haven't seen you lately," our grandsons will be saying to a man at the Twenty-first Century club, to which he will make reply, "Been seedy, had a nasty attack of old age—and have just come back from a little aeroplane trip to shake it off."—London World.

Clouds and the Weather.

When two weather prophets disagree does it argue error or incompetence in either? No, says the author of "Storms and Storm Signals" in Yachting. The data upon which they base their predictions do not always bear one interpretation. Thus:

Because the clouds indicate weather in a different manner according to the geographical location of the observer, and also because they are in themselves but byproducts of the weather and are not causes, weather predictions from clouds at sea should be taken with plenty of reservation of judgment. To say, for instance, that at a "red sky at night sailors delight" is very useful and possibly truthful where knowledge is conspicuous by its absence, but a red sky at night may mean almost anything from a surplus of moisture in the air, meaning probably rains, to a volcanic eruption 2,000 miles away which has sent great clouds of dust into the air, causing the red color by reflection and refraction of the light rays.

The Eyes.

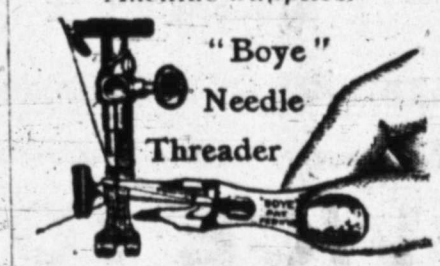

"Long, almond shaped eyes, with thick and heavy lids covering half the pupil and with a forehead that is full above the brows—there you have the eye of the man of genius." The speaker's own eyes answered that description strikingly, but he was far from being a man of genius, being, in fact, a magazine editor.

"Protruding eyes," he went on, "show mental and bodily weakness. Eyes close together denote cunning. Those far apart denote liberality. Thin lashes without any upward curve to them and thin brows poorly marked are signs of melancholy and indecision. The eyes of a voluptuary move slowly under heavy lids. Those of a miser are small, deep sunken and blue, set in a bony and perpendicular forehead. The most beautiful eyes—large, brilliant and clear, gleaming and flashing with a rapid motion—the most beautiful eyes denote elegance of taste, gaiety, some selfishness and a great interest in the opposite sex."—New York Press.

Curious School Customs.

Mexican schoolmasters show their appreciation of a pupil's efforts in a curious manner. The diligent student is allowed to smoke a cigar during the lesson. When the whole class has given satisfaction, permission is given for a general smoke, and even the little Mexicans are allowed to light a cigarette for the occasion. Needless to say, the schoolmaster himself smokes a cigar of a size and quality proportionate to his superior position. But the scholars are not allowed to drink, this privilege being accorded to the master only. On his desk he always keeps a bottle of liquor, which, when empty, occasions much dispute among the parents of his scholars, as it is considered an honor to be able to fill the schoolmaster's bottle.—London—Standard.

The Home of Good Clothes

DESIGNED BY
SPERO, MICHAEL & SON
NEW YORK

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

One of the most essential features of clothing is style. It is not put into like starch in a collar; it is not added to the garments when they are nearing completion. Style is built into clothes from the very start; from the chalk lines on the cloth before the shears starts their work and goes hand-in-hand with every operation in clothes making to the last stitch.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx and Spero, Michael & Son's clothes have real style and also the other necessary accomplishments; excellent material high grade workmanship and splendid wearing qualities. We are showing a surprising assortment of fall styles in all the modish fabrics and collar for men and young men—Price $10 to $40. All men and young men suits bought from us will be kept pressed and repaired free of charge.
