One of Fate's Fancies

(Original.)

To one contemplating the strange occurrences which befall it would seem that there is a real personal fate that is constantly amusing himself with our destinies. For instance, at the end of the eighteenth century it showed a little Corsican the crown of France kicked about by a mob in Paris. He picked it up, put it on his head and then proceeded to make kings and queens of his family. Per contra, fate designated the monarch who lost the crown the Corsican appropriated to be the one of a long line of sovereigns to lose it and his head at the same time. He was the only one of the lot who in many years deserved to wear it.

In the case recited in this story it would seem that this inexorable fate took a cunning and malicious pleasure.

A party of American sightseers abroad were "doing" the gardens of Versailles. A middle aged couple strolled away from the others and sat themselves down to rest.

"At twenty," said the man, "I laid out a definite plan for my life which I have followed to the present moment. Having tastes which I had no means to gratify, I resolved to spend twenty years in accumulating a fortune where with to spend another twenty years in an ideal life. Before leaving America a month ago I closed out my business, having accumulated the requisite amount. The first twenty years of my life have been passed as I intended. The second period is before me.

"Of that period I have spent but a month, and yet it is long enough to have taught me that to enjoy the world I must have some one to enjoy it with me. In you I have met that person—the only woman I have ever wished to make a life companion. It rests with you whether this second period shall be a success or a failure. Will you spend it with me as my wife?"

There was a long silence between them, at the end of which the woman said:

"Unlike you, I laid no plan for my life. At eighteen I loved, married and was for ten years supremely happy with my husband and my children. Then within a few months they were all swept away by death. I cannot be happy without them, therefore it would be impossible for me to enable you as your companion to carry out the second part of your plan."

"Which means that this part has already failed?"

"If dependent upon me; not on an other."

"Had I not fallen in with you I might possibly have been happy with another."

The woman was looking on the ground, making marks on it with the end of her parasol. Presently she looked up into the man's face to see there a bitter disappointment resting on every feature.

"In that case I will do my best for you, I consent," she said.

There was a wedding in the American Parisian colony, after which Walter Lanier and his bride spent to him six delightful months in a land where there is every opportunity for a cultivated man to enjoy himself. The only shadow falling upon him was that, despite a brave struggle on the part of his wife, she occasionally showed that her heart was with those who had gone from her. The husband, seeing that occupation would be better for her, proposed that they return to America, where she might have the care of a home. In reply to this proposition she told him that whatever he wished was her preference.

Lanier believed it would be better to take his wife where she would enjoy the companionship of those she had always known. He planned a surprise for her. He wrote a friend to buy a house for him in the neighborhood in which his wife had been born and reared, where her father and mother and a sister would be near her. It happened that just such a place was in the market, and it was purchased for Lanier. It needed no improvements, and as soon as Lanier was advised that the papers had passed he and his bride sailed for America.

By this time Mrs. Lanier had been wenned from a constant dwelling upon those she had lost. She had married a splendid man for her second husband and every day clung to him more and more. Indeed, she seemed to realize that a living with the dead is an abnormal condition and resolved to live for her husband.

On the day of their arrival at the place of their intended future residence the wife expected to be taken temporarily to a hotel. They were met at the station by a carriage and driven away. She did not know where and did not feel in a mood to ask. But presently she noticed that she was on familiar ground. She looked up at her husband inquiringly. He put his arm about her affectionately, but said nothing. When they reached the location of her old home Mrs. Lanier put her hands on her eyes as if to shut out memory. Then the carriage stopped, and her husband alighted. He had taken her hand to help her out, and her foot was on the step when she looked up at the house her husband had provided for her. With a cry, she drew back into the carriage, exclaiming:

"Take me away! It was my home!" For a moment he stood appalled, then re-entered the carriage, closed the door and ordered the coachman to drive anywhere that would take them from the home he had intended for them.

Now, why did fate take them to that particular house?

Texas has 61,000 square miles of undeveloped coal fields and the finest granite in the world. The property is valued at five billion dollars, while her mineral wealth is estimated at three billions.

Texas mines work 8,250 men, while they could give employment to five million for sixty years.

Seventy-four per cent of her population are engaged in agriculture, while 53 per cent of her wealth is incorporated. Her population is 15 per square mile.

Texas has 245 counties—239 organized and 6 unorganized. She has 1,500 miles of railroad with no railroads in 45 counties.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

This is the time of year that many of us are doing over our rooms, and so a few suggestions may not be amiss. The Woman's National Daily offers an idea for a pretty scheme of wall covering, as follows:

Do you contemplate paering your home? Then let me tell you of a new wall paper scheme which is really very effective. The decorative portion is at the base or lower portion of the wall, leaving the upper portion plain to merge into the pale color of the ceiling. When one thinks of it, this seems the only sensible way to decorate a room, for we do not go out and view nature and find her picturesque effects suspended above the level of the eye. What we behold on looking up is the azure dome of the skies, ethereal clouds and small objects, so why should the flowers trail from our ceilings? The newest papers show the patterns rising like so many flowers from the floor to the ceiling or half way. The stock plants, such as chrysanthemums, American beauties, hollyhocks, and the like are found in a deep stencil effect in one color scheme, with the floral designs in a satin finish upon a plain background.

Age Has Nothing to do With Colors Women Wear.

The question of age governing dress is of less importance now than it has been for a century or two. Not long ago it was even a question among women of 40 if they were too old to wear white frocks. Nothing is prettier on an old lady than this snowy whiteness in soft materials. She should never wear anything else in the house all the year round. It also does for all warm weather outdoor wear. As for the modied question of black, there is much to be said for and against its general usage by old ladies.

It is well to have it as a background, but the well dressed old ladies of today are going in for gray, for lilac, for striped purple and white, and for striped black and white.

These are preferred to black for every occasion. It is such a stily idea that women who are past the first flush of youth should confine themselves to black or somber hues. When the pretty coloring of youth begins to vanish is just the time when women should be careful to choose colors and becoming ones. Black looks far better on young persons than it does on elderly women, and no color in the world looks better on an old person than white. It has a softening and a beautifying effect.

MR. TAFT A UNITARIAN.

There have been a good many things said about the religion of William Howard Taft, presidential nominee of the republican party. Some one asks if that means he is a Christian. Not at all, but as anti-Christian as a Jew, a Mohammedan or a Buddhist. A Unitarian says that humanity gets lost in a deep, dark valley. For ages man so strayed, but after awhile one Jesus came, an ordinary man, who by force of will found the way out of the chasm. He was a pathfinder. Any man who had had the force of will that Jesus had could have done as well in leading men out into a larger life. Jesus is respected for this work, but he can lay no claim to divinity, for Joseph, a man, was his real and only father. Is he who robs the Christ, the anointed of God, of his divinity; who denies the atonement that Calvary perfected; who disputes the inspiration of the New Testament; is he a Christian? Scarcely. This is no attempt to stab Mr. Taft, but a plain statement of facts.—Western Evangel.

Mr. Taft can hold to the Unitarian belief and yet make the United States a good president. His religious beliefs are not what the people of the United States, the democrats, object to, so much. The fact that Mr. Taft is depending largely on the support of such men as Carnegie and Rockefeller for his election to the presidency makes him a dangerous man to the American people.

There is an abundance of evidence to show that the Standard Oil Company, of which Rockefeller is at the head, and the steel trust of which Mr. Carnegie is the head and front, have so far successfully defied every law that has been enacted, restraining such combines from robbing the people by demanding and receiving exorbitant profits on products manufactured by those concerns. That these concerns make liberal donations to the campaign funds of the party which allows them these privileges is by far a greater reason why Mr. Taft should be defeated for the presidency rather than for any religious belief that he might hold. But the matter of Mr. Taft's election or rejection will be decided tomorrow. If he is elected, it will be due largely to the fact of an enormous "slush" fund contributed by concerns that are greater enemies of the people of the United States than Albert Parsons, August Spies and the other anarchist leaders hung at Chicago a few years ago, ever were, even if they were guilty of all that was charged against them. It will require but a few years more of the reign of the trusts until every State in the Union will have its quota of night riders, and it will be unsafe to transport a carload of trust-made goods across the continent. The question then is: Is it safer to elect a man of Bryan's views, who in every word published or spoken gives fresh evidence of his loyalty as a law-abiding, God-fearing American citizen, rather than to place in the presidential chair a man who every intelligent voter is bound to acknowledge will owe his election in a large measure to dishonestly made money contributed by men who are seeking to further oppress the masses of American people, which money was deliberately contributed for the sole purpose of corrupting the ballot?

Disappointed.

At a dinner of a legal association held in Washington not long ago one of the speakers told of a farmer's son in Illinois who conceived a desire to shine as a legal light. Accordingly, he went up to Springfield, where he accepted employment at a small sum from a fairly well known attorney. At the end of three days' study he returned to the farm. "Well, Bill, how d' ye like the law" asked his father. "It ain't what it's cracked up to be," responded Bill gloomily. "I'm sorry I learned it."—Lippincott's.

Legally Dead

(Original)
In the days when Mexico was in a chronic state of revolution Signor Herrera lived on his hacienda doing his best to avoid being entangled in any of the various strifes that succeeded one another for the possession of the government, for to be on the wrong side meant death. Dona Marina, Herrera's eldest daughter, was courted by Signor Juan Bustamante, a neighboring hacienda owner who had done a great deal to establish the government then in power. He was more than twice Marina's age and was especially disagreeable to her. But she was urged by her family to accept him on the ground that if she declined him he might seek revenge by impugning her father's loyalty to the government. But Dona Marina loved Phillippe Mendoza, the son of a neighboring planter. Urged to give him up for Bustamante, through fear she consented, but not for long. She confessed to Bustamante her love for Mendoza and begged him to release her. He did so at once, with many expressions of grief and wishes for her happiness. By this course Marina turned what had been feared for her father against her lover. Bustamante, thinking that if he got Mendoza out of the way Marina might yet become his wife, secretly accused his rival of plotting with one who was known to be fomenting a new revolution. Mendoza was arrested and taken to the government prison, where no one knew where.

As soon as the news of the arrest reached the Herreras, not suspecting Bustamante, Marina implored him to use his influence with the president in behalf of her lover. He promised to do so and set off at once to the capital ostensibly for the purpose. He knew very well that Mendoza would have been executed before his arrival, for he had so arranged with the government. What he wished was to conceal his own part in the murder and gain credit with Marina that would benefit his suit in the future.

There is a law in Mexico that one executed shall be left where he falls till friends or relatives come and take away the body for burial. But at Mendoza's execution there was no one to claim the body. Bustamante had arranged that he be taken to a distant province from which the news of his execution would be long in reaching his friends, especially Dona Marina. Mendoza was taken out in the gray of the morning and was stood up before eight soldiers, who at the word of command fired a volley at him. He fell. The commander of the firing party took a look at the body and saw that it had several wounds in the thorax and two in the head, any one of which might be expected to kill him. The soldiers were marched away and a written report handed in that Phillippe Mendoza was dead.

But Mendoza was not dead. Notwithstanding his wounds after the firing party had marched away he revived. For a time he supposed that he had awakened in another world. Yet there above him was the same blue sky he had lived under, and he could hear cattle-bawling. Making an effort, he raised himself on his elbow, looked about him and down on his blood stained clothing. Then, making another effort, he got up and walked several miles to a hospital.

He could not keep the secret that he had been executed, and word soon reached those who had been charged with his execution. Fearing that they would be blamed for neglect of duty, they proposed to shoot him again, but before they could agree upon this course the news of the strange case reached the governor of the province. He had been on the bench, and the only thing in the world he respected was the law. He took the matter under consideration, at last deciding that Mendoza had been executed, had been reported dead and was therefore dead. That is, he was dead in law. Therefore those who had been ordered to execute him had nothing further to do with him. He was without legal existence in the republic of Mexico. No further report of the matter need be forwarded to the government, for there was nothing to be said about one who had been reported legally dead.

One evening as Signor Bustamante was returning from a visit to the Herrera hacienda he heard a voice from bushes beside the road ordering him to halt. He stopped, and a man stepped into the road a short distance before him. His cheeks were hollow, his lips were thin, his eyes were wild, his face was white. Bustamante saw his rival, or what he considered his rival's ghost.

"Are you of the living or the dead?" "I am dead—legally dead. But that you shall not again have me executed I am a firing party to execute you." The ghost raised a rifle and shot his enemy dead.

When Mendoza appeared at the Herrera hacienda no one there knew what had become of him. He told the story of his execution and that he had executed the man who had brought it about. His visit was brief, and no one except the Herreras knew that he had been there. The slayer of Bustamante was never known. Soon after all this occurred a new leader of the party opposed to the government arose, marched to the capital, took it, executed every member of the government and was proclaimed president. He was none other than Mendoza.

When it was found that the new president was strangely given to pardoning malefactors the people said, "How can one who is legally dead kill others?" But in this his wife Marina had a hand.

It begins to look like that, in order for the democrats to elect a president, the general election should be held a month or so earlier. Our candidates always run better in August and September.

The Times has made all necessary arrangements to receive the election bulletins on tomorrow night and up to 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, and in addition to its regular evening edition will issue an extra for Wednesday morning, at which time it is thought the result of the election in all the close States will be known.

THE VOTER'S DUTY TO COUNTRY CHILDREN.

At the election on November 3rd the voters of Texas will decide whether there shall be incorporated into the Constitution an amendment to Sec. 3, Art. 7, which relates to public schools. To adopt this amendment would accomplish these results:

1. It would empower every rural school district to levy a local school tax at any rate not higher than fifty cents on the one hundred dollars of property valuation. A vote for the amendment is not a vote for a tax on any one; it merely authorizes a district to settle school taxation for itself.

These two results are in harmony with the fundamental principles of democracy—local self-government and majority rule.

The fathers of Texas laid a splendid foundation for our system of public schools; it is our duty to manifest equal intelligence and patriotism in building on that foundation.

Give the country child a fair chance, and on your ballot scratch against amendment to Sec. 3, Art. 7, relating to public schools.

Texas' First Newspaper.

Sixty-five years ago there was not a newspaper published in the broad scope of country which now makes up the Imperial State of Texas. The first paper printed within the bounds of this vast territory was in 1843. The journal was known as the Northern Standard, and it was printed in Clarksville, then a very small village. When the paper was established the Republic of Texas was one of the independent nations of the world. Col. Charles DeMorse, who is remembered by many of the older citizens of North Texas, was the editor. Subscription price of the Standard was $3.50 if paid in advance, $4 at the end of six months and $5 if paid at the end of the year.—Honey Grove Signal.

Real Estate Deals.

Two deals in real estate in the business section of this city have just been closed.

Anderson & Patterson, the real estate and insurance firm, has purchased from Mrs. N. C. McIntyre the lot fronting twenty-five feet on Eighth street immediately adjoining Jourdan's furniture store at the rear. The consideration is given as $2,500.

The firm announces that they will immediately let the contract for the construction of a two-story office building.

Mr. G. D. Anderson has also purchased the lot adjoining with a frontage of fifty feet on Eighth street, extending to the alley from the Wichita Falls Investment Company for a consideration of $5,000.

Mr. Anderson says he will build on the lot as soon as he can get possession and can secure the brick from the new brick factory.

Is Bryan a Great Man?

It is difficult to place a just judgment upon any man; there are so many standards by which to measure. Napoleon was first in the field; Disraeli first in the cabinet; others have conceived ideas of grandeur and beauty and placed them upon a page. Then, too, there is the sorcerer scientist, who harnesses the intangibles, lets you see through solids, and permits you to hear the voices of the dead. All these are great men. But is it not true today as in the ancient time, that leading all the rest in the book of gold is the name of him who is great because he loves his fellow-men? If so, then is Bryan great?

He is the God-fearing man in politics; the Christian without cant; the politician who knows no price; the citizen whose life is an inspiration. Strong is he with the strength that means steadfastness. The cunning cannot cajole him; the sophist cannot mislead him; the briber cannot buy him; nor can he be made afraid.

He is the leader of a great party, whose leadership no man questions; he is the idol of millions of his countrymen; he is concededly one of the greatest personages of the earth. With out office, as a plain American citizen, he has been the guest of emperors, the confere of kings, the teacher of senators; and yet, with all this, he is so simple in his living, so kindly in his commerce with his fellows, that the one title that fits him like a garment is "The Great Commoner."—Success.

Zinc mining in Mexico has become important in Mexico only in the last three years. The most important zinc deposits are near Monterrey. At Calera there is a large amount of mixed sulphide ore, while the Tiro General in San Luis Potosi is also producing zinc ore.

On the Danish island of Sjælland there is an electric lighting system which is being driven by a windmill. The wheel is forty-six feet in diameter, and is supported by a tower forty-three feet high. The area of the blades exposed to the wind is forty square feet, and with a wind blowing at the rate of twenty-three feet a second the mill will give 8.6 horsepower.

Dr. Alexander Schaefer has been investigating the vision of many animal species and has found that the size of the eyeball is the principal factor of acuteness of vision. The bovine species has the sharpest sight. The second place is occupied by man and the horse, which have nearly equal visual powers; the third by the sheep.

You DON'T KNOW BEANS

til you have tried a can of SNYDER PROCESS PORK AND BEANS with Tomato Sauce. These beans are not baked hard like other kinds. They break tender because the Snyder Process keeps the skins intact. It also preserves the natural flavor. Every piece of pork is carefully inspected by U. S. government officials, so that no scraps or refuse meat is used. There are plenty of good beans on the market, but Snyder's are the best. Try them.

MANY STATES DOUBTFUL

cluded in Greater New York, thus today:

"If Mr. Bryan carries New York county at all it will be by a plurality of from 40,000 to 60,000.

"District leaders believe that Gov.
Hughes will run not more than 20,000 behind Mr. Taft in this county."

Mr. Mack said today that his claim that Bryan and Kern will receive 331 votes in the electoral college is based on reports received from State chairmen and from private sources. State Chairman Conners has predicted that Bryan will receive a plurality of 40,000 in the State and that Mr. Chanler will get more than 100,000.

The democratic national committee bases its belief that Mr. Bryan will be elected on the following four reasons, which have been incorporated into a statement by National Committeeman Josephus Daniels, chairman of the literary bureau:

"Bryan will be elected because the democracy today presents a united front. Further, the democratic party will be augmented by thousands of republicans dissatisfied with the mistakes of twelve years of republican administration.

"This army of voters will be further strengthened by a new force in American politics—the labor vote. Assuming there were to be a strict party line up at the election the labor vote itself would turn the scales to democratic success.

"The labor party has put all its eggs into the democratic basket and it must win to save them.

"Mr. Bryan has gained wonderful personal strength in the last few years in all parts of the country and thousands of voters who neither understood him nor his aims now place their absolute trust in him and his policies.

"The democratic national committee has brought all the elements of the party together; it has the labor vote and its remarkable accessions of strength from the republican ranks, together with Mr. Bryan's strength with the masses, are the reasons why this nation will now turn to democracy."

"Mr. Mack in a statement attacked the republican party for not immediately making its campaign contributions public. The chairman said:

"The denial by President Roosevelt and the denial by Secretary Cortelyou of getting money from the big interests desiring government favors were more vigorous in 1904 than they are today.
But after the election it leaked out that the trusts and allied interests gave big sums. Mr. Harriman himself raising $200,000, which he says changed 50,000 voters in New York alone. Men like Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie were not then publicly advocating the ticket and putting their fortunes at the disposal of the republican committee.
The money paid in then by the Standard Oil trust, the Steel Trust, Harriman and others is but a mere bagatelle compared with the millions which Rockefeller and Carnegie and Morgan are pouring into this campaign in the last days in the desperate attempt to stem
the relentless tide that will carry Mr.
Bryan into the White House."

Felicitous.

A New England man, who flatters himself upon his aptness in saying the proper thing at the proper time, recently revisited his old home in Vermont, whither he had not gone in ten years or more, says Harper's Weekly. Among those he met during the first day of his visit was a coquettish spinster, who, with a simper, said: "I'm Miss Mullins. You don't remember me, of course." "Remember you!" exclaimed the New England gallant, "As if I could help doing so, Miss Mullins! Why, you are one of the landmarks of the town!"

Seasonable Recipes

By Emma E. Pirie, Supervisor of Domestic Science, San Antonio Schools.

Game is usually more digestible than domestic fowl, as there is very little fat distributed among its fibers.

Birds are best plucked dry, being careful not to break the skin. Ducks usually require scalding to remove the down, especially at the height of the season.

All birds should be carefully drawn as soon as possible after killing. Many sportsmen neglect this, under a mistaken idea that the flavor is enhanced.

The contents of the digestive organs decompose very rapidly, and the taint may be extended to the meat. If the game has been left for some time before drawing wipe the cavity very carefully with a cloth dipped in strong salt water, then dry.

The red meats, such as ducks or venison, are best if hung for a few days, if the weather permits, or a very cold refrigerator is available.

A Cold Storage Device.

A useful cold storage device is made by using a large ice cream freezer, substituting a closely covered earthenware or enameled vessel for the inner can. Put the meat to be kept in the inner vessel, using one part-coarse salt to two parts cracked ice.

Quail or any white meat must not be kept too long as it deteriorates very rapidly.

The dark meats are best served rare. Quail must be well cooked. Rabbit, being very dense, requires long, slow cooking. Wild turkey is cooked like the tame fowl, but stuffing should be omitted.

Baked Quail.

Sprinkle the birds lightly with salt, put a thin slice of salt pork about the breast of each, place them in a baking pan, breast side up; put into the pan two tablespoons of hot water and one of butter; place the pan in a hot oven. Baste frequently and cook forty minutes. If the birds are young they may become tender in less time.

Roast Duck.

Wipe the ducks carefully, sprinkle inside and out lightly with salt; place breast up in a baking pan, pour around them a little hot water, cook in a very hot oven eighteen or twenty minutes, basting frequently. At the end of this time the surface should be nicely browned. The flesh will be dark red and the juice will run freely. If rare meat is objectionable diminish the heat and cook fifteen minutes longer.

Broiled Quail.

Split the quail down the back; broil with the inside down; turn occasionally, but keep the inside down most of the time. When almost done, broil the other side. Baste with a little melted butter while cooking. Cook for twenty-five minutes, but do not have the broiler too hot. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and spread with a little melted butter.

Brown Fricassee of Rabbit.

Cut the rabbit into moderately sized pieces and dredge with flour and brown in two tablespoons of butter or bacon fat (do not heat the fat too hot); then put two tablespoons of flour in the pan and brown; add one pint of stock, stir constantly until it boils, moving pieces of meat; then add one teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper and a slice of onion and one bay leaf; push to the back of the range and cook very gently until tender; remove the rabbit; take the pan from the fire and add to it the yolk of one egg beaten with two tablespoons of cream. Cook the sauce until the egg thickens, stirring constantly; pour it over the rabbit; garnish the dish with parsley and serve.

The Woman That Hustled

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

For several years the new church at Hawesville remained unpainted and without a cupola. It was owned jointly by the Methodists and the Baptists. One day the widow Larkins set the ball a-rolling with a view of getting the work done. Not a hint escaped her that she was working for an object.

The painters followed the carpenters, and the second coat was hardly dry when the bell arrived and was hoisted into position. There was a grand turnout for the first Sunday. The ministers of both denominations were to occupy the pulpit, and there would be "talks" instead of sermons.

"I am glad you came. I have a confession to make. There are several things that weigh on my conscience, and that was the reason I was not at service this morning. Parson, you know I set out all alone to get that carpenter work done."

"I owned a kicking cow. It was known to everybody in the village that she was a kicker. She has kicked over more of her milk than was ever saved. I would have been glad to sell her for $10. One day a man came along from Cherry Hill, and I sold her to him for $17. I never said a word about her kicking. That $17 bought the first lumber. Do you think I can ever be forgiven for my sin?"

"Well, I shouldn't worry much. It is quite possible that with other surroundings she may cease to kick at all."

"I owned two spotted hogs," continued the widow. "They were running around the village for a year and were several times complained of as nuisances."

"Yes; they rooted up my garden last spring."

day and offered me $3 apiece for them. He drove them away after dark. When he paid me he paid for three spotted hogs instead of two. He must have driven away one belonging to others. I didn't notice the mistake until the drover was gone, and then I did not run after him. I turned that odd hog into more lumber."

"Um! Um! I can't exactly see how you can be held responsible for the hog buyer being nearsighted. You might have run after him and explained that he had paid you for an extra hog, but you didn't think of it until too late. I should say that every hog removed from our village to some distant sphere was a distinct gain for us. A hog in a mudhole is a nuisance; a hog turned into a cupola of a church is a joy forever."

"You know I went to Chicago about three months ago. I have some worldly relatives there. When I told them of the work I was engaged in they were much interested. My brother-in-law insisted that I put $10 on the races on a ten to one shot. I was induced against my will to do it, and my horse came in ahead. I got $100 in cash, and that went into the cupola. I am feeling now that it was the greatest sin of all."

"Well, I don't know," mused the parson. "You did not bet through any sordid motive?"

"No. I had the cupola in mind all the time."

"Um! Of course the principle of horse racing is wrong—very wrong—but there are occasions when an innocent person may be persuaded against his own judgment. You did not go to Chicago to bet on the race?"

"Oh, no, no, no! I didn't know that such a thing was contemplated."

"And you showed a proper reluctance for a time?"

"Well, I don't think the sin is unforgivable. Besides, the money has gone into the cupola and can't be separated from the rest. Is there anything more?"

"There—there is!" groaned the widow as her tears began to fall again.

"No. I was not so lost as that. My brother-in-law came home one morning and asked how much money I lacked to finish the cupola. I counted up and found it was $12. He laughed and threw me over the money."

"That was very kind of him," mused the parson.

A clergyman in a neighboring town had been much annoyed by the way members of the congregation had of looking around to take stock of comers. After enduring it for some time, he said on entering the reading desk one Sunday: "Brethren, I regret to see that your attention is called away from your religious duties by your natural desire to see who comes in behind you. I propose henceforth to save you the trouble by naming each person who may enter, and hope that the services will then be allowed to proceed without interruption."

"Dearly beloved," but paused half way to interpolate "Mr. Stubbins, wife and daughter." Mr. Stubbins looked rather surprised, but the minister with perfect gravity resumed his exhortations. Presently he again paused.

"Mr. Curtis and William Diggle." The abashed congregation kept their eyes studiously bent on their books. The service continued in the most orderly manner, the parson interrupting himself every now and then to name some new comer. At last he said, still with the most perfect gravity: "Mrs. Symons in a new bonnet." In a moment he felt his mistake, but it was too late, for every feminine head in the congregation had turned round.

In Europe house cars or caravans are rapidly passing from experimental to practical use. One popular car contains a complete equipped kitchen, and sleeping berths for six persons, and has seats on top like the old London busses.

While taking up the floor of an empty house at Patrocinia, Brazil, a poor woman found imbedded in the earth beneath a diamond of the first water and perfect shape, weighing 220 carats. It is the second largest diamond ever found in South America.

This notice has been displayed in a London suburb: "Why pay rent when you can hire a horse, man and a dark night for 6d an hour? Night removals without disturbing your neighbors & specialty."

THIS NEWSPAPER AIMS TO RENDER

A PRETTY WOMAN ALWAYS HAS SUITORS

And a good bargain or a good opportunity, always find takers.

When something of real value is advertised—something unusual—you will not be the only one to see the ad., or to investigate the offer.

But, if you are as alert in seeking a bargain, as you were—or are—in affairs of the heart, you will win. In fact, you will win if you have a tenth part of as much determination and enthusiasm in business as in playing your game with Don Cupid.

GIVE US A TRIAL WE CAN PLEASE

REAL SERVICE TO YOU

IF, BY some persistency in giving advice, this newspaper can convince every merchant of the wisdom of telling you all of his store-news that is important—of using enough space in which to do it, and of telling as much of his store-news in every issue as you would be interested in knowing--and--

If, at the risk of over-iteration, this newspaper should convince you that this same store-news is of real, live, palpitating importance to you, as fully worthy of your attention as politics, or base ball, or Crowned Heads, or eloquements, murders, riots, fashions or functions of the rich--and--

If it should follow that the merchants should prosper in exact ratio to their energy in advertising and that you should thrive in proportion to your intelligence in spending your income--then this newspaper will feel that it has accomplished so real a public service that this city will be a better place in which to live and to do business

YOU COULDN'T BE FOUND ANY OTHER WAY

So the man concluded to advertise for you. He had hoped you would happen to come around to see him of your own accord—or, that somebody would tell you about what he has to tell you—or, that necessity would drive you to search for him.

But, you didn't come—you didn't "happen" to hear, or to see. His message for you wasn't delivered. His offer—the offer that is really more to your liking and to your interest than any you've had for months—is, at last (as it should have been at first) put into the form of an ad., and awaits you in these columns. You'll know it when you see it--
