Presently I heard his guttural cawing to get the camel again to rest, but the beast would not down and must be beaten, the boy meanwhile mouthing great curses. I wondered that a being so small should without peril to himself strike a creature like this with his fist, continuing all the time within reach of teeth and hoofs.

"I will tell the khawaja," replied Mustafa, "a most curious and interesting thing about this."

Ahmed had mastered the camel and now came to his place.

"The khawaja has observed," Mustafa continued, "that a child may beat and command a camel. Queer Furs.

"This is cat fur." said a furrier. We use it for linings. An excellent lining cat fur makes too. Dogs, calves, colts, coons, opossums, bats, rats-any animal that wears fur, in fact, is salable in the fur market. But hair is felted up with other stuff into an imitation skin. It is also used, I believe, in rope plaiting. The dog, the coon and the opossum yield a fur that, properly treated, makes a very handsome lining. Rat skins are employed in certain delicate repairs, and they also serve to form the thumbs of cheap gloves. A queer thing about the fur business is that the furs must be taken in the dead of winter. The trapper must work under the cruelest climatic conditions. Only thus is the fur at its best. The dresser, on the other hand, who could work best in cold weather, must do all his work in the heat of summer or otherwise he would not be able to keep up with the changing fashions."- Exchange.

We need take no account here of the agencies of organization and corruption, though both may be seen clearly enough. They show so plainly in the nomination and election of the successful candidate as to make it apparent that whole segments of the people are no longer appalled by anything, however immoral or wrong, that does not touch their pockets. Even those that preach the simple life in the magazines of the East are deaf to the drum taps of conscience. Are we not a world wower, and are these outlays not essential to our dignity?

Yet each mishap has its compensa tion. In the personality of the elected president the people may be said to be in possession of an anchor to windward. Judge Taft owes his election to his own character. Of this there can be no manner of doubt. From first to last he was grievously handicapped by the president. It was the belief that he is not as Roosevelt-that though his platform faced two ways, he could be relied upon to face but one way, and that way the reverse of the spectacular performances and agitations barren of results, to which the president has accustomed us-that weighed in the commercialized instinct of the middle classes of society as well as in the overpowering interests of massed wealth, the honest yielding themselves. to the dishonest, and making common cause against a change of parties in spite of all argument in its favor.

There is something yet better than being president of the United States, ind that is the real sense of duty done. Tilden will live in history, when Hayes is forgotten or execrated. History will say of Bryan that in three great popular movements, clouded sometimes by errors of judgment and obstructed always by corruption-as we now know by insurmountable corruption-he led sublimely; that he set before his countrymen the standards alike of God and truth; and that he went down beaten with clean hands homage of patriotic men.

In the national government the oil garchism of privilege finds itself stronger intrenched than ever before. Its fortress is unassailable. It can never be driven out short of its own dissolution, or some dire catacylsm, bringing ruin in its train. Yet, vanquished as the democratic party is, it has not been so one with itself in many a day and it owes renewed loyalty to the public service. This should be maintained equally in defeat and victory. There must be a systematic and enlightened opposition. How this shall arrange itself and who shal lead it, will appear in good season.

Old-time democrats will wait a keep their powder dry. If they sho. despair, if they should break apart, the country would be exposed to political anarchy through radicalism and excesses of every sort to practical irrespon sibility on the one hand, unregenerate debauchery backed by resistless force on the other hand. We may be a power for good though beaten and in oppoeach of the houses at Washington, will e. to be despised in case they hold tosition. Seven millions of votes are nevgether. Many States remain to us. The constitution of the United States has not been abolished yet, nor institutional freedom, nor wise and upright administration, and these are still worth fighting for.

> So, amid the unneighborly and unpatriotic vociferation of the republicans, the jubliation and intolerance, of the nondescripts flocking to the winning side-the blatant bullying of the leaders alike of predatory wealth and of plundering politics-let us sit steady in the best matained by our own rectitude and holding to the oars of what we conceive to be good government in the nation and in the State.

To the Ginners and Planters: Your reports, show there has been ginned to Nov. 1st this year 8,051,000 bales and that the crop will be 11,861,000 bales. not including linters or repacks. This is some lower than general expectations, but the loss seeems to be principally in Louisiana and Oklahoma, where the crop is the shortest on record. The weather has been almost perfect for over two months now and with plenty of labor and cotton all open earlier than known before in year there is no reason why the ginning should not be even larger. The farm era reem to have sold it very freely especially in Texas, where the crop is good in most of the countles, but only a few of them report as good as 1906 and there are some of the smaller pro ducing countles in the West and Scutte west. Ellis has about the best crop in the State and will only make 111, 0 compared to 152,000 in 1996. There is a large number of countles making much less than last year's short crop I' the present weather continues the crop will be all picked by December 1s except Oklahoma and Western Texas Even the Mississippi delta will be practically through Cotton is a cent a pound lower than at this time last year with the panic on in full blast, while now business has recovered to nearly the old basis be fore the panic. Not withstanding the heavie ment on record since Cat. 18th, the market has advanced $2.00 per balc. Nearly all the members of the New York and New Orleans cotton excharges are bullish and have large lines of contracts on the long side, the sales being nearly all hedges against the purchase of spot cotten from the farmers. As soon as the heavy move ment is over the mills will buy this cot ton from the cotton merchants and these hedges will be bought in and will cause the market to advance gradually ing. Another reason we have got to have higher prices is that cotton cannot be grown in the boll weevil districts for less, than 11 cents at a profit. The yield per acre is not half as much and the cost of cultivation is a great deal more. As this district now covers : territory that produces over 5,000,000. bales, the price will have to advance or the acreage in the weevil district will be so greatly reduced as to raise en?" less than the world needs and cause extreme high prices, as in 1903, which girl. A Senator's Foes.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.] The easiest and cheapest way to get rid of an honest man who is in the way of dishonest politicians and grafters is to buy him off.

An old wheel horse called on Sens tor Hardman in a careless way and talked about the lieutenant governor Ed Howard V. P. and Gen'l M'go ship and what would naturally follow it. Lieutenant governors had come to R. E. Huff, Wiley Blair, T. C. Thatch be presidents. The senator nodded his head in the affirmative, but did not rise to the balt. The old wheel horse hinted at the financial obligations the ring would be under if a certain new sens tor went "straight," and Hardman opened the door and held ft open until the other had passed out.

The ring employed a bureau to hunt up Hardman's record, and there was gnashing of teeth when the report came back that all was clear. There was not even the robbery of a benroost in his boyhood days on which to found a charge against him. He had once been engaged to be married, and it was whispered that the girl had learned something against his character and proken the engagement. A detective was sent west to hunt up the female and offer her a thousand dollars to expose the senator, but the officer was too late. She had married a butcher two weeks before he found her, and the husband threw the sleuth out.

A female lobbyist tried to throw her tharms about the senator, and a pitfall was nicely arranged, but he glided over it and escaped. It was at length real field that the battle must be fought out knee to knee, and the ring girded up its loins for the combat. Hardman was huating up facts and statistics for a telling speech against rings and grafters. He worked quietly, but faithfully. and he finally gathered such a mass o' evidence in favor of the stand that he had taken from the first that his ene mies became alarmed and desperate.

When the senator's notes were at last completed he put them in the form of a speech, and the copy was given to a female typist to be transposed in! print. There was no fear of trickery in that. It did not seem to Hardman that a young woman who was seeking to support a widowed mother could prove recreant to her trust. Nevertheless in the last two hours the manuscript was left with her she sold him out for money and turned everything over to the enemy. The ring shouted in glee. He was balked. The statistics that had been dug up out of the past would nev er see daylight. The senator's facts and figures and denunciations had van ished into thin air. The speech that was to be the effort of his life would remain undelivered. He had promise: much, but he would be unable to de lver the goods and his downfall would Hardman could, not go over the ground again. The ring had made that impossible. Without his statistics his speech would not amount to more than general denunciation. No trust or corporation cared for that. They had been their dividends were growing all the time. A few hundred dollars had bought the honesty of a trusted girl and drawn the sting of an honest sena tor, and the ring spoke of it as an in terposition of Providence.

Three days more and had all gone well the senator would have been ready to open his batteries. He sat in his room of an evening with his head on his hand and knew that he was a beaten and vanguished man. He had promised much, and he could do nothwould want him no longer. As he sat thus in his bitterness the door opened. and a girl stood before him. He had to look at her twice before he recog nized her as the typist who had sold was no scowl on his face as he regarded her and waited for her to speak. "They lied to me," she finally said.

"Yes? "Mother was ill, and we were in other trouble, and I-I didn't think a speech amounted to so very muchthat is, I thought you could easily make up another."

"Yes? Two or three hundred dollars seemed a great sum to you. If men sell their honesty, why shouldn't wom-

"I am sorry for that. I believe her death leaves you alone in the world?" Y-yes, sir. I'd have brought it sooner only there was the funeral, and I thought it was only just a speech. Was it to be a great speech?" "Well, I hoped so."

"But mother said it was and that we shouldn't use a penny of the money and that I'd done very wrong. She said I must get it back and give up the money, and here is the copy."

"The speech!" exclaimed the senator as he reached her side. "You don't tell me that you have got the speech back!"

"This is it, sir." 'And where-where"-

"In the next room down the hall." "In Senator Blank's room! Bless you, but he has been loudest in denouncing those who bribed you and loudest in his sympathies over my loss! You can't possibly mean him?"

Consumption in United States.

The statistics for the consumption of cotton are for all establishments returned as using raw cotton and include cotton mills, woolen mills, knitting factories, and those establishments which ise raw cotton in the manufacture of mattresses, batting, felts, etc. The quantity consumed during the year amounted to 4,539,090 bales, which indicates a falling off from the quantity consumed for the eyear ending August 31, 1997, of 445,846 bales. 'The financial disturbance which prevailed during the latter portion of the calendar year 1907 ment of production; this is evidenced by the decrease in the consumption of the raw material compared with the activity and highly remunerative oper-Of the total cotton supply of the ations of the previous season. Of the total quantity of foreign coton consumed in the United States 92, 815 bales were Egyptian, 12,061 Peruvian and 6.405 Indian. The quantity of sea island cotton included in the consumption statistics amounts to 44,-147 bales, 3,155 of which were consumed in the cotton growing States and Exports.

The quantity of domestic cotton exported from the United States in 1908 amounted to 7.573,349 running bales, which is a decrease from the quantity exported in 1907 of 929,916 bales. The quantity of sea island cotton included in the exports for 1908 amounted to 12,-793,166 pounds or 25,586 bales of 500 pounds each. About 70 per cent of this export was taken by the United Kingdom and about 28 per cent by France.

The annual exports of manufactures of cotton are subject to wide fluctuations, those for 1908 amounting to $25,-177,758 in value, or less than one-half of the value of those of 1906, which amounted to $52,944,033 in value. This reduction is due entirely to the falling off of the exports to China, the value of which dropped from $29,814,-075 in 1906 to $3,413,248 in 1908, and this fact strikingly illustrates the necessity for a wider range of markets for American manufactures. ... World's Status of the Industry.

The second part of the bulletin gives a summary of the present status of cotton maufacturing throughout the world. The number of cotton spindles in 1908 is given as 130,054,408 spindles, compared with 105.661.232 spindles in 1900; the consumption of cotton in 1908 as 18,855,519 bales, compared with 15,185,165 bales in 1900. The number of spindles has increased 23 per cent in the eight years and the consumption of cotton 24 per cent.

Short Times Worked.

The financial depression in the fall of 1907 had a far-reaching influence upon the cotton manufacturing business, beginning with the manufacturer. who first felt the tendency to curtain expenditures beyond absolute accessity and slowly but surely working its way down to the spinner, thence to those interested in the sale and distribution of the raw material. The market for cotton goods during the last six menths of the season was in a condition of over supply, in spile of the considerable amount of short time that had been worked, and producers were consequently at a disadvantage in selfing the cutput of their mills. While these conditions prevailed during the latter part of the season in practically all of the manufacturing countries, they were especially marked in the United States, the United Kingdom and many, where there was a considerable curtailment of production. Fcllowing upon the financial depression, a crisis of labor trouble occurred in Manchester in December last. The average filed in the county court of Wichita have a bath standing up as lying time during the year that the mills of county his Final Account of the condi-66 days. All of the mills of the Man-plication to be discharged as guardian terred a jar, built a furnace beneath the United States were idle is stated at chester district, England, worked on short time during the last few months of the season, but few shut down, the actual time operated averageing about 45 hours a week, compared with the normal running time of 551/2 hours. Conditions now indicate that the worst is passed and that the industry during the ensuing year will have to contend with fewer hardships.

Consumption Exceeds Production.

The world's production of cotton for mil lconsumption in 1907 amounted to said court at my office in Wichita Falls, harmless practical joke. 16.512.185 bales, whereas the consumption during the year ending August 31, 1908, was 18,855,519 bales, a fact which indicates that the year's growth was inadequate to the requirements by about 2,340,000 bales. This shortage was made good by drawing from accumulated stocks. The fluctuations in the world's supply of cotton is measured practically by the variations in the annual production in the United States, since this country furnishes about twothirds of the total supply, It is a proper inference, and indeed a significant fact, that, notwithstanding the large amount of "short time" work in the cotton manufacturing industry during the year, pose. Now, why is it that the most the world's consumption of American common remark of the women who cotton amounted to approximately 12, 500,000 bales, whereas the production in this country in 1907 was only about 11,000,000 bales of 500 pounds each, net weight. If the consumption of cotton during the year ending August 31. 1909, should be equal to that of 1908, rights she shouldn't have had half the United States must contribute at many. Of course they vary the feleast 12,500,000 bales to prevent fur- mark, 'What a lucky girl." says one ther decrease in stocks. can convince every merchant of the wisdom of telling you all of of his store-news that is important of using enough space in which to do it, and of telling as much of his store-news in every issue as you would be interested in knowing--and--

If, at the risk of over-iteration, this newspaper should convince you that this same store-news is of real, live, palpitating importance to you, as fully worthy of your attention as politics, or base ball, or Crowned Heads, or elopements, murders, riots, fashions or functions of the rich--and--

If it should follow that the men chants should prosper in exact ratio to their energy in advertising and that you should thrive in proportion to your intelligence in spending your income--then this newspaper will feel that it has accomplished so real a public service that this city will be a better place in which to live and to do business

YOU COULD'NT BE ANY OTHER WAY

So the man concluded to advertise for you. He had hoped you would happen to come around to see him of your own accord or, that somebody would tell you about what he has to tell you -or, that necessity would drive you to search for him.

But, you didn't come-you didn't "happen" to hear, or to see. His message for you wasn't delivered. His offer-the offer that is really more to your liking and to your interest than any you've had for months-is, at last (as it should have been at first) put into the form of an ad., and awaits you in these columns. You'll know it when you see it-
