TO BE A WHIZZER.

The President Will Strike Another Mighty Blow With His Pen.
Frank H. Bushick in Houston Post.—Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—President Roosevelt is determined to strike another mighty blow for reform with his fountain pen. He is now at work on his last message to congress—that is, the last regular annual message—and it has leaked out from the White House that it is going to be a whizzer. Now that the election is over and there is nothing practical to be risked by such ebullitions, it is the president's purpose to send in a message which—on paper, at least—will place a hair around his head and write him in history as the great reformer of the age.

He has been at work on it for some time, but not a word was allowed to leak out while the republican campaign was being financed, or until Mr. Taft's election was made safe by working both sides of the street. From all accounts it will be almost as Bryanese an effort as the Nebraska would have written had he made the leap. In verbal pyrotechnics it will again urge upon congress those Bryanisms which Mr. Roosevelt once made the country believe he stood for, even to the extent of fooling Mr. Bryan himself.

He will advocate an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law, giving the government some supervision of the great industrial corporations, such as the interstate commerce commission in theory maintains over the railroads. The details of his plan have not been made public, but it is in the nature of an extension of the Federal power over corporations engaged in interstate trade, something after the Bryan plan.

The president also realizes that the Hepburn rate law, which he permitted to be emasculated rather than accept democratic aid to make it effective, is of no consequence in its present form. He now favors giving the commission the power to prevent a rate, or a schedule of rates, taking effect until it shall have a chance to examine and determine its reasonableness. This is a partial coming around to the idea of Senator Bailey and Senator Tillman at the time. It will be recalled they tried to confer on the commission full initiative power over rates, subject only to review by the supreme court. Had the Bailey amendment passed, the late arbitrary raise of interstate rates to Texas points would have been impossible.

On Swollen Fortunes.

The president has heretofore harped much between elections on the regulation of "swollen fortunes," and it is reasonably sure that he will renew his recommendations for an income and an inheritance tax. It is said he will take an advanced step in favor of a child labor bill of national extent. How this can be done under the constitution will tax even his latitudinous powers of construction, but such an obstacle will cut little figure. Such a law already prevails in the District of Columbia, where the federal government exercises police power, but Senator Beveridge is among the few lawyers in congress who believes that such regulation applied to the country at large is within the powers of the national government.

Other recommendations expected in the message include a government liability act for the benefit of employees, further provision for forest reserves, internal waterways improvement, four new battleships yearly instead of two, and as Pickwickian as it may seem, a law providing for publicity of campaign contributions in presidential elections.

In view of what happened in 1904 and what was repeated in the late campaign, this announcement may be derided. For all that look for a solemn and highly virtuous disquisition on this line in the December message.

Whether it will ignore the tainted millions poured into the republican coffers from corporation sources during the late campaign, or deplore them with a wink of satisfaction, has not been indicated.

The fact that this session will be a short one, at which little is usually done except pass the appropriation bills, will not deter the president from laying out all this ground. It is further proof that he does not expect his recommendations to be made into law. They will merely constitute another chapter of academic discussion and voluminous message writing for which this administration has become famous.

The Supreme Achievement In Clothes For Boys

THE MOST certainly reached in our beautiful assortments for this season. The varieties shown are typical of the Cleverest and most original ideas ever conceived in clothing for little fellows.

The fabrics are all entirely new this season—exclusive effects and modish colorings—and, in fact, the entire line, taking it from every viewpoint, is fully worthy of the Ivan Frank reputation.

Blunders of the Types.

Ever since the introduction of typesetting errors, weird or comical, have emanated from printers' offices. The mistakes are not always to be shouldered on to the compositor, for bad handwriting must be taken into account. Here are a few instances of actual blunders collected by a proofreader in the course of his daily work:

"His blushing bride" was transformed into "his blustering bride."

A major was stated to have "served with destruction in the army." The writer thought he used the word "distinction."

"The Galley I Love" was the description of a picture entitled "The Galley Slave."

Speaking of theatrical folk, a critic wrote that "nearly all have husbands or wives." The paragraph printed read "hundreds of wives."

"They sailed for three days around the cape and finally slaughtered a small Italian" should have been "sighted a small island."

One more in conclusion. "He takes delight in talking on his family shame" was a shameful thing to say when "favorite theme" was meant.

A Three Legged Bison.

In 1867 Small Eyes, a Blackfoot who had come down from the north and joined the Arapahoes and lived with them, told Black Kettle, a Cheyenne in George Bent's lodge, about having killed, between the Cimarron and Beaver creek, a tributary of the north fork of the Canadian, a buffalo bull which had only one hind leg. According to Small Eyes' story, it did not appear that the bull had lost one of its hind legs, but rather that it never had had more than one. The hind leg was very large, seemed to be in the middle of the body instead of at one side, and there was no sign of any missing leg. It looked as if the two hind legs which the buffalo ordinarily has had in some way fused together.

The war party with which Small Eyes was traveling was passing along near a hollow when the bull came up out of it, and some of the men ran ahead, got around it and shot it with a gun. It was not able to run fast, but rather hobbled along.—Forest and Stream.

Hickey Murder Case Vened Here.

The papers in the murder case of Walter Hickey, vended to this county from Throckmorton were received this morning.

Hickey is charged with the killing of Tom Dixon in Haskell county on the morning of February 11, 1907. He has twice been found guilty and sentenced to long terms in prison, but each time the higher courts have reversed the case and remanded it for retrial.

Mme. Michaels, an architect, is now conducting what will be when finished the largest building in Marselles, Great Britain has at least one famous woman architect, Miss Elizabeth Re-Clelland.

Out of the 105 counties which the State of Kansas has within its domains at least fifty have no paupers. One-half the county poor farms are empty save for the keeper, who draws his salary and waits for patronage.

Great attention is being given in Bohemia to the building of mountain dams, not only to provide water power, but to lessen the damages from floods.

The death of Tse Hi An, the Dowager Empress and autocratic head of the Chinese government, which she had directed without interference since 1861, has been officially announced, her death occurring yesterday at 2 p. m. Her death followed closely that of the Emperor, Kuang Hsu, who had died the evening before. An edict issued at 6 p. m. yesterday places on the Chinese throne Fu Yi, the 2-year-old son of Prince Chun, the regent of the empire.

In an interview given out to the Associated Press at Washington yesterday, President-elect Taft says that it is his intention to call the sixty-first congress immediately after his inauguration on March 4th, for the purpose of giving the republican party a chance to carry out its pledge to the people for a revision of the tariff. He did not say whether the revision would be made up or down, but judging by past revisions of the tariff made by republican administrations, the coming revision is likely to have an upward tendency.

The prospects for democrats in Indiana to fall out among themselves, and elect a republican to the United States senate are materializing very rapidly. With the legislature safely democratic for the first time since the days of Thomas A. Hendricks, it does look as if Indiana democrats could unite on some one of their many able leaders and send him to the United States senate. At the present time there are at least four aspirants, and while John W. Kern apparently has the strongest following, it will perhaps be necessary for him to drop out and let some one of his three opponents be elected. This will be better than doing like Kentucky democrats did a year ago, when Breckham had the nomination, but rather than vote for him three or four members of the legislature elected as democrats cast their votes for the republican candidate and elected him.

Electra Happenings.

Electra News.
Chas. Wallace returned Tuesday from Wichita Falls, where he had been at the bedside of his mother, who is in a hospital there, and who has just undergone a serious operation for some internal affection. At this writing we are pleased to state that Mrs. Wallace's condition is very flattering.

The County Line Sunday school realized $92.09 out of the box supper given at that place last Saturday night. The money obtained will more than pay the debt on the organ, but will be used for putting in new seats, lights and hitch racks.

J. J. Greenhaw, in a letter to a friend here stated that he was busy loading traps and household goods preparatory to locating at Electra. His point of departure is Willis Point, Van Zandt county, Texas. Mr. Greenhaw will begin the erection of a residence immediately upon his arrival.

The residence occupied by I. Flemmings and John Chambliss, three miles west of town, on the Harrold road, burned to the ground Monday of this week. There was very little of the household goods saved, as the families were in the field at the time picking cotton. A young man picking cotton on the place lost all his clothes and seventeen dollars in money in the fire. Parties were in town Tuesday soliciting aid for the unfortunate ones, and reported to the News that the business men and citizens of Electra donated liberally.

Negro Arrested for Robbery.

Steve Cooper, a Fort Worth negro, was arrested on a train here Saturday night en route to Stamford. When the train reached this city a negro passenger reported that his purse had been stolen. The officers were notified and a search of all the passengers in the negro coach was made, but the purse was not recovered.

Just before the train pulled out a negro woman informed Policeman Pickett that she saw Cooper throw the purse from the car window. Mr. Pickett made a search of the locality designated, which resulted in his finding the purse, which contained $50 in paper. As soon as the purse was found the officers overhauled the train at the "Y" and arrested Cooper.

FORT WORTH WANTS YOUNG COUNTY COAL

Fort Worth Record.

With the completion of the Graham and Stamford extension of the Rock Island, an immense partially developed coal country will be thrown open to Fort Worth and Western Texas. A local group of capitalists, in conjunction with the Rock Island railroad, have opened up a big coal and oil field at Newcastle, Young county, 100 miles from Fort Worth.

The thriving little town has come into Young county as a permanent fixture. It is situated thirteen miles from Graham, the county seat of Young county, fifty-five miles from Wichita Falls and 100 miles from this city. It is the center of the latest as well as the largest coal territory in Texas. Buildings are being rushed to completion, banks, stores and hotels are already erected and in operation, and coal and oil experts from all over the country are now on the scene.

The area of the productive mining territory will approximate 100,000 acres, and of this area over 20,000 are under lease by the Fort Worth group of business men. Two shafts have been sunk by a company composed of residents of Newcastle, Wichita Falls and Jalveston. In Shaft No. 1 a fair quality of semi-bituminous coal in generous quantities has been struck, while shaft No. 2 has yielded a superior grade of bituminous coal in great veins. Work is being rushed on the second shaft, and it is claimed that one railroad has contracted for 600 tons daily at a fair price, to be delivered at the mine.

The latest operators in the new territory are principally Fort Worth men, he work of pushing and developing the rich mining property being in the hands of J. L. Hudson, formerly of Houston and Beaumont, and one of the largest operators in the Spindletop district when that field was in its prime.

The Fort Worth people claim to have a six-foot vein of high grade bituminous coal on their holdings. This vein is a two-foot thicker vein than anything yet found in that section. Machinery has been rushed to the work and one railroad has already contracted for the entire output.

The transportation facilities are at the present time in the hands of the Wichita Falls and Northwestern railroad, but with the building of the Rock Island from Graham to Stamford and the Graham and New Mexico, this vast territory will be thrown open to the fuel users of Texas, and the day is not far distant when the product of the newly discovered field will be used by a great many of the commercial, manufacturing and industrial interests throughout this section of the State.

There are several smaller fields of coal in Young county, none, however, having the quantity and quality of the Newcastle vein. There are many indications of oil in the territory and parcels are on the ground leasing ground or that purpose. One well struck a fine quality of petroleum at a depth of 1,500 feet.

Not long ago in this town a kind friend of the family gave one of the kids a dollar. Of course it was too much to let the kid get out and spend for candy and gum, so it was religiously put up on the sideboard or some other safe place to be kept just for what the deponent saith not. In about a week the juvenile owner of the big round coin remarked at the breakfast table, "Papa, mamma spent my dollar yesterday." The head of the house took the hint and fished up another dollar, which, like its predecessor, was placed in a good safe place to keep.

During the next month by a carefully tabulated record which he kept on his cuff he repaid this elusive dollar just thirteen times. So at the end of the month you will not be surprised to learn that our friend sent the donor of the original dollar this curt note:

Dear Sir:—Inclosed you will find a check for $13.00 the dollar you gave our youngster. I return it simply to avoid bankruptcy. Already it has cost me somewhere between fifteen and twenty.

—Lanah (Mo.) Democrat.

Dollar Fish.

"Have you any dollar fish here?" a woman asked of one of the attendants at the aquarium.

While the question may seem curious, it was really very simple, for the dollar fish is only a young moonfish.

The moonfish is a curious but beautiful creature, almost round in shape and extremely thin and having the loveliest of pearly sides. It swims on edge, so that it always presents its sides of pearl to view. It takes its name from its shape and because, further, in color it suggests the silvery moon.

Young moonfish of the size of a standard silver dollar and they are scarcely any thicker—are called dollar fishes because of their resemblance to that coin in size and shape and color, and the woman making the inquiry about dollar fishes was duly informed that there was none in the tanks at the present time, but that they did have them occasionally.—New York Sun.

Good Mornings.
Once a time I heard a story about a poet—a visionary, aesthetic dreamer, who was quite cast down. One morning a friend met him and asked after his health, and this is what he said:
"Why do people persist in saying 'Good morning' when the spirit of good morning is not there? Why not give a blow? Then one could offer some resistance to this morning salutation from people who care not whether the morning is good to you or not; who only want to thrust themselves upon you. Better, far better, a silent entrance than a greeting from which the life has fled."
"What does 'Good morning' mean unless it carries sympathy? So many 'good mornings' and not one little bit of kindness—how hard and metallic most of them are!"
"The first one I got was from a gruff man with a hard voice. He has set all my nerves to jangling; why could he not leave me alone? Then, in a moment, a girl came and bent over my shoulder. Her voice was sweet and womanly. Her 'Good morning' soothed me."

"The memory of that 'Good morning' I received will never leave me. I looked into eyes upon which the dew of the morning had fallen—out of which the light of heaven streamed. It made the whole day different. I believe I could have smiled back at the gruff man if I had been so greeted today."
"But, my good poet," said his friend, in a hurt tone, "is this meant for me? Have I set your nerves to jangling?"
"God be thanked, no! You are the first man I've met whom I haven't felt like murdering. Here, give me your hand. I feel that you are my friend, and that the day is sweeter and brighter for your kindly greeting."—Ex.

American Chivalry.
The old stories of the Holy Grail bore the essence of chivalry because they recognized that through the soul of a woman a man can sometimes behold his God, or, at least, a far-off fringe of splendor from worlds unmap-ped, says a writer in Appleton's. And because this is the true spirit of chivalry, whose most picturesque man-ifestation was in the middle ages, no innovations of modern times, no re-versal of the occupations of men and women, no dusty prose of a mechani-cal age can destroy it. Thanks to high heaven, who created people to love and admire and be glad in each other, chivalry still flourishes on the earth, though the forms in which it is embodied differ from those earlier ones, as the dress of today differs from the old knightly armor. Ameri-can men are a high pitched, hard-driv-en creation, and when they are racing for a ferryboat, to catch which may mean a gain of hundreds, they cannot stop to kiss the hand of a lady who waves her pink parasol at them. But doubtless if they were pinned down to it, they would confess that their leis-ure moments were the more blessed because of that same lady or another equally charming.
It is undeniably true that the rush and scamper of a highly nervous age are not conducive to those gentle man-ners which enbroder life all over and hide its gauntness, but manners are of the heart and soul, and the composite soul of American men manages to re-main, despite the reign of materialism, kind, generous, helpful to the weak and susceptible of that enchantment which is deepest near the hearth fire, and haunts the presence of the woman whom it loves.—Exchange.

The Chinese Hoe.
The Chinese farmer stands second to none in all the world. This is all the more remarkable since he has really so few implements with which to work the marvels he produces. His only im-plements are the hoe, the plow and the barrow. Beyond these the Chinese farmer never dreams of desiring any other. The first of these tools seems never to be out of his hands, for it is the one upon which he relies the most and is his most effective implement. It really takes the place of the spade in England, though the latter is never put to such extensive and general uses as the hoe. The Chinaman can do any-thing with it but make it speak. A farmer well on in years can easily be recognized amidst a number of work-ingmen by the curve his hands have taken from holding the hoe in the many years of toil in his fields. With it, if he is a poor man and has no oxen to plow the ground, he turns up the soil where he is going to plant his crops, and with it he deftly and with a turn of his wrist levels out the sur-face so that it is made ready for the seed. With a broad bladed hoe he dips to the bottom of a stream or of a pond, draws up the soft mud that has gath-ered there and, with a dexterous swing, flings the dripping hoeful on to his field nearby to increase its richness by this new deposit.—London King.

Sorghum is a cane-like grass, with the stature and habit of broomcorn, or of the table varieties of Indian corn, but more slender than the latter, with-out ears, and of a glaucous hue. Sorghum is cultivated throughout Africa chiefly for the sweet juices of the cane. In the United States it has been em-ployed for many years to make syrup, for which purpose it is more or less grown in every State. It has also been the subject of much experiments in sugar making.

Alzen is the name given to a new metal, which is composed of two parts of aluminum and one part of zinc. It is said to equal cast iron in strength, but is much more elastic. Alzen is superior because it does not rust and takes a high polish.

REAL SERVICE TO YOU

IF, BY some persistency in giv-ing advice, this newspaper can convince every merchant of the wisdom of telling you all of of his store-news that is important —of using enough space in which to do it, and of telling as much of his store-news in every issue as you would be interested in know-ing--and--
If, at the risk of over-iteration, this newspaper should convince you that this same store-news is of real, live, palpitating import-ance to you, as fully worthy of your attention as politics, or base ball, or Crowned Heads, or elope-ments, murders, riots, fashions or functions of the rich--and--
If it should follow that the mer-chants should prosper in exact ratio to their energy in advertising and that you should thrive in pro-portion to your intelligence in spending your income--then this newspaper will feel that it has ac-complished so real a public service that this city will be a better place in which to live and to do business

YOU COULDN'T BE FOUND ANY OTHER WAY

So the man concluded to advertise for you. He had hoped you would hap-pen to come around to see him of your own accord—or, that somebody would tell you about what he has to tell you—or, that necessity would drive you to search for him.
But, you didn't come—you didn't "happen" to hear, or to see. His mes-sage for you wasn't delivered. His offer—the offer that is really more to your liking and to your interest than any you've had for months—is, at last (as it should have been at first) put into the form of an ad., and awaits you in these columns. You'll know it when you see it—

SUES REFINERS FOR $3,000,000

By Associated Press.
New York, Nov. 16.—The United States government has brought six suits against the American Sugar Refining company to recover forfeitures and customs duties to the amount of three and a half million dollars on sugar delivered at the Havemeyer and Elder refineries. The government alleges fraud in the weighing of shipments.

NORTHWEST TEX. CONFERENCE

To Meet Again at Waco—Sterling P. Strong Urges Poll Tax Payment.
Special to the Times.
Waco, Tex., Nov. 16.—The Northwest Texas Methodist Conference, South, adjourned today after selecting Waco as the place for holding the next annual conference, Fort Worth being the closest rival.

Sterling P. Strong, at the head of the State-wide prohibition movement, addressed the conference and urged all prohibitionists to pay their poll taxes in order that they may participate in the coming State-wide prohibition contest.

The Pole Star.

Ursa Major and Ursa Minor are known also as the Greater and Lesser Wain, and is curious to note that the larger constellation was given the figure of the bear by the Arabs and by the Iroquois red men. The assumed forms are ordinarily fanciful, and the identity of the names in this instance affords food for speculation. Homer uses both bear and wain (wagon) in his references to these stars. It is evident that the name bear was a translation from some original Aryan language, as the constellation is called in Sanskrit, Ursa, a word that in different languages means both a bear and a star. Of course the polar star in the tail of Ursa Minor is the constellation's point of glory. In this case we may say fairly that the tail wags the dog, because this group of stars was once called the dog's tail, or cynosure. From that have our word cynosure, that toward which all eyes turn, as to the dog's tail for sight of the pole star.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Crushed to Death.

Wm. P. Cornforth Meets With Fatal Accident in New Mexico.
The body of William P. Cornforth, formerly a citizen of Wichita county, was brought to Iowa Park this morning from St. Verano, Roosevelt county, New Mexico, where the deceased met his death on the 14th inst. while hunting in America—by white men—that should publish the unspeakable slander above referred to. There are a number of homes in Blakely which Collier's enters, but we hope that the subscribers will write the publishers and have it discontinued to their address, telling them in plain unvarnished English the reason for closing their subscriptions.—Early County News.

Price Never Changed.

The Rev. Simon Turple was an eloquent speaker, but he seemed to have a list of sermons which, when he once began, he went right through to the end and then started at the first sermon again, and so on.

A young man in the congregation was about to leave for South Africa, but the Sunday before he departed he attended the church service.

In the course of his lecture the minister used an illustration in which were the words, "A man can easily purchase two sparrows for threepence."

The young man, after being absent for about three years, returned and again on the first opportunity attended divine service. Strange to say, he heard the same narrative by the same minister, the phrase striking him most being about the "two sparrows for threepence."

At the close of the service the minister, in his courtesy, came and shook hands with the youth and, welcoming him back to his home, asked him if he noticed any changes about the place.

The young man, evidently quite unconcerned, replied, "Aye, man, there's two or three changes, but there's yin thing I can see—the price o' sparrows is aye at the same auld figger."—Glasgow News.
