FOUR BOXES.

An Effective Quarter of Great Governing Powers.

"The world is governed by three boxes," said an American wit of a century ago, "the cartridge box, the ballot box and the handbox."

Between the first two of these great governing powers no one questioned the natural alliance, but that the sex whose box was the handbox should also claim a right to use the ballot box was in his day undreamed of. Half a century later, during the civil war, Horace Greeley, the famous editor, held the old opinion.

"Madam," he said bluntly at a public meeting to the pioneer suffragist, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, "the bullet and the ballot go together. If you want to vote, are you ready to fight?" "Certainly, sir," replied the quick-witted lady, to the delight of the audience. "I am ready to fight just as you have fought—with my pen."

Not all the early women suffragists would so readily have countenanced warfare, even in jest, for a notable number of them were Quakers or of Quaker ancestry, to whom force was abhorrent. In the Society of Friends the rights of men and women have been always absolutely equal, so that, as Lucretia Mott declared, it seemed but natural to wish to counsel and act with men everywhere on even terms, as she had always done in Nantucket.

One Quaker philanthropist, Abby Hopper Gibbons, who had never been identified with the "woman's rights" women, yet acknowledged with demure humor that, although she talked little about her rights, she had "been in the habit of always taking them" when she could.

Once, however, she failed to take a very important one when she was summoned to do so. She had a singularly bold and firm handwriting, easily mistaken for a man's, and often signed business communications simply A. H. Gibbons, so that she one day found herself, as a citizen and a taxpayer, imperatively required, in the name of the law, to furnish reasons why she should not serve as a juror.

"I know of none," she wrote serenely at the foot of this formidable document and sent it back. But the official who read this apparently impertinent response must have investigated the record of his correspondent and found a reason, for A. H. Gibbons, householder of New York, was excused from service in that fourth box, so important in civilized communities—the jury box.—Youth's Companion.

QUENTIN METYS.

How Love Changed a Great Blacksmith into a Great Painter.

Love made Quentin Metys a painter. This great Fleming, whom both Antwerp and Louvain claim to have given birth, though the palm now rests with Louvain, was the son of an able blacksmith. Trained in his father's craft, the younger Quentin soon distinguished himself by his work in this base metal and among other matters turned out the wonderfully delicate ironwork that surmounts the well outside the Cathedral of Antwerp. Already an acknowledged master of his guild, it came about, writes Helen Zimmern in the Metropolitan Magazine, that the young artisan fell in love with the daughter of a rich Antwerp burgher. When asked to consent to a marriage, however, the father would not hear of it, saying he could not let his daughter wed a blacksmith. Quentin next inquired if he would feel the same objection to a painter? The good burgher, who anticipated no change of craft on the questioner's part, replied that there, indeed, was a more refined profession. What was his surprise and perhaps secret dismay when some months later Quentin Metys reappeared and asked for the fulfillment of the old burgher's promise. He had, indeed, become a painter and one already held in high esteem. To commemorate his love and his serving on her account Metys limned an "auto-portrait" that now hangs in the Uffizi, at Florence. Those acquainted with the secret know that if they touch a little spring in this frame the panel opens like a door, and behind the shelter of Metys' own portrait is concealed that of his love and wife, a sweet Dutch face for whom doubtless he deemed it well worth his while to have played the part of the patriarch Jacob.

Ben Franklin's Keeness.

Two incidents recall the keeness and the thoroughness—the great twin abilities, to see and to utilize—of Ben Franklin. One day he chanced to observe a lady in the possession of an imported whisk broom. With his usual interest and careful consideration he examined it as a novelty. He discovered on the brush of the broom a seed, which he carefully removed. Presently he planted it, and the growth from this seed was the first crop of broom corn in this country. Again one day when Dr. Franklin was walking by Dock creek he saw stuck in the mud a wickerwork basket, which had sprouted. Carefully he fished out the basket and carefully took it apart. He gave cuttings to his friend, Mr. Charles Norris, who planted the twigs in his garden, where they grew to great size. They turned out to be yellow willows and, as Franklin had foreseen, proved of great commercial value.

Janet McKenzie Hill, a famous cook and editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine, has compiled a book of salad recipes containing directions for making more than 50 different kinds of salads.

It will surprise most any housekeeper to see how tasty and yet inexpensive salads can be made, using "left-overs" for most of them.

One of the main features to a salad is the dressing. A salad can't be good without a good dressing.

DAIRY INDUSTRY IN THE SOUTH

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—That there is no branch of agriculture that is more needed in the South, than dairying, is the emphatic declaration of experts of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture who, for the past two years, have been conducting systematic field work in the Southern states for the development of the dairy industry in that section. Some interesting facts are gleaned regarding this important industry in a statement prepared by B. H. Rawl, Duncan Stuart and George M. Whitaker, entitled "The Dairy Industry in the South," which was made public today. The report is divided into three parts entitled "Southern Markets for Dairy Products," by Duncan Stuart; "The Milk Supply of Southern Cities," by Mr. Whitaker, and "Why Dairying is Undeveloped in the South" by Mr. Rawl.

The investigations in regard to the dairying industry in the South has been carried on by these scientists in co-operation with state experiment stations, agricultural colleges, and departments of agriculture, and has steadily increased until at present a representative of the Dairy Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry is working in each of nine Southern States. The work has consisted largely of personal effort among the dairy farmers with a view of teaching them better methods, and has produced good results.

"In the prosecution of this work," adds Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in a letter of transmittal, "it was realized that a decided improvement in the quality of the milk supply of the cities throughout the South was needed. In sanitary methods of producing and handling milk was a great menace to public health. In 1907 an inspector was assigned to investigate the situation more fully and give assistance in applying methods that would bring about improvement." The secretary adds that only a small part of the dairy products consumed in the South are produced in that section.

Great emphasis is laid in the summary of conclusions on the fact that dairying in the South is not only a profitable industry in itself, but that it may be made the means of increasing the productiveness of the soil and promoting a better type of agriculture. Briefly reviewing some of the improvements which the dairy situation demands in the Southern States, the experts point out that:

"It is found that Southern dairymen as a rule are not using the most economic methods in the following particulars: The production of the average cow is only about what it should be. Too many of the dairies are in the cities, when they should be on the farms; hence too high-priced feed and bad methods of feeding. Milk and butter of poor quality are produced, which do not bring the highest prices.

"It is strikingly true that in most cases where an inferior dairy herd has been in existence for some years, it will be found that expensive methods are being practiced and an inferior grade of output is being produced.

"Southern dairying needs improvement all along the line. The cost of production is unreasonably high, the sanitary conditions are often bad, and the price of first class products is in some cases too low."

In conclusion the report points out that the three main points that every Southern dairyman should bear in mind, and which cannot be too strongly emphasized, are: Better cows. More home grown feed. A better product.

A noteworthy fact developed by the investigation is that the per capita of milk consumption in the South is below the average of the country and that use of cream, of which large amounts are consumed in the North, is almost unknown in the South. The per capita daily consumption of milk in the United States is estimated at about two-thirds of a pint, while in most southern cities the daily consumption is less than half a pint, and as low as one-third of a pint is named in some places.

Several reasons for this low per capita consumption of milk and cream are given as follows: Indifference as to the food value of milk, an inherited habit of using milk in small quantities, an insufficient supply, suspicion of the purity of the product, and the large negro population. It is declared that when the milk supply of Southern cities is improved by means of better sanitary inspection, and when the public realizes that an ample supply of clean, safe milk can be obtained, increasing amounts will be consumed.

"Here is another opportunity for improving the condition of the Southern dairymen," the report states. "As the public is educated to realize the difference in the way good milk is produced as compared with the inferior article, there will be a willingness not only to consume more of that which is produced in the proper manner, but also to pay a higher price for it." It is pointed out that in Memphis and Nashville, Tennessee, Asheville, N. C., and other places some dairies get one to four cents a quart more than others, merely because the public has confidence that the product is pure and clean.

A striking example of the unwisdom of not producing its own dairy products such as creamery butter, renovated butter, cheese, condensed milk, and oleomargarine and as a consequence having to import these food staples and the estimated financial gain if produced at home is shown. It is shown that the estimated profits that could be saved to the South would aggregate $14,652,727 in the fifty cities which now import these products to the value of $22,957,582. If 184,559 cows were kept to supply the deficiency, this would amount to a profit of 293,054 for each of the fifty cities. It is further shown that 12,394 dairy farms, or an average of 246 farms per city, with fifteen cows with the proper milk capacity on each farm, would be required to supply these products and at the same time would give profitable employment to about twenty-five thousand men.

Electric Cars.

Health is a great deal talked about, but no man seriously expects anyone to believe that he is doing business as a physical culture exercise. But after conceding the reasonableness of the fact that business is engaged in for the dollars that can be taken out of it, there still remains the objection that the methods of some in earning profits are not always commendable. An electrician(?) who has current turned on to an electrical installation that he knows is not properly installed, the proceedings bear a likeness to the contemptible act of taking candy from a baby. The innocent owner being the toddler and to whose placid mind all electrical work is alike. His wiring may be as full of hazards as a powder mill, and it sometimes is, but so long as he fancies that he has wisely let it to the cheapest(?) man and apparently saved a few dollars, he is satisfied and no fears disturb his child-like complacency. But with the electrician it is different. He knows—or if he don't know, it is his business to find out—whether the work is safe, according to the code standard. What then is to be thought of the electrician that recklessly turns current into a building that will sooner or later cause trouble? The practice is not only bad morals, but is bad business policy. It tends to give electricity a reputation for innate depravity, that is wholly undeserved, electricity being the cheapest, safest and most convenient illuminant known. We've got the largest assortment of electrical goods ever in your city. Let us send you an electric iron. They certainly are great.

The trial of the Coopers at Nashville, Tennessee, for the murder of ex-Senator Carmack, editor of the Tennessean, is now well under way. The State or prosecution, will attempt to prove that Carmack's life was taken as the result of a deep laid and well executed plot. He was a man of great influence in Tennessee and the South, and though a defeated candidate for governor, was the leader of the State-widners, and at the time of his death was leading the fight to make of Tennessee a prohibition State. Colonel Cooper was on the other side of the question and was quite prominent, and for the part he took or was taking to defeat State-wide prohibition was criticized in a rather sarcastic strain through the editorial columns of the Tennessean. He finally threatened Carmack with death if his name appeared in the Tennessean again, and the very next day another ten line editorial which read as follows, appeared in the Tennessean: "To Major Duncan Brown Cooper, who wrought a great coalition, who believed the harmonious influence of incompatible elements, who welded the pewter handle to the wooden spoon, who grafted the dead bough to the living tree and made it bloom, and bourgeois and bend with golden fruit, who made playmates of the lamb and the leopard, and boon companions of the spider and the fly, who made soda and vinegar to dwell placidly in the same bottle and taught oil and water how they might agree—to Major Duncan Brown Cooper, the greatest diplomat of the political Zwiembund, be all honor and glory forever." In the afternoon of the same day on which this editorial appeared, Carmack and the Coopers, father and son, met on a prominent street in Nashville and without any exchange of words a duel with pistols began. Carmack was killed instantly. Young Cooper was slightly wounded in the shoulder by a bullet from Carmack's pistol. The trial is attracting wide spread attention and the result will determine whether a man has the right to make a threat to take the life of his fellow man and put it into execution and go free on the plea of self defense.

The last official statement of the three banks of this city show deposits at $1,151,932.66, an increase over the statement made in November of about 19 per cent. This indicates that the growth in deposits is keeping up with the growth in population, and, compared with statements of banks issued in other towns of more population, shows Wichita Falls to be at the head of the list.

Every time the closet of your neighbor is open do you strain your neck to peep, and then afterward train your tongue in talking about it? says an exchange. Do you ever stop to think that some day a tragedy may take up its abode in your home? Can't you get it into your head that some day the tongue of slander may cut you like a sharp sword, and the whisper of your neighbor be as vinegar on your wound? Misfortune and disgrace may have overtaken your neighbor, but it does not become you to get on the housetops and shout it out to the world. You will not be called on to pay for nor answer for any of the sins of your neighbor. You have all you can attend to to pay your own discretions. Some day one near and dear to you may fall—the prison walls may open to a son or the scarlet letter of eternity blight a daughter. When a home is in mourning over a tragedy the best thing you can do is to keep your mouth shut unless you can say something that will cause a rift in the clouds. Then, again, you know you may be no better than your neighbor. The only difference is that your neighbor was caught and you, up to date, have kept the sunlight away. Be charitable, my friend, for you know not the day nor the hour when blight may appear in your sacred circle.—Mineral Wells Index.

Every good theatrical company which has appeared before a Wichita Falls audience in the splendid new theater has praised without stint the enterprise of the city in building and equipping such a beautiful and commodious playhouse. Last night, in response to repeated encores, Tim Murphy said he knew that a new opera house had been built, but he was surprised beyond expression to find a play house in a little city of less than 10,000 population that would be a credit to a city of 50,000 population. He also spoke of opera houses in some other towns in which he had recently appeared, but it is perhaps best not to mention names or quote his opinion of them.

URGES DECREASE IN COTTON ACREAGE

PRESIDENT TAYLOR ATTRIBUTES LOW PRICE OF COTTON TO OVER-PRODUCTION.

SOUTH LOSES $100,000

The Cotton Crop of 1908 Sold for $50,000,000 Less Than the Smaller Crop of 1907.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 15.—To the Cotton Growers: A year ago I strongly urged you to reduce the acreage in cotton and grow more food stuffs. It seems from the acreage report last year that only a part of the growers reduced their acreage and in some sections a small increase was shown. The result has been about as I predicted, the lowest prices we have had for several years. It now looks as if the crop will bring around $550,000,000, or over $50,000,000 less than last year's crop, which was nearly 2,000,000 bales smaller and taking the cost of growing the extra 2,000,000 bales it means a loss to the South of over a hundred million dollars.

The time has arrived when you must decide on the acreage for this season. I strongly urge you to reduce your acreage in cotton at least 10 per cent and raise more grain and hay so you will be more independent at marketing time. When the spinner is assured that there is enough cotton grown to meet his demands he is very independent and will only buy at cheap prices. With the possibility of a shortage he is a very eager buyer.

While the consumption for the first half of the cotton year ending March 1st will likely be a little less than half the crop the consumption the last half will be very much larger so that we will likely have about the same visible supply that we had last season, so that we should raise next year at least a million bales less than the consumption in order to get good prices for it.

Now, don't think that everyone else will reduce and you can plant more and get a big price, for that is what too many of you did last year. It will take a uniform reduction in order to get the proper results. You should only plant enough so that with the most favorable conditions the crop would not exceed 12,500,000 bales and then if weather conditions reduce the yield to 11,000,000 you will get more money for it than if you raised 12,500,000.

I hope that every merchant reading this article will call his farmer customers' attention to it and urge the reduction. It is the extra hundred million dollars the cotton crop brings that makes trade good throughout the South. I suggest that meetings be held in every school house in the South on Saturday, March 7th, so that uniformity of action may be taken. Weekly papers please copy.

A Putting Tip From St. Andrews.
A man on his first visit to St. Andrews was much impressed by the high standard of efficiency which he saw displayed on the greens by those with whom he played. He studied the actions of these heroes to see if he could discover any common feature in their methods. At last he saw light. He observed that they all hold the left hand more under the club when putting than they did when driving.
From this he deduced a rule of conduct—"see the finger nails of the left hand when addressed to the ball." For the rest of his stay, and it may be for some time afterward, his own putting improved considerably.—London Post.

The Size She Wanted.
The woman went in the bookstore and asked for a globe.
"What size do you want?" asked the clerk, turning one on its pivot for her to look at the various and sundry countries in pink and blue.
"I think," said the woman, "that you may give me one life size."—New York Times.

A SUNDAY STROLL.

This Recreation Was at One Time Unlawful in Maine.

Something of the exact behavior demanded from young people by those in authority in the early days of the nineteenth century is brought to notice in the biography of Peter Edes, a pioneer printer in Maine. Mr. Edes had an apprentice, James Orrock, who enjoyed a walk on Sunday after a week of indoor employment.

Mr. Edes soon found out that this was not permitted at Bangor and wrote to a friend of the trouble caused him by his apprentice's apparently innocent amusement.

"You must know," he writes, "that the people are very strict on this day and will not let men walk out, much less boys. James was strolling about and was ordered home by the tything men, but he would not obey them. A complaint was lodged against me on the next day, and I should have been obliged to pay a fine had not Judge Dutton pleaded in my behalf that I did not approve of such conduct and so got clear."

Another interesting incident in connection with life in Bangor at this time is an advertisement which appeared in Mr. Edes' paper, the Bangor Weekly Register, stating that "E. & M. R. Edes have opened a school in the room over the Register office for the instruction of young misses and small children in the useful and ornamental branches of education."

The terms were: "Orthography and plain work, 17 cents per week; writing, English grammar, geography with the use of maps, composition, ornamental needlework, 25 cents per week." This was probably one of the first schools in Maine for teaching young ladies exclusively in the branches of education and also including plain work and fancy needlework.

Yet They Needed Exercise.

Two men whose offices were on the second floor were on the first floor waiting for an elevator. Long and impatiently they waited.

"You're not looking extra well, Lonsel," remarked the lawyer.

"No, Bang e," replied the real estate man. "Think I'll join an athletic club. I need the exercise."

"Me too."

Still they waited for the elevator.—Kansas City Times.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Puffs, Curis and Rats are Doomed.

Special to the Times.
New York, Feb. 17.—Puffs, curis and Marcel waves, it is announced by Fifth avenue authorities, are to be driven out before the invasion of Greek fashions, and women will wear instead bands of jewels and velvet, circling the plainest Grecian coiffures.

Rats have been given to understand that their end is at hand.

"Rats will disappear before the fashion invaders like leaves before a November wind," said a well-known fashioner today. "The rat has had its day, that's all there is to it. Everything now is Grecian coiffure. To show you what I mean, there are two pretty models, as exquisitely Greek as any the gods ever set to poetry."

The models smiled happily at this from one of their own sex.

"Well, if Fifth avenue cannot produce Grecian beauty, or something equal, if not superior, then it is not to be found anywhere at this day, remarked the fashioner. "The very newest style of hair dressing is straight—no curis and waves, if you please—parted on the right side, brought low over the forehead. Then it is brought loosely up from the neck and coiled, so that it reaches even with the top of the head. Then you just use your own taste with the rest."

A Black Velvet Band.

"If you have a bit of black on your gown—a bit of black on hats and gowns is to be fashionable—use a black velvet band for the finishing touch. Place the band just below the coil of hair at the back of the neck, and bring it up on top of the head with a bow knot or a jeweled buckle arranged just a bit to the side in front. By all means the ribbon must be the same shade as the gown. This is because the Greek beauties did not wear hats."

"We have jeweled barettes to be worn with the Grecian coiffure. These are fastened to the band and worn just as the barette is worn now. It keeps the coiffure in place."

"There is no doubt that this new hair dressing will be a big success. It really cuts ten years off a woman's age. It is simple, most becoming and I am sure it is booked for a brilliant future."

Then she explained that this bold invasion was inspired by the spring hats. "To wear a Grecian coiffure," said she, one of the new spring hats is necessary; to wear a new hat you must follow the Greeks, so there you are."

Not a Knot, But a Bun.

"I want to assure you that this new style is not called a knot or a puff or a twist. To be correct, it is a bun. I do not know why it is called a bun, and that is what they call it in Paris, where it is all the rage now."

Not satisfied with this victory, according to the latest fashion bulletin issued from Fifth avenue yesterday afternoon, the Greeks have captured the dress making field. Grecian gowns won out after a hard fought battle with the Parisians.

"The long, crane-necked gowns," announced an authority, "are doomed from this very minute. No high collars, no bones smiting the flesh behind the ear to remind of fashion's follies. Just simple comfort, like the Greeks knew in their low, shapely, well cut gowns. High waisted and straight front, that is the coming gown."

According to reliable bulletins from authoritative sources in Fifth avenue, with the return from Europe yesterday of several well known importers, the Greeks were unable to take the millinery field because they did not have the goods.

The French seized the opportunity, and from the latest reports are holding the millinery forts without any outside resistance.

New Hats Gay With Color.

"The new hats," said a returning milliner from the other side, "are as gay with color as dear Paris. Pink roses, made from straw, made from ribbon and laces, head the list of trimmings. One of our newest creations has twenty-five rosebuds. The hats are bowl-shaped or mushroom-shaped."

"Some of them look like a decorated grandmother's sewing basket, turned upside down. Owing to their peculiar shape, which is much larger than the ones worn this winter, a change in hair dressing was immediately necessary. The hats are worn off the face and well down over the head."

"They completely cover the back of the head, reaching almost to the tip of the present style of collars. But they are smart and pretty and are sure to be popular because they are so artistic."

A Few Short Fashion Notes.

Houston Post.

Jet turbans are flourishing East and quite a number of them have been seen in old Houston town.

A few straw hats have been seen, but they've crawled back under cover the past two days.

Soft suede leather neckties are quite a fad just now.

Shawls of sixty years ago are again very much the style.

Pale pastel blue with wistaria is a charming combination seen on one or two gowns.

Round tablecloths are extremely popular, many of them showing the Greek key design.

Paris says that embroidered charity gimpes and sleeves will be seen in the spring.

Fashionable men at the Southern winter resorts are wearing pumps made of light gray suede.

No wrinkles are tolerated in gloves. They must be tight, neat and closely buttoned.

There will be an old-fashioned spelling bee at the opera house Thursday night, Feb. 18th, between the professional men and school teachers, under the auspices of the Southern M. E. ladies. 239-tfe

"Old Innocence" Pleased.

Before a highly appreciative audience Tim Murphy appeared at the Wichita Theater last night in "Old Innocence." Mr. Murphy made a splendid presentation of the character and was supported by a splendid cast.

After every act Mr. Murphy was compelled to bow an acknowledgement and was once compelled to appear before the curtains, where he delivered a humorous little talk in his characteristic manner.

He took occasion to express his appreciation of the opera house and the warmth of his reception.

Wichita Falls theater goers will remember Mr. Murphy's visit with pleasure and will warmly welcome him when he comes again.

Shakespeare's Tomorrow.

Are you one of those inadvertent characters who says "tomorrow I will remember my obligations? Tomorrow I will do my duty? Has death, which is no respecter of persons, visited your home? Has he left you bowed in sorrow? We can only say to you, "Look unto the hills from whence cometh your help." On the hilltop the sun is still shining, and no doubt your loved one is enjoying the grandeur of the new day. Yet from time immemorial, humanity has remembered its deceased (figuratively speaking), in a beautiful and formal way. Savages made mounds of earth or stone, the Egyptians built pyramids as lasting monuments to their buried kings. The dawn of the twentieth century finds us erecting some kind of a monument, suitable either to our peculiar tastes or sentimentalities. And as long as humanity lasts, or, at least, as long as they believe in the future, as long as hope is left, as long as we love, just so long will we remember our departed loved ones with suitable monuments! Tender expressions of our love and affection.

You are thinking of buying a monument, you intend to fix up the family lot at the cemetery! You have not forgotten your loved ones, but you are saying "tomorrow," or "some time when I have more time." Today was yesterday's tomorrow, and it may be that tomorrow will find you more forgetful than you were day, for "Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow, Creeps in this petty space from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death."

If you are thinking of buying a monument, if the obligation is yours, relieve yourself of that obligation today! Call and see us and let us show you what we have, and let us add your name to an already long list of pleased customers.

Place an order with us and we will do the rest. Special reduction sale now.

Mend It--Don't Throw it Away

When your hot water bottle or a piece of granite ware gets a hole in it--no matter how expensive an affair it is--you have been forced to throw it away and get a new one, as cement will not stand the heat of hot water in the former and solder will not adhere to the latter. If you will call at our store and get a ten or twenty-five cent package of Collets Mendits you can fix either of these articles, and many others, in a few seconds at an expense that is too trifling to be considered. YOUR MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFIED.
