CLEAN-UP DAY.

ate Health Department Sets March 10th as the Time.

The State health department at Austin is seeking to enlist the ald of the Women's Clubs of the State in the annual clean-up day, and is sending out the following literature:

Austin, Tex., Feb. 17, 1909.

Spring is coming again, and with ft flies, mosquitoes and summer diseases. It behooves us to take some special action to protect the health of our citizens against the dangers which beset us during warm weather. It has been proposed to have an annual Clean Up Day in Texas and Mar. 10th has been suggested as the most suitable date. The women of the State, especially the club women, are in a position to forward this movement more effectually than any other citizens. I, therefore, sppeal to you and the members of your Club to take the following steps toward making Clean Up Day a reality. (1) Arrange to have your premises in good condition on or before March 10. (2) Discuss the matter with your friends and acquaintances. (3) Appoint a committee from the club to serve as a publicity committee. If they see fit, let them have published the enclosed article to begin with and follow it with some newspaper material each Wednesday until March 10. (4) Appoint a committee from your club to confer with the city and county authorities so as to arrange for special means to cart away such rubbish as shall accumulate on account of the special efforts of private individuals on Clean Up Day. This same committee, or a different committee, should also interview the local authorities and secure from them their promise to have the court house and all the public buildings, including the prisons, thoroughly renovated and cleaned up on March 10th. (5) Appoint a committee from your club to confer with the superintendent of schools with a view to having him institute a thorough campaign for the cleaning of buildings and premises of every school in your terri-(6) Appoint a committee from your club to investigate the topography of your locality with the view to locating any pond or stagnant water which may be present. If such ponds are reported, a request from the club to the city council or county commissioners to oil the surface of these ponds will probably be acceded to. (7) Such other steps as may occur to you which would be valuable in your

Clean Up Day.

Last year March 10th was designated as Clean Up Day and the citizens of this State made a special attempt on that day to clean their premises houses and public buildings as thoroughly as possible. This was beneficial in two ways. In the first place, many citizens, who would have deferred this special effort indefinitely, put their shoulder to the wheel. In the second place, insects and vermin were attacked from all quarters simultaneously and could not find a hiding place. If the State of Texas had an accurate system of vital statistics, it would be interesting to note just how the death rate, especially among children, was compared over the death rate of preceding years. Texas, however, has no such complete system of vital statisics. Still we hope, however, soon to have such. It is interesting to note that a recent meeting of physicians in the central part of the State, it was the concensus of opinion that there had been 25 per cent less 'summer complaint' among the children last summer than usual. We hope soon to have accurate figures to show the results of Clean Up Day.

This year it is planned to have Mar. 10th the Clean Up Day likewise and all persons interested are requested to discuss the movement and urge its acive execution in every town in Texas. Wednesday, March 10th, is Clean Up Day. Let all back yards and back alleys be swept clean on or before this date. Let all corners, cracks and crevices in, among and between buildings be emptied of any rubbish which may have accumulated. Above all, let each house be scrubbed, runned and aired. Let every city council issue the flat for all public buildings to be cleansed on March 10th. All stagnant pools should be drained or oiled. In every city the effort at cleaning up should be so acted that extra carts will be needed on the next day to cart away the ffending rubbish.

Let's work together and make the State of Texas rival the famous Spotess Town for purity.

To Learn Millinery.

It will be but a few weeks untl milliners will be searching for apprentices, and young women, even though not contemplating such work in the future, can avail themselves of the opportunity to go into the work shops and learn the secrets for personal use. Strange to say, while women are very skillful with the needle, many of them of every artistic temperament are unable to trim a hat. It is a gift, the same as other special gifts to womenkind, yet almost any woman can do very creditable work once the secrets are learned. There are many women of almost unlimited means who have learned millinery that they might better satisfy their own tastes and those of the family and, in all probability, save millinery expense, which of late years is beyond all reason. If a young woman is idling hours away at home, I certainly would advise her to take up this line

The foregoing article from the Woman's National Daily contains a suggestion that might prove acceptable to someone interested in such work.

Toss of a Coin With an Unexpected

A New York traveling man was telling stories of "Toothpick Tom," a famous Bowery character, who lived by his wits as a gambler. Tom was known far and wide, not only because of this gambling mania, which was insatiable, but because of his quaint wit and originality. He was an illiterate and could neither read nor write, but in the course of his career he handled perhaps a little more than the average gambler's share of coin raked in across the green cloth.

"One afternoon Tom woke up with a healthy appetite for breakfast," said the New Yorker." "He found on investigating his pockets that he had a five dollar gold piece, and he set out for the nearest cafe to appease his hunger. But just as he was about to enter the restaurant he suddenly recognized the entrance to the next place as the one leading to a gambling house which he had not visited for some time. Tom paused. He felt himself torn between two emotions, bunger and the spirit of gambling.

The Reason One Woman is Disgusted With the Voting Proposition. When any one asked little Mrs. Pratt her opinion on the question of equal suffrage she had her answer ready. "I don't want to hear anything about it," she would say pleasantly, but firmly, "and I'd just as soon tell you why. It's because there's got to be a concealment and mystery about voting. and I like things open and aboveboard It's the way I was brought up and the way I shall always feel if I live to be a hundred.

"I've had one experience, and that's all I want. A friend of mine talked and talked to me about voting on the educational question till at last I said I would, because I was brought up to think a great deal of education, and I always shall. So I gave up an engagement to go to the polls and register (and the dress was almost spoiled on account of my missing that trying on, too, because she didn't wait to see whether it fitted or not, but stitched the seams right up), and then I took the greatest pains to go and vote just as they'd told me to, and what do you suppose Henry Pratt told me afterward? My vote was thrown out because I had the frankness to write my full name and address on it!

"I told Henry that nothing would surprise me after that-nothing!"

Arago's Modesty.

Arago, the great French scientist, was never seen with a decoration on his breast. He valued honors lightly. One evening Leverrier, the astronom called on him on his way to dine with a minister. He expressed a wish to appear decorated with an order to which he was entitled, having received the official notice of the honor, aleat? That was the question. He might though he had not as yet the decoration itself.

"Open that drawer," said Arago, 'and take whatever you want." In that drawer were all the crosses and ribbons which kings and emperors confer. While Arago wished above every-thing to promulgate science and to make his researches useful, he did not attempt to identify himself forever with his discoveries by writing books. He had no time for writing, but contented himself with noting the results of his work in the record of the bureau of longitude or announcing it verbally to the academy.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but hadn't you better leave your valuables in the safe?"

"Do you think I ought to?" inquired the man innocently enough, to hear him say it.

"Well, it is the best plan." "All right," said the man, and, turning to his wife, "Here, Mary, pass the children over to the gent behind the counter. He'll look after them and give us a rest." Whereupon the clerk apologised. Judge.
