CREAM STATION AT IOWA PARK

MILK AND CREAM RECEIVING STATION WILL BE ESTABLISHED AT THAT PLACE.

MANY NAMES PROPOSED

For Brand of Butter as Result of Small Advertisement in the Daily Times.

Arrangements have practically been concluded whereby a milk and cream-receiving station will be built at Iowa Park by that community as a supply station to the creamery recently re-organized here by the Citizens' Dairy and Ice Cream Company.

Manager J. H. Burnett yesterday attended a meeting of the Iowa Park Commercial Club and reports the usual aggressiveness of that organization in co-operating with the creamery here. The station will be put up by subscription of citizens of Iowa Park, the creamery here to furnish a man to instruct an attendant in the handling of separators and other appliances and to get the business under way.

The same arrangement of placing cattle with farmers to be paid for by half of the product turned into the creamery will be undertaken at Iowa Park and in this manner considerable more dairying will be engaged in by the farmers. Another meeting will be held tomorrow night at the Park to give a further impetus to the movement. Manager Burnett and Secretary Gohlke will attend the meeting. A meeting will be held at Holiday next Tuesday for the same purpose.

Mr. Burnett reports many answers in the mails to an ad carried in the classified columns of the Times for a name to be used as a brand for their creamery butter. Answers came from Amarillo, Fort Worth, Abilene and many towns within that radius. The contest closes on Friday.

Crop Prospects.

H. Willis, one of Wichita county's best and most progressive farmers, and the man who took the gold medal prize at the World's Fair at St. Louis for the best sample of wheat on exhibition that was grown in Texas, was in the city today and says that the growing wheat crops need rain badly, and that while the fields from a distance look green and pretty, they will not bear close inspection.

As to the prospects for an abundant oat crop, Mr. Willis speaks more encouragingly, and predicts a bumper crop should a good rain fall within the next thirty days.

WILL RESUME TRIAL TOMORROW

Nashville, Tenn., Mar. 3.—The attorneys for both sides of the Cooper-Sheriff trial for the murder of former Senator Carmack were in conference today. The case will be resumed tomorrow. The State has decided definitely not to recall Governor Patterson. One reason given for the decision is that Attorney General McCann, fearing the effect of the grilling of Patterson upon the jury, nine of whom, it is learned, were strong supporters of the governor.

The defense is rounding up its remaining witnesses to be used in rebuttal and is preparing to fight the expected attempt of the prosecution to develop a conspiracy theory or to show the condition of Carmack's mind on the day of the shooting.

A SAD STORY.

Parents Separate and Both Want Possession of Two Children.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram. A dispute between mother and father over the possession of their two pretty little children, beginning in Parker county Saturday night and renewed on a passenger train Monday night reached a dramatic climax in the Texas and Pacific station here last Tuesday morning, when the parents were persuaded to return home and leave the settlement of their difficulty to the courts.

Surrounded by a large crowd, the mother sat on one end of a long bench in the station, tightly holding the younger child, a girl perhaps 4 years of age. At the other end of the bench rested the husband, in whose arms rested the other child, a boy, 8 years of age.

When the couple left Weatherford at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning, both children were in the possession of the mother, but before Fort Worth was reached the older was in the hands of the father.

The principals were Mr. and Mrs. B. McKinney of Pooleville, Parker county. They have been married many years and have prospered. On Saturday night they separated, the wife going to the home of friends near Springtown and the father remaining at home.

Early Tuesday morning Mrs. McKinney boarded the east bound Texas and Pacific passenger train at Weatherford, announcing that she was on the way to the home of her brother at Harrold, Texas. The two children went with her.

The father boarded the same train. Somewhere between Weatherford and Fort Worth he says he picked up his son, who was sitting on a seat near the mother, and took him back with him.

Both left the train in Fort Worth, entered the station and took up their positions on the same bench. Finally the station-employees and bystanders persuaded the couple to go back to Parker county and await the action of the courts upon the possession of the children.

EFFECT OF MEASURE IS CIRCUMSCRIBED

COTTON GRADES MEASURE KILLED IN THE SENATE—BAILEY AND ALDRICH VICTORY.

ITEM IS ELIMINATED

Grain Inspection, Too, is Disapproved and Left Out of Agricultural Appropriation Bill.

Washington, D. C., Mar. 2.—The victory of Senators Bailey, Kean and Aldrich in preventing the senate from increasing the house's appropriation for the wider promulgation of the official cotton standards and for the more extensive inspection of grain in transportation, was made complete today when the conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill reported an agreement which did not include the proposed increase.

In the house bill $12,250 was appropriated for the promulgation of the cotton standards. Representative Burleson, through whose efforts the cotton standard provision was enacted, persuaded the senate committee to increase the appropriation to $42,250, but on point of order by Senator Kean, who was supported by Senator Bailey, the proposed increase was stricken out. The result will be to circumscribe the extent of the cotton standards.

Grain Inspection Eliminated.

A similar increase was proposed for the grain inspection, but on a point of order by Senator Aldrich, seconded by Senator Bailey, this proposed increase was likewise eliminated. The effect of this action will be to confine the inspection to rain at seaports-for-export shipment.

In the hope of having the conferees increase the appropriations, a slight change was made in the verbiage of these two provisions by Senator Simmons, but the conferees, after consulting Asher Hinds, the house parliamentary authority, held they could not change the amount which had been agreed on by both houses, although the verbiage of the provisions had been changed by the senate.

The conferees agreed on increasing the boll weevil appropriation from $146,470, as authorized by the house, to $250,000, of which $50,000 becomes immediately available as voted by the senate.

Meeting of Home Mission Society.

Monday was a great day for the ladies of the Home Mission society. Long before the appointed hour arrived for the meeting, horses were hitched at the church and when 4 o'clock came, the number of vehicles caused the passersby to ask what was doing at the M. E. church.

Nearly all the members, about sixty-seven in number, and several visitors were present, all eager to hear the reports of the different circles. This being the first meeting of the entire society since the close of last month's contest and being the day appointed for the reports of the circles and the installation of the officers.

Rev. W. T. Morrow, our pastor, was present and led the devotional exercises.

Mrs. W. W. Packson, our much-loved out-going president, dispatched business very hurriedly until she came to the report of the circles.

Circle A A was called and reported $195 and thirteen new members.

Circle A reported $149 and seven new members.

Each report was cheered very heartily from both sides and the winning side received many compliments from the defeated side and will be entertained by them at the hospitable home of Mrs. F. W. Nolan, on Eleventh street and Indiana avenue, Friday afternoon from 3 till 5.

Farmers Should Raise Hogs.

A large majority of the farmers of the South have devoted most of their time for years to the production of cotton, consequently they have been almost entirely dependent upon the products of other States for their necessary supplies. This is a condition that accumulated Texas and the Southern securities. It, however, getting eight or ten years in which to pay fifteen cents for pork. The average farmer makes a 500-pound bale of cotton on every three acres, but suppose we should make 500 pounds on two acres, and putting its value at ten cents a pound, the farmer would have made $50. But the same land, if properly managed would have produced 1000 pounds of pork with a great deal less expense and labor. There is great demand for pork at ten cents, so the farmer would have made $100, thus giving him the handsome sum of $25 per acre in favor pork production.

There are many crops that the cotton growers have neglected, such as corn, oats, cane, dairy products, etc. But the one that is usually given secondary consideration, the most important of them all, is that of meat.

Upon being asked why they do not raise their own meat, our people reply that the stockmen of the west can raise it for them cheaper than they can themselves and their reasons are, that the Western farmer can make fifty bushels of corn to the acre and we can only make ten. Probably they can, but there are other things that are as good hog fatteners as corn. Most farmers think that if a hog is fattened he must be enclosed in a pen and fed corn. This is a mistaken idea, for hogs in their native state had no corn nor were they in a pen with a shed over one side. It seems absurd that intelligent people will try to raise them under abnormal conditions. Why not give them ample range and fatten them on grazing crops?

Supposing we have decided to raise hogs, the first thing to consider is the type that will best suit our purpose. Whatever is done, it is always advisable for the breeder to get the type he likes best, he will naturally give them better attention, and though they are inferior to some others, he will be more successful with them. In choosing, one has to bear in mind the purpose for which they are intended. For instance, if the hogs are to be kept in close quarters, in all probability, the Poland Chinas would be best. It is a large type that fattens remarkably well with good treatment and plenty of feed. An especially good characteristic of the breed is that they mature early, leading all other breeds in this respect. But for bacon the Poland-China is entirely too fat.

By far the greater portion of the pure bred or grade hogs raised in the South are of Berkshire blood. They are good grazers, much better in this respect than the Poland China. They do well on pastures of rape, clover, pinders, etc. For bacon purposes the Berkshires are better than the Poland Chinas, but not so good as the true bacon type. The only fault we find with the Berkshire bacon is that the fat is not so evenly distributed as with the bacon breeds.

Of the bacon breeds the Tamworths, or Tamworth grades or cross breeds, have considerable merit and especially if used with Berkshires. They are extra good rustlers, being well able to root for themselves. They dress out well in carcass, and they are receiving much favorable comment at present.

That the production of bacon for market is a profitable business, is clearly demonstrated in our own State, and is now quite an item with the most progressive farmers in the Southern part of Georgia. One traveling in that section, will not infrequently see farmers of ordinary means that have herds of 100 head of hogs grazing on pinders. While the farmers have never given special attention to meat raising, and the bacon type has not been tried to any large extent, yet it has proved to be a paying proposition in this section, and we see no reason to hesitate to give here their method of raising.

The type of hogs most frequently used are grade Berkshires and Poland Chinas. They are fattened entirely on grazing crops, the principal one being pinders. The pigs in that section are carried through the winter on rye pasture, which can be planted with little expense to the farmer, and not only does the hogs a great deal of good, but also makes a good cover for the soil. Vetch or burr clover would add both to the pasture and the beneficial effects of the cover crop to the soil. The pigs are usually taken from the rye pasture and put in a field from which a crop of oats has been harvested. Here they are kept until the pinders are matured enough to be a profitable food, which is usually about the last of August. When they go on the pinder pasture they are usually about eight months old and valued at $4 per head. They are grazed on this one crop alone for about sixteen weeks and then slaughtered. They are slaughtered approximately at the age of 15 months, the average weight being about two hundred pounds net.—Southern Agriculturalist.

A. S. FONVILLE THE JEWELER

AMARILLO IN TOM GREEN COUNTY

San Angelo Standard. J. C. Reeves and A. M. Henderson were in the city this morning exhibiting an armadillo which they captured near their homes in the mountains eighteen miles south of San Angelo, and which they said they intended to sell or raffle off. The armadillo is an animal that was once wholly unknown in this county, but which has extended its abode northward until it is becoming common in some parts of Texas. It is a curious species and gets its name from the fact of its being armed with a bony shell. In shape and size it resembles the opossum, but its head and body are encased in an armor of small bony plates encircling it like a set of close fitting hoops. It is said to burrow in the ground, seldom going abroad except at night. When attacked, it will curl up into a ball, presenting the armor on all sides. The flesh of the armadillo is said to be good for food, but the view of a live one, as seen this morning, is not likely to be very appetizing to the uninitiated.

It was stated by naturalists forty years ago that the armadillo was not found north of the Rio Grande. It was unknown in this section as late as thirty years ago, but gradually made its way northward until its presence is becoming common south and west of us. These animals are said to be voracious, at the end of three days the opossums familiar with countries in which they exist in larger numbers claim that they ought to be protected, as they are harmless themselves, and do much good in relieving the country of pests. In parts of Southern Mexico the armadillo is held as a sacred animal, there being a legend about it that runs about as follows: In the State of Chiapas, it is said, at a time about 150 years ago rattlesnakes became so numerous and vicious that much loss of life resulted and the people were constantly endangered by them. The people went to the priest seeking relief and were told to meet on St. John's Day and spend three days and nights in prayer. There had been many opossums in the country up to that time, and, as the legend runs, at the end of three days the opossums had disappeared, having been turned into armadillos, and the armadillos had destroyed the snakes. For this reason its life has always been protected in that part of Mexico and its protection has resulted in much good to the country.

WEATHER FORECAST.

—Tonight fair and colder. Thursday fair and warmer.

After several persons who had been bitten by supposed mad dogs had been sent to Austin to take the Pasteur treatment, and valuable livestock had been killed on account of having been bitten by worthless curs, the mayor of Memphis, Texas, issued a proclamation prohibiting dogs from running on the streets and enforced the order by having about two hundred dogs killed. The killing of the dogs stopped the hydrophobia epidemic. The rampage of the supposed mad dog in Wichita Falls

THE ALARMING INCREASE OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

"He died of Bright's Disease." Hardly a week passes that this statement is not made in reference to some prominent citizen.

The increasing prevalence of this disease makes the present time seem most opportune for discussion in the hope that some who are unconsciously afflicted with this dreaded disease may receive timely warning.

A prominent citizen residing in a nearby town informs us that he suffered for nearly a year from Bright's Disease, but that he recently affected a complete cure.

"What seemed to be the first indications of the trouble," was asked.

"They seemed hardly worth noticing. My digestion bothered me at times, my stomach seemed out of order, and I had occasional backaches, but I thought it was due to too much work."

"Did you take anything?"

"I did not. Later, my strength failed me, I had severe pains in the back and noticed some irregularities of the urine, I couldn't sleep well at night. I then used some simple remedies, but without benefit."

"Did you realize that your trouble was Bright's Disease?"

"I never thought of such a thing. Finally, my condition became serious. My back ached all the time, I had shooting pains in my joints and a weak tired feeling at the knees, a little work played me out completely. I then began doctoring for kidney trouble but did not improve very much."

"Did you have any trouble with your heart?"

"Yes. I had spells of heart throbbing and a nervous faint feeling. I thought I had heart disease and treated awhile for that. Nothing seemed to help me. I had to give up trying to work."

"How did you affect a cure?"

"A friend of mine persuaded me to try Prickly Ash Bitters. I bought a bottle of my druggist. After taking it a week I began to feel some better, my urine became more natural and there was a gradual lessening of my misery. I kept on taking Prickly Ash Bitters for several weeks and I could feel my strength returning—slowly at first—but increasing daily. I am now entirely cured of my trouble and able to do a full day's work without the least fatigue. I consider Prickly Ash Bitters the grandest kidney medicine in the world."

"Thousands of people attest in like manner to the wonderful benefit derived from Prickly Ash Bitters. It is a time tried and successful remedy for Bright's Disease or any disorder of the kidneys. Prickly Ash Bitters is in every sense a system tonic and regulator. It possesses important properties for curing ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels in addition to its great power in the kidneys. It is a valuable article to keep at home, where a dose or two can be taken whenever needed. When used for any disorder in the kidneys, stomach, liver or bowels it is the right medicine in the right place."

Death of W. N. Hale.

Archer City News.
W. N. Hale, aged about 40 years, died here last Saturday after a short illness with pneumonia. He was taken sick on Saturday previous at the home of Miss Lula Woodward and sisters, and was unconscious most of the time until his death. He was given all possible care and attention, but the doctors said from the first that he had little or no chance of recovery.

He has been a cowboy here for the past several years, but for the past few months had acted as public cotton weigher.

He made no professions of religion that we know of, but he always had a bright smile for any and every body, and his familiar figure is sadly missed by all from our streets. He was honest in all his dealings and always ready to lend assistance where it was most needed. In fact, he was free-hearted to a fault.

Had he lived, he would have led Miss Lula Woodward to the altar a bride during the next month, as she was making preparations for the event.

His brother, Monroe Hale, of Fort Worth, and sister, Mrs. Ninetta Henslee, of Farmersville, his old home, and his brother-in-law, Dr. A. G. Neathly of Haskell, were with him at the end.

Miss Woodward will act as administrator of his financial affairs, which consist of personal property and accounts.

Solemn and impressive funeral ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Longan and tears sprung from the eyes of more than one of Nat's comrades and companions when his remains were lowered into the grave. Peace be to his ashes.

several nights ago accentuates the fact that there are entirely too many dogs running loose on the streets for the public safety. Anybody who owns a dog worth having should be interested enough to keep it on their own premises and off the street until all danger of hydrophobia is passed. Other canines found running loose on the streets should be killed.

The following is the final make-up of President Taft's cabinet: Secretary of State, Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania; secretary of the treasury, Franklin MacVeagh of Illinois; secretary of war, Jacob McGavock Dickinson of Tennessee; attorney general, George W. Wickersham of New York; postmaster general, Frank Hitchcock of Massachusetts; secretary of the navy, George Von Lengerke Meyer of Massachusetts; secretary of the interior, Richard A. Ballinger of Washington; secretary of agriculture, James Wilson of Iowa; secretary of commerce and labor, Charles Nagel of Missouri. All are republicans except one, Dickinson, and he is supposed to be one of those kind of democrats who vote the republican ticket.

The Southern Commercial Congress has acquired title to a piece of very valuable property in Washington, D. C., which is located in the business section of the city, on which it will erect a large exhibit building for the purpose of advertising the wonderful resources of the Southern States. The plan is for the commercial clubs and business organizations of the South to subscribe the necessary amount of money to pay for this building site, the building and equip it, and after that has been done no further aid from the clubs will be asked. The Chamber of Commerce of this city is asked to subscribe for as much as $1000 worth of the stock in this exhibit building, and the matter will, in all probability, receive the consideration due it at the next meeting of the board of directors. That it is a splendid promotion scheme of the South; there is no doubt, and is one which appeals strongly to every wide-awake city in the South.

If I Were a Merchant

By 'Eleszer' in the Bonham News.

If I were a merchant I would be pleasant to my customers. I would make it a point to let every purchaser, who came into my place of business, know that his presence was known to me.

If I were busy waiting upon another customer, I would say to each new comer: "I will see that you are waited upon soon."

This would show that the person's presence was recognized. It would be a friendly greeting and set at ease the mind of the customer. I've seen buyers enter a store, stand around, passed again and again by clerks, if not proprietors and not a word of greeting, until they became disgusted with waiting, then left the place without trading.

If I were a merchant I would manifest no difference in my treatment of the rich and the poor. While I would be anxious to make sales and profits from my sales, I believe in the long run I would be the gainer by being pleasant, sociable and obliging to everyone.

If I were a merchant I would try to keep the kind of goods desired by the class of customers who came to purchase of me. I would even consult my customers as to their needs and make it a point to gratify their wishes. I would humor my customers, fall in with their views, and if I did not have what they thought they wanted I would not abuse them for having peculiar notions or crude ideas of goods.

It doesn't take a customer long to see who is affable and accommodating in a store. He will choose his salesmen after a trial or two and ever after wait to be waited upon by that person.

I would want a fair profit and quick sales. In this way I would keep new and fresh goods, goods fresh and clean. Too many shelf-worn goods, goods out of date and style, have been palmed off upon the unsuspecting as up to date goods, and then when the purchaser found that he had been imposed upon he had no more use for that merchant.

Many times clerks have driven away customers by unjust treatment and the merchant has wondered why some of his patrons have passed him by. I would try to find out the cause of such treatment and if a wrong had been done I would apologize and rectify all mistakes if possible. I would prove to my customers that I was conscientious in my business dealings, and that I intended to be honest with every one.

I would not have a clerk that is careless, stiff, unobliging, cross and insulting. I could not afford to lose customers through such a clerk. I would deal manfully with my clerks, at the same time expect good services from them. I would pay them just wages and pay at the stipulated time. I would show my clerks favors, gain their respect and good will. A merchant loses by being too exacting with his clerks or customers.

If I were a merchant I would get out of my place of business at times and mingle with the people of other trades. I would manifest an interest in other men's business, see their needs, find out their wants, learn of their failures and success. Then I would be better fitted to deal with them as customers when they come to my place of business.

Too many of our merchants are one-sided men; men who do not rub up against the common class of people from whom much of their trade comes, who do not know the conditions of other men's homes, business life and means.

A merchant may have money to stock up his house with a fine lot of goods. He may be skillful in measuring calico and silk, or weighing out sugar and spice. He may be wise enough to sell his goods at a large profit, he may succeed for a time, but the successful merchant really is he who knows more than to stand behind the counter and show goods. He should know the men, women and children around him, the town and country in which he lives, and know how to win hearts and so win purses.

If I were a merchant I would credit but little, if any. I believe the merchants make the poor poorer by so much crediting. The general run of men-and-women in the world are poor financiers, poor managers, who will not live frugally and economically just so long as they can buy on credit. They do not stop to count the cost nor see the result and their inability to ever get ahead in the world.

Then, too, merchants are going under year after year by the scores because of the credit system. The credit system works harm in two ways, to the customers and to the merchants.

I'd rather sell goods and get the cash for them and rest easy in my slumbers than to have thousands of dollars of goods sold on credit and worry over the matter that perhaps I would never receive payment for my goods.

I would impress upon merchants this thought: That in crediting so much they are keeping the poor poorer.

SHORT STORIES.

Retold From the Western Publisher and Various Other Sources.

"Doctor," said the sweet young thing who had just arrived from the East, "I've been told that eating cucumbers will remove freckles."
 "So it will, under one condition," replied Dr. Gruff. "And what is it?"
 "That the freckles are on the cucumbers."

There was a genuine "Weary Willie" in town Wednesday, relates the country editor. Russ William tried to flash his kodak on him, but the fellow ran. Russ chased him out past the stock yards, but failed to get his picture. Too bad, for he was a rare specimen.

Polo boasts of a man, who, though married fifteen years, kisses his wife every time he leaves home. Oregon has a man who can beat that all hollow. Though married twenty years, he kisses his wife every time he leaves home, besides kissing the hired girl every time his wife leaves home.

A farmer at Lagrange, Ill., advertised for his stray calf by posting in the postoffice the following peculiar notice: "ROUND A VAY—Von Ret and Vite calf mit its behind legs vas black, he was a she calf. Aney potty dot prings Dot Calf home pays me five Tollar. Hans Bog, Tree-Mile Behind de pridge Bear Creek."

The man with a chip on his shoulder gets into trouble, says a Wahoo philosopher, and he cites this tragical instance: Cyrus Williams was sporting a cannon fire cracker in his hip pocket last Friday evening, with the fuse sticking out. One of his friends accidentally touched the fuse with a cigar, and Cyrus had to buy a new pair of overalls.

Fort Worth (Tex.) Record: A story is going the rounds of the press that a printer in Joplin, Mo., who inherited $40,000, has refused to take the money. Every printer who sets the "take" has a fit of laughter. The reporter who invented the story probably had too much zinc in his blood to think of anything more preposterous.

An exchange says a girl recently sent her photograph to her best fellow and wrapped it up in a newspaper, on which was printed an advertisement for a stove firm. A portion of the print adhered to the photograph and the young man was very much startled to see staring him in the face in bold pica type the following words: "See name on leg."

Once upon a time a lady ordered her local paper stopped because she didn't like the color of the editor's wife hair, or some like trivial offense. Later she had an item that she wanted to see in print and requested its publication. After the paper was out she repaired herself to a neighbor's to see the item and read the balance of the news. Some people are humorists and don't know it.

Oceola (La.) Bee: Some degenerate cuss stole our hat at the dance Thursday night. We do not mourn the loss of the hat, but our heart bleeds when we wonder what will become of the soul—if he has one—of the man who would steal an editor's hat. A man that will steal an editor's hat is certainly worse than "old Nick," yes, meaner than a man who tries to beat an editor out of a subscription account.

Leger (Ok.) Times: While at one of the ice cream parlors one day this week we overheard a conversation between three of our country cousins—a boy and two girls—that ran thusly: "Say, Charlie, I've at all I can hold."
 "Ain't this cold?" remarked the other maiden. The embarrassed Charles thrust his hands deep into his trousers pockets and called out to the blushing maidens, "Say, gals, let's pull out."

The angular lecturer on woman's suffrage, who looked not unlike Mrs. Shoot, took a drink of water, brought her flat down hard on the table and manfully faced the audience. "You probably know," she said in cold, measured tones, "that Lon Dillon, a female horse, broke the world's trotting record." Acting upon the hint the audience arose in mass and the building rang with cheers.

An exchange paper bids farewell to a departed citizen as follows: "He was a man of push; he played marbles with a boy for keeps and cheated all his playmates out of their money; he swapped a bladeless knife, unseen, for a four-bladed, sold it for 50 cents, bought a pound of sugar, made a barrel of lemonade, which he sold on circus day for $8. He started in business and sold tough meat for choice cuts and made a fortune; when he got a thousand dollars he started a company with $5,000, 999, mostly water, and sold the stock at par. When the company busted it was found that he had long since sold out. He died a millionaire and left all his money here. It is very warm where he is now."

An exchange gets off the following: "If men are the salt of the earth, women are undoubtedly the sugar. Salt is a necessity, sugar a luxury. Vicious men are salt-peter; stern men are rock salt; nice men are table salt. Old maids are brown sugar; good natured matrons are loaf sugar and pretty girls the fine pulverized sugar. Pass the pulverized sugar, please."

A story is told of some visitors who were going through the State penitentiary at Canoa City several years ago under the escort of the chief warden. After a little while they came to a room in which three women were sewing. "Dear me," one of the visitors whispered, "what vicious looking creatures! Pray, what are they here for?"
 "Because they have no other home. This is our sitting room and they are my wife and two daughters," blandly responded the warden.

Pleasanton (Tex.) Monitor: Some editors, advertising for printers, should word their "ads" as follows: "Wanted—An able-bodied section hand with a thorough knowledge of the printing business; must see to it that the stoves are supplied with fuel and keep the watchdog company between the hours of 9 p. m. and 2 a. m. Eat when we eat and take your money as it comes from absconding subscribers. Working hours governed by daylight the year round." This would be telling the unvarnished truth in a great many instances, and would put the "festive typo" on a faster train in the opposite direction.

GRAINS OF GOLD YELLOW CORN MEAL

This is in a class by itself and is different from ordinary corn meal as can be imagined—its different corn—differently milled and by its use, old corn receipts make dishes that are so much better that they are hardly to be recognized. Steel cut oat meal is another cereal that is much superior to the different brands of so called rolled or steamed oats as it retains all the oat flavor. We have handled these two articles for years and they make friends wherever introduced. If you will include some of either or both in your next order, We will guarantee satisfaction.
