South Sea Islanders Fear Themas the Abode of Ghosts.

HOLD SOULS OF THEIR DEAD.

The Natives Offer Gifts and Food, Sometimes Human, to Appease the Man Esters-The Hawaiians Used to Feed Their Dead to the Monsters.

In view of the wide distribution of sharks and their strength and ferocity, qualities which appealed to the savage mind, it is not strange that the cult of shark worship should have arisen. This worship is especially common in the south seas, where sharks are very numerous, says the Detroit Free Press. In the Solomon islands living sacred objects are chiefly sharks, alligators, snakes, etc. Sharks are in all these islands very often thought to be the abode of ghosts, as natives will at times before their death announce that they will appear as sharks. Afterward any shark remarkable for size or color which is observed to haunt a certain shore or rock is taken to be some one's ghost, and the name of the deceased is

Such a one was Sautahimatawa at Ulawa, a dreaded man eater, to which offerings of porpoise teeth were made. At San certain food, such as cocoanuts from certain frees, is reserved to feed such a ghost shark, and there are certain men of whom it is known that after death they will be in sharks. These, therefore, are allowed to eat such food in the sacred place. In Saa and Ulawa if a sacred shark had attempted to seize a man and he had escaped the people would be so much afraid of the shark's anger that they would throw the man back in the sea to be drowned. These sharks also were thought to aid in catching the bonito, for taking which supernatural power was necessary.

In the Banks islands a shark may be a tangaroa, a sort of familiar spirit or the abode of one. Some years ago Manurwar, son of Mala, the chief man in Vanua Lava, had such a shark. He had given money to a Manwo man to send it to him. It was very tame and would come up to him when he went down to the beach at Nawono and follow along in the surf as he walked along the shore. In the New Hebrides some men have the power, the natives believe, of changing themselves into

The Samoan native believed that his gods appeared in some visible incarnation, and the particular thing in which it was in the habit of appearing was to him an object of veneration. Many worshiped the shark in this way, and while they would freely partake of the gods of others they felt that death would be the penalty should they eat their own god. The god was supposed to avenge the insuit by taking up his abode in the offender's body and causing to generate there the very thing which he present in a bundle of shark's teeth. These curiosities were done up in a piece of native cloth and consulted before going to battle. If the bundle felt heavy that was a bad omen, but if light the sign was good, and off they went to the fight.

In the Fijl islands, Viavia and other gods claim the shark as their abode, and their devotess must never eat of that fish, for if they did they would be partaking of the god himself.

It was in the Hawalian Islands, however, that shark worship reached its greatest perfection. Its worship was quite common on the islands, each one having a special shark as his ancestral god. The worship of sharks was due largely to the fact that the belief in the transmigration of souls is quite general among the Polynesians, and the Hawaiians would feed their dead to the sharks under the supposition that in this way the soul of the dead would enter the sharks and so animate the latter as to incline them to respect the bodies of the living.

Several of the African coast tribes worship the shark. Three or four times in the year they celebrate the festival | see me. of the shark, which is done in this wise: They all row out in their boats L.H.LAWLER, PROP to the middle of the river, where they invoke, with the strangest ceremonies the protection of the great shark. They offer to him poultry and goats in order to satisfy his sacred appetite. But this is nothing. An infant is every year sacrificed to the monster, which has been feted and nourished for the sacrifice from its birth to the age of ten. On the day of the fete it is bound to a post on a sandy point at low water. As the tide rises the child may utter cries of terror, but they are of no avail, as it is abandoned to the waves, and the sharks soon arrive to finish its agony and thus permit it to enter into

The Polynesians have an ancient faole treating of the flight of Ina, the daughter of Valtoringa and Ngaetna, to the sacred isle. After the sole dumped her at the edge of the breakers with such disastrous results to itself from the angry princess the latter summoned the shark and by its help succeeded in reaching the sacred island. Feeling thirsty during the voyage. Ina cracked a cocoanut on the shark's forehead, and this accounts for the bump now found on the forehead

This will be an unusual opening; an innovation of low prices for Wichita Falls, all goods being fresh from the makers. We fully appreciate the impression that low prices means poor goods, which holds in the minds of many people. That we will overcome this wrong impression is conclusive from the number of places we have operated stores and the success we have met. Making Left-Overs Attractive

A food expert tells us that what the average American family throws away would keep an average French-family.

We dont know how true that is but we do know that it isn't necessary for it to be true for its only a matter of handling the "left overs" and with Yacht Club salad dressing that's a very simple matter. 35 Cents per Bottle.

A number of women know the secret of serving 'left overs' ith an olive oil dressing and they are the ones whose families enjoy the best of health and whose grocery bills are not big snough to take care of an extra French family too.

Suppose you look up this week the many uses of pure oilve oil In cooking and try one or more of them.

We offer you Monarch put up in half pint bottles at 40c. each.
