Dr. Earnest gave the injured parties first aid, bringing them immediately to the Nichols Sanitarium.

It is a miricle that all parties escaped with their lives, considering the manner and place in which the wreck occurred.

Business does not require a costly four to six years' college education. Business does not require long apprenticeship at small pay; on the contrary, business offers you a running start—a good nosition and a good income right from the beginning. For big, position and a good income right from the beginning. For big, quick, certain success there is no field of opportunities for high school graduates like business. But you must have a complete knowledge of the fundamentals of business. You must know about business methods, business practice, business terms, business equipment, business organization, and business management. You must know about business appliances, business systems, business English, business law, business letter writing, punctuation, and you must know about business finances, collections, cost, credit, sales and accounting, domestic and foreign exchange. You must know something about executive work and the duties of an executive assistant.

And as excellent as it is your high school education is NOT enough. It does not prepare you for busines any more than it prepares you for medicine, law, engineering or any other profession. It does not qualify you for the thousands of choice positions which are open to you. Are you going to take advantage of your high school education? Add to it with specialized training NOW and make them both pay you rich dividends as long as you live, or are you going to waste that splendid foundation fo education?

For almost a quarter of a century we have been training the ambitious for better places in life. How well we have succeeded is attested by thousands of former students, the great majority of whom are cashing in every day on their few short months and few dollars they spent acquiring their training in our various schools. Home-study courses are one of the big factors in the spread of knowledge of the English tongue. One correspondence school alone has on its books students from 65 countries, including 3,841 students in the Philippines, 500 in Alaska, 130 on the Isle of Cypress, 1,200 in Mexico and Central America, 300 in China and Japan, and 900 in Australia and New Zealand.

New Triumph of the Egg

This is the per

1928 poll taxes

Here's another "triumph of the egg," a culinary triumph.

It's called Goldenrod eggs and is guaranteed to melt the hardest masculine heart, when served with its proper accompaniment, a delicious white sauce.

The white sauce is easily prepared by the home manager and hens do most of the groundwork on the Goldenrod dish proper. In making the white sauce, you melt two tablespoonfuls of butter or margarine in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and cook until the mass bubbles. Combine with this, one cupful of milk, onehalf teaspoonful of salt, and a little pepper, and cook for a minute or two or until the starchy taste has disappeared. Care is required to prevent the sauce from being lumpy.

One and a half cupfuls of this sauce is sufficient for Goldenrod eggs for five persons. The eggs are prepared in this fashion: Chop the whites of five hard-boiled eggs coarsely and mix with white sauce. When very hot, pour over five pieces of hot toast. Press the egg yolks through a sieve and sprinkle thickly over the creamed egge.

Julienne himself could do no better! only 2 pounds yearly.

The home-study movement, with its leaped from 60,537 tons to 473,674 tons, a gain of more than 680 per cent. "A 300,000-ton limit on Philippine sugar imposed by congress in 1909 was liscontinued in 1913. Between 1909 and 1927 sugar imports from the islands had increased more than 1,168 per cent as compared with an average increase of 113 per cent from our other chief sources of supply, including Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Louisiana, and the domestic sugar beet industry. "Over-expansion in tropical countries has confronted the domestic industry with the gravest crisis in Domestic sugar companies vears.

make ends meet. Continuation of unlimited duty-free imports from the Philippines, which are not legally defined as an integral part of the United States, may ultimately wipe out an income to our continental farmers of $100,000,000 annually and a larger investment in factories"

FOOD PRODUCT ADDS TO FARMER REVENUE

New York .- Margarine is a food product of peculiar interest not only to the country's housewives but to 5,-000,000 producers of live stock in the nation.

To the home manager it represents an economical way of whittling down the food bill. From the live-stock raiser's viewpoint, increased consumption of margarine means additional revenue, since certain fats of beef cattle and hogs are worth more when used in the manufacture of margarine than for any other purpose. The production in the United States of 242,654.698 pounds of uncolored and 14,501,929 pounds of colored margarine for the year ending July 30, 1927, meant millions of dollars more revenue to farmers than if no margarine had been produced. Margarine is primarily an animal product in the making of which oils made from the choice fats of beef and pork are used. These are combined with small quantities of the highest grade of refined peanut, cottonseed and coconut oils and blended with milk, salt and sometimes butter to produce the finished product.

In the countries of Europe, margarine is much more of a recognized food than in America. The average Dane eats 451/2 pounds of margarine annually, the Norwegian 35¼, the Hollander 15 2-3, the German 12¼, and the English 1114 pounds. Per capita consumption in the United States is sians carried the formula for making margarine back to Germany whence it was passed on to England Denmark. Belgium, and eventually to America. "From an output of a few thousand nounds, margarine manufacturing in the United States has developed into a major industry with a yearly production valued at more than $60,000,000. About 76,000,000 pounds of milk, 129.-130,000 pounds of vegetable oil, 128.-000,000 pounds of animal fats, and 39.-450.000 pounds of cottonseed oil from American farms, are utilized in the manufacture of margarine every year. Margarine to a very large extent is

teenth street, N. W., Washington, D. The council is an association of the leading correspondence schools operating under a code of ethics designed to insure high standards of homestudy education

"Every year our association directs thousands of young men and women in educational courses to train them for positions for which they are best fitted, with the object of increasing their earning ability," said Doctor Noffsinger. "More than 200 separate courses of study are listed in the curricula of our member schools so that the problem resolves itself into what field is best for the student. He may apply himself to book illustrating or boiler making, carpentry or cartooning, church history or dairying, dressmaking or combustion engines. poultry breeding or psychology, law or etching, geometry or banjo, magazine writing or navigation.

"It is the council's purpose to help him choose out of an almost limitless field the work which will suit his particular talents best. The demand for trained men is even greater than the field for study and the colleges and universities cannot supply the demand. Making the nation's homes into classrooms is the only way out of the difficulty and one which has been proved by thirty-five years of succes ful training of men and women by correspondence."
