"MY TURN"

> ByCarol Ellis

MY APOLOGIES to all my friends that I gave "over the hill" birthday parties to when they reached age 40. It seemed so amusing at the time.

After having reached a whole decade over 40, plus a few more, I can now look back and attest to the fact that age 40 is definitely not library be added to the elementary over the hill. It is not even reaching the pinnacle yet to peer over the other side to see what's up next. You've still got a lot to look forward to at age 40.

you reach that "over the hill" stage because that's when your mind and body part company with each other. said Superintendent Tommy Up until then, your mind tells the old bod something and it obeys.

pretty well one day, feeling really good about yourself and then you happen to see your reflection in a mirror and suddenly it's all over.

the homes of people over age 50. Women would have to learn to fix their hair and face by the "touchy said he thought the TEA team had feely" system. Men would have to gained a pretty good insight into learn to shave that way, too.

When you look in the mirror past age 50, you realize that the body has done some things that no one told it to do. Things have fallen, sagged, wrinkled and folded without so much as asking your permission to do so. Some things have gotten larger: earlobes, nose, chins (plural), spare tire, feet, etc. Some things have shriveled and gotten smaller, but we won't even discuss those. Some things have changed color such as hair and skin. Toenails got thicker and fingernails went brittle.

You notice that there are no children hanging around anymore to help you figure out how to turn all those digital clocks forward and backward twice each year, or to program your VCR for you, or to help you open all those child-proof pill bottles. Now that they are gone, you suddenly realize that those kids were pretty handy to have around. When you get all dressed up in the latest fashions to go out to a fancy to-do, it's hard to decide whether you look chic or just ridiculous. Then once you get there, you introduce your husband of 35 years as "Old Whats-hisname.

"Why have they put a bunch of youngsters in charge of everything," you'll wonder when you notice that all the optometrists, doctors, dentists and politicians are suddenly younger than yourself. The first time you ask for the senior discount at the movie theater, they won't even ask to see your ID, and why were there so many old people hanging around at your last class reunion?

You may also notice that your once rosy glow, peaches and cream complexion is now a mottled mess of brown and red splotches with more lines than the Texas road map. Some things, such as teeth, hearing, eyesight and sense of smell are just gone forever. Things that used to pass for biceps are now hanging down under the upper arm, waving in the breeze. And your body which enjoys waking you up in the middle of the night, is the same one that, next morning when Life must seem like a runaway train for folks in their 90s. Once we pass age 65, our chances of reaching age 75 are one in two. When we pass 75, our chances of reaching 85 run one in four.

We read the other day that half of all the people in the world who've ever lived to age 65 are alive today. That kind of boggles your mind.

And so goes life's persistant battle between the body and the calendar. Most of us just hope we live long enough to be forgiven for all the mistakes we made along the way.

I recently read an article which stated that individualists, or those people whom we call eccentric, usually live up to 10 years longer than regular "normal" people. A bowl, layer the cucumbers, peppers, tomatoes and ham with a layer of seasoning mixture between each vegetable and the next. Whisk the dressing and pour it evenly over the salad. Garnish with chopped parsley and refrigerate the salad for at least 30 minutes to let the flavors blend. Makes 4 to 6

POTATO SALAD 1-1/2 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard 1-1/2 teaspoons paprika

2 tablespoons red or white wine vinegar

3 tablespoons olive oil 1 left-over large baked potato

Salt and pepper, to taste

1/2 small onion, chopped

In a medium-sized serving bowl, combine the mayonnaise, mustard, paprika, vinegar and oil. Gently stir in the potatoes, onion, salt and pepper. Makes 2 to 3 servings. The following recipe does require that you cook the spaghetti, but the fresh sauce is uncooked.

PASTA WITH FRESH TOMATO SAUCE 5 large ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped 3 tablespoons chopped fresh sweet

1 tablespoon chopped fresh chives 3 tablespoons chopped parsley, preferably Italian flat-leafed parsley

3 garlic cloves, chopped or pressed 1/2 cup olive oil

3/4 cup grated Mozzarella cheese Salt and pepper, to taste Fresh grated Parmesan cheese

8 ounces spaghetti Have all the ingredients at room temperature. Combine all the ingredients except the spaghetti and allow to stand at room temperature for about an hour to let the flavors blend. Cook and drain the spaghetti. In a large bowl, combine the spaghetti and the sauce; toss together and serve with Parmesan cheese. Makes 4

Infant mortality rates

ERS

Infant mortality rates in Texas have improved over the past five years, decreasing from 9.0 to 7.8 deaths per 1,000 births. The improvement is largely the result of better prenatal care and neonatal technology. Texas' rank among the states, however, dropped from twenty-first to thirty-first.
