FROM WODEN SCHOOL

During the past term the school at Woden pursued agricultural courses in connection with other branches and studies, and Saturday afternoon The Sentinel received a substantial exhibit of their efficiency in the matter, which is proof that is indisputable.

Prof. Schultz, the superintendent, brought to the office a fine collection of beans, onions, beets, and other things that grow to such perfection in these East Texas-gardens, and a very fine turnip from his own garden.

The collection was a most choice variety, and we need no further proof that Woden is making good use of the money given her by the state for agricultural studies.
