

LA PAZ IS A SURPRISE

(This is the ninth article of an air trip around Central and South America.)

By JOHN D. MONTGOMERY

When I visited La Paz, to my great surprise, I found that the best capital in the world, La Paz, isn't the capital after all. In 1900, the people of the north rebelled and overthrew the existing government and established as the official capital, Sucre, in the central part of this inland nation. Sucre, however, is not the legal capital of Bolivia.

La Paz, 118,000 population, is a modern city with many beautiful parks, plazas and prados. Many tourists say that it is the most beautiful city on the west coast. Twenty-five per cent of the inhabitants are native Bolivians and the remainder a mixture with Spanish.

All trains to La Paz meet at the top on the altiplano, 500 feet above the city, and use the one-track-like track in ascending on the side of the canyon and sometimes eight stretches of track can be seen from the train.

I was invited to tea at the home of a Bolivian. Most of the American and British residents, it seemed, were present. They danced and enjoyed refreshments until tea was over. I made two attempts to dance but my heart kept going too fast for comfort.

I asked a business man if Bolivia hopes to have a seaport. "No, you bet not!" he answered. "If we had an outlet to the sea, it would only mean battleships, admirals and more debts."

La Paz is high in the Andes—snow-capped mountains over shadow the city—yet the unexplored and untapped tropics is only thirty minutes away by airplane.

La Paz is a lovely city, well worth the interesting ride up the mountains to reach it. It is an Old World city transplanted to the west coast of South America. Recent inventions have not changed the living habits of the Indians one bit and they are still as primitive as ever.

Treaty

Italy to retaliate the affairs of Europe.

The surprising extent and depth of popular resentment against France is one of the outstanding impressions an observer receives in Italy.

In an effort to obtain a comprehensive list of the grievances, I made a list of the principal complaints against France mentioned to me by the Italian man-in-the-street ranging from waiters, hotel clerks, and officers, journalists to government officials.

Among the grievances and irritations mentioned were: That France had arm and diplomatically supports Jugo-Slavia, Italy's hostile neighbor; that France and the other allies cheated Italy out of her rightful compensation in territory for her war sacrifices; that Smau and part of Anatolia were promised to Italy in writing during the war but given to Greece; that France and England grabbed the desirable Turkish possessions in Asia Minor and gave them to who needed colonies nothing that France and the other allies bristled at the head of the Adriatic in favor of Jugo-Slavia; that France wants to be mistress of the Mediterranean.

Other Grievances.

Of more recent grievances were that France permits anti-fascist Italian political emigres to hate plots in France; political murders of fascists in France by anti-fascists have been dealt with leniently by the courts; the French press has assailed and belittled Italy and been anti-fascist; France takes every means to wean the hundreds of thousands of Italian immigrants from their nationality; that France tries to force French citizenship upon Italians in Tunisia, get rid of Italian schools and institutions altogether; they say Italy has developed Tunisia and other Frenchmen two to one; that France is jealous of Italian industry and commerce in the Mediterranean; that France refuses to admit Italy's rights to equal parity; and many others.

There is also much suspicion and irritation with Jugo-Slavia for a variety of reasons, many of which date back long before the war when much of present-day Jugo-Slavia was held by Austria—Italy's hereditary enemy.

When asked what Italy wanted any revision of treaties a prominent Italian said: "Colonies, territorial expansion. In 1941 there will be 47,000,000 Italians—about 100,000 more than there are now. We must have somewhere to expand."

This I was told, is one of the guiding principles of Mussolini's foreign policy—political and economic expansion.

Tomorrow—Miller tells of Mussolini's plans for gigantic military display on fascism's tenth anniversary.

MENUS FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

Few housewives realize the possibilities of fish as a basis for broths and cream soups. Oyster stew is universally popular but, with the exception of women who live near the seacoast and are versed in the ways of varying fish dishes, cooks seldom use other varieties of fish in soups.

Clam broth is easily digested and often appears on the invalid tray. It also makes an excellent first course for the mid-season dinner.

Scallops will be liked in a clear broth, chowder or cream soup. Cooked in this way, they are suitable for quite small children.

Fish chowders are almost a meal in and of themselves and compare favorably with a meat stew in nourishment.

There are many excellent brands of canned clam broth on the market and the busy housekeeper will find a valuable time saver. The following rule uses fresh clams and will serve four to six persons.

Clam Broth
Two dozen clams, 2 cups cold water, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.
Wash clams thoroughly and scrub with a stiff brush, changing the water many times. Put in kettle with cold water, cover tightly and bring to the boiling point. Simmer until shells open. Cool in liquor and, when cool enough to handle, open and save juice that escapes. Trim off soft part of clam and save. Chop the tough part and simmer in the broth for 15 minutes. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth. Add lemon juice and reheat to serve. One tablespoon slightly salted whipped cream is often served on each cup of broth.
Clam and tomato bisque is a delicious rich cream soup suitable to serve for luncheon.

Scallop broth is a delicately flavored soup which gains nourishment by the addition of milk.

Scallop Broth
One pint scallops, 2 cups milk, 1 cup water, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon lemon juice.
Wash scallops and cut in small pieces. Sprinkle with lemon juice

Daily Menu
BREAKFAST—Stewed dried peaches, cereal, cream, tomato omelet, crisp toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON—Cream of scallop soup, apple and celery salad, jellied prune ring, grape juice.
DINNER—Chili con carne, head lettuce with Russian dressing, rice bread, upside-down pineapple cake, milk, coffee.

and let stand 15 minutes. Add water and bring to boiling point. Heat milk and add to hot scallop mixture. Add butter, salt and pepper and simmer just below the boiling point for 15 minutes. Strain and serve.

Cream of scallop soup is made entirely with milk and is very nourishing. One quart of scallops are needed. One-half cup whole scallops are reserved and parboiled and the rest are chopped and simmered in milk with seasonings for half an hour. This mixture is strained and slightly thickened with butter and flour rubbed together. Then the parboiled scallops are added and when the soup is very hot it is served with crisp crackers.

HUNTING AND FISHING NOW BIG U. S. INDUSTRY

By DR. FRANK THONE
U. P. Science Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Hunting and fishing in the United States are not mere pastimes; together they constitute a billion-dollar industry.

This is according to the estimate of the Senate's special committee on conservation of wild life resources, which has been conducting a nation-wide survey, under the chairmanship of Sen. Frederic C. Walcott.

The investment in Federal and State lands and equipment devoted to wild animals, birds and fish, the report states, amounts to about half a billion dollars. Game lands and fish waters in private hands, it is estimated, amounts to another half-billion, so that these outdoor recreations can hold up their heads, financially, with such "big-time" indoor recreations as radio, the movies and midget golf.

Based on records of hunting and fishing licenses issued, the committee estimated a number of hunters and fishermen benefiting by these investments at 13 millions. Hunters and fishermen form only a fraction of the whole group who enjoy the wild life display in national and state parks, forests and game sanctuaries.

Senator Walcott and his committee feel that the federal government has not been doing its share toward the solution of wild life problems, and they recommend increased appropriations and larger personnel, both for carrying on work which lies strictly within the province of the federal government and for co-operation with the various States in meeting state problems.

Lowest Priced Car to Offer Free Wheeling

Studebaker's new six of 70 horsepower selling from $795 to $995 at the factory, is the lowest priced car in the world which may be obtained with free wheeling. This engineering advancement is now found in all Studebaker cars as well as many other makes, including America's two finest cars—Pierce-Arrow and Lincoln. The model illustrated is the Studebaker Six Regal sedan. It carries six wire wheels and luggage grid as standard and sells for $995 at the factory, spare tires and bumpers extra.

JOEL HUNT TO COACH BACKS AT A. AND M.

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 7.—Joel Hunt, erstwhile triple-threat gridiron star at Aggie and who closed his playing career here as captain of the 1927 championship Texas Aggie eleven, has been added to the A. & M. coaching staff as assistant football coach for special work with backfield players...

Hunt's employment at A. & M. will, in a way, be seasonal since, as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals, his services are claimed on the diamond in the Spring and summer...

Hunt joined the Aggie coaching staff last fall following the start of the season to assist in developing backfield football men. With a meteoric career as a ball-totter to his credit while wearing the Maroon and White of the Aggies, his services on the coaching staff are expected to prove highly valuable in offensive tactics, Coach Bell said.

Future Farmers At College Organize

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 7.—The first collegiate chapter of the Future Farmers of America in Texas was organized recently at the A. & M. College of Texas with a charter membership of 28 seniors in agricultural education. The chapter was named after Dean C. H. Winkler of the school of vocational teaching and its particular purpose is to acquaint seniors in agricultural education with ways and means of organizing and conducting Future Farmers chapters for high school students in vocational agriculture...

The Future Farmers movement in Texas was started in July, 1928, at the state conference of teachers of vocational agriculture held at College Station. During the first year of organization 112 local chapters were formed throughout the state. There are now 182 local chapters with total membership of 3,500. A monthly magazine, The Future Farmer News, is published by the state adviser.

For Ginger's Sake by ETHEL HUESTON

(Continued from page 6) "Well, rather." "Then you see how nice it will be, don't you?" Ginger brightened. "Pat will keep Speed—er—busy, and you will look after the poor little sick sister—but pretty, Eddy, she's got to be pretty! And—er—Bard can get those portraits done."

Eddy promised to see what he could do about it. He began by doing straight to Pat. "Pat," he cried, "you ever-present-help-in-time-of-trouble! We're going to teach that one the lesson of her sweet young life. Now hearken unto this. I think Ginger is right about one thing. Speed was as good-looking as the devil—I know I used to lay awake nights wishing I could look like that! And a sister of his is bound to be a sweet, plaintive, pretty little thing—and you know these none-too-angelic artists eat that stuff up alive. Well, tell him. You give Speed a run-around, and believe me I'll stick to Ginger like a sore thumb. I'll be the original hair shirt."

"But, Eddy—" "Listen," he took both of her hands in his. "It's up to us. Think of the way the Incorrigible has bulldozed all of us for the last 10 years. Think how she has schemed and wheedled and pulled wires—and got away with it. Now, the day of reckoning has come. We'll sick Little Sister on Bard in a way he can't dodge and remain a gentleman."

"You keep Speed off the market. And I, Eddy, the farmer of Pay Dirt, I will be little Ginger within an inch of her life. I'll sit with her, walk with her, ride with her, dance with her, until she will wish I as dead. Let Pay Dirt go hang. What do I care if I have to mortgage the plow to pay for my pleasure?"

"But, Eddy—" Eddy caressed the small hands in his and smiled at her. "If any one of us truly cares for anybody else of us," he said gently, "we'll come through the racket thicker than ever. We understand each other perfectly, don't we, Pat?"

"Yes," she said. "But—Ginger's pretty good, Eddy. As soon as she makes up her mind what she wants, she'll get it." "Yes, and we want her to have it. So we'll make it easy for her to make up her mind. One thing is sure. Whatever she'd like in the world she may think she'd like to have—it won't be me. By the time this visit is over she will wish me safe once and for all snugly asleep in my six feet of sod." "And, quite surprisingly, Eddy laughed heartily. (To Be Continued)

CHARM CHATS by Nancy Earle

The nervous woman is the one particularly to whom this article is being written; the woman who is always sewing for her children, staying awake nights to do so, but not getting any thanks for it; the woman who is the only one in the neighborhood upon whom you can call for a favor and be absolutely certain it will be granted; the woman who never spends any money upon herself, and feels that she is a martyr for the sake of her family. If you should say anything to her she will make a thousand and one excuses why she can't spend any money for herself.

Have you noticed how such a woman loves to gossip? It is because she enjoys another's tale of woe. It is a true saying that misery loves company. She is miserable because she wants to be; not for anything in the world would she be otherwise. Give her something for herself and see if she does not give it away, and then hear her say for herself. She literally makes a doormat of herself, and the only satisfaction she gets is when others walk all over her; the harder they walk the better she likes it.

INCOME TAX

No. 5 Failure to understand that section of the revenue act which relates to the apportionment of the personal exemption of persons who were married during the taxable year has resulted in numerous errors in income tax returns, usually to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. The act provides that if the marital status of a taxpayer changes during the year, his personal exemption shall be determined by apportionment in accordance with the number of months he was single or married. The fractional part of a month is disregarded, unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it is considered a month.
