A "Fun Visit"—With Romance?

Mrs. Curtis Dall, sister of Elliott Roosevelt, may have arrived in Chicago at the same as her brother and his "friend" Ruth Goggin just for a "fun visit," as she explained, but part of the "fun" consisted of chaperoning the two young people who deny an impending wedding.

Racketeering in Detroit Dropped Off to Almost Nothing After Reaching Peak in Days of Old "Purple Gang"

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series on the status of racketeers in American cities.

By C. C. NICOLET. United Press Staff Correspondent. (Copyright 1933 by United Press) Detroit has proved a metropolis can exist in America without kidnapings, payroll holdups, bank robberies and kindred crimes of the organized underworld, but the racketeers are as busy there as elsewhere.

Since the fall of 1930, when vigorous prosecution broke up the old "Purple Gang," Wayne county has been free from the kidnaping terror and from major thefts of the marauding gang type.

Harry S. Troy, prosecuting attorney, discovered the beginnings of the racket boom early in June. At his request, a one-man grand jury was called into session and secret investigations were begun.

The one-man grand jury uncovered within a month a racket in federal building contracts; a waste paper racket; an attempt to obtain a monopoly on distribution of legal beer; a new cleaning and dyeing extortion scheme; an arson racket and attempts of racketeers to corrupt legislators.

Roosevelt Away on Week-End Trip

WIRES STREAM INTO OFFICE OF HUGH JOHNSON

Indicating Nation Taking Up Roosevelt's Plea For Co-operation.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—President Roosevelt's re-employment drive surged forward today on a wave of support from all parts of the country.

Blated by initial response, Johnson hoped the program would pull back to work 6,000,000 of the men and women now idle.

President Roosevelt also received a flood of communications and offers of help. In many cases employers pledged themselves to sign voluntary agreements shortening working hours and fixing minimum wages.

New Group is to Assume Relief Duties August 1

The new county set-up for administration of state and federal relief will become effective Aug. 1, it was determined at a meeting of the new and old committees at Eastland Thursday, called by J. J. Boley, field representative of the Texas rehabilitation and relief commission. Present at the meeting to express the thanks of the commission for the services of the retiring group was Harry Tom King, Abilene, a member of the state commission.

W. W. Gilbert of Carbon was elected county administrator or relief officer. His duties, F. E. Harrell of Cisco, a member of the new committee, said this morning, have already begun although the new committee will not function officially until Aug. 1.

Responsibility for the relief and approval of projects rests entirely with the relief officer, who is responsible to the Texas commission, it was explained. The county committee will act in an advisory capacity. This represents a change of policy to the extent that, under the former system, responsibility (Continued on page 2)

Cole and Moore Will Tangle On Mat Mon. Night

King Cole, now making his home here in Ranger has declared war on all wrestlers who have been appearing at the Elks club arena. He states that he can and will beat all who will meet him on the mat. U. G. Moore heard about this and lost no time in issuing a challenge to Cole, resulting in them being matched for Monday night. Cole appearing on the mat in Ranger last Monday night for the first time in several years made a good impression on the wrestling fans by beating Eddie Brock in a very convincing manner. Cole is big and strong, looks good on the mat and shows to be a wrestler that knows his business. He stands a favorite to beat Moore as he out weighs Moore a few pounds and has had more experience. They are sure to give the fans the hardest fought battle ever seen before either goes down to defeat. They will wrestle the best two falls out of three to a finish under A. W. A. rules.

The next match which will also be to a finish will be between two fast middleweights. Lobo Brown who made a big hit with the fans two weeks ago, will return to wrestle Jack Kerns, better known as the Iron Man. Brown who hails from New Mexico is a fast and clever wrestler and depends on the science of wrestling to win his matches. While Kerns, who comes from Denver, is also a champion wrestler he depends a lot on his strength to win. This bout will be interesting to see if a strong man can ever come science. Kerns bends horseshoes, breaks steel cables and can hold 50 men, which he will demonstrate while in Ranger. He will show a number of other strong man feats.

The boxing bouts are getting better each week at the Elks club and the crowds are increasing. Benny Wilson has lined up two good matches for Monday night in the Golden Glove tournament. In the first bout Benny Greenfield, the Jew baby, will meet Buck Woods of Desdemona in a four rounder.

The other bout will bring Kid Lindsey, the Cisco flash, and Jimmy Coffee of Abilene together for a six-round affair. Lindsey made a great hit last Monday night when he showed real class and showmanship by beating Jelly Harry. The boy is tough and gives the fight fans a run for their money, and he is in condition and never stops fighting. In Coffee he will meet what is known as a boxer, this is the reason these boys were matched, a boxer against a fighter, this is sure to be good.

The matches start promptly at 8:30 and those that desire to get tickets early will find them on sale at the City Tailor Shop.

BARBERS WIN ALL STAR GAME BY 7-6 SCORE

The Ranger All-Stars, playing their first practice game together, were defeated Friday afternoon by the Barbers by a score of 7 to 6. The Barbers got nine hits off the pitching of Hershel Angus, while Wafford allowed but eight hits for the All-Stars.

Good playing on both sides featured the game, with the Barbers making two errors, while the All-Stars made three. In the first inning the All-Stars started the game off with five hits and three runs, and went hitless and scoreless until the fourth, when they made one more tally on one hit, went hitless again in the sixth and scored two runs on two hits in the last of the seventh.

The Barbers scored one run on one hit in the first inning, went scoreless in the second, made three to take the lead in the third, took another in the fourth and two in the fifth and a double play, Downtown to Sloan to Dinsmore stopped a rally in the last of the sixth.

Jean Harlow And Clark Gable Are Co-Starred Again

Jean Harlow and Clark Gable are reunited as co-stars by popular demand in "Hold Your Man," a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature which comes Monday to the Arcadia theatre. The smashing success of "Red Dust," in which they were teamed romantically, brought such a response from public and exhibitors that Anita Loos, famous "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" author, was assigned to provide a new vehicle for the screen lovers.

Miss Harlow, who sprang into film recognition in "Hell's Angels" won even greater acclaim in "Red Headed Woman" and clinched her hold on stardom in the tropical picture with Gable, with whom she first appeared in "The Secret Six." Gable, whose career likewise Greatest Refrigerator Advance in Years!

IT'S DIFFICULT to write calmly about the New Air-Cooled Electrolux! Nothing as fine has ever before been developed in an automatic refrigerator. Such things as extra food space... lots of ice cubes... porcelain interior... non-stop defrosting... you can take for granted. But that's not all. Electrolux has no moving parts. Nothing, therefore, to cause noise. Nothing to wear or cause trouble. Also, with good reason, the operating cost is lower than with any other automatic refrigerator. No water is used. A tiny gas flame does all the work. Consumes even less gas than formerly. Today, see Electrolux. On display at our showrooms.

Until we learned better

Henry Ford
 Dearborn, Mich.

Until we learned better, we used to mix wood and steel in our car bodies and wheels.

It was the best way to make bodies—then. But the state of the art has advanced.

Of course, it is more expensive to make an all-steel body than to make a wooden frame and nail steel panels on to it. The better way involves an initial expenditure of several millions of dollars for new dies, which renders a change very costly. Cars, especially large expensive cars which are produced in small volume, cannot afford this, because the dies cost as much for one car as for a million. That alone explains why all-steel bodies are not used in all cars.

But our basic policy from the beginning is to make a good car better, regardless of cost.

For example, when we discarded wood-steel body construction, it was not because we lacked wood. We still have some thousands of acres of the best hard wood in America. Economy would urge us to use up the wood first, and then adopt the better all-steel body. But we decided that quality was more important than expense.

We weighed the reasons, for and against, before we made the change. We could see only one reason for retaining a mixed wood-and-steel body—nailing the metal on, instead of welding an all-steel body into a strong one-piece whole. That reason was, it would be cheaper—for us.

Our reasons for adopting an all-steel body were these: A wood-steel body is not much stronger structurally than its wooden frame. In all American climates, wood construction weakens with age. Every used car lot gives evidence of this. Rain seeps in between joints and the wood decays. A car may have a metal surface, and yet not be of steel construction. Under extreme shock or stress the steel body remains intact—dented perhaps, but not crushed.

Steel does not need wood for strength or protection. Wood is fine for furniture, but not for the high speed vehicles of 1933.

In the Ford body there are no joints to squeak, no seams to crack or leak.

The all-steel body is more expensive—to us, but not to you. By all odds, then, steel bodies seem preferable.

Wheels also have become all-steel. No one argues that an electrically welded one-piece steel wheel, such as the Ford wheel, needs to be "strengthened" by adding wood to it.

The one-piece all-steel body is the strongest, safest, quietest, most durable body made. That is our only reason for making them.

BARGAIN BRIDE

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ELINOR STAFFORD, 20, falls in love with BARRETT GOVINS, 25, but her jealous scheming mother, LIDA STAFFORD, breaks up the romance by convincing Barrett that Elinor is a heartless girl.

When Elinor's aunt, wealthy MISS ELKA SEXTON, dies, she leaves her fortune to Barrett. Then drunken VANCE CARTER shoots BENTWELL STAFFORD, Elinor's father. Barrett tells Elinor that if she will marry him and live in his home as a guest for a year he will give her the entire $50,000 fortune to divide among her relatives. Knowing the money may save her father's life, Elinor agrees.

The marriage takes place. Barrett, in spite of the fact Lida has told him, finds himself more in love with Elinor than ever. He has a wren, nine-year-old GERALD ROBERT, who is the son of his half-sister, MARCIA RADNOR. Barrett has promised Marcia never to reveal the boy's true story.

The doctor orders a change of climate for Elinor's father, and she goes with him to Alaska. Lida asks Barrett for $50,000 when he returns, but his detectives on his trail and learn about his wife. Lida concludes the boy is Barrett's son.

Barrett pays an unannounced visit to Alaska. He finds ROBERT there and suspects Elinor of entering on a titillation with Bob.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI
"WHAT attractive cups," Barrett commented, glancing at the tray.

Elinor nodded. "Everything here is attractive. I understand the owners haven't much money but they certainly have excellent taste. It's a darling house. I love it!"

"It's for sale, Elinor. Just as it is—furnished. May I buy it for you?" Barrett asked earnestly. She looked startled, raising her face to his.

"I'd like to leave something with you that will make you remember me," he said wistfully. "I should think you could let me do that—if you leave me. Let me get it any way and you can decide later about keeping it. Will you, dear?"

He had said, "If you leave me—." The thought churned in Elinor's heart and set her pulse racing. Then he had thought she might not leave him!

"You're very kind—" she whispered.

"Not a bit of it!" He drew his hand away, moistened his lips and sat back away from her. He was going soft again, he warned himself.

"How about the house?" he questioned after a silence as she set her cup on the tray.

"I'm tempted," she admitted. "They even have the books I like on the shelves. Could you buy the books too?" she finished eagerly.

"I should think so. I understand the house is offered just as it is."

It was offered as the result of another domestic tragedy, he knew, but he didn't want Elinor to know that. It might change her feeling for the place a bit. Later she played for him softly, so that the piano could not be heard in the wing where Bentwell Stafford slept. Finally, resolving to "let it over," Barrett suggested that they go to the terrace. He laid a light wrap about her shoulders, remonstrated that it wouldn't keep her warm. She answered, as women always do, that it was very warm and they stepped across the window-sill into the night.

RAIN was coming and big, billowing clouds raced across the sky.

the moon. Now the terrace was bathed in silver; now black. The lights of the village pricked the ebon curtain to the north. The soft stir was in the air that comes before a tempestuous, southern downpour. Leaves trembled, and somewhere a shutter swung. From the nearest house, a half-acre away, came the hushed strains of the latest, sentimentally appealing waltz. Some blossoms proclaimed themselves and the fact that the moon had been hot by losing a heavy, sweet odor.

Barrett wanted to be beyond reach of the house, beyond a point where a keenly listening ear could catch even so much as a chance phrase. Drawing her arm through his, he led her to a balustrade that guarded a terrace from a dramatically beautiful drop.

"This is a charming place," he murmured a trifle thickly as she withdrew her arm.

"Yes—"

He leaned against the balustrade against which she too, was leaning. He found it difficult to begin.

"Cigaret?" he asked.

"No, thank you."

She watched his face as he held a lighter with a wind guard to his cigarette. Something had made him rather nervous, she saw. Long lines were pulled at the sides of his lips, which were stiff, yet uneasy.

"How long can you stay?" she asked.

"As long as you want me to," he answered. He snapped the lighter shut, slipped it into a pocket. She felt that his eyebrows were drawn close although just then the moon was kept from shedding light by a dense bank of clouds.

Was he already regretting his gentleness, she wondered. A keen-bladed knife seemed plunged into her heart and drawn slowly out again as she considered the question.

"I want you to stay as long as you want to," she said with a coolness of which she was proud. "I want from you only what you can give—without regret."

"I shall regret giving you nothing," he said quickly, "if you will remember our bargain."

"What bargain, Barrett?"

"We agreed, you remember, that neither of us was to indulge in a flirtation during this year."

"But, Barrett, I never have," she answered. "I couldn't! I never did—before our marriage."

FOR a few minutes he could not trust himself to speak. Did she think him a complete fool? he asked himself.

"Elinor, I know you are very attractive. You must have had love affairs," he managed to say at length without betraying the deep anger that shook him.

"But I never appealed to men, Barrett. That's a brutal fact. I don't like to admit it, but it is the fact—"

The moon had shaken herself free from the mask of clouds.

"Older men?" Barrett questioned slowly. "I've heard they liked you?" "I've heard they liked you?" "I've heard they liked you?" "I've heard they liked you?"

"Yes," she admitted and smiled. To him her smile seemed cynically and cruelly amused.

Russell And Sons
Are Agents For United States Tires

H. M. Russell & Son who recently purchased the Henry Service Station on Commerce and Mesquite streets, Ranzer, announce today that they have been appointed as agents for the United States tires. Mr. Russell says they have just received a new stock of these famous tires in all sizes and sent to your constituents were "not printed at government expense." However, I further note that you sewed the district down with copies of this speech, by means of your franking privileges, while the rest of us are paying 50 per cent increase in postage rates.

I further note that you say that the testimony before the committee on banking and currency showing that "J. Pierpont Morgan and his 19 multi-millionaire partners paid no income taxes whatever to the government in 1931 and 1932," and that this fact makes your blood boil.

I agree with you that this is sufficient to make anyone's blood boil but I think the blame should be placed where it belongs—on congress and not on J. Pierpont and his partners. If you put a calf in a lot and leave the gate open, it is useless to cuss the calf because he walks out. The fact that J. Pierpont and his partners failed to pay income taxes during 1931 and 1932 is due to a defect in the income tax law, which I understand, you had a hand in passing. You will recall when this testimony was brought to light before the committee, President Roosevelt's son stated that the loop-hole was in the income tax

Hon. Thomas L. Blanton, Abilene, Texas. Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a copy of the speech which you delivered in the house of representatives on May 26, and note that the copies which you sent to your constituents were "not printed at government expense." However, I further note that you sewed the district down with copies of this speech, by means of your franking privileges, while the rest of us are paying 50 per cent increase in postage rates.

our income tax law, which brought about this condition.

The trouble, as it appears to the boys up the forks of the creek, is a lame congress and not with Mr. Morgan and his 19 partners. The defect in the law is making your constituents' blood boil.

Since you broadcast this "blood boiling" speech over the district, through your franking privileges, I am taking the liberty of handing a copy of this letter to the local press.

Yours very truly,
P. J. COUGHLIN,
Ranger, Texas, July 22, 1933.

SHE turned abruptly and, head high, moved toward one of the long French windows—an oblong, lemon square in the blackness. Her knees were shaking, her heart pounding. She had learned love and hate and their possible blend.

Something made him follow her. In the living room he overtook her to lay an arresting hand upon her arm. She turned to him, head still high. "By God," he whispered, staring down at her. They were real tears—real—

"Don't! Let me—go!" she appealed, voice breaking. He followed her, humble and utterly shaken, to watch her make her way up the stair.

After a long moment he followed her. "Elinor?" he whispered.

"Don't—" she begged. "I can't talk now!"

She went into her room and he into his. He heard her turn the key in the lock of the door between the rooms. He stared long and dully at the door. The slight sound hurt almost as deeply as the fright he had seen in her eyes.

Would he ever again have the trust she had once given him? He remembered a maxim an eastern priest had quoted, "To know the value of a thing you must lose it."

He heard her moving in the adjoining room as he sank back in a low chair. He did not sleep and knew she did not. He saw the light in her room go on at three, printing a slit of yellow beneath the door. The light remained there for two hours.

Elinor lay perfectly quiet. If Barrett had loved her how she would have welcomed the moment! But he had said only that he understood her and her affairs. She would have trusted him anywhere! He could believe as he liked. He had had the chance to know her. Never would she say a word to defend herself.

What would be the use? She had defied her guilt and he had laughed at her denial.

The night was endless. She looked at a small clock that ticked merrily beside her bed. The hands pointed at half past four.

Missionary Writes Of Work In Japan

The following letter has been received from Joe J. Mickle Jr., of Japan, by the Joe J. Mickle Jr. Circle of the Woman's Missionary Society of Eastland:

Dear Friends: Ever since Mother told me that you had been so kind as to give your missionary circle my name I have been intending to get a short note of greeting and thanks mailed to you. But the days and the months have slipped away (they always seem to go more rapidly in the spring than any other time) without this being done. Perhaps it is yet not too late to let you know how much the honor is appreciated.

Mrs. Mickle and I celebrated our twelfth wedding anniversary yesterday and within a few months we will be able to say that it has been 12 years since we first came to Japan. And though the Japan of today was in the making 12 years ago, the changes that have taken place in this time have been great and far reaching. No one can adequately understand Japan who does not realize that she, although an Oriental nation in methods of thought and action, is being remade by western influences. Her one compelling desire is for westernization. Her nationalists and super-patriots may deny this, but Japan's whole program of military expansion is simply the nineteenth century program of western nations carried over into the present twentieth century. In other words, Japan simply finds herself some 75 years behind in some matters. She is determined to catch up. A good part of the world seems to have gone mad, and if political and military nationalism has not seized upon some nations, there are none that are not guilty of an attempt at economic nationalism. I feel that the United States faces her full share of the guilt in this matter.

Japan has, as you know, gone the way of Italy and Germany. There is in Japan today a military mindedness which does not tolerate freedom of critical expressions. It is going to take years of patient tolerance and education in order to get her past this very critical stage. On last Monday night I came back through Osaka railway station (Osaka is the largest industrial city of Japan, population 2,500,000) and one would have thought that Japan was engaged in a major war—soldiers everywhere with thousands of others giving their "banzai" as the trains pull out. But this situation cannot go on indefinitely. Give them enough rope and they will hang themselves. These things come and go by waves. I note with a great deal of satisfaction the growth of the peace movement among English and American college students. They are saying some things about the war system which shows that they have seen through the false front which has made war possible in the past. Selfishness, greed and lies—dressed up in high-sounding words and carrying the flag to the tunes of a military band, this is the method in all countries. The military party in one country thrives upon the military party in another country. There is no greater falsehood than the one which says that military preparedness prevents war. Military preparedness only gives the war party in another country the opportunity it wants to get more money for their own program—and so the whole world goes on in its mad race, no one having the courage to face the matter squarely and throw the whole thing overboard. This is the reason that I wish the peace movement in the U. S. A. all success. Because I know it will stimulate similar movements in other countries and at the same time will do more than anything else to knock the foundation from under the military parties. They will no longer have an excuse for their wild programs.

Cutie Cuts Cuticle!

I feel it is at this point that the women of America can do their bit in the world situation. Whatever helps improve the broad international outlook and peace-mindedness in one country will eventually react on all other countries. Perhaps Mrs. Mickle could really write a more interesting letter to the ladies than I. Next time I shall ask her to try it. Again thanking you for the honor which you have done me, I am,

Most cordially yours,
JOE J. MICKLE JR.
June 7, 1933.

Al Williams Will Give Radio Eye View Of Balbo Flight

With all America thrilling over the daring achievement of General Italo Balbo and his Italian air armada, Captain Al Williams and Ted Husing will collaborate in giving Sunday's radio listeners a vivid description of the arrival in New York City, over the Columbia Broadcasting System. The noted American flyer is particularly competent to offer his version of the sensational event since he officially welcomed the Mussolini sky fleet in his famous Curtiss Hawk over Manhattan Island.

This program will be a sustaining 15 minutes over a national network. Ted Husing will ask questions and Capt. Al Williams will answer. In addition, Al Williams, who has held the world's air speed record for eight consecutive years, will give a brief story of his sensations at the time of the arrival. This program will be a follow-up of the 15 minutes devoted by the Columbia Broadcasting System to the arrival of Italy's trans-Atlantic air fleet of 24 seaplanes, last Wednesday. On this occasion, Capt. Al Williams was introduced to the radio audience as the "man who welcomed and flew in with General Balbo." Mention also was made of the fact that the holder of the distinguished flying cross is now manager of aviation sales for the Gulf Refining company.

Judging by those prohibition repeal victories in Alabama and Arkansas, the "solid south" is no longer solid—but liquid.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

"My new model electric refrigerator runs for less than a nickel a day" is the story we hear from women who watch these little items of the family budget. And while the operating cost is low, the advantages of electric refrigeration are so great that the few pennies spent each day for electricity are quickly absorbed by the dimes and quarters saved by trouble-free electric refrigeration.

With electric refrigerators priced below $100 and the operating cost so low, you can't afford to be without a modern electric refrigerator in your home.

*This statement was made by the owner of a popular make of electric refrigerator within the $100 price range. The operating cost of larger models is slightly higher.
