AUGUST REVOLUTION FEARED IN CUBA

BUYERS ASKED TO BUY FROM N.R.A. STORES

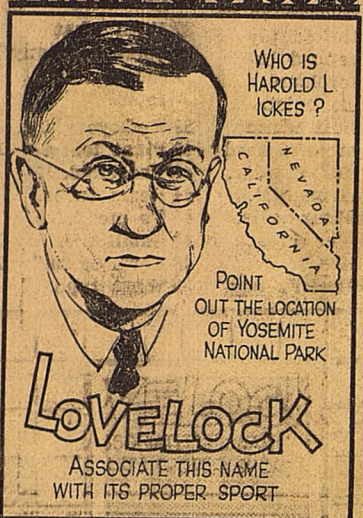

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The government sought to throw necessary power behind the NRA drive today by appealing to consumers to "spend for re-employment" but to buy only from the firms displaying the blue eagle.

"It is what we buy and have and use that makes business upon which the program depends," Gen. Hugh Johnson, leader of the recovery campaign, said. "No employer can go on increasing payrolls without increasing business. The part of buyers is now to buy or this plan will fail."

In addition to the launching of the buy now campaign, a busy week-end at NRA headquarters brought these developments:

- 1.—Johnson expressed belief "we will clean up all existing strikes" under the truce proclaimed by President Roosevelt.
2. Deputy NRA Administrator Whiteside threatened to withdraw blue eagles from Indiana grocery stores which were reported planning to limit store hours to less than 63 hours a week.
3. President Roosevelt announced the government wherever possible, would adjust existing contracts with private firms to make allowance for increased costs under the NRA program.
- 4.—Terms of the permanent code for the women's cloak and suit industry were revealed, banning sweatshop conditions.

Death of Child Called Drowning

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 7.—The death of 7-year-old Dalbert Aposhian, which provoked almost an unprecedented local search for a "torture murderer," was described as accidental today by Sheriff Ed Cooper.

Cooper sided with Dr. F. A. Wagoner, Los Angeles county surgeon, who reported after an examination of the mutilated body that the boy undoubtedly drowned accidentally and was disfigured by crabs.

Investigators had worked on the theory the child had come to his death at the hands of a fiend.

Clues Are Sought In Murder Case

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Blondes and a brewery appeared today to be the centers of police interest in the investigation of the murder of Henry F. Sanborn, railroad official, and an attorney for the slain man's family predicted that "this murder will be solved."

Herbert McKinnis, the attorney, denied however, that either the missing fiancée of Sanborn or other women with whom he had been associated, could offer any clues.

Sanborn's body was found Saturday night buried near a heavily travelled highway on Long Island. He disappeared July 17. His absence was reported by a business associate July 24.

A Negro Tradition Finds Body In River

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The colored folk of Dixie have a tradition that a bundle of fodder dropped into a river where a person was drowned will drift to the dead person's body.

The tradition was borne out recently when a 73-year-old negro dropped a big bundle of fodder into the Congaree River near here and it floated downstream for about five miles to an old boat landing where the body of 11-year-old A. J. Cunningham was found.

Young Cunningham was drowned two days previously while attempting to swim the river.

If you have not received the sales forms see County Agent J. C. Patterson or Mr. Jay at the county's agent's office and get one, sign it, and send it in at once.

"The farmers have been given this privilege to help them and we feel that they should immediately take advantage of it," Mr. Jay said.

Grand Jury Says Great Number of Thefts Alarming

The 91st grand jury in its report to Judge Geo. L. Davenport calls attention to what it declares to be an alarming amount of stealing in the county and attributes much of it to what it says appears to be an organized ring. The grand jury's report follows in full:

The State of Texas, County of Eastland.

To the Hon. Geo. L. Davenport, Judge of said court:

On this the 5th day of August, A. D. 1933, we, the grand jury for your June Term, A. D. 1933, desire to report that we have examined 147 witnesses during this term, and have been in session a total of seven days during the term. We have returned 77 indictments, 74 of which are for felonies and the other three for misdemeanors.

We desire to point out to the court, and to the public in general that we have found an alarming amount of stealing going on in our county, some of it of the petty variety, and quite a bit of an even more serious nature; there is evidence of an organized criminal ring operating in this respect, and their depredations have been many and serious. In this connection we desire to state that our officers charged with the enforcement of the law have been and are doing all within their power to cope with this situation. However, the thefts are so numerous and of such a serious nature, that we desire to point out that it will be necessary for the citizenship to lend their hearty cooperation and assistance in helping to stamp out, both by giving the officers all the information they possibly can, and by doing their duty when called upon for jury service, this alarming situation with reference to crimes of this character.

We wish to commend District Attorney Grady Owen, for his able assistance to us, and to thank him for his untiring efforts in presenting testimony before us. We wish also to thank Virge Foster, Sheriff, and his deputies, and the Grand Jury Bailiffs, all of whom have assisted us in every way possible.

Having completed our deliberations upon all matters that have been brought before us, we respectfully wish to be discharged.

D. C. Hazlewood, Foreman.
R. E. Sikes, Secretary.

SHEPPARD ANNOUNCES A LAST DITCH FIGHT

Sen. Morris Sheppard opened his campaign to keep Texas in the dry column at Hughes Springs and Texarkana Aug. 1.

As co-author of the 18th amendment the senior senator has planned a state-wide tour in behalf of prohibition and is booked for 31 speeches. Maury Hughes, state chairman of the democratic committee, predicts enormous majorities in the cities and towns and many Southeast and Southwest Texas districts for the 21st or repeal amendment.

Many of the old time pro speakers are not in the picture in this campaign. Frank C. Davis of San Antonio, ever an opponent of the open saloon and ever a regular democrat, will not be found fighting under the Sheppard banner against repeal. Colonel Davis is in hearty agreement with Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, the Rockefellers, father and son, and hundreds of others, prominent the nation over, that the 18th amendment has not only been "a lamentable but a colossal failure and should be repealed without delay."

Indeed, Col. Davis has gone back to the Woodrow Wilson position that state control through the local option route is the sanest of all plans for the regulation or control of the liquor traffic. According to the national leaders, repeal is to mean nothing in 30 states where state prohibition still holds. Eighteen states, should the 18th amendment be repealed, will be wide open, so to speak but in 20 states dry laws must be repealed or revised to meet conditions as they will exist after the 18th has been voted out of the federal constitution.

"Industry is already feeling the influence of returning ability to buy. Increased merchandising and advertising plans are being developed and put into operation. Sales organizations are increasing their activities. Newspapers and other publications are feeling the effect of increased advertising lineage. The ball is rolling. And, before we know it, the depression and all its distress will be merely one of those things we like to talk about when we are in a reminiscent mood."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

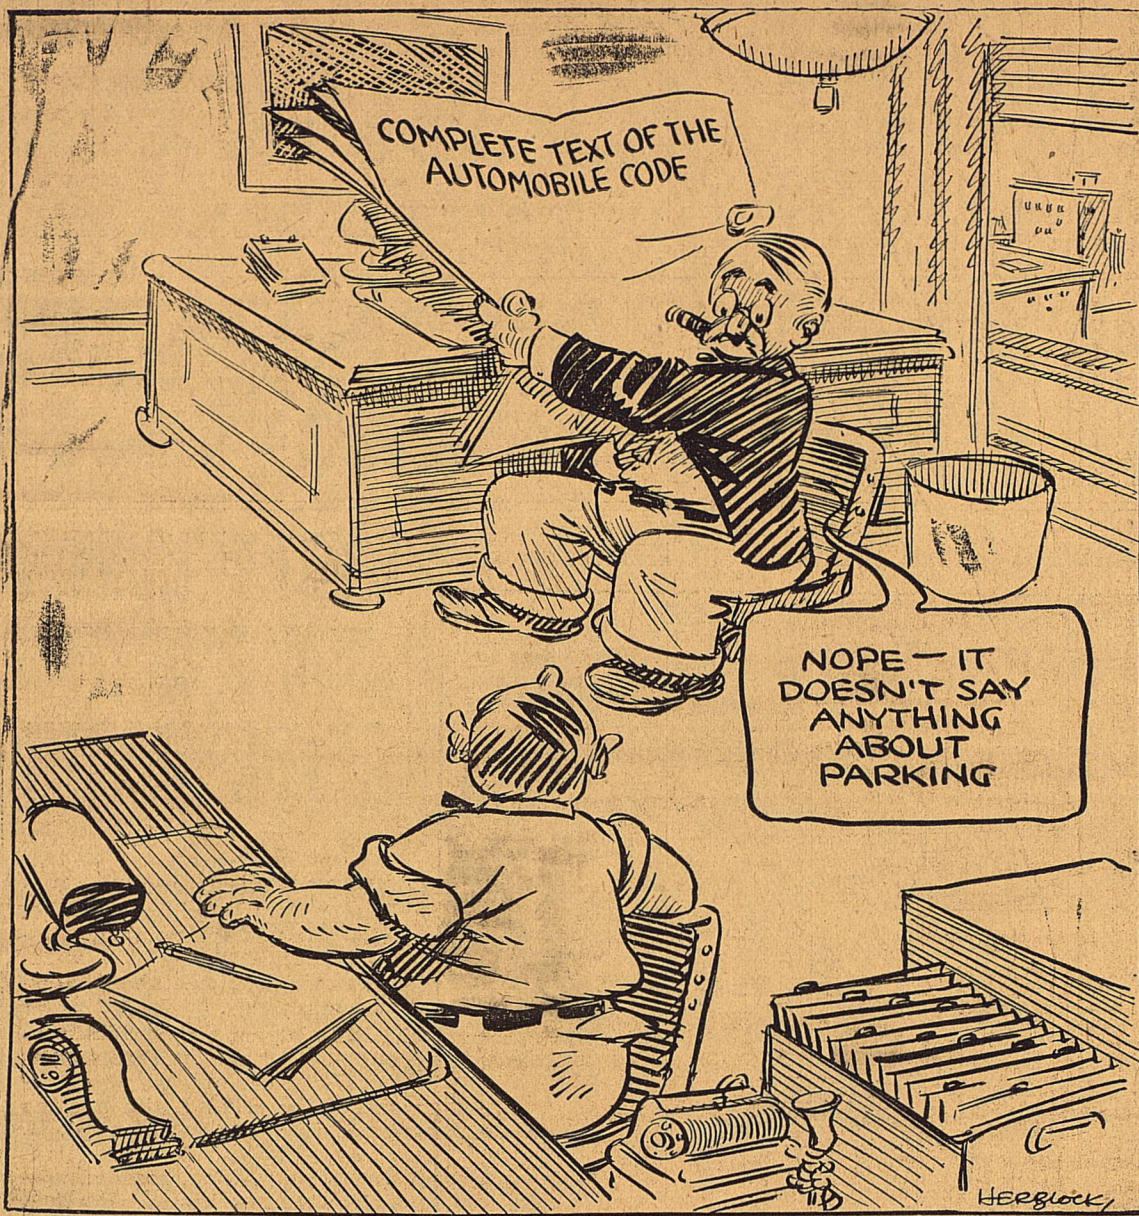

WILLIAM J. PAPER, publisher of the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican and American, says:

THAT one difficulty Uncle Sam has in legislating for the benefit of the farmer is that there are so many kinds of farmers. I am reminded of something that happened in 1908 when I was the owner of a one-horse, one-man, 18-acre farm on a hilltop in Connecticut, four miles east of Waterbury, where I was editor and publisher of a morning and Sunday newspapers. Trying to make the newspaper pay during a panic kept me so busy that I used to look at the farm on Tuesdays and Sunday afternoons.

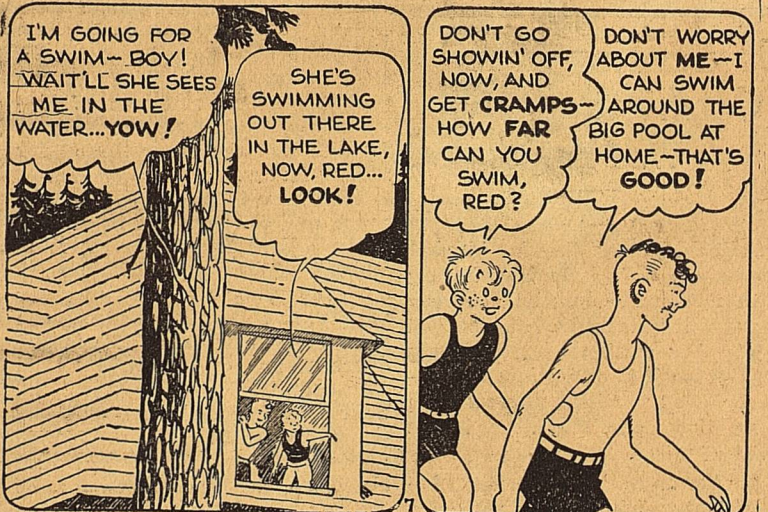

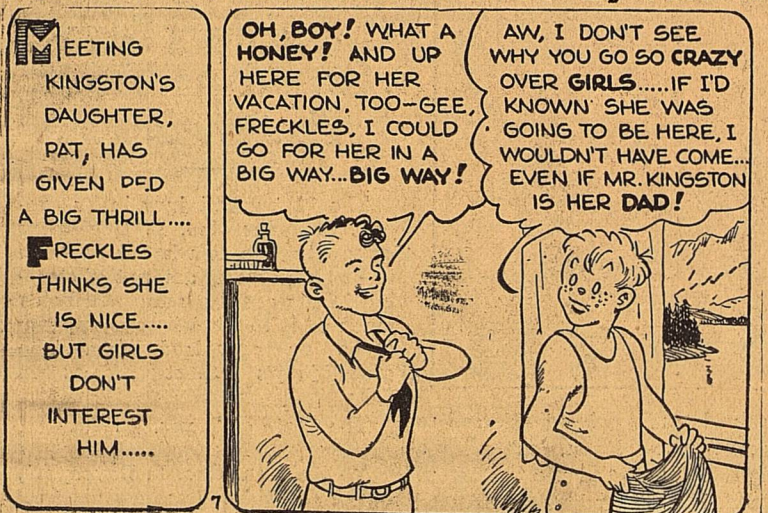

In 1908 farm hands around Waterbury got from $12 to $20 a month and board. The $12 kind got drunk once or twice a week and then we had to milk the cows ourselves. The $20 kind were supposed to stay sober. I went once to an employment agency and hired a sober farm hand at $20 a month. I asked him if he could milk. He said any kind of farm work, so I turned the horse and wagon over to him and sent him out to the farm. When I got home that night Mrs. Pape reported that it was a queer kind of farm hand I had hired. He was one hour late in reporting for dinner. When she found him still unharnessing the horse. He was trying to unbuckle every strap and you know how long this would take with heavy work harness, which usually gets greased if it is lucky about every year or two. As I gathered it, John thought the harness was completely disassembled every time it was taken off the horse.

I went out to the barn to interview John and found him milking. I said, "John, I thought you told me you were an experienced farmer." "No, sir," he answered. "You asked me could I milk and I can milk." "Well, have you ever had any experience with horses?" "No, sir. I never had much to do with horses." "What kind of a farm was it that you worked on where they didn't keep a horse?" "Well, you see, sir, I was born on a farm on an island off the coast of Maine. We were fishermen as well as farmers. We did not keep any horses." "Did you keep stock?" "Oh, yes, sir. We kept stock." "What did you feed them on in winter?" "We fed them hay. We had large hay fields." "Well, how did you get the hay to the barn?" "Usually we brought it home in a boat."

Uncle Sam has quite a farm problem. He has to devise a policy that will fit the cotton farmer of the South, the wheat farmer of the northwest, the corn grower of the Mississippi Valley, the tobacco and vegetable grower of Connecticut and the farmer on the coast of Maine where they do not need any horses and bring their hay to the barn in a boat.

Canada's Liquor Production Is Up

MONTREAL—The domestic production of liquor in Canada is greatly in excess of the domestic consumption, causing the supplies on hand to pile up to high levels, according to the department of national revenue.

900 gallons. This is Scotch, rye and gin. The annual domestic consumption of domestic liquor is about 850,000 gallons. The relaxation of enforcement of the 18th amendment in the United States pending repeal, has had an effect on the Canadian exporting business, but is not as beneficial as some expected. When beer was legalized in the United States, this act had the automatic effect of removing the ban on the Canadian export of beer of equivalent strength, and, at border points, a certain quantity of it is going over.

The export of Canadian liquor via the St. Pierre route—the base of the American rum row—similarly has undergone some transformation. Early this spring it declined amazingly. Now it is coming up again, but generally is below normal. This is taken to indicate either that the United States is using the home liquor product, or importing more through the West Indies, or else is able to quench its thirst with the light legal beer.

There seems to be a lot of trouble in New York state over the late milk strike. According to District Attorney Devitt of Madison county, the farmers in that section are so wrought up they "won't listen to reason."

It isn't often easy to listen to law arguments when the brass buttons are against you. Be it said of the farmers, according to a direct article, they are an orderly bunch... imagine it in these days.

Most of the fatalities we read about now are "crash" deaths. If it weren't for automobiles, air conveyances, and electrical cars the world would be a safe place for most anything...

That is, if it weren't for a few other little incidentals like hurricanes and cyclones and fires and floods. Which brings up the question of murders, too, reminding us.

Police are rummaging around New York (limelight metropolis) searching for the proverbial needle in the dump of hay... the murderer of Henry F. Sanborn, son of a St. Paul jurist.

It seems there are two women... a sort of eternal triangle phase to make the thing sensational. Of course the officers don't know the names or addresses of the women, but they have "hunches."

In fact, one hunch materialized enough for a statement... for a detective agency. We're still in the dark.

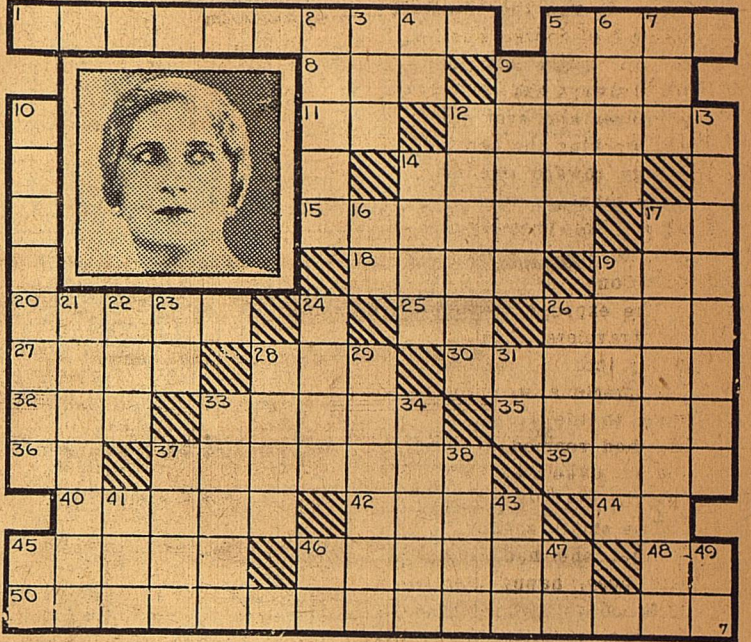

Says Hugh S. Johnson, concerning the blue eagle, "Do not trifle with that bird"... lest he fly away, never to return.

It sounds terribly fatal... makes us tremble in our much worn boots. But, while handling the fowl in a gilded cage, we still wonder just what those feathers are made of.

Not that we're pessimistic. Oh no. It's just a question of whether

TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER I-A

MR. BIXBY frowned slightly. "Yes, you are to start tonight. I thought that point was definitely understood. As you know, Miss Marshall leaves Saturday. We want you here the following Monday."

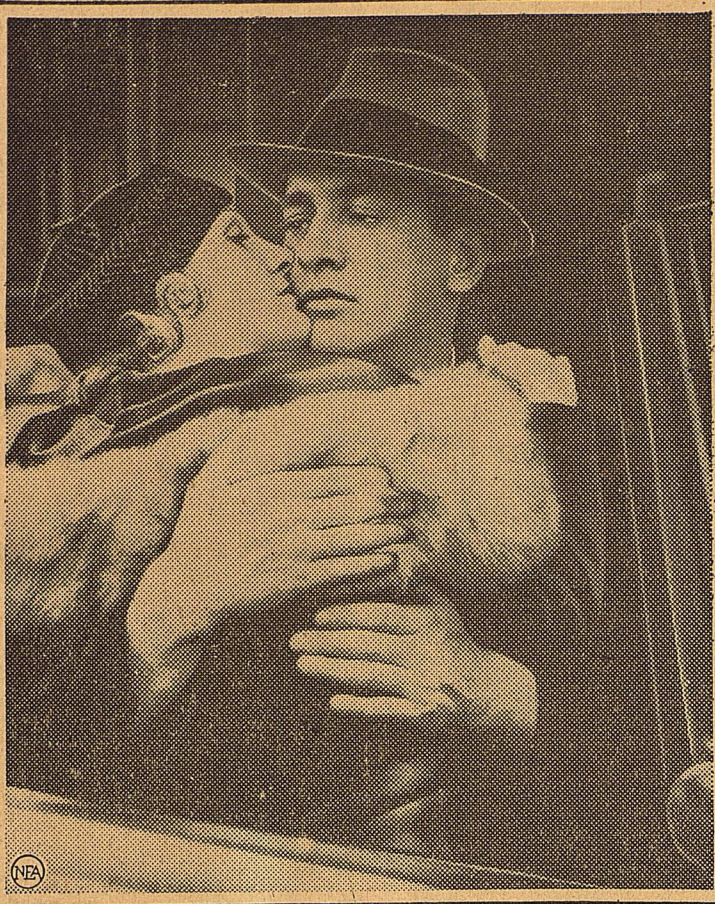

"Go up to my office," Mr. Bixby went on, "and Miss Birney will take care of your expense money. She's wired for a hotel reservation and ordered your transportation. Take whatever time you need this afternoon to go home and pack or for shopping." With an indulgent smile he dismissed an exultant yet frightened Eve.

Eve knew that this trip to New York meant that the management at Bixby's had almost certainly decided upon her as the successor to Alice Marshall. When she accepted the expense money for the trip, she felt she had sealed her fate. It was the thing she had wanted, of course. She had slaved to get where she was. Eve's work always had come before her pleasures and ever since she began working she had bent all her energy toward one goal—to become manager of an advertising office. This promotion was a long and important step toward that ambition.

The expense money exchanged for Travelers' checks and tucked safely into the chamois bag with her precious wedding ring, Eve went to the Y. W. C. A. where she had roomed ever since coming to Lake City, and packed a bag for the New York trip.

The small, shabby room at the Y that she had occupied these last busy, happy months of her girlhood already seemed a little strange, a little deserted. Eve had stayed on here even after she could have afforded more attractive and comfortable quarters. This decision was prompted entirely by economy. The building was conveniently near her work, and provided room and board at a very reasonable rate. Eve preferred to economize thus and put the money saved into pretty clothes and educational advancement. Eve was careful, thrifty. She did nothing without a definite purpose.

From the little table that served as a writing desk the pictured face of Eve's mother smiled at her from its cheap frame—the warm, steady mother-smile that had been unflinching all through Eve's life. Now she paused contritely before that picture of Kate Bayless. It was wrong, of course, not to have written to her mother that she was marrying Dick today. It was the first time she had ever shut her mother out from any important event of her life. True, she and Dick had decided hastily. And of course her mother was certain to approve of Dick, Eve reflected proudly. Her father, too, Dick Rader was exactly the sort of dependable, industrious young man to please the most exacting parents. Nothing to worry about on that score.

Suddenly Eve was conscious of that cheap, nondescript frame that held her mother's picture. Always she had planned to buy a better one, but always there had been something she had wanted for herself. Now she was ashamed that Dick should see her mother's picture in this frame. It almost seemed to her that he would know about the various things she had bought for herself with money that might have bought a frame. She would buy a new one in New York—a lovely, silver one.

AS she packed for the trip Eve remembered regretfully that she really had very little beside her clothes to take to her new home. She had never, as do so many girls, bought pretty things to adorn her future home. Esther, her sister, had dozens of lovely gifts to take with her when she married. But Esther had had a long engagement to a home-town boy, showers, engagement parties, and a wedding to which a wide circle of relatives and friends were invited. Those things meant so much to Esther. With Eve marriage was important, but so was her career.

Eve recalled how she had started at Bixby's. Determined to get a foothold as a copy-writer, she had made the rounds of all the agencies and all the stores in Lake City before she reached Bixby's. The fact that no one needed a beginner and frankly told her so, had not discouraged her but merely put her on her mettle. Then she did what she considered a daring, preposterous thing. She went to Bixby's, most exclusive store of all, and begged Earle Barnes, the advertising manager, to give her a trial. "Never mind discussing salary now," she had said. "Let me work two weeks. Then give me what you think I'm worth." And that astute gentleman, who prided himself on his shrewdness in judging an applicant's character and ability, had told her to go ahead.

"But remember," he warned her, "I'm not promising you a definite job. There isn't an opening here at present. You'll have to make a place for yourself. Browse around here and there in the store. If you see merchandise that looks to you like news, write about it. If you make good—"

And Eve had made good. Now Barnes was demonstrating his faith in her ability by giving her a column in Bixby's daily advertisement to fill with chatty comment on the fashions, new merchandises and the like. And to give the column an impressive start, Eve was to have a week in New York. Two days with Freda Carter, the dress buyer, on her way home from Paris with trunks filled with gowns from the Rue de la Paix, and the rest of the week to look about for herself. Eve's heart should sing, she told herself, instead of lying like a lump of lead and interfering with her breath. Her heart should sing because she was Dick's wife. But this evening—the evening of their wedding—she was going to New York without him. And Dick had not yet been told that she was going.

It was 5:40 that evening before Eve, almost breathless with haste and excitement, emerged from Bixby's. Dick was waiting. There was something almost pathetic about the way she approached him. "Oh, Dick, I've kept you waiting!" she cried, penitent, as she slipped her arm through his. And something reassuring, protecting, in his answer that he would always be waiting for her.

The November day had turned stormy and Eve brushed the snow from Dick's shoulders as they reached his roadster. How handsome he looked in his new navy-blue camel's hair overcoat. There was an air of unassuming prosperity about him. Dick tucked her in, pressed her hand and closed the door. When he slipped behind the wheel and started the motor Eve leaned over and kissed him. With a quick look to see that no one was near, Dick gathered her in his arms for a brief instant and as quickly let her go. She would tell him now. Might as well have it over.

"Happy?" she began, "I have something very, very important to tell you."

"Better wait till we get out of this traffic," he warned. "We'll have a lot to talk over then."

And Eve was glad for the delay. It had been going to be easy to tell him. They followed the boulevard toward the F. S. Dick driving at the rate of 25 miles an hour to keep with the green lights and avoid abrupt stopping on the slippery asphalt. Eve was sick with worry. She snuggled as closely as she dared to Dick's arm.

"Happy?" he asked. "You know I am," she told him and managed to smile.

They drove to Mission Inn for their wedding dinner. Eve was glad that Dick had selected this charming place. The evergreen stucco building was mantled with Christmas-like whiteness. Inside, soft organ music came from the chapel.

AT their table—a small one set for two—the southern California influence for which Mission Inn had been named was even more in evidence. A starred ceiling of heavenly blue shut out the winter night and storm. Wisteria trailed along the eaves and hung in purple clusters. Brilliantly colored parakeets looked saucily at the diners from their ringed perches near the fountain. Here was a lemon tree in a green tub and there an orange tree or an oleander. The air was fragrant with exotic blossoms. On a wrought iron balcony above sat a senorita in yellow, wearing a black lace mantilla and a red rose in her hair. She was picking out soft melodies on a golden harpsichord.

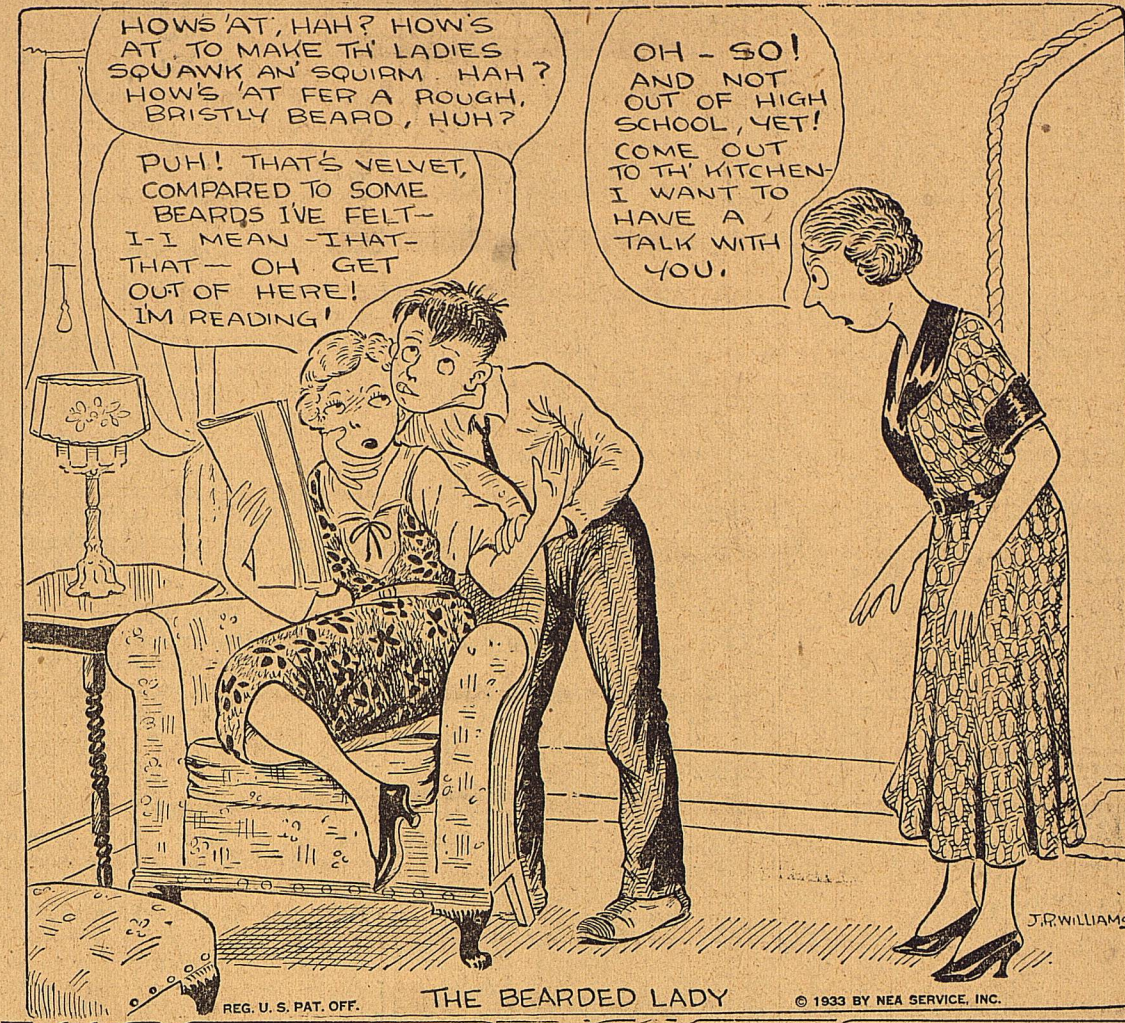

Dick had reserved the table and ordered the dinner. Excited and worried as she was, Eve realized that she was hungry. She remembered now that she had eaten nothing since breakfast. She sipped the mushroom soup, with its unusual piquancy of flavor, for which the inn was famous and ate with relish the baked squash which was another specialty of the place. When the dessert arrived—frozen cream molded in the form of mission bells—she looked thoughtfully across the table at Dick.

"Our wedding bells, Dick," she smiled wistfully. "I like it this way," he said. "Without all the fuss and excitement. Just we two in a world by ourselves."

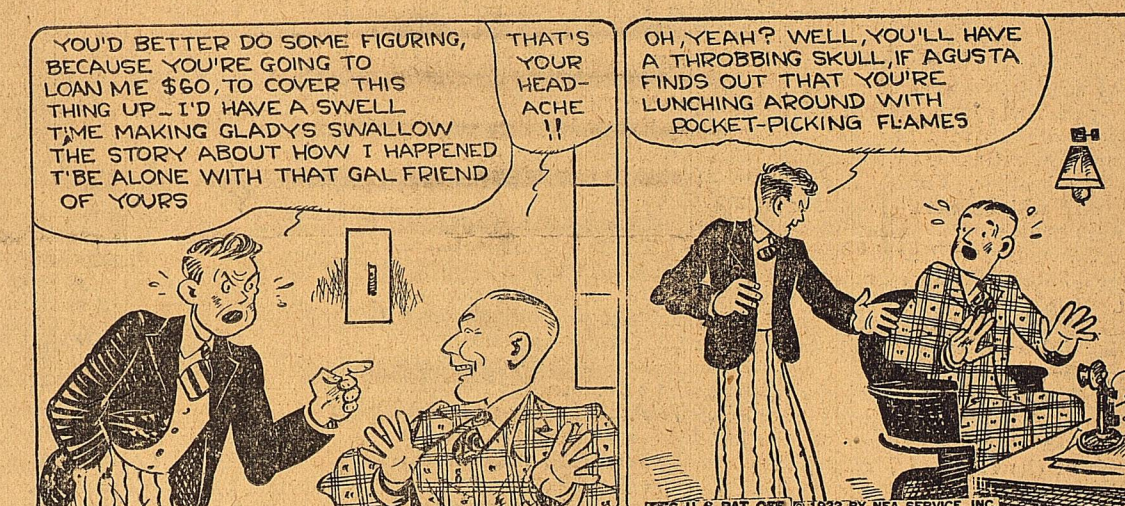

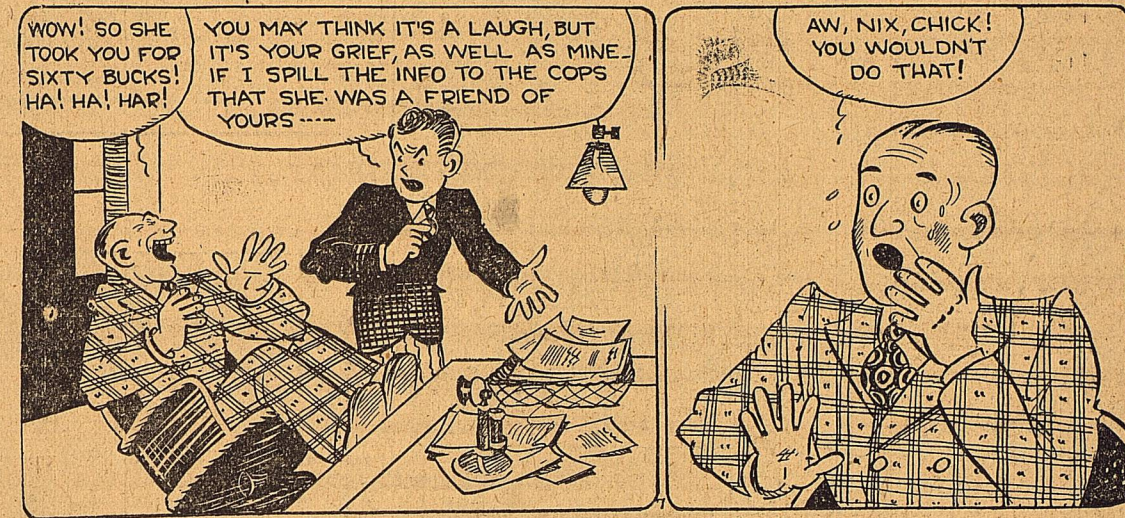

"Our lives . . . by ourselves," Eve murmured. Then she took the plunge. "Darling," she began, "I've been trying to tell you for an hour. Nothing has ever been so hard for me! I can scarcely begin—but would you feel dreadfully if I had to leave you?"

Business Uptrend Was Continued During Past Week

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

United Press Staff Correspondent DALLAS.—Although statistical business news was submerged during the past week by the more spectacular details of industrial recovery as exemplified in the president's re-employment drive under the NRA, there was ample evidence to show the uptrend of recent months was continuing at an undiminished pace.

Indicative of general trade expansion was the steadily gaining wholesale business. Most important index of the Texas wholesale trade was the report of the Dallas Clearing House association, which showed total bank clearings for July to be more than $12,000,000 in excess of clearings for July, 1932. The figures were $10,367,159.09 against $98,999,022.59. July's clearings represented a gain of $3,778,722.61 over those for June, corroborating general estimates of continued growth in business made by such reporting agencies as the Dallas federal reserve bank, Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., and the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas.

Insuring expectations of renewed demand for commodities, was the whole-hearted acceptance of the president's blanket recovery code. Scores of thousands of Texas employers rallied under the Blue Eagle of NRA, assuring new jobs and augmented purchasing power for four times as many employees.

Agricultural commodity prices kept pace with those in other industrial fields.

The increase in gross farm income for the first seven months of 1933 over the same period of 1932 was estimated at approximately $39,000,000 by Victor H. Schoffelmayer, Dallas farm writer. On Aug. 1, according to Schoffelmayer's survey for the Dallas News, the farm income figure stood at $115,373,808, compared with $76,389,705 on Aug. 1, 1932.

Prices three times those of the preceding season offset decreased production of wheat and oats, with wheat leading all other Texas farm products in July in producing an income of $3,844,000 from sale, of an estimated 3,804,000 bushels. Oats sales for July totaled $3,000,000; cotton $2,375,000; cattle and calves $2,844,000; hogs $518,000; sheep $520,000; poultry and eggs $204,000; dairy products $1,300,000; truck crops $800,000, and wool $135,000.

Shipping news, as reflected by the Shippers Digest published at Galveston, continued encouraging. Total foreign exports of cotton through the port of Galveston on July 21 reached 1,966,803 bales, with prospects the figure would move above 2,000,000 before the end of the shipping season.

The flood of federal rental checks in the cotton reduction campaign was expected to reach its peak in Texas by the middle of the month, sweeping between 40 and 50 million dollars in spot cash into the pockets of farmers who participated in the retirement drive.

Other sources of ready cash and new employment included the federal-state highway construction program, on which the state highway department will receive bids Aug. 16. Nearly $25,000,000 in federal money will be apportioned in road projects throughout the several counties of the state.

Expenditures for public works from the $3,300,000,000 fund also will add to the state's purchasing power. It is expected the first loans to Texas municipalities will be forthcoming by Aug. 15, after which a huge construction campaign employing thousands of men will be initiated in scores of commodities throughout the state.

Teeth Suffered In Depression Dentists Are Told At Meet

By United Press

EL PASO.—American teeth have suffered as much as American bankrolls during the depression, said Dr. C. A. Miller, Albuquerque, N. M., at the Southwest Dental society convention. "People have treated their teeth as they have their automobiles and clothes," he said. "No one has spent money on their teeth unless there was urgent need."

Indians of northern New Mexico were subject to the same dental defects as white men, although they had stronger teeth, he said. Bits of stone in food wore off the Indians' teeth. Some skeletons have been found with the molars worn smooth.

RELIEF WORK REPORT MADE FOR THE STATE

By United Press
AUSTIN, Aug. 7.—Preliminary surveys for rehabilitation work which is to follow relief work are under way. First reports have been forwarded to Washington by the State Rehabilitation and Relief Commission with headquarters here.

Highlights in the preliminary report are:
In addition to 1,250,000 persons on relief rolls in Texas, bread-winners of 400,000 families are unemployed. The families still are being aided by savings or by aid of relatives but in time will be on relief rolls unless rehabilitated.

Three per cent of those on relief rolls are permanent public charges. Seventeen per cent are depression victims. The 17 per cent includes those who have passed working age and have lost savings; those whose usual vocation has been taken away by industrial charges; those worn out by malnutrition and worry, and those who have become unable to work through illness.

A high percentage of those now on relief who are unfit for re-employment was indicated in county reports from Harris county. A copy has been forwarded to Federal Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at Washington. It shows 9,725 families on relief rolls in June, 700 of them without male members. Of the 9,000 to be considered in the rehabilitation program, 5,700 already have been examined and 3,000 of these found fit to work; 1,181 are superannuated; 352 were suffering from strains that might be corrected by minor operations. The check is not complete as the work is being staggered so it can be done with the small forces available. Tests are continuing.

Kidnaping Doesn't Look So Good to Them Now

Kidnaping may have looked easy to these three youths, but it doesn't look so easy now in a Kansas City cell, for Walter McGee, right, is under sentence of death for engineering the abduction of Mary McElroy, daughter of Kansas City's manager. His brother George, left, soon is to be tried for complicity, and later Clarence Click, center, also will face trial.

Of the unemployed, it is natural the most active and most trained will be first absorbed in re-employment.

Col. Lawrence Westbrook, state director of the commission, urged passage of the $20,000,000 state relief bonds co-operate with the federal government in care of the others.

Smuggling Ring Thought Found

By United Press
EL PASO.—Secret service agents and Mexican customs officials have revealed what is believed to be an attempt to organize a ring of international smugglers among unemployed men and women.

An advertisement was inserted in newspapers for men and women

A secret service agent said a friend answered the advertisement. He said his friend was told that men and women were being organized into groups to smuggle merchandise to Mexico in their automobiles. He was offered $2 per trip.

The man with whom he talked told him he would be shown a countersign to be used at the Mexican customs station so that his automobile would not be searched.

Women laways were self-sacrificing creatures. Heard the other day of one of 'em who married a banker to reform him.

Ancient Pottery In Texas Museum

CANYON, Texas.—Recent additions to the Baxter pottery collection in the Panhandle-Plains Historical society museum here include many specimens of pueblo utensils found in ancient graves and houses in northern New Mexico and southern Colorado.

One item is a pitcher with a handle designed in the shape of a deer's head. Most of the pottery, now filling 10 cases and occupying much wall space in the museum, is decorated in lightning design, a favorite of the period represented.

In the group are three large bowls and two pitchers of red pottery, said to be the most highly prized by the ancient fanciers of the art.

"College Humor" Shows Life As It Ought to Be; Fast Melodic Comedy

"College Humor," Paramount's boisterous words-and-music version of college life as it ought to be, opened a two-day showing at the Arcadia theatre today.

"College Humor" boasts an all-star cast, a fast-moving story, a topnotch chorus, and music that already has proved successful on the radio and dance programs.

In its cast are Bing Crosby, Richard Arlen, Mary Carlisle, Jack Oakie, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Lona and Mary Kornman. The Ox-Road Co-Eds, a chorus of stunning youngsters, provide the dancing. Its music—"Learn to Croon," "Moonstruck," and "The Old Ox Road," its three hit tunes—was written by Sam Coslow and Arthur Johnston.

"College Humor" is the story of a campus at which reputations made on the gridiron are lost in the boudoir; where co-eds learn the facts of life more readily than mathematics or science.

Bing Crosby is cast as a young instructor. Arlen and Oakie are football heroes, each in his own fashion. George Burns and Gracie Allen are college-widow and college-widower, in their own particular styles. Mary Carlisle, Lona and Arthur Johnston are among the co-eds who make life difficult for the boys.

Music and comedy are distributed lavishly throughout the story, and the Ox-Road Co-Eds dance in and out of the action. Every resource of the Paramount studio—musical and writing and acting and directing talent; money and effort—went into the picture to make it the outstanding musical comedy success of the season.

Frenchman Seeks Aid Country Women

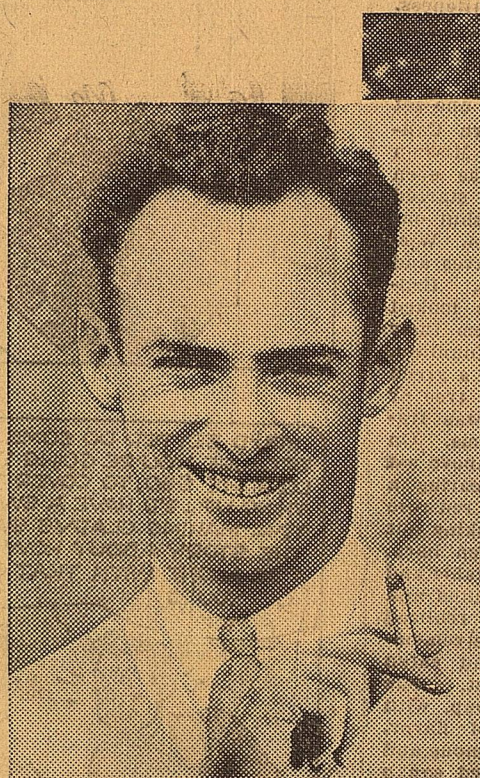

Paris.—Senator Rene-Renoult struck a new blow for women's rights here when he placed before the Senate a bill to remove some of the checks on feminine liberty imposed by the Code Napoleon, whose author was inspired by the belief that "nature has made woman our slaves."

The Legislative Commission set aside the part of the bill detailing changes in the marital regime, but Rene-Renoult hopes to get some action at least.

The Senator indicted that the war had shown woman's capacity to work on an even footing with men, and declared it was high time that France should change the restrictions on women laid down by Napoleon, this being the only country still holding out.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the good people of Ranger for all the kindness shown us in the recent death of our loved one, Arthur Curtis Prock. May God bless each of you.—Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Prock and family.—(Adv.)

●RIGHT—"I'M NOT A CHAMPION GOLFER—not even a fair one," according to Mr. Shute's standards! I'm a young married woman, interested in home and children. But I'm inclined to be the nervous type. So I switched to Camels, for the sake of my nerves, and because Camels are definitely a milder cigarette."

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

When it comes to healthy nerves, "DENNY" SHUTE speaks with authority. "I couldn't have won the British Open if my nerves hadn't been in perfect condition," says Shute. "Healthy nerves are essential to any golfer who wants to turn in a good score. The enjoyment of cigarettes has not interfered with my golf game because I have smoked Camels right along. I have tried all the brands and long ago found that Camels are milder, and what is even more important to any golfer, they do not jangle the nerves."

"Denny" Shute offers conclusive evidence that Camels are milder. That they don't interfere with healthy nerves. That smokers like Camels better, the more they smoke them. Consider the fact that Camels are made from costlier tobaccos—and switch to them yourself. You will also discover that Camels are better for steady smoking.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. Leaf tobaccos for cigarettes can be bought from 5¢ a pound to $1.00...but Camel pays the millions more that insure your enjoyment.
