WORKERS TO DETERMINE RIGHT OF RELIEF CLIENTS TO AID

Re-examination of the case load of Eastland county to determine the eligibility to relief of every client on relief rolls started Monday by workers from Austin headquarters, H. E. Driscoll, county administrator, announced.

The workers will either assume the full responsibility for the task of re-registration or work in conjunction with the case work staff of the county relief office, the administrator stated.

The workers are directly responsible to Mrs. Val M. Keating, director of social service of the Texas relief commission, and their decisions are final as to eligibility of the relief client receiving aid from the commission.

"These workers have been instructed to refuse all applications whose income exceeds the allowed budget. They will compute resources and take into consideration odd-job possibilities for employable persons, and deduct the earnings from budgetary requirements," Mr. Driscoll said.

Recommendation of the special workers will determine whether the case should be closed, or continue to receive relief.

It was estimated the re-examination will entail three weeks of work.

Nevada to Stock With 2,000 Birds

RENO, Nev.—A program for the largest stocking of game birds ever undertaken in Nevada has been completed.

Two thousand birds will be purchased to restock the states' ranges following the close of the season in November. The program is designed to allay fears of hunters that the state's supply of wild fowl is being seriously depleted.

Three varieties of sage fowl will be purchased by the commission: Chinese pheasants, valley quail and chukar partridges.

It was pointed out that many more would attend the night games, as the games are now played at a time when many are having their evening meals.

It was said that the equipment for lighting the field could be purchased for about $150 and that arrangements could easily be made for its installation if it was purchased.

Reese would like to hear from those interested in lighting the field and believes that enough are interested to make the venture possible, as lighted fields have proved to be extremely popular in towns in this section, many of which are smaller than Ranger.

Douglas is only 5 feet, 3 inches tall and weighs only 99 pounds, but his health has been fair.

"I play all the sports the other boys do," he said. "I play baseball, football and swim. I'm not so good at running, but I manage to get through the ball at a football game."

The youth revealed that he was sick for four years when a baby and "had to be carried around on a pillow."

"Maybe I got used to having only fluids, and I've never gotten over it," he said. "I'm crazy about milk. But I don't like cream."

Physicians said the youth's case is unusual, but in "no means" unique. They pointed out that life can be maintained for many years on the proper variety of fluids.

Norris Would Amend the Federal Constitution

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska is one of the noted statesmen and lawmakers of the nation. He was born a republican, he began his official career as a republican and he has many noteworthy achievements to his credit.

He sponsored the Tennessee valley project. He is responsible for the one-house legislature which will function in Nebraska next year. Really, he is the chief legislative dreamer and many of his dreams have come true.

Now by amendment of the constitution he has moved that the American people "act to limit the power of its supreme court." He has introduced a joint resolution in the senate to authorize a constitutional amendment to require that seven of the nine supreme court justices agree in order to wipe from the statutes a law the court holds unconstitutional and that supreme court action must start within six months after enactment of law "if it is to be eliminated."

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McElliot © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Katharine Strykhurst, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when she marries Michael Heather, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her mother is snobbish.

The night following his marriage Michael is injured in a traffic accident and when he regains consciousness his memory is impaired. He forgets the marriage. Katharine is heartbroken, believes he has deserted her. She goes to New Mexico with a friend, starting secret annulment proceedings meantime.

Sally Moon, who has snared Michael into a sort of engagement, unaware of his marriage to Katharine, makes plans for a wedding. During a rehearsal of the ceremony Michael's memory returns. He sets off immediately for New Mexico, finally arriving at the inn where Katharine is staying. He finds Katharine is away on a two-day motor trip with new friends to Millard.

CHAPTER XXI

Miss Daisy didn't know much about the route the Millards had taken but undoubtedly Mrs. Houghton would. If Mr. Heather would wait until luncheon Mrs. Houghton would be back from Santa Fe and could give him the direction.

"At least I think she may be able to," added Miss Daisy conscientiously.

Michael had to be content with that. Margarita showed him to a narrow room and he washed his hands and brushed his hair and tried to control the raging impatience that tore at him. When he came down the cool salon was empty and he was left to amuse himself with the books and the parrot, hopping from his swinging glass perch and jeering openly at Michael. He strolled out into the patio. In the shade of a pepper tree Miss Daisy worked at her crocheting and gave him a welcoming smile.

"The Millards have been so interested in Miss Katharine," she said cheerfully. "She has real talent, they say. And young Mr. Frank has been so charmed with her. She's lovely, we all think."

Michael scowled at the thought of young Mr. Frank, whoever he might be, and Miss Daisy looked frightened. This handsome young man could be quite fierce. Perhaps she shouldn't have said that, but it was true and she meant no harm. And Miss Vincent had told her explicitly that Miss Strykhurst was not engaged to anyone.

Michael had to wait and make polite conversation until fat Mrs. Houghton, in dotted linen with a big, old-fashioned straw hat on her head, arrived.

"Can't tell you a thing about it, my dear boy," Mrs. Houghton wheezed, looking beguilingly at him. "Why not wait here until they return? We'll make you comfortable."

"Well then, after lunch I'll run you over to the Millard's place," said his hostess, fixing her dark eyes on him shrewdly. "They've a Chinese boy there who's made the trip and perhaps he can tell you something about the roads. That is, if you can get anything out of a Chinese boy—"

"I've known a lot of 'em," Michael said.

"Oh, really?"

Michael, pressed, told her about the ranch and what he remembered of his father.

"Heather?" mused Mrs. Houghton. "There was a Francis Heather at San Diego about 1905. Charmin' fella. Knew him well. Good family."

"That was my father," Michael told her.

"Not really?" Mrs. Houghton beamed. "How very interesting!"

The man fairly came to be on his way, but there was no hurrying this capable woman with the assured air and the twinkling eyes. Besides, he was more or less at her mercy. If she chose to drive him to the Millard ranch to interrogate their Chinese boy, he might feel himself very lucky. But he must not be discourteous enough to urge her to forego luncheon.

So they lunched in the long, cool room open on two sides. Michael scarcely knew what he ate. While Miss Daisy and Miss Roxana pecked daintily at their salads Mrs. Houghton took two helpings of everything, drank great cups of tea, and leaned back in her chair for a cigar. Michael could have cheerfully killed her.

No one went out in the heat of mid-day here if he could possibly help it; he knew that. But the intrepid Mrs. Houghton put on the monstrous old straw hat again and, while Miss Daisy and Miss Roxana went delicately away to enjoy siestas, she and Michael Heather climbed into the roadster and took the road that led to the Millard place.

"This is really very kind of you," Michael said with some compunction.

"Not at all," wheezed Mrs. Houghton. "Was young m'self once."

The Chinese boy had been asleep and came drowsily to the door at their summons.

Yes, he knew the way. But he could not leave the place. He was in charge.

"We know that, Li," said Mrs. Houghton patiently. "The gentleman only wants you to tell him how to go."

Michael had a map in his pocket and the boy, with many nods and profound head-shaking, finally agreed on a route.

"You did that very well," said the woman admiringly to Michael as they left. "I can never get a sensible word out of him. Not that I'm at all certain the road is right. They'll admit anything just to be agreeable. I do think you're being rather foolish. They'll be back day after tomorrow in any case."

Michael shook his head stubbornly. Wait here for Katharine? He couldn't live through another day, not knowing how he stood with her.

They found a car for him. Margarita's brother had an ancient sedan which would go. Michael knew the make of car. He had driven it before. He started out in the full blaze of mid-afternoon with his stout mentor waving to him from the courtyard.

"Wild goose chase, Margarita," murmured Mrs. Houghton, sinking into an abasket chair and fanning herself vigorously. "But that's what it is to be young, my dear. Bring me some limeade—there's a good girl."

Many times during that afternoon did Michael stop in order to let the burning engine cool off slightly. He raged at the delay, but there was no helping matters. When night fell he kept on. His Montana days stood him in good stead at this juncture. He was used to empty roads and coyotes howling and the arched loneliness of the far-away sky. The desert held no terrors for this man.

Toward morning he rested a little so as to be fresh for the new day. As yet he had not passed a single car. The Millards did not travel at night, Mrs. Houghton had assured him, so he was certain not to lose them thus. By day he would have to be abnormally alert to scrutinize every vehicle which passed him. A touring car it was that Katharine was traveling in; a large gray touring car with green wheels.

Michael drank some of the coffee and ate a few of the sandwiches Margarita had prepared. He might have to go all the way to the mountains, in the event the Millards had delayed their start. He must be ready for that. His eyes were blurred from searching the horizon. Once some Mexicans passed him in a rickety chariot. And there was a shabby car with a California license, with some bedraggled children in the back seat and a shiftless looking couple in front. Typical drifters.

Long past noon he came in sight of three or four dots on the desert floor straight ahead and his heart leaped. But he reminded himself that it was idiotic to suppose that every sign of life he saw meant Katharine's party.

Besides, as he drew nearer, he could see that the dots were stationary. There was a car, but it was not moving. And there was a tent. No seasoned travelers pitched camp in the desert during the day.

But the car was a gray touring car with green wheels. Michael drew up with a screech of brakes. A middle-aged woman in camp clothes, with signs of agitation in her face, came around the corner of the car and stared at him.

"Is this Mr. Millard's camp?"

"It is!" Amazement in her voice.

"Is Miss Strykhurst here?" Michael's voice sounded cracked and harsh.

"Miss Strykhurst is—Hilda, come here!" called Evelyn Vincent. Michael paled. What mystery was this?

A blond woman of 40 with her hair in the wildest disorder. Her smart riding breeches torn and stained, appeared from the shadow of the car.

"We're nearly distracted," she began volubly. "Katharine must have wandered off while we slept. My husband and his brother have looked and looked. It seems hopeless."

Michael said sharply, "Lost? Since when?" No one bothered to ask who he was or why he was there. They told him all they knew. Katharine had been gone since sun-up. Frank and Dirk had wandered about calling—

"My God." Michael struck his hands together. If he had only started sooner this dreadful thing would not have happened. He thought, in an agony, of his hour at luncheon on the day before, of the enforced waits during the afternoon as the engine cooled.

"Good God!" he repeated. "We must do something. A plane—!"

"That's what I said," Miss Vincent began, "but Frank wouldn't consent to going off with the car. He said she might come back and would thing she'd been deserted—"

"Poor child. I hate to say it, but I'm very much afraid we shan't see her again," said Hilda Millard. She began hopelessly to cry.

Michael shook her arm. "Where can I get a plane?" he asked harshly. "I must find one at once."

AS A CEREAL OR IN COOKING it's FINE either way!

It's so handy to have a package of Kellogg's All-Bran in the kitchen. Serve it as a cereal. Use it also as a wholesome ingredient in your muffins, breads, omelets, waffles, etc. Kellogg's All-Bran supplies "bulk" to aid regular habits. All-Bran is also rich in vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood. Two tablespoons daily will correct common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in the diet. In severe cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. The "bulk" of All-Bran does not break down during digestion as does that of leafy vegetables, and is therefore more effective for furnishing the needed "bulk." It is a delicious laxative food... far better than patent medicines. Get the red and green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Texas Transients Urged to Remain In Home Towns

AUSTIN—Transients, particularly those originating within the state, have been urged to settle down and stay off the road by Adam R. Johnson, state relief administrator.

Federal officials have appealed to railroads and to autoists to refuse free transportation to transients, and several legislatures recently have passed anti-hitching laws.

"Unless they have a job waiting for them somewhere, Texans contemplating hitch-hiking trips ought to stay at home," Johnson declared. "Other states and other counties have their own unemployed to provide for and transients will find conditions no better at distant points.

Transients themselves are exposed to injury and disease in some of the overnight stops along the road. People who offer free transportation are sometimes assaulted before they reach their destinations.

"For these reasons, we urge tourists to refuse free transportation to hitch-hikers. In like manner, we advise against hand-outs and the small cash donations to persons making house-to-house canvasses." Transients already on the road were advised to go to their homes or to the nearest transient division camp. These camps are located near the division depots in all the larger cities of the state.

Web Worms May Be Removed From Pecans With Torch

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Web worms which have infested large numbers of pecan trees since the recent wet weather, can be exterminated by using an improvised torch, according to Fred W. Mally, county agricultural agent.

A long pole, one end wrapped with rags saturated with kerosene and ignited, can be used to burn the worms out of infested trees. Spraying is not advisable, Mally said, because the web protects the worms. The worms are similar to those which frequently infest mulberry, peach and plum trees. Mally said if they were not exterminated they would eventually strip the entire tree of its foliage.

Failure to Wear 10-Gallon Hats Is Cause of Ducking

BORGER, Tex.—Because they failed to wear 10-gallon sombreros to advertise the July 4 rodeo celebration to be held here, two prominent citizens were ducked in the swimming pool. The victims were J. C. Phillips, publisher of the Borger Daily Herald, and H. W. Price, head of the Huber Petroleum company. The men were seized by the "Sherlock Holmes committee" and tied to a ducking stool while the band played a funeral dirge.

"This Summer Lets Tour Texas" Is Plea Of the Humble Ads

"This Summer Let's Tour Texas." That is the caption of an Humble Oil & Refining company advertisement appearing in today's issue of this paper.

Many services that go to make a pleasant vacation tour are offered by the Humble stations along the way such as plentiful free ice water, free air and water for the car, spotless restrooms and prompt, courteous station salesmen.

A feature of the advertisement in this issue and in six more to follow is a motorist's time table for Texas, which gives the time required to travel from any principal city in Texas to any other city, computed on a basis of 40 miles per hour average speed.

Another item of special interest to those who contemplate a motor vacation is a coupon featured in the advertisement offering free booklets outlining travel tours in Texas. Each booklet covers a special section of Texas and there are five of them in all. Texans are certainly very fortunate for as the Humble people say:

"A network of famous highways leads you to any kind of vacation you can ask for—right here in Texas. There's the Hill Country for camping, hiking, horseback riding, canoeing; there's a sea-coast known the world over for its gentle surf, the brilliance of its sunshine, its unsurpassed fishing; there are dude ranches in the high country way out west, and the last frontier in these United States lies in the loop of the Rio Grande's Big Bend. For Texans, there's no vacation can compare with a vacation within the wide boundaries of their own state; especially now, with centennial year just around the corner. The traveler on Texas highways follows in the footsteps of Spanish grandees and Anglo-Saxon pioneers; each town, each city he passes through is linked by historic association with the past."

Tiny Factory Makes Most Cheesecloth

MONROE, Wis.—Ninety per cent of America's cheesecloth used in the manufacture of cheese is woven on an old loom, owned by two Swiss brothers, in the attic of a two-story building here.

The factory, which has grown to such proportions that it now employs five persons and has retail outlets in six states, first was established in 1929 in the basement of a garage by Joe Donny.

Coming to the United States in 1927, Donny worked for two years in a cheese factory near here, noticed that most of the equipment was foreign made, heard the owners complain of the high prices they had to pay for it, and decided to start a factory.

After four years of difficult progress, Donny wrote his brother, Melchoir, a graduate of the college of Turin, Italy, and then manager of a European hotel, to come and assist him. More than a year ago they purchased a second hand loom. Last summer the two brothers had more orders than they could possibly fill, chiefly because their products were one-third as cheap as the foreign made articles and were superior in quality.

Twice Cardui Helped "I was in a run-down condition, very irregular and had cramps and nervousness," writes Mrs. Albert Pike, of R. F. D. 5, St. Joseph, Mo. "When one has a home and children to look after, and the work on a farm, a woman will worry if she feels bad—and I surely worried. I decided to take Cardui again, as it had helped me one time. It also helped me this time. I never have a bad day when using Cardui."

There are many cases like this. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Weather Cuts Wine Crop at Bordeaux

By United Press BORDEAUX, France.—The warmth of the early summer sunshine has failed to offset the ravages of the bitter cold weather of late spring as far as the vineyards of this region are concerned. The result will be one of the smallest crops on record. The vines were blighted to such an extent by the cold that when the buds finally came out they looked like tiny cabbage sprouts.

The shortage of the wine crop will bring about a definitely improved economic situation in the vineyards. Chateau wines of 1934 are bringing fair prices despite the fact that there are substantial stocks in the cellars.

Despite the cold disaster ordinary Bordeaux for domestic consumption will hold to the price level of last year as will the export wines because the duty in various countries is so high that producers feel an increase of price would mean a decrease in business.
