

First Vocational Training Here Is Meeting Approval

The proposed program of vocational training in Ranger high school under the title of diversified occupations is receiving favorable consideration by the employers and workers of the community. Most of those who have been interviewed by the co-ordinator see a need in trades and industry which this plan can meet, with their cooperation.

This plan has for its purpose the supervised training of workers over a period of 2 years, or longer, if the occupation requires more time. A written agreement is required for the purpose of making clear the responsibility of the student, the school, the employer, and the parent or guardian. These are the signatories of the agreement, and is an assurance of their cooperation.

Under this plan the student may pursue other courses, and in most cases, he can graduate in the normal time. The co-ordinator would like for students interested in this work to arrange an interview with him. He may be found in room 16 of the high school building between 9:00 and 10:00 A. M. during next week.

JUDGE GARRETT FORMALLY OPENS CONGRESS CAMPAIGN IN ADDRESS AT STAMFORD

STAMFORD, Aug. 8.—County Judge Clyde L. Garrett in the formal opening of his campaign for nomination in the 17th Congressional district race tonight challenged his opponent, Representative Thomas L. Blanton, "to prove an instance in which I misrepresented him or scattered falsehoods."

"The only mud," said Garrett, who spoke this morning at McCauley, "that I have ever slung in this campaign was that which I picked off myself after it had been thrown at me through the medium of the Congressional Record."

"I want to say here and now, without hesitation or equivocation that whatever statements I have made about my opponent in this race have been true to the best of my knowledge and belief. I am ready to stand responsible for them. If they are not true, my opponent has the avenue of the courts in which to seek redress. He is a lawyer. He is able, or he ought to be able, to defend himself."

Garrett stated his vote in the primary, in which he led Representative Blanton, indicates "the end of the demagoguery in this district that has come to pass."

In reference to Blanton's asserted charges that he is a "tax dodger," the county judge read statements of school, county and city officials that he has paid $7,000 in taxes since 1920. He said the taxes to which Blanton referred are on vacant lots and worthless property in Eastland "has often been used for charitable and benevolent purposes and is non-revenue bearing."

The candidate said Blanton's records show that he (Blanton) registers his cars in Washington "rather than in Texas because the license fees are about one-twentieth the cost here. He ought to register them in both places."

Judge Garrett declared Blanton charged him with being the "hand-picked candidate of the utility interests."

"I do not think he can make the people of this district believe that. In one of his Congressional Record broadcasts there is printed an anonymous letter which I charge that he wrote to himself, and in which he said: 'I believe that none of the local utility companies in your (Blanton's) district are unfriendly toward you and I don't think they are fighting you.'"

"There is no utility issue in this campaign. None was mentioned in the first primary and my opponent knew as much then as he knows now."

Judge Garrett said Blanton's statements that a judgment was rendered against him in Tarrant county in 1922 was false and the C. L. Garrett was on a Mineral Wells resident.

Garrett charged his opponent with negligence and ineffectiveness in looking after the interest of the laboring classes of this district. He told of his and other county judges' trips to Washington this year for the relaxation of WPA rules.

The candidate favored "the use of every practical and constitutional means to put the farmer on a par with the individuals in other industries."

"The farmer ought to be the first concern of the government of this country. He must be protected in the profitable cultivation of his acres and he must be made happy and content, able to enjoy the advantages that other people enjoy," Garrett said this district.

New Hope Revival Meets With Success

A very successful revival meeting is being conducted at New Hope, north of Ranger, by Rev. K. C. Edmonds, pastor of the Old Baptist Church.

Rev. Edmonds was called by the church to conduct the services without his knowledge, and he did not know a revival was being planned until he was notified that he had been selected to do the preaching.

The first week of the revival drew capacity crowds to the church each evening, with 18 being taken into the church by profession of faith. It was originally planned to end the meeting tonight, but it has met with such a ready response, both in attendance and in conversions, that plans for terminating the meeting have become indefinite, with the possibility that it will continue for another week.

district is a basic agricultural territory.

After favoring a tariff on foreign farm and ranch products, Judge Garrett declared he is "unalterably opposed to the federal control of our oil resources."

"Texas is the largest oil producer of the six large producing states. The other states are predominantly oil consuming states. Aside from the fact that Texas ought to control its resources as a matter of political principle, if control of the development of this resource were given into the federal hands, the votes of the oil producing states would dominate all legislation pertaining thereto and Texas would be at the mercy of the nation. We would shortly become merely a source of oil supply."

Favoring a "balanced budget attained by the elimination of useless expenditures, rather than an increase in taxes," Judge Garrett declared:

"During the eight years that I served my county as county judge it has been the policy that I have followed and I am proud to say that the results speak for themselves. We eliminated all useless or unnecessary expenditures and reduced excessive expenditures. We balanced our county budget. We brought relief to our property owners in a period of trying economic conditions. I propose to take the same policies to Washington."

Garrett also said he favored free speech, is a states-right democrat and endorsed a defense adequate to the nation's need.

Blanton spoke at Mineral Wells to a large audience.

MINERAL WELLS.—Congressman Thomas L. Blanton spoke to a large crowd of voters here Wednesday night.

Mr. Blanton spoke for nearly two hours and his audience seemed to be very much interested. During the latter part of his speech, a man by the name of Cooper attempted to answer some of the charges of Blanton, after Blanton had stated that Cooper was following him from town to town, along with other Garrett men, and that some of the party had attempted to heckle him. He charged that Cooper was an applicant for the postoffice at Ranger, but that he was not the choice of the people.

Blanton recounted his work at Washington, his interest in his district, his ability to get concessions, and renewed his challenge to Judge Garrett for a joint debate. He attacked the record of Garrett and accused him of being a candidate of the power trust—and of the people of Washington, who were mad at him because he had chopped their budget and refused to let them get a fabulous sum from the people through taxes to support the District of Columbia. He charged that they were raising money and sending it to Texas for his defeat—and stated that should he be defeated Saturday there would be great shouting and a big celebration in the tents of the Washington people and in the camps of the power trusts. He chided Garrett for not meeting him in debate.

He told of the appointment of the postmaster here. How he called a meeting of his supporters and selected George Sims as temporary postmaster. Later D. C. Harris, being an ex-service man, whose name was at the top of the local list of eligibles and how the department stated that ex-service men were to be given preference, all things being equal, and that it was impossible for him to have Mr. Sims made permanent postmaster. "I hope the people of this city are not going to vote against me because of the appointment of some one as postmaster, disregarding the record I have made and the way I have served you in Congress—I hope you are not going to vote a personal prejudice because of some appointment that was made for a postmaster."

After the meeting a number gathered at the platform to discuss the organization of Blanton for Congress clubs here and over the county.

Railroad Man To Enter Race In Twelfth District

FORT WORTH, Aug. 8.—Fred L. Cook, former railroad man, today announced as an opponent to Congressman Fritz Lanham in the Democratic runoff primary Aug. 22. He asked supporters to write his name on the ballot.

Cook appealed for the support of the Townsend plan pension following of Julien C. Hyer, Fort Worth, who withdrew. Cook promised "the biggest old age pension possible" if elected. He said he will enter the Democratic list on the assumption Hyer's withdrawal left the party without a regularly chosen nominee.

"I contend that the 28,000 voters who cast their ballots against Mr. Lanham were disfranchised by Mr. Hyer's withdrawal," said Cook.

Forecast for Large Cotton Crop Is Made

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Forecasting the highest average yield per acre in several years, the government crop reporting board today estimated the 1936 cotton crop will total 12,481,000 bales, compared with a crop of 10,638,000 bales last year.

The forecast, however, was more than 2,000,000 bales below the 1928-2 average production. The indicated yield per acre was set at 199.7 pounds, 13.4 pounds higher than last year and 28.1 pounds higher than in 1934. The 1923-32 average yield was 169.9 pounds per acre.

The board noted that better than average yields were reported for all states except Virginia, the Carolinas and Oklahoma, where the drought interfered with germination of the seed.

Another record yield per acre of 400 pounds was forecast for Missouri, while Arkansas indicated a yield of 250 pounds per acre.

The report noted that indications pointed to less than average damage from boll weevil.

EIGHT PLUNGE TO THEIR DEATH WHEN AIRLINER IS WRECKED

Huge holes ripped in it by the terrific force of its landing, with wreckage scattered in all directions, this $50,000 luxury airliner was a craft of death for eight persons in its night plunge to earth 16 miles north of St. Louis. Seven bodies were flung about the scene of impact, with the eighth found in the cabin. Two pilots and six passengers—one of them Vernon Omie, famed World War flyer—were victims. The ship was headed for Chicago when the tragedy occurred, only a few minutes after it left St. Louis airport. Investigators believed the crash was due to a thick ground fog.

GERMANY NOT SELLING ARMS TO THE REBELS

PARIS.—The cabinet, after a meeting of three and a half hours today, announced that in view of the prospect of an early international agreement of neutrality in the Spanish crisis, France would suspend all authorization for the export of war materials to Spain.

PARIS.—Germany is considering the advisability of a naval demonstration off Barcelona as a warning to Spanish extremists that further anti-German incidents will bring stern action, it was reported today.

BERLIN.—Adolf Hitler will decide on possible further measures to protect Germans in Spain after negotiations with the Spanish government, a foreign office spokesman said today. Germany demanded damages of an unspecified amount for the killing of seven Germans, the spokesman said. He denied reports that Germany had decided to make a naval demonstration off Barcelona.

LISBON, Portugal.—Terrific fighting on the Spanish-Portuguese border, was reported today.

MADRID.—Spain's popular front government, boldly blind to the mounting wrath of fascist and nazi powers, veered further to the left today in a series of drastic degrees.

Madrid was reminded Friday night what it may face when the big battle at Madrid begins. The city was put in total darkness as a drill for the expected air raids.

ROME.—There is growing conviction that the efforts to affect a neutrality agreement in the Spanish revolt is doomed to failure. Diplomats believed failure will bring the greatest crisis in Europe's post-war history.

Premier Mussolini was believed to be considering, today, how far to go in aiding the Spanish fascist rebels.

TEXT OF EXTORTION LETTERS DEMANDING MONEY FOR SAFETY OF CHILDREN IS DISCLOSED

Unconfirmed reports stated late Saturday an Eastland youth and a man "picked up" near Olden were being taken to the Dallas Department of Justice office for questioning in the Butler extortion case.

Texts of three extortion notes demanding $3,000 for the safety of his children were revealed at Eastland Saturday by Sam Butler, oil executive and brother of Brigadier General Smedley Butler.

A scheme to extort $3,000 from Butler failed Friday morning when he hurled a brief-case containing considerable money from a fast-moving train near Cisco. A young man fled when an official threw a flare which lighted the countryside.

The finger of accusation had pointed at several Friday and Saturday, but the suspects' identifications did not tally with the youth seen by the flaring light at Cisco.

The only distinction to mark the hunted youth, announced by Butler, was in the description that he was "undoubtedly scratched" in the getaway.

Butler corrected a report that his children, Samuel, Jr., 13, University of Texas student, and Helen, 16, a high school senior, are not in Philadelphia or California as reported.

The extortionist, signing "FFFF" in his three communications, bargained in the first to give Butler "kidnaping protection" for seven years if he paid $3,000. The writer said if police were notified one child would be rubbed out and the amount to secure the protection of the other would be hiked to $25,000. "FFFF" admonished the oil executive not to "try any funny business for we need one killin' to terrorize others."

A third note said the writer and others had been busy with the killing but we don't think so. Even if you did that would not bring back the life of your child. Think it over which is worth the most your child or $3,000.

Remember Eastland to El Paso train Thursday night Aug. 6, 1936. Train leaves there around midnight these are the words Sam Butler drop that money.

The letters and want-ads inserted by Butler to communicate with the extortionist follow:

(Copy of first letter received July 24, 1936, mailed in Eastland July 23, 1936):

We have decided you are able to pay three thousand $3,000 for protection of your children if this is taken to police or you do not follow instructions we will rub out one. Then raise the amount to twenty five thousand on the other. Also we give protection for the next seven years on kidnaping and business like this. Which we know and can protect you from better than the police don't try any funny business for we need one killin' to terrorize others. And don't think we won't do it for we will. Then demand said price above on the other one. Have the money 1,500 in fives and 1,500 in tens all this money must be in old bills. Take the money to Fort Worth check in the Texas hotel under the same name that is on the envelop this is mail in. Then insert this add in the personal of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram (John Ring we are ready sign S.B. July 26 (Sunday) paper and Monday July 27, 1936) but not later. From there we will give you instructions on how to deliver the money. Last warning don't try any funny business or you will be sorry the rest of your life remember the life of your children can not be brought back.

OUR SIGN F F F F (Copy of second letter received July 28th. Mailed special delivery in Fort Worth July 27th):

LAST NOTICE We are not playing Sam and know you have had time to call in a postal inspt. Take warning leave all laws out of this. Don't mark or take serial no. of bill. You have had time to have everything ready so have money in brief case come to Fort Worth Wednesday, July 29 buy a ticket to Amarillo, Texas on the Fort Worth and Denver R. R. Take train 10:45 PM ride back platform or observation platform if they have one. Somewhere between Ft. Worth and Amarillo a man will step out between the rails just after train passes and with a light make the letter F. When the light is first turn on it will be up over head making a down stroke then turn out until up over head again then on to make first horz. stroke then off and back on for second horz. stroke. Drop money between rail. Remember no law on earth can bring back life. Soon or later we can get any one if they try to put the xx on us, so leave the law out and pay off. We will do as said before. If after the pay off you want to get touch with place add in personal to John Ring.

SIGN F F F F (Copy of third letter received August 5, 1936. Mailed in Fort Worth August 4th):

We have not forgot you we have been busy with others who have cooperated with us and have not tried to give us the double cross as you seem to have done. We are giving you one more chance and if you fail to carry out instructions we will do as we said before. You can't hide your children where we can't find them sooner or later. If the coppers should catch one of my men we will take the life of both of your kids and leave you to think of how easy it would have been to have let them keep living. After all $3,000 is a small amount in comparison with the life of one and may be both. This is your last chance take it or leave it but if we do not receive the money this time we will do as said in the first notice then the next time we run into some one who don't think their children's life is worth $3,000 (when they have plenty of money) or that we can't get to them will think twice before they give us any trouble. This time (Thursday night Aug. 6) take T. P. train to El Paso ride back platform do not leave it for any reason until money is delivered for any mistake on your part you will regret the rest of your life. This time we will leave out the light instead some one will call these words (Sam Butler drop that money) have money as we have instructed before. Remember Thursday night train leaves some where around midnight. If you think you can out smart us just fail to deliver money and we will see. You might catch the man who does the killing but we don't think so. Even if you did that would not bring back the life of your child. Think it over which is worth the most your child or $3,000.

Remember Eastland to El Paso train Thursday night Aug. 6, 1936. Train leaves there around midnight these are the words Sam Butler drop that money.

Man Can't Avoid War By Isolating Himself

The world today is riding for a fall, and there seems to be precious little chance of stopping it before it comes down in a heap.

This is the sober opinion of Dr. William E. Dodd, United States ambassador to Germany, as expressed in recent remarks before a midwest luncheon club audience.

"Everybody thinks everybody is going to fight everybody," said the ambassador. "Things are worse than at the end of the World War. Masses of people who don't want war are all anxious to have enough to eat on the event of war and are trying to get along without trading with one another."

It is this, perhaps, which is the most discouraging part about the whole business. For it means that people have come to accept as inevitable, or at least as highly probable, the thing which they dread above everything else.

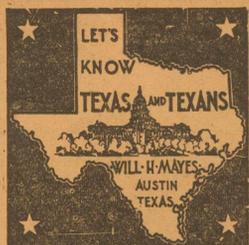

For the alternative to war, which is the sharpest and most obvious form of international discord, is international co-operation; and international co-operation involves a great deal more than simply refraining from fighting.

For a good many generations the world made steady progress along those lines. Nations exported the products they were best fitted to produce, and imported those which they could not produce economically.

The World War cut across that intricate fabric like a gigantic knife, and the war's legacy of fear, suspicion, and hatred has made it impossible for us to reconstruct it.

By making complete self-sufficiency the goal for every great nation, the world has not merely headed in the direction of war and turned its back on the old goal of co-operation and mutual help; it has elected to carry on its economics in the most uneconomical way possible, and has doomed itself to a progressively lower standard of living.

It is a vicious circle, and no one who studies it can find much ground for optimism. Because everybody is afraid of war, everybody does the very things which make war more likely. At a moment when modern science is making world society an indivisible unit, mankind is doing its level best to destroy that unity.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people.

Q. How many tax-supported libraries are there in Texas? A. W. D. Waco.

A. Fifty-eight, supported by counties and cities, but many of these are inadequately financed.

Q. Was the Texas treasure ever robbed? If so, when, and how? G. C. H., Kenedy.

A. On June 11, 1865, a band of nearly 50 horsemen broke open the vault but were dispersed by about the same number of Ex-Confederates under leadership of Capt. Geo. R. Freeman, the looters escaping with some $17,000 after one of their number had been killed.

Q. What was the experience of the United States government as to use of Rangers after Texas annexation? R. B., Manor.

A. The United States undertook protection of the frontier with infantry troops. A short experience resulted in reorganization of the Ranger service, which virtually had been dropped, the troops being unaccustomed to cope with border terrorists and Indian warfare.

Q. How did the early colonists evade the Mexican anti-slavery regulation? B. V., Liberty Hill.

A. By having the slave freed for a fixed consideration, which he obligated himself to repay to the master at a fixed wage for service, which was insufficient to pay off the debt, for which he remained bound for a specified time, this sometimes being for from 70 to 90 years.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Spirit" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Aug. 9.

The golden text is: "Thou art my God: thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness" (Psalms 143:10.)

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly" (Matthew 6:6).

The lesson-sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and health with key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Master's injunction is, that we pray in secret and let our lives attest our sincerity. . . . Only as we rise above all material consciousness and sin, can we reach the heaven-born aspiration and spiritual consciousness, which is indicated in the Lord's Prayer and which simultaneously heals the sick." (pages 16 and 16).

'Notification Gown' of Peggy Highly Infectious Trench Mouth Is

A striking picture of girlish beauty in her "notification gown" was Peggy Anne Landon, shown here. Her dress was a field flower marquisette, with its only ornament a bunch of field flowers. The hat she wore was of white leghorn.

AUSTIN, Tex.—"Trench mouth" known scientifically as "Vincent's infection" of the mouth, is a germ disease and highly infectious. It became so common during the World War and incapacitated so many soldiers as to have earned the name "Trench Mouth."

"This disease is transmitted in the same manner as a cold; that is, by direct contact with the mouth of an infected person or indirectly through the use of insufficiently cleaned eating utensils, dishes, glasses, and other articles that have been used by persons who have the disease," said Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

"While 'trench mouth' may occur as a mild infection, it can, and often does, develop into serious illness. It occasionally ends fatally. Neglect of the hygiene of the mouth and teeth makes the mucous membranes of the gums and throat a favorite breeding ground for the organisms causing this disease. It can be prevented by keeping the mouth and teeth clean and in a healthy condition and avoiding the use of articles that may carry the disease germs."

"The early symptoms of 'trench mouth' usually include dryness and burning of the gums and the throat. Later symptoms include bleeding and sore gums, bad breath, and mouth ulcers. As any of these conditions may be due to some other cause, a dentist or the family physician should be consulted promptly. If diagnosis is made and treatment started early, it is possible to check this infection before it develops into a severe form."

Children to Study In Botanical Room

MONTREAL — A botanical classroom to provide more than 250,000 school children with opportunities to study at first hand rare and unusual vegetation of Quebec province is being developed here. Emphasis will be placed on many species of food plants included in the flora native to Quebec. Already 100 varieties and specimens have been obtained and so clean that the pine belt of the south has often been called Dixie's "No Man's Land." The planting program was adopted to meet this problem.

Michigan Aids War On Plague

GAYLORD, Mich. — Ruddy-faced and broad-shouldered Fred Ming, one-time sheriff of Cheboygan county and a state representative, became a man with an "idea" when tuberculosis claimed the lives of his three brothers while they were still in their 20s.

Ming wanted a tuberculosis sanatorium for the upper tier counties of Michigan's lower peninsula. So he became a state representative, and then speaker of the House at Lansing. He advocated a bill for taxation of malt, the revenue to be used for a tuberculosis hospital for the 37 northern counties.

The bill was passed by the state legislature, but Gov. Wilbur Brucker, an ardent dry who knew malt was used to make beer, vetoed the bill. Ming was not downcast. He moved through the cloakrooms. "I don't care," he told his fellow legislators, "where that hospital is built. Put it in Cheboygan county or anywhere else, just so it's convenient."

When they hesitated, he said: "Tuberculosis is killing 150 to 200 persons a year because we lack hospital facilities."

The bill was passed over the governor's veto. During the intervening years since 1933, $250,000 was set aside in malt tax monies. The federal government supplied an additional $204,000 and the ground was broken here this month.

Several state notables, including Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, Paul A. Martin of the sanatorium building commission, and doctors, were present. They all spaded a shovel of earth. Then Ming, now an old man, lumbered through the crowd. Before he bent to the work, he picked up a stone turned up by other shovels. "I think," he said in a thickened voice, "I'll just keep this."

Snow In June and August Recorded By Weather Bureau

In an article, "Speaking of the Weather," by Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the U. S. Weather Bureau, written for the NEA Service, attention is called to the fact that in 1816, "the year without a summer," snow fell in June and August. The article is being run by special request.

Speaking of the weather: The year 1816 has gone down into history as "the year without a summer," although as far as has been ascertained by recent scientific investigation, it did not altogether deserve that title. Regular weather records were kept at that period at not more than 10 places in the United States, but many details concerning the famous cold year were recorded by persons who experienced its rigors. Typical of these descriptions is the following, written by Chauncey Jerome, at Plymouth, Conn.:

"The next summer was the cold one of 1816, which none of the old people will ever forget and which many of the young have heard a great deal about. There was ice and snow in every month of the year. I well remember the seventh of June, while on my way to work, about a mile from home, dressed throughout with thick woolen clothes and an overcoat on, my hands got so cold that I was obliged to lay down my tools and put on a pair of mittens which I had in my pocket. It snowed about an hour that day. On the tenth of June my wife brought in some clothes that had been spread on the ground the night before, which were frozen stiff as in winter. On the fourth of July I saw several men pitching quoits in the middle of the day with thick overcoats on, and the sun was shining bright at the time. . . Not half enough corn ripened that year to furnish seed for the next."

Charles Pierce's "Weather in Philadelphia" tells us that at that place "there was ice during every month of the year, not excepting June, July and August. There was scarcely a vegetable came to perfection north and east of the Potomac."

According to the "Monthly Weather Review," citing the recollections of James Winchester of Vermont: "It is said that in June of that year snow fell to the depth of three inches in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey on the seventeenth; five inches in all the New England states, except three inches in Vermont."

"There was snow and ice in every month of the year. The storm of June 17 was as severe as any that ever occurred in the winter; it began about noon, increasing in fury until night, by which time the roads were impassable by reason of snowdrifts; many were bewildered in the blinding storm and frozen to death. . . There was a heavy

Movie Boys Will Be Boys, Too

Freddie Bartholomew seems to be getting up in the world. But so, too—in the movies, at least—are his swimming pals, Jackie Cooper, left, and Mickey Rooney. Disporting themselves just like any other lads their age, the trio of juvenile screen actors are shown at a swim party given by Freddie at his home near Hollywood.

snowstorm Aug. 30 . . . The year 1816 had neither spring, summer, nor autumn. The only crop of corn raised in that part of Vermont that summer was saved by keeping bonfires burning around the cornfield night and day."

An analysis by Professor W. I. Milham of the Meteorological record kept at Williamstown, Mass., shows that at that place, the average temperature of the whole year was only a little below normal and was actually higher than that of several later years.

The summer months were all much colder than normal, but included some periods of exceptional warmth. The year was not actually one without a summer, but one in which the summer included some spells of decidedly wintry weather.

RESORT HOTEL

Deck Morgan
© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
ANN HAMILTON, pretty young secretary in a large business office, goes to a travel agency to make plans for her two-week vacation.

BILL WARE, travel bureau employee, persuades her to go to Lake Racine. Bill is obviously attracted by Ann, but she gives him little thought.

Ann goes to the mountain resort and at first is lonely. Then she meets RALPH SPRING, head of the resort, who tells her he is not interested in girls. Ralph introduces her to JAIME LAIRD, wealthy playboy. Jaime is handsome and attentive. Ann tries to persuade him to do something useful with his life but he brushes her off. She also meets LEFTY BONDS, married but flirtatious.

Bill Ware arrives at Lake Racine and is amazed to find Ann and Ann plan a mountain climbing trip.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX
ANN awoke with the dream that she was sailing into a crimson sunset with Jaime Laird at her side. The sun was streaming in her windows, and she felt a little lazy when she awakened. It was a fine day for a sail.

She lay back in her bed and yawned luxuriously. There were only a few days each year that she could enjoy the luxury of late sleep. She pressed a button, and the waiter came to the room to take her order for breakfast in bed. This luxury was the final touch!

She didn't feel like the Ann Hamilton who pounded a typewriter the other 11 1/2 months of the year. But as she lay back, waiting for her coffee, she thought of the uniqueness of a resort hotel, isolated in a beauty spot, where people came and mingled for a brief time and then went back to their regular, ordered tasks in the workaday world.

She sensed the danger in vacation romances now, but thought she was sufficiently aware of herself to avoid them. A resort hotel was an artificial community, isolated from the home and the world's work. It was the scene of color and gaiety the year round. There was a complete lack of restraining contacts, and this left one adrift. The edges of all experience were blurred. And vacation romance was sometimes blurry. The easy familiarity in a resort hotel deceived one about the things that really counted.

Ann was a little bewildered by the admiration she had been receiving. She began to distrust her own impulses.

She was going to meet Jaime today with a feeling of premonition. Jaime had made no effort whatsoever to gain her love. He would have laughed at the old-fashioned word "courtship." She had simply fallen for him from the start.

AND it was strange that she should feel this way. It wasn't his money—plenty of which he seemed to have despite his losses at gambling; it was mainly his manner toward her. Jaime was personable, charming, and they enjoyed the same things. They laughed at the same jokes. But, in the back of her mind, was a faint desire to reform him.

The idea grew until it subordinated all other considerations. It satisfied some urge in her that she couldn't define. But a desire to reform a man does not help gain insight into the man's real character. The vacation experience blinded Ann. She didn't know Jaime Laird.

She got up and flung the windows open. Gone were her doubts when she saw the bright sun on the choppy waves out there.

When she went downstairs she met Bill Ware in the lobby. He came toward her again with his ridiculous air of proprietorship. He was sure of himself—that young man!

But Ann recalled his sincere avowal of his feeling for her. His chin was stubborn. He had said, "Perhaps every man is selfish over the girl he loves."

Bill couldn't afford yachts and gay parties, but when he saw something he thought was really worth while, he went after it.

HE was talking to Bill on the porch when Jaime drove up to take her to the regatta on St. Regis Lake. For a moment the two men eyed each other with cool, measuring regard. Bill couldn't find it in himself to dislike this personable youth who had somehow walloped his chances of sweeping Ann off her feet.

But Bill felt that, of all the men at the resort, Ann had picked the wrong man. After he had waited all these years to find the right girl, she had fallen for a weakling. All that Bill could do was to wait—and see what would happen.

Instinct told him that Ann was infatuated with this gay lad. The way she looked at him, the way she made him tie his reefers around his throat as a protection against the morning chill, the bright chatter she conjured out of the air for him—all convinced Bill of the futility of his own blunt efforts to make her see his love.

When the pair drove away, their gay voices drowned by the roar of Jaime's expensive motor, Bill felt forlorn and lonely. His throat hurt.

It was a bitter ordeal he endured on the mountain that morning, but the ordeal was not in the climb. He lived too intensely at all times. He had stubbornly laid his course, and he wasn't going to deviate from it, no matter how much it hurt! He was in love with the girl.

To Ann it was an idyllic day. She lay back among the pillows in the stern of the sailboat, while Jaime kept his hand on the tiller. The regatta on St. Regis Lake was exciting. The whole fleet was out, and the pink and white sails dotting the lake looked like butterflies on the wing.

SAILING was new to her, but it was no less pleasing than Jaime's behavior today. He was deferential. He remembered all the little things that pleased her. His flattery was warm and, since there were so many other pretty girls who waved gaily to him from boats, it was convincing.

When the boat was in its pen again, and they were driving along the shore, watching the sun set behind the neighboring mountain range, there was a look in Jaime's eyes that made her believe in him at last. She didn't distrust her impulses any longer. Just now she wanted to know him better. She yielded to her own urge to heart-searching.

He parked the car on a peninsula which jutted out into the lake, and for a long time they sat there, silent. He slipped an arm around her, holding her close.

"Have a good time?" she asked, smiling. "It was marvelous. Too soon this is all going to end."

"Why must it end? I don't want it to end."

"Work," she said succinctly. "Back to the pots and pans."

"Oh—work! Let's not talk about anything disagreeable now." Suddenly his eyes shone, and he turned to her. "What do you say? Let's pack our duds and run up to Canada for the weekend. You'll be back in plenty of time to climb that absurd mountain you've promised to climb with Bill Ware."

"That sounds very attractive," she said. "But—"

"We'd have a gay time! Don't be a fossil. What do you care what a lot of porch-sitters at the hotel would say? We're young. We'll have our fun where we find it. It's nobody's business but our own—up here in the mountains."

Her voice was calm. "Yes, in a vacation place, a resort hotel, it's nobody's business but our own. That's why I couldn't go. I'm thinking about—us."

A Noted Rector Disputes Evolution

By United Press

MONTREAL. — The theory of evolution was denounced as a "vile conspiracy to rob the world of its faith in God" by Rev. Dr. D. E. Hart-Davies, noted Scottish rector, in a lecture here.

Dr. Hart-Davies, who is rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Edinburgh, declared that Pheasantropus was only created out of the crown of a skull and bones that might easily have belonged to another creature altogether.

"It is a rotten philosophical theory without any real foundation," he said. "No scientist dare attempt to demonstrate evolution by actual experiment."

"If there were any truth in that theory the world would be full of creatures, one-fifth man and four-fifths chimpanzee."

WORKERS GET 1927 PAY

By United Press

SAN FRANCISCO.—Back overtime became an asset for 35 members of the Ferryboatmen's Union, when the United States Court of Appeals awarded them $77,000 for overtime since 1927 when an eight-hour day and a six-day week was made legal.

Legionnaires and the Story of Their World War Experiences

Corporal Con Hazard of the 36th Division, A.E.F. This picture was made of Corporal Hazard in the little village of Tuffy, France, in May, 1919. The corporal was recognized as one of the best rifle and pistol marksmen in the 36th Division.

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the twentieth of a series of World War biographies being written by B. H. Peacock, commander of the American Legion Post of Ranger, covering the war-time experiences of members of the local post. Another will follow in next Sunday's issue of the Times.

CONRAD PHILLIP HAZARD

Many never-to-be-forgotten experiences, including both the tragedy and the comedy, packed themselves into the near two years of World War service of Conrad Hazard of Staff and Ranger, Texas. And possibly one of the most unusual of them all was when he witnessed the capture of a German submarine by a destroyer member of the British fleet. According to Hazard, the five American destroyers and one battle cruiser that were escorting that particular portion of the 36th Division across, had reached a point about two days out of Brest, France, whereupon the British destroyers met them and assumed command of the convoy. Shortly thereafter, the periscope of a German U-Boat was sighted. Before there was time for further action, however, the Germans had run up the white flag of surrender. One of the destroyers immediately took the submarine in charge, and it was found that the surrender was due to the fact that it had run out of fuel and supplies and was unable to return to its base.

Yes, a lifetime and more, of experiences in the great conflict were to be packed into the short space of two years for this soldier, and the marks which were to be left on both his soul and body were to be a perpetual reminder to him of things never to be forgotten. Little did Conrad Hazard realize, when on July 18, 1917, he applied for enlistment at Vernon, Texas, to serve in the 4th Texas Infantry on the Mexican border, that in the short space of a few months he would be employed in the Intelligence Section and as a sniper in the front line outposts with the American Army in France.

Con, as he was known among his friends and neighbors near the little town of Staff, Texas, where he was born and reared, had reached the impressive age of 28, when he decided to enlist. He was the youngest of a family of seven children (two sisters and five brothers). His mother died when he was only thirteen years of age, and there is no doubt but that the additional responsibility which fate had thus thrust upon him in the matter of initiative and self-preservation, stood him in good stead later on.

The 4th Texas had stood its tour of duty on the border at San Benito, Texas, and was ready for transfer and merger with the 36th Division at Camp Bowie in Fort Worth. Shooting straight had become a fixed habit with Hazard while on the target range near the border city, and so the merited badge of sharpshooter was the first of a series of decorations that placed this soldier in line for further and greater responsibilities.

Shortly after arriving at Camp Bowie, Private Hazard was transferred from Company K of the 144th Infantry and detailed to attend a service school of the Intelligence Division. Such specialized training as camouflage, the school of the rifleman, gas and trench warfare, and a hundred and one other things were quite necessary in the training of these men of the army intelligence division. To be more specific, Hazard was to qualify as a sniper for the front lines and outpost duty in France, and it was no child's play. Every bit of training which the instructors were attempting to convey to these men had its own particular mission and purpose, and the knowledge the soldier gained was no doubt in more cases than one to mean the difference between life and death for him and his buddies.

In looking back, there was one experience in particular which Hazard still recalls which helps to keep alive the memory of his tour of duty while at Camp Bowie. The occasion was the late spring of 1918, just prior to the sailing date of the division for overseas duty. General Hulen was to be transferred to another outfit and the boys were to pass once more in review before their commander before bidding him goodbye and farewell. Some 30,000 of the flower of the Southland on that spring day in Fort Worth marched in a giant parade which required some several hours to pass.

But the great war was on, and France was in the offing. Embarking from Camp Mills, New York, on July 18, 1918, found the division, some 13 days later, landing at the historic port of Brest on the coast of France. And no storm at sea or other events, other than the capture of the lone German U-Boat as above mentioned, marred the otherwise tranquil voyage across the Atlantic.

After landing, the 36th was transferred shortly to its training area some one hundred miles inland. Corporal Hazard, however, was again detailed for further duty in the Intelligence Section training school. And so important was this particular training considered by army authorities that these men were given continuous schooling directly up to the period of October 6th, when they first saw front line service. For theirs was an unusually heavy responsibility, wherein the fate of many oftentimes was to rest upon their training and ability to make decisions and to act in cases of emergency.

"We first saw action on the morning of October 6th, reminisced Corporal Hazard as the recollections of those stirring days began to assert themselves in his memory. "The fighting had just passed from trench to open warfare, and consequently ours was to be action on the move. During a period of some two days and nights upon which we were engaged in the advance toward the Aisne River, we were continually on the move. The Germans were retreating before us, and our main resistance was in connection with some of their rear guard machine gun nests and snipers."

After some two days with practically no sleep or rest, the 36th reached its objective on the Aisne River, after having advanced a distance of 21 kilometers. Eight hundred and thirteen prisoners were taken by the boys of the division on this advance, as well as 9 pieces of artillery and 294 machine guns. It was during the course of this advance that Corporal Hazard found on the body of one of the enemy a post card written in German. Thinking that possibly it might contain military information, he carried it to headquarters. Upon having it interpreted, it was found to have been written by a sister of the deceased soldier and was merely a communication of greeting. Interpreted into English, it read as follows:

Berlin, Aug. 5, 1917.

Dear Brother:
Your letter was received with pleasure, only you write too little. I hope to receive a long nice letter from you, and do not forget it. I hope to see you soon.

Your Sister.

Another communication found by Corporal Hazard on the battlefield in connection with his war services in the Intelligence Section was written by a wife to her husband, and consisted of the message written on one side of a postcard photograph. The photograph apparently was that of the wife herself. The message in substance stated that the family were getting along very well at home, and that two American prisoners had been delegated to them to dig and harvest the potatoes. It ended with the customary expression of hope and love as coming from a young wife to her husband in the war. And little did that sister or that wife know or realize that they were never to see their loved ones again.

A check-up on the drive found that of the 72 snipers in Hazard's organization that began with the advance, only some forty-odd had lived to tell the story. Consequently, even though the subject of this story kept his silence when contacted in this regard by the writer, it is only logical to assume that he must have shared the dangers and the experiences of this historic advance with his buddies.

This historic advance will always remain in the memory of Corporal Hazard because of the fearful toll in casualties which was taken by the deadly mustard gas. More than once and without warning, the doughboys would find themselves in a gaseous area. The signal would then be given, but for many, it came too late. Mute evidence of its deadly mission was observed by the writer upon noting a number of pale, sunken spots on the hands and arms of the corporal.

After having reached their objective on the Aisne River, the 36th dug in. Corporal Hazard and his buddies were then assigned to outpost duty in front of the lines. They were equipped with telescopic sights for their rifles; powerful field glasses, and the necessary maps for posting military information and transmitting same back to headquarters. "On these occasions," said Hazard, "it was our duty to watch for activity on the part of the enemy as to mines, artillery emplacements, or other special movements. Upon observing this information, we were to immediately transmit it by runner to the rear."

"And I had the never-to-be-forgotten experience of seeing quite a number of air battles between the French and the Germans directly over our lines. On one or two occasions, we witnessed a total of approximately 25 planes on each side, each of them circling, spinning, looping the loop and all sorts of aerial acrobatics in order to gain a superior advantage over their respective enemy. On several occasions fliers would fall near our lines, due to either their having been shot or their planes disabled. And a scene that would really make us shudder would be when an enemy plane put itself in position to swoop down one of the sausage balloons under command of the French. The first thing you would note or observe would be the sputter-sputter of the machine gun, and next would be a burst of flames from the balloon. And almost instantly, one would see the observer as he slid down the guy rope to safety."

The command post of Corporal Hazard's battalion was at Atigny, which sector was held by it until October 28th, at which time it was relieved. The next assignment for the organization was in the reserve forces of the Argonne Forest. It was in the Argonne that the corporal and his buddies had stopped for a short rest at a little village on that fateful morning of November 11, 1918. A runner from divisional headquarters came rushing in at about 8 a. m. with the message of the armistice which had been signed and was to become effective at 11 a. m. that day. Since a false alarm had previously been published, none of the soldiers believed the story, and not until another message from headquarters at about 10 a. m. did the full import of the occasion dawn upon them. At 11 o'clock that morning the story was too good to be true, for the World War was at an end. And to make it even more emphatic, the quietness of death seemed to pervade the very hillsides, for neither a rifle, machine gun, nor heavy artillery was letting loose its noise and work of destruction.

The war had hardly ceased, however, before orders were published for the 36th to begin its some 200-mile hike to the French city of Tanniere, where it was to remain until the return home. "And that was one hike that I will never forget," stated the corporal as he recalled the occasion. "Even though the war was over, we were required to march those ten days under full pack, and that was where the blistered feet and broken arches of many of our men were developed, and not excepting myself."

One general maneuver each month during the balance of the stay of the 36th at Tanniere, was a part of the special orders for the boys. However, practically all of them, including Hazard, enjoyed the happy experience of a leave to the gay cities of Lyons, Monte Carlo, Nice and Paris. While in Paris, it became the good fortune of Corporal Hazard to see the famous championship football game between the 36th and 98th Divisions played in the great athletic bowl. He also visited the tomb of Napoleon at Les Invalides; also the famous French Palace of Justice, and the world-renowned Eiffel Tower.

Several souvenirs which Corporal Hazard prizes very highly include a deck of German playing cards which were the gift of a German prisoner; and a prized bayonet about 18 inches in length and once a part of the equipment of one of the German "jagers" or snipers. And, incidentally, the scabbard which held the bayonet was adorned with a green cord and sash, which was emblematic of that branch of the service. The deck of German playing cards were most unique in that their color and picture schemes depicted in a very realistic manner the national life of the German Empire at that time, as well as its history and achievements.

A record which any soldier would have well been proud to have achieved by Corporal Hazard, when he qualified for the Inter-Divisional Rifle and Pistol Match by tying with one Major (CONTINUED ON PAGE 6)

Knows His Peas; Watch His Eyes

It's another "big wind" year, with the presidential campaign in full blast, but all the blowing isn't being done by politicians, as you can tell by the expression on the face of Robert "Tornado" Poteiger. Robert is the champion pea shooter of Reading, Pa. It sounds exaggerated, but reports are that he blew so hard to win the title that all his shirt buttons popped off and his eyes crossed.

LEGIONNAIRES AND THE STORY OF THEIR WORLD WAR SERVICE

Breckenridge for first place on the team that represented the 36th Division. On one occasion, the records show that Corporal Hazard made a straight 100 in shooting on the 1000-yard rifle range.
About May 1, 1919, the division, including Hazard, embarked from Brest on the voyage back to the states. "Our ship," stated Hazard, "was a reconditioned merchant ship that had previously been sunk for military purposes, and raised again to be used for transport purposes. We arrived at about May 15th at Camp Mills, New York." And according to Corporal Hazard, tears swelled in the eyes of many a Yankee doughboy as they again looked at the Statue of Liberty and the New York skyline. In a few short days, the 36th was again home at Camp Bowie, and amid the plaudits of the thousands at home, the last review was held on the streets of Fort Worth.
An honorable discharge having inscribed thereon the attributes of a good soldier was handed to Corporal Hazard on the 21st of June, 1919, at the conclusion of his service of practically two years in the American Army. Con returned immediately to Ranger, where he became the manager of the Club Tailor Shop on Pine Street of that city. He later disposed of his tailor shop interests and entered the employ of the Universal Products Company in the manufacture of natural gasoline west of Ranger. On Sept. 7, 1926, Mr. Hazard became married to Miss Pearl Cruce of Granberry, Texas. Their family now consists of one son, Archie. In 1933 Mr. Hazard entered the employ of the City of Ranger, with which he is connected at this writing.
Quiet, unassuming, honest, straightforward, and modest are some of the terms that might aptly describe this soldier. The American Legion, of which he is a faithful member, honors him. His church and the lodge to which he belongs, cherishes his membership. His neighbors who know him best call him a good citizen. Again, we salute Corporal Conrad Hazard of the 36th Division, American Expeditionary Forces.

New Name Heard In Texas Politics
By United Press
AUSTIN—A new figure in Texas political circles has emerged from Gov. James V. Allred's remarkable race for renomination. Marvin Hall, Allred's campaign manager, was so little known over the state when he took the management that a frequent inquiry heard was: "Who is Marvin Hall?"
A former county attorney in Brownsville, Hall has a gift for organization. He takes nothing for granted, works all the time and never becomes overconfident. Allison Sanders, Houston news writer, handled the Allred publicity. Both modestly say Allred would have been renominated without a manager or press agent.
