NEW DETAILS OF SEA FIGHT NOW REVEALED

By United Press
AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Nov. 15.—Surviving British and Canadian sailors from the suicide auxiliary cruiser Jervis Bay told new details today of how the ship, only her "bare ribs" left and aflame from bow to stern, went down in the North Atlantic after an encounter with a heavily armed German raider.

"It was the navy's job and the job was done," was one sailor's commentary on what has been termed one of the most heroic actions of the war.

Only 65 men from the lightly armed Jervis Bay survived, but all but eight of the 38 ships in the convoy which the Nazi raiders had set upon were able to escape, due in a large measure to the diverting and harassing action of the 14-165-ton merchant cruiser.

The converted merchant ship was under almost steady fire from the raider for an hour, survivors said, but she kept pushing ahead toward the spot where the German vessel was pouring fire from every gun. With her flag flying and her skipper, Capt. E. S. Fogarty Feenam, badly wounded, one arm all but blown away, still directing the suicide attack, the ship finally went down in flames.

Many of the survivors were sailors who had never been under fire before. It was nine hours before some of them were picked up exhausted from a raft by a Swedish freighter. They admitted today that they realized the open attack on the raider was suicidal but nevertheless they were anxious to "have a crack" at the enemy.

The raider immediately turned on the Jervis Bay when the smaller ship opened fire, according to sub-Lieutenant J. G. Sargeant. Then, under full steam, the smaller ship turned to port and moved along between the convoy and the raider, laying down a smoke screen. The enemy, Sargeant said, opened heavy fire, but the first two salvos missed.

"When we first sighted the enemy it was about 5 p. m.," Sargeant said. "I should say that within the first 15 minutes we were completely disabled, unable to get nearer the enemy warship and get our guns to bear, and from 5:15 to 5:45 we were being hit. The engine room was hit. Then the enemy concentrated on the controls of the ship."

"Well, it was just firing practice for them. The enemy was at extreme range and although our guns were fired, I don't believe we made any direct hits."

Urge Farmers To Grow More Seed

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The Alabama state extension service reports while present seed supplies are adequate, American farmers will have to produce more seed next year to meet shortages caused by the European war.

The service pointed out for many years much seed has been imported from Great Britain, France, Germany, Denmark and Holland. The imports have all been curtailed and in some instances stopped by the war.

Seeds chiefly affected, the service said, are such soil-conserving crops as crimson clover, white clover, rye-grass, orchard-grass and hairy vetch, and spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, radishes and carrots.

The Ranger Public Schools will observe two Thanksgiving Days this year, and will have two Thanksgiving holidays, it was revealed today by W. T. Walton, superintendent.

The first Thanksgiving holiday will begin at the close of the school day Wednesday, Nov. 20 and will last through the week-end. This holiday is being given the students because of the meeting of the State Teachers Association at Fort Worth on Nov. 21, 22 and 23. The Ranger Public Schools have a 100 per cent membership in the association, being one of the few schools in West Texas having such a record. Most of the teachers plan to attend the convention.

The second Thanksgiving holiday will begin at the close of the school day Wednesday, Nov. 27, because the city will be celebrating Thanksgiving officially on Thursday, Nov. 28.

College Boys Protest Rule On Stutterers

IOWA CITY, Ia.—Stutterers at the University of Iowa want no exemption from military service.

This they made clear in a recent letter to Lt.-Col. Lewis B. Hershey, acting selective service administrator.

The Demosthenes Club, a campus organization composed of genuine word muddlers, protested a recommendation of Dr. J. S. Green that the 1,000,000 stutterers in this country be exempted from military duty lest the strain emotionally disorganize them.

"In brief, we do not care to be exempted from military service and know of no sound reason why we should be," they said.

Engineers Will Train Workers

DETROIT.—A nation-wide emergency training program to fill industry's needs for skilled workers will be started under sponsorship of the American Society of Tool Engineers.

Industrial firms, educational groups, state and federal agencies, and municipal and county governments will be asked to cooperate in providing mechanics, tool and die designers, and tool engineers for the national defense program.

The society plans also to recommend a new four-year high school and a college course to prevent possible future shortages of technical workers.

Complete plans for the emergency training program will be available in a few weeks, the society said. It will include an "upgrading" project whereby workers, some with experience, will be taught more complicated jobs in from three to six weeks.

Local administrations will be asked to provide school buildings for classes; industry, shop equipment and instructors; and government bodies, any necessary funds.

An advisory committee with representatives from all cooperating agencies would direct the program. Trainees would serve as apprentices in private industrial plants for a short time after completing their courses.

ITALY'S ABSENCE FROM MOLOTOV CONFERENCE CAUSE OF SPECULATION

BY J. W. T. MASON
United Press War Expert
Commissar Molotov's two-day visit to Berlin, is specially marked by the fact that he had no contracts with Italians during his stay.

Not only did Count Ciano withhold his presence from the conferences, but also there has been no public announcement of participation in the principal functions by Italy's ambassador to Germany. Italy seems to have boycotted her axis partner's reception of the Russian envoy or to have been frigidly ignored. Somewhat ostentatiously, as Molotov left Berlin, there arrived in Rome General Antonescu, premier of Rumania, victim of territorial severances executed by Russian and German military power.

Whatever occurred at the meetings between Molotov and Hitler can scarcely have concerned Italy in any direct way. The only alternative to this conclusion must be the presumption that Mussolini has accepted a subordinate axis role and looks to Hitler for orders.

Since it is improbable, however, that Mussolini could afford to remain aloof if Molotov and Hitler discussed matters affecting Italian interests, there is reason for disbelieving reports that world-shaking decisions were reached by the Berlin negotiators. It is reasonable, therefore, to accept at its face value today's statement from Berlin that the discussions concerned questions of interest to Russia and Germany presumably not involving Italy.

If there had been any conclusive results regarding the Mediterranean, the Dardanelles, Turkey, and the Balkans, it would have been impossible for Italy to have remained aloof or to have been ignored. Whatever opinions may be held by Hitler and the German high command about Italy's military and naval power, it is fantastic to assume that Hitler wishes to affront Mussolini at this time.

Italy's absence from the Berlin discussions thus should signify that no settlement was reached definitely assuring a joint axis campaign in the Mediterranean and the middle east. Economic and financial questions and the serious problem of Russian and German armies facing each other along their frontiers may well have occupied the larger part of the discussion time, with special reference to German activity at Rumania's Black Sea ports.

Molotov is carrying back to Moscow not only an assortment of promises and assurances given him by Hitler and Ribbentrop. He is taking with him the knowledge that while his farewell party was being held last night, British bombers showed the accuracy of

Naval Training Station Work Is To Start At Dallas

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 15.—Construction will be started early next week—possibly Monday—on the $750,000 naval reserve's training station at Hensley Field, near Dallas.

Buildings at the base, which will train 1200 navy reserve fliers a year, will include a 200 x 200 foot combined hangar and administration building, repair shops and quarters for trainees and a permanent staff of 150 officers and men.

The base has been given 30 acres of Hensley Field for its own facilities, but will share with the army in use of the field and runways. Naval reserve fliers will use the base to keep in training. The field also will be used as an auxiliary to the huge navy air training base at Corpus Christi.

Commander L. N. Moeller, navy officer in charge of construction, also is construction officer for that $23,000,000 naval base project near Corpus Christi. He explained that several other auxiliary landing fields were being established to give cadet fliers a necessary variety of training.

Construction of the project here is to be completed by March 1, 1941, after which it will accommodate 100 fliers a month.

Women Swinging Toward Home Life

AUSTIN, Tex.—Women are swinging toward home life again, Miss Dorothy Gebauer, dean of women to some 4,000 University of Texas co-eds, recently told members of the second Texas Personnel Conference here.

She said there is a "growing tendency toward less interest in women's professions, more interest in the home."

"Women today are gradually considering marriage as a job," she declared.

Present emphasis of the national defense program—stressing home life and environment—is a contributing factor toward this trend, she added.

State Highway Revenue Shows an Increase in U. S.

NEW YORK.—The decade of the slumpy 30's might not have been so prosperous for the average American taxpayer, but these have been mighty fine years for the state collectors of automotive taxes.

The flow of dollars from pockets of highway users to state treasuries has increased enormously. In 1940 highway users will pay in special automotive taxes $483,000,000 more than what they paid in 1930, according to the American Petroleum Industries Committee. In 1930 these taxpayers paid $850,388,270 on the states in automotive taxes, a sum which broke all records at the time. In 1940 the nation's highway users will pay, the committee estimates, a total of $1,333,000,000 in state gasoline taxes and registration fees, an increase of $483,000,000 over the year 1930.

"This increase of nearly half a billion dollars in the annual state tax bill of the motorists during a decade when they were faced generally with lower incomes and difficulties in balancing personal and household budgets, certainly should receive careful attention of state legislative and taxing authorities," comments the committee. "Motorist taxes have grown far faster than other taxes. When tax reductions are possible, they should receive first consideration."

BRITISH CITY IS DESTROYED BY NAZI BOMBS

Five hundred German airplanes dropped one million pounds of bombs on the British aircraft center at Coventry, British planes gave Berlin the heaviest bombing of the war and the Greeks today were reported to be threatening the supply lines of the Italians in Albania.

The German attack on Coventry, a city of 165,000, was among the greatest in history, and 1,000 civilian casualties resulted from the indiscriminate attack.

Interest in the Balkans perked up as the Greeks reported continued successes that endanger the main Italian army in Albania.

The German general staff met the Italian staff at Brenner Pass, possibly to plan joint action in the Balkans.

The British reported their bombs damaged all the Berlin railroad stations, set off fires at the Templehof Airdrome and that 23 German centers, besides the capital, were attacked during the night of heavy raids.

German fliers claimed that the great British airplane factory at Coventry was completely destroyed, and that fires which could be seen 100 miles away at the English Channel Coast had been set.

SERIAL STORY

GOAL TO GO

BY W. H. PEARS

YESTERDAY, Bill Drowsy and Helen anxiously awaited word from the Board on Buck's job. Bulet-head and Dot came to the store, then Skelton and Peskin. The Board is rejecting Buck's application. A bandit enters, threatens the group. Dot skelton says Bill hits the bandit in a flying tackle. Drowsy wins a bottle and Skelton changes his mind.

CHAPTER X

BACK at Peskin's drug store, Helen and Drowsy waited eagerly for news. Drowsy nudged behind the counter; Helen played with the crooked ice in her corks. As Bill came slowly through the door, they rushed at him.

"What's the news, kid?" Drowsy demanded.

"Oh, Bill, is it good?" Helen asked.

"I don't know," Bill said, gloomily. "But I'm afraid not." He told them about the meeting. "Mr. Skelton wasn't so bad, but old Peskin's still sore as a boiled owl. Gosh, I wish I'd let Buletthead knock the tar out of me!"

Helen looked at the clock. It was nearly 10. "I'm awfully nervous, Bill."

"Just the same, I'm glad you're here," Bill said. "I'll mix up some cokes." Drowsy moved to let him behind the fountain.

They sat in silence, sipping their drinks. Each time the door opened they jumped. In a rage, Bill waited on customers. He made the wrong change twice and put cherry syrup in a chocolate soda.

A loud, familiar voice broke in on Bill's thoughts. Buletthead Peskin swaggered into the store with Dot Skelton. She froze Bill and his friends with a haughty glance.

Buletthead hammered on the table and made himself generally obnoxious. But tonight Bill could not be baited. He waited on them quietly, making no retort to their sibes.

Helen's eyes blazed. "They ought to be ashamed to treat Bill like that!"

Drowsy said, "Look, Helen, here comes Peskin now! J. Conrad is with him."

The two men strode importantly into the store, joining Dot and Buletthead at their table. Julius Peskin's sour face was as close to a smile as it ever came. He jerked his finger at Bill.

"Two chocolate sodas," he ordered, turning a magnanimous smile on Skelton. "This is my treat."

"Thank you," J. Conrad Skelton said pompously. "All that talking has made my throat dry."

"Why don't they say something?" Drowsy whispered. "Why do they want to make Bill suffer?"

The four talked in low tones, anxiously awaiting word from the Board on Buck's job. Bulet-head and Dot came to the store, then Skelton and Peskin. The Board is rejecting Buck's application. A bandit enters, threatens the group. Dot skelton says Bill hits the bandit in a flying tackle. Drowsy wins a bottle and Skelton changes his mind.

CHAPTER XI

"Hit 'em harder, fellows," Buck Mentor called. "Keep your eyes up. Okay, that's good. Cool off slowly."

The squad dog-trotted off the practice field. Buck Mentor relaxed on the bench, a cane in each hand. He frowned, spoke to Bill at his side.

"Going to be tough," he said. "It's hard to believe that some of these boys have played a whole season and still don't know how to time a play."

"Only five days till the big game with East," Bill said anxiously. "Think you can do it, Buck?"

"Losing your nerve?" he grinned.

"Heck, no!" Bill retorted. "Look what you've done already, Buck. The fellows are snapping into the plays like they never did before."

"I can't cram them full of new plays now," Buck said. "It'd only confuse them."

"A lot depends on one game," Bill mused.

Buck nodded. "Skelton made it pretty plain that I'd get a contract for next year only if we beat East. It's a little self-important, Bill, but he's a fair man. If we win, he's willing to advance me enough on next year's salary to go east for the operation."

"Think of it, Buck!" Bill's eyes glowed. "Being able to walk again..."

Buck dropped his hand to Bill's knee. "Thanks to you, fellow. As usual, you carried the mail."

Bill laughed because the football term was so appropriate. "I carried it, all right," he admitted. "I've still got that letter!" Bill sobered. "But, Buck, I wish I could really carry the mail for you."

Regret showed in Buck Mentor's deep-set eyes. "Bill, what do you think it would mean to me to have you out there playing next Saturday? But I can't, you know that?"

"Not even for one quarter?"

"No, Bill. Young Peskin is the only boy on the squad who hasn't honestly earned his position. And we can't yank him. Not because I'm afraid of Julius Peskin, but because it would look like spite work."

"Okay, Buck, you're the boss."

All week Buck toiled with the team. On Friday evening he gave them a final chalk talk.

Peskin Loses a Bout When the Sack Bandit Meets a Flying Tackle

There was an instant's silence in which Bill could hear the bandit's heavy breathing. Then the silence was broken by a strange sound. It was like the sobbing note of a harmonica.

Bill shot a glance over his shoulder. He saw Dot Skelton jump to her feet, her mouth open in terror. The bandit whirled on her with a snarl. His trigger finger tightened.

Bill crouched, the money in his hand raining to the floor. Then he drove forward in a flying tackle. The bandit turned too late. Bill caught him hard and low. The gun, leaved from his hand, went clattering across the floor.

Steel fingers closed around Bill's throat. Gasping, the boy reared his fist into the bandit's stomach, but the fingers pressed relentlessly. As the room began to swim before his eyes, Bill heard a bony thud. The fingers relaxed.

BILL shook his head to clear it. He saw Drowsy Peters, still clutching the jagged neck of a broken bottle, looking down at the bandit, who lay senseless in a pool of rubbing alcohol.

"D-did I kill him?" Drowsy asked weakly.

Bill hugged his friend. "You were swell, Drowsy," he choked. "That guy almost had me."

With a grin of admiration, both boys turned toward the rear of the store. Helen Welch was at the telephone calling the police. "That's keeping your head," Bill called to her.

A squad car arrived promptly. Julius Peskin sulkily refused to answer questions, but J. Conrad Skelton surprised Bill with his statement to the police:

"These boys deserve credit. They were just as frightened as we were, but, unlike ourselves, acted in spite of their fear."

When the police had gone, Bill began to sweep up the broken glass. Skelton and Peskin were in a huddle at the rear of the store. Finally Bill heard Skelton say emphatically:

"I must go against you, Julius. Young Mentor saved my daughter's life. You can't tell me that a boy who acts that bravely is a bully. I don't propose to insult him by offering money. There is but one way to repay the boy, and I intend to take it!"

Skelton crossed the store with brisk steps. His composure had vanished for the moment. He took Bill's arm.

"You're a brave lad," he said kindly. "You can forget what I said before that bandit entered. I'll drop in and have a talk with your father tomorrow morning."

major. They made numerous formations, ending up before East's stands in a big E. Cheers cut crisply across the clear winter day.

Down in West's dressing room, the noise was a faint murmur. Thirty odd tight-jawed youngsters wriggled into uniform. Buck Mentor hobbled among them, lending a hand here and there, but saying little. Bill stayed by his side. He had insisted on wearing Buck's old uniform, saying, "It may bring us luck."

Buck Mentor looked at the clock. "I'm not giving you a pep talk, fellows. You don't need it. You've proved that to me this week. You've done a swell job, and you'll go out there and keep it up. You're going in against a tough club. All I ask of you is to keep fighting, no matter how bad things look. Better get out now and limber up."

One by one they filed past him, and for each Buck Mentor had a word of encouragement. He dropped into his chair and Bill wheeled him up the runway onto the field.

"They're good boys, Bill," he said proudly. "They'll give East one whale of a battle all the way!"

THE first quarter verified Buck's prediction. The West boys smashed in on every play. They bottled up Laurie, the star of East's running attack. He made a few short gains and one of 15 yards, but he didn't break loose for any sensational runs.

East, however, was equally efficient on the defensive. Time after time Hart, Calvert, and Peskin carried the ball and were hurled back. The quarter ended with no score. At the half the two teams were still battling each other to a standstill.

Buck sent his boys out for the third quarter with a few words of quiet praise. It was on the second play that Laurie broke loose. On a fake reverse he cleared West's first-line defense, snaked away from a charging tackle and by sheer speed outran the defensive fullback. He got to the 10-yard line before West's safety man caught him.

"We want a touchdown! We want a touchdown!"

Bill Mentor chewed his lip. Buck hunched forward on the bench. Two power plays netted six yards, then no gain, and last of the afternoon and took advantage of the box at his disposal.

West line, piled up in a heap. The referee's arms raised. Bedlam broke loose and the score was 6 to 0 against West.

East vs. West—Buck Stakes All On One Big Game

When it was over, Bill headed for the Welch front porch.

Bundled in sweaters, he and Helen sat on the top step and talked. Bill was neither gloomy nor optimistic in his predictions.

"East is tough," Bill said. "They haven't lost a game this season. We've only won one. But we've got the spirit now, and that makes a difference. One of their back-field men, Laurie, is a hunk of greased lightning. If we can stop him..."

"We've got to, Bill!" Helen's words made pale vapor on the brittle air. "Too much depends on winning."

Bill nodded, said slowly, "You know, if Buck gets a steady job I can sort of make plans."

"What kind of plans, Bill?"

"Oh, just plans," he said vaguely. "You know, like people always make."

Helen tilted her chin. "Oh, well, if you want to be mysterious..."

"Heck, no, it isn't that, Helen. It's just hard for a guy to say..."

"Why?" she murmured.

"It's a long way ahead," Bill said doggedly. "Too far, I guess, to mention."

She turned her back on him. "Then it can't be very important. If it was, you'd want to tell me."

"All right," Bill said desperately. "I just thought that you and I—well, after I go to college..."

"What, Bill?"

"Oh, jumping Jacob, Helen, don't you catch on?"

She turned then, smiling. She had been smiling all the time over his embarrassment. "Of course, I catch on, Bill." She squeezed his hand. "And I think you have the swellest plans of anyone I know."

Bill got up. "Well, I'd better go in so I won't disturb Buck."

Helen stood up, too, and lifted her lips to him. Bill kissed her, finding her mouth cool and sweet. "You're a darn swell girl, Helen," he said huskily.

SATURDAY was perfect for football. The thermometer hung just above freezing. With business at a standstill, City Stadium became the hub of all activity. Even Julius Peskin closed his store for the afternoon and took advantage of the box at his disposal.

Long before game time, the stadium was filled and people begged for standing room. West's scarlet-clad band paraded about the field behind its high-stepping drum

Tillett Is Honored With Parth Given By Boys He Taught

Nearly 200 people were present Thursday evening at the American Legion Hall when boys of the NYA metal shop held a "going-away" party for Henry A. Tillett, Jr., supervisor of the NYA metal shop, who is leaving today to accept another position with the State Board of Education.

NYA enrollees, supervisors and friends of Tillett gathered for the occasion, when a short program was given. Bob Byron acted as master of ceremonies.

A square dance team composed of NYA boys and girls were presented, after which the NYA boys presented the honoree with a leather traveling bag. Ranger NYA supervisors also presented Tillett with a present, a leather brief case.

Tillett was the first NYA supervisor in Ranger, being stationed here at the opening of the program by the State Board of Education, and has been instrumental in the success of much of the program in Ranger.

France—a Split Personality

Eloquent Andre Marois is in this country appealing for France. She could not have a more effective advocate. "Do not judge France harshly in this hour of her great distress," pleads M. Maurois. "She needs more than ever your understanding friendship and she has, I think, a right to it, as she has lost everything in the service of freedom."

So be it. Despite the substantial repayment in 1917 and 1918, the United States will never forget that it was French support that helped win the Revolutionary War.

The French which M. Maurois property reminds us can never die, the French of Montaigne, of Moliere and Racine and Balzac, the French of Chartres, Amiens and Dijon, the France of Valmy and Austerlitz and Verdun, that France will always live in the hearts of civilized men, together with the hope that it may rise again.

But France as a political unit among the nations of the world can scarcely be said to exist at all today. The causes of France's fall are an absorbing and necessary field for investigation, but the fact remains that France is fallen. In its relations to the outside world it has no freedom of action. Whatever action it takes must originate with Nazi Germany, or at the least must not be repugnant to Himmler's secret police. There are signs that Frenchmen are beginning to realize this more fully; a modern descendant of some sansculotte revolutionary balladeer puts it:

A rueful young Frenchman of Clichy, Said, "We were both washy and wishy!
 "We fell in the trap, Oh!
 "And got the Gestapo,
 "Plus a fragrance that's fishy from Vichy!"

For the French people of the United States will always have a sympathy; but the French people are mute. For the present French government, which can in the nature of things be nothing but a creature of France's conqueror, Hitler, the United States can have nothing but a vigilant wariness. Marshal Petain's plaintive assertion that "at least France retains its sovereignty," has no basis in reality.

M. Maurois has been speaking for the French people and for French culture. Whether he proposes to go further and speak for the men of Vichy, we do not know. But if he does, he will need to summon more eloquence than even he has yet been able to command.

Being two-faced never doubled anybody's face value.
 If you think of yourself alone that's likely how people will leave you.
 Greeks reported encircling 15,000 Italians—indicating they're fighting rings around 'em.

Freckles and His Friends—By Blosser

OMAHA, Neb.—Organization of a social club for tall men and women in Omaha is announced by Marie Treva, 19, who is three-fourths of an inch over six feet. Qualifications for the club: men must be at least six feet four inches tall and not over seven feet; women six feet to six feet four. Age limits are 18 to 35 and any member marrying a person under the height requirements will be dropped automatically.

Circulars distributed by Miss Treva promised "picnics, hikes, dances, weiner roasts and parties to make the members the envy of all small fry."

R. C. Allen, government consultant on defense, calls U. S. metal a key war factor. Doughboy mettle was just that in the last mess.

Has A Miniature Hat Collection

By United Press
 PORTAGE, Wis.—One of Mrs. Daniel H. Grady's hobbies—and she has many—is collecting hats, none of which could be suitable for milady's 1940 headgear.

She saves everything from lithographed and first edition autographed books to rickety, century old melodians, but one of her most cherished possessions is a collection of more than 200 miniature hats.

They are made of wood, many kinds of glass, clay and china. A century ago these hats served as toothpick dispensers, flower bowls and table decorations in some of the country's smartest homes.

One of them is a man's hat, once worth $4,000. It is a "topper" only 3 inches tall. On it is inscribed: "Made of national Greenbacks, reduced and macerated at the United States treasury. Estimated value of bills, $4,000."

Mrs. Grady started her hat collection five years ago. She has two windows in her study packed with these tiny multi-colored hats, some of them flat sailors, but most of them "toppers." There are also coked hats and glass replicas of "Rough Rider" hats.

Her library contains 5,000 first editions of modern American authors, most of them autographed.

Cafeteria Service Tested In Prison

By United Press
 COLUMBUS, O.—Ohio penitentiary's 3,692 inmates soon may have their meals served cafeteria style if experiments now under way prove successful.

ALLEY OOP

Small-scale rehearsals of cafeteria-feeding already have been conducted.

Warden Frank D. Henderson announced the system would be tried in its entirety if subsequent trials proved equally successful.

"The men will get their food while it's hot, and they will be able to select the kind and the amount of food they want, thus eliminating waste," said Henderson.

Under the old system, the inmates sat at tables and were given their food from serving dishes, which often cooled before their contents were distributed. All men received equal helpings, regardless of their appetites.
