HEAVY RAINS CAUSE FLOODS OVER STATE

By United Press
Although the weather bureau at Dallas Saturday reported 24-hour rainfall almost general over the state, the big rains fell at Gainesville, 2.28 inches, Paris, 2.28 inches, and Amarillo, 2.19.

Rain clouds continued to deluge sections of Oklahoma. Ardmore had 2.67 or almost five inches in two days, McAlester 2.11, Tulsa 1.27. But Fort Sill, outside of Lawton, reported only .09, and Elk City .23 and Oklahoma City .12.

Texan rainfall included: Lubbock 1.36, Muleshoe .43, Plainview .55, Dalhart .46, Miami .51, Memphis .50, Childress .30, Henrietta 1.43, Quanah .01, Crosbyton 1.47, San Angelo .30, Llano 1.58, Lampasas .72, Dublin .90, Quero .32, Abilene .04, Lufkin .27, Yoakum .93, Brady .05, San Antonio .91, Corpus Christi .45, Palacios .16, Alice 1.05, Houston .34, Galveston .54; Navasota .58, Waco .06, Dallas .46, Fort Worth .38, Brenham .65, Bridgeport 1.18, Greenville 1.95, Sherman 1.30, Corsicana .53.

More rain over most of Texas was forecast. In Fort Worth, officials of the Fort Worth & Denver City railroad said that passenger trains were 12 to 18 hours behind schedule as section crews repaired two sections of damaged tracks between Bowie and Wichita Falls.

Bus lines said that barricades on the Decatur-Wichita highway were removed at midnight, but highway 87 from Henrietta to Ringold, still was closed to traffic. Denton creek rose so high this morning that the highway department was forced to close highway 24, east from Decatur to Denton.

Child Asleep In A Car Is Stolen As Parents Eat Supper

By United Press
CANTON, O., Oct. 4.—A six months old baby, Judith Hineman, was recovered unharmed by police today after she was apparently unknowingly kidnapped by a man who stole her parents' car.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Hineman, of Alquippa, Pa., had left the child asleep in the back seat of the car when they stopped for a sandwich at a restaurant near Imperial, Pa., last night.

They were in the restaurant about 15 minutes. When they returned they found the car and the child gone.

Police were notified and early today the baby was recovered here where the car had been abandoned. John Joseph Quinn, 28, of Pittsburgh, was held in connection with the car theft.

Oil Proration Is Cause Of A Drop In Nation's Output

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 4.—Domestic crude oil production dropped sharply for the week ending today because of an extra proration shutdown day in Texas, and averaged 3,851,650 barrels, off 201,550, the Oil Weekly reported.

National output was 161,250 barrels daily below the U. S. Bureau of Mines estimate of market demand for October, the publication said. Big gain in Illinois production was offset by a drop in Kansas.

Weeks trend: Texas, 1,243,900, off 216,400; California, 633,700, up 1,500; Oklahoma, 43,500, up 950; Illinois, 433,650, up 18,950; Louisiana, 331,600, off 2,500; Kansas, 239,700, off 18,300; New Mexico, 115,500, up 300; Eastern States, 93,450, up 250; Mountain States, 113,050, up 1,050; Michigan, 52,400, up 1,100; Indiana, 19,800, off 450; Arkansas, 75,550, off 150; Mississippi, 59,850, up 5,050, and Nebraska, 7,000, up 100.

Hull Denounces New Ship Sinking

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today denounced the sinking of the American-owned tanker I. C. White as apparently "another act of lawlessness, piracy and attempted frightfulness" which is part of a plan to drive people from Atlantic sealanes.

Hull added that the act apparently was also part of the general movement of world conquest. He spoke strongly in support of a policy of self-defense as against ordinary interpretations of international law. He spoke at greater length and more forcefully than usual.

"It seems to be another act of lawlessness, piracy and attempted frightfulness in connection with the general movement to drive people off the Atlantic ocean, which is part of the world movement of conquest," he told a press conference.

Reporters asked whether the fact that the ship was under the direction of the British government, a belligerent, might not alter the situation under international law.

"There are thousands of citizens," said Gov. Leon Phillips, "who will long remember his big heart, his generosity and his ideal. Oklahoma has lost a great man."

Funeral services will be at 4 p. m. Sunday at the junior high school auditorium at Ponca City. The body will lie in state from 1 p. m. to 4 p. m. The Rev. Gordon Smith, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, of which Marland was a member, will officiate.

Former Governor Of Oklahoma Will Be Buried Today

By United Press
PONCA CITY, Okla., Oct. 4.—People from all walks of life joined today in paying tribute to the memory of Ernest W. Marland, former governor of Oklahoma and one-time owner of a vast oil empire.

He died quietly yesterday of a heart ailment after being in a coma for more than 12 hours. He had been ill most of the time since he left the governors office in 1938. For more than a week, his condition has been serious.

Funeral services will be at 4 p. m. Sunday at the junior high school auditorium at Ponca City. The body will lie in state from 1 p. m. to 4 p. m. The Rev. Gordon Smith, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, of which Marland was a member, will officiate.

Governors Seldom Heed Extradition Plea By Petition

By United Press
AUSTIN, Texas—Most people don't know it, but a governor usually must ignore petitions beseeching him to refuse extradition of persons who have become law-abiding Texans.

Such cases frequently attract wide public attention. The usual history is that a man charged, or convicted, of some felony outside Texas moves to this state and leads an exemplary life. When his presence is discovered in Texas, the man is arrested and held for law-enforcement agencies of the state wherein the crime was committed.

Because the man has made friends, sometimes become a community leader and often married and become a parent, his friends rally to his defense.

The governor finds it difficult to ignore the requests of such friends, who plead that the wanted man must stay in Texas to have a chance for a new life.

If the governor does his legal duty, State's Attorney Spurgeon Bell of Austin points out, the executive must close his ears to such pleas. Extradition procedure outlined by federal statute plainly prescribes that the man must be sent back to the state which wants him, if it is proved that he was in that state on the date that the alleged crime was committed.

It is not for the governor to decide the merits of a man's case, or to temper his decision because the man has reformed. If the person in question was in the state where the deed was done on the date claimed by legal authorities, the governor can do nothing except send the man back to answer the charges against him.

STATE NOT TO ASK DEATH FOR FOUR SOLDIERS

Trial Opens Monday Morning Before Judge Patterson of 88th District Court.

A special venire of 72 men has been summoned from which to select a jury for the trial of four Camp Wolters soldiers under indictment by an Eastland county grand jury for robbery with firearms.

The quartet, which is composed of Walter R. Sakaitis, Chicago; Roy Rankin, Tacoma, Wash.; John A. Stinebaugh, Greenville; and Audly McBride, Klondike, are charged with the hold-up and robbery of W. T. Luton, cafe and filling station operator at Scenic Point near Ranger on Sept. 15. They will go to trial Monday morning before Judge B. W. Patterson of the 88th district court.

Following the returning of indictments against the men bond was fixed at $10,000 each. Failing to furnish this the men have been held in the Eastland county jail.

When the four escaped soldiers from the army camp at Mineral Wells were arranged before Judge Patterson a few days ago they each entered pleas of not guilty.

Everett Grisham, Turner Colie and Jack Frost, members of the Eastland county bar, have been appointed to defend the accused men if their services are requested. The four will be tried collectively.

Under Texas laws robbery with firearms is a capital charge and anyone convicted of the offense may be sentenced to death in the electric chair as the maximum punishment or given a five-year term in the State penitentiary as the minimum punishment.

District Attorney Earl Conner Jr. indicated that he would not seek to have the death sentence imposed.

MRS. REED IN PLANE CRASH AT SAN JUAN

By United Press
SAN JUAN, P. R., Oct. 4.—The body of a young girl, one of two children lost from among 27 persons aboard a Pan-American Clipper that crashed in San Juan Harbor, was recovered today.

The body was that of one-year-old Zuzie Russo, daughter of Senora Angeina Russo, who boarded the plane at Port Au Prince, Haiti. The body of the second missing child, Zuzies small sister, Marie, has yet to be removed.

Mrs. Gladys Reed, enroute to Ranger to attend funeral services for her son, Buford Green, who was killed in an automobile accident, was among the passengers on the ill-fated plane, and was among the passengers who were uninjured in the crash.

A third child, Frederico Russo, suffered head injuries in the accident. He is with his mother at the U. S. Naval hospital in San Juan.

One of the passengers aboard the plane, which has been salvaged, was Mrs. Joan Herrick of Cedarhurst, N. Y.

I felt the plane land all right, although it seemed to be coming rather fast," she said.

"All at once I was turned upside down. When I got on my feet again water was up to my neck. It seemed ages until anyone came to take us out but now that I look back, it was a remarkably short time."

SOVIET ARMY ANSWERS HITLER'S CLAIMS WITH BIG COUNTERATTACKS

By JOE ALEX MORRIS
United Press Foreign News Editor
The Red Army answered Adolf Hitler's claims of victory Saturday with reports of battering counterattacks on scattered fronts from Murmansk to the Black Sea, including a four-day offensive that resulted in the recapture of 30 villages in defense of the vital Ukraine Industrial Area.

The Southern Front offensive, which appeared to be part of large scale Russian operations to check the German drive on the Donets Basin, was reported in war dispatches to Moscow to have decimated three Rumanian cavalry regiments comprising 6,000 men.

For the time being, both London and Moscow reported that the Eastern Front appeared to be holding back the Nazi onslaught, although London dispatches indicated that the Germans were attempting to strike through north of Kharkov and again stab directly at Moscow—probably the "gigantic" operation Hitler mentioned in his speech.

Reports on these operations were indirect and vague but there were indications that the Germans were aiming at the Kursk or Orel sectors between the key Donets Basin city of Kharkov and Moscow, where they suffered a severe defeat last month but where they would be able to sweep either north toward Moscow or south toward the Donets area if successful.

Latest London military reports said that the Germans did not seem to have broken through at any important point and that the Russians apparently had started a counterattack of a local nature from the Melitopol sector of the Far South to offset the German drive into the isthmus leading to the Crimea.

About 15,000 German casualties were reported in these southern operations in the last few days, while Moscow said that 500 German armored cars and 750 soldiers had been wiped out in one clash. Red paratroopers were reported taking a leading role in these local counterblows against the Germans.

On the Arctic coast, the German drive toward Murmansk was again repulsed with a counterattack that reportedly wiped out two regiments.

The German communique made no specific claims regarding the Eastern Front but repeated Hitler's statement that gigantic operations were in progress and developing according to plan. The Luftwaffe was reported to have renewed attacks on Moscow and Leningrad, while the British Air Force was bombing the railroad town of Cantanzano on the toe of the Italian boot and hitting at Nazi targets in the occupied areas of northwest Europe.

The German official agency reported that the operations against Leningrad continued on an intense scale and said that 2,000 Russian troops attempting to land at Streljina, less than 10 miles from the outskirts of Leningrad on the Bay of Kronstadt had been "wiped out."

The torpedoing of the I. C. White—the eighth American-owned ship sunk since the war began—was still the subject of some mystery, although there were reports that 35 of the crew had been rescued. Eighteen were known safe, and several apparently were missing and believed lost.

Torpedoing of the I. C. White again raised the threat of a clash between the United States Naval Patrols and Axis submarines within the American neutrality zone.

In occupied Europe, the wave of sabotage and terrorism against Nazi Rule still was spreading. In Poland it was reported that 150 persons, including 12 women, had been executed in Poland for anti-German activities since the invasion of Russia began. Norway reported new clashes of minor importance at Steinkjer and Jenvold. The Germans ordered the death penalty enforced against oppositionists aiding men of military age to flee from the low countries to England. An official of the pro-Nazi Rexist party was killed by a bomb explosion in Belgium.

In an interview published in Rome, the pro-Nazi leader of Croatia admitted that the Croats were losing some of their best men in continued battling against Serbian guerillas in former Yugoslavia.

One of the mysterious trends of the war—indirect proposals for peace by Axis sources—cropped up again today in the Far East, where President Roosevelt's reply to Japanese Premier Fumimaro Konoye was reported to have been delivered.

The Roosevelt reply was not believed to have relieved the threats of a new cabinet crisis in Tokyo, where failure of Konoye to win any concessions from Britain or the United States had resulted in extremist agitation for early direct action to press Japan's campaign for a new order in East Asia.

In the midst of this uncertainty the Japanese publication revue Diplomatique, which often reflects the views of the foreign office, said that the United States should mediate the war before it is too late.

This was the third time in recent days that talk of peace moves had arisen indirectly from Axis quarters.

Axis sources in Turkey first mentioned the possibility of a separate peace with Russia and diplomatic reports at that time said that the Russians had rejected a Nazi "trial balloon" for an armistice.

Then the pro-Axis Spanish press published a series of articles speculating on the possibility of a peace move.

Today the same idea showed up in Tokyo. Both Berlin and Moscow have scoffed at all such talk.

Man Is Held On Charge Of Murder

By United Press
TEXARKANA, Ark., Oct. 4.—Harry H. Oliver, 52, today was held without bail for trial in Miller county circuit court on murder charges in the downtown shooting here Tuesday night of Lee Clements, 37.

Clements was shot in the abdomen and died on the sidewalk before a bus station.

Oliver, a building contractor and former deputy sheriff of Miller county, admitted the shooting but made no comment at preliminary hearing yesterday.

The shooting followed a quarrel, witnesses said, between the two men at a filling station. They fought, and Oliver went for his revolver.

Let's Not Flinch in the Pinch

When, 16 months ago, America faced the problem of arming itself and arming other peoples resisting aggression, it was frankly stated that this would mean sacrifice. It was pretty much just a word, and everybody nodded gravely and said a mental "yes."

Now the time is here when the pinch is actually being felt. It isn't a word any more. It is a reality. And it hurts.

There isn't enough of certain materials, aluminum, copper, steel, rubber. The defense plants must come first. Only what remains after their needs are met is available to plants making non-defense items. That won't always be true. Facilities for producing more aluminum, for instance, are on the way. But at present there is a shortage.

That means, and will mean, real hardship. It means men out of jobs in the midst of humming activity. It means dark shops whose customers want goods which can't be turned out because the material has gone for guns. It means salesmen with nothing to sell. It may easily mean ruin for manufacturers whose plants can't be adapted to defense uses quickly.

It means, in short, hardship and privation—sacrifice. Further it means sacrifice that falls harder on some than on others. It means increasing centralization and control in a country which has already recognized this centralization as a danger. All that is plain, blunt, unpalatable, but it is true.

There is only one thing to do. It is to equalize these burdens just as much as human ingenuity can equalize them. It is to revise the priority system, as Director Nelson is already trying to do, so that those entitled to materials will be sure of getting them. It is to insist on subcontracting to the extreme limit of practicability. It is to spread defense work (and civilian work that does not interfere with it) as widely as possible. It is to make sure that sacrifices of jobs and businesses are not made merely for the sake of sacrifices, but only when the utmost diligence and intelligence cannot find a way to avoid them. American ingenuity, American resourcefulness, American steadfastness are going to be put on trial this winter. We must not flinch in the pinch.

We'll guess that it would take several hours to read the minutes of a woman's club.

It would be a lot more fun walking for exercise if you could do it sitting down.

Open House, Free Doughnuts And New Head Baker Get Schooley's Bakery Off To Big Start Saturday

Open house was held by Schooley's Bakery Saturday afternoon when 800 doughnuts were prepared for the visitors, but which lasted little over an hour, so large were the crowds.

Burt Walker, who introduced Vitamin B-1 bread to Ranger when the Ranger Baking Company opened here several months ago, assisted Mr. and Mrs. Schooley in welcoming the visitors.

Walker, one of the best known bakers in the southwest, has returned to Ranger, after a two-week stay here when his bread became so popular, has had 28 years of actual experience in the largest bakeries in the state, in addition to technical training. He was formerly supervisor of baking for the Schepps Bakeries in Dallas and for Taystee Bakeries.

Walker has specialized in Old Russian Rye bread, French bread, party rolls and Danish pastries, in addition to the plain white bread for which he became well known during his two-week stay in Ranger.

Schooley stated Saturday, during the open house, that with renovation of the bakery building, and hiring of Walker as head baker, the best bread, cakes, doughnuts and pastries would be handled at all times, and most of these items could be procured from the local grocery stores, with stocks of all pastries and breads being available at the bakery at all times.

Free coffee and doughnuts were served to visitors at the open house Saturday when much larger crowds attended than had been expected.

GREENS ARE RICH IN MANY VITAMINS

Use more greens for vitamins and minerals is the cry of nutritionists in their effort to improve America's dietary habits. Grady Pipkin, chairman of the Eastland County Food Industry Committee said the local committee working in cooperation with the Surplus Marketing Administration and other government agencies, as well as farmers, food industry, and private business, have met with success in the educational campaign now under way to "Make America Strong."

He pointed out that fresh vegetables are listed as a "blue stamp food" in the Surplus Marketing Administration's Food Stamp Plan, thereby making greens available in larger quantities to food stamp clients. He asked all local homemakers to serve more vegetables to their families.

"I read some very interesting facts concerning green vegetables in a study made by the Home Economic Section of the Surplus Marketing Administration. I think the hints and recipes will be of special interest to our local homemakers."

"Mother Nature did herself proud when she produced leafy green vegetables. Imagine having bound up in green leaves vitamin A and vitamin C, calcium and iron. Greens really bring all those food values to the meal, and scarcely make a dent in the food budget!"

"One-half cup of cooked greens provides a day's supply of vitamin A in the form of carotene; in fact half a cup of some kinds of greens supplies considerably more of this vitamin than the nutritionists have found necessary for an adult daily allowance. But that's all to the good because when the human body changes this carotene into vitamin A, the liver takes possession of any surplus. Vitamin A, unlike some of the other vitamins, can be stored up against the unfortunate possibility of eating a diet too low in this vitamin for a time.

"If leafy vegetables had no other food value to recommend them than their vitamin A value, they would still be a good buy. When we eat that half-cup of cooked greens, we cover about a third of our vitamin C (ascorbic acid) needs for the day—at least we do if we haven't ever cooked the greens. Vitamin C is rather easily affected by the cooking process—heat and oxidation, the scientists say. That's one reason for including some raw fruits and vegetables in every day's meals (and it explains also the importance of tomatoes and oranges and grapefruit for good health; they're rich in vitamin C even when cooked or canned).

"Now add to the vitamin A and C content of greens, the fact that they are rich in calcium for sound teeth and bones and in iron for good red blood, and are also good sources of vitamin B1 (thiamin) and vitamin G (riboflavin), and you have something worth marking down in your shopping notebook.

"Though most homemakers

Greens Are Rich In Many Vitamins

have their own favorite ways of cooking the vegetables they buy, here are a few suggestions for greens that may come in handy:

Cream Soup
"Cream soup made of slightly thickened milk and chopped raw greens is pleasing for lunch or supper, especially when served with something raw, and with crisp crackers or toast. One cup of thoroughly washed, drained and chopped greens (kale, spinach, or your favorite kind) is a suitable amount to combine with one quart of milk that has been thickened slightly with 2 tablespoons of flour and flavored with two tablespoons of butter or other fat. Add the cup of chopped spinach to the thickened milk, season with salt, and cook over hot water, as in a double boiler, for about 10 minutes.

Panning.
"Panning is an especially satisfactory method of preparing leafy green vegetables. The vegetable is cut into small pieces and cooked in a flat covered pan on top of the stove. A little fat should be added to prevent sticking. The water that cooks out of the vegetables evaporates, so there is no excess of liquid. If the panning is carefully done, it is possible to add some milk without having the cooked vegetable too moist. The finished product then contains all the food value and flavor of the vegetable as well as that of the milk.

Savory Mixed Greens
"Combine two or more kinds of greens, such as beet and turnip tops, field cress and spinach, corn

NO HELP FOR JUDY

walked to the stand, limping a little because one foot had a high-heeled slipper and the other foot hit bottom with every step.

"Miss Allen?" the voice of the law asked, carefully noting the disheveled copper curls, the shadows under the purple eyes.

"Yes, Your Honor." "Are you willing to state that the stories and photographs of you in these morning papers are, without doubt, yourself?"

The lost dimples play around Judy's mouth for a second. "I didn't come down any too gracefully, did I?" she asked. "In this pose even my skirts are ballooning."

She heard laughter. The judge rapped for silence.

Judy looked up in surprise. "I'm sorry. You see, my father is a Common Pleas judge, too, so I forgot to be scared." She gave the judge on the bench a dazzling smile. "Yes, I'm in the pictures. I haven't read the articles. I'm sorry."

"Will you please tell the court what happened?" The judge leaned back and relaxed. Several times he covered his amusement with a long hand which he passed over his face.

At the end he set Judy's bond at $1000. She did not flinch. "I cannot meet the amount," she stated as calmly as the associate editor of Under Twenty should state her facts. "If I may get in touch with my father or my fiancé, I shall be able to meet the bond you are setting, and obtain a lawyer instantly."

She was led away at once. Sandy followed but she swung a heavy door closed before he reached it.

"Where are the telephones?" she asked the attendant who was guiding her. She wondered what people did when they were in jail and didn't have a nickel with which to summon the operator for a call.

The officer who was conducting her on her various missions was genial and sympathetic. Judy smiled again. "Officer, will you lend me a nickel until I summon an operator? Or better still, will you call the operator for me?"

The man grinned sheepishly, found a dime in his pocketbook, and gave it to Judy. She dialed, heard the click which returned the coin and reached from the booth to give the officer the money.

"It's a station to station call, collect," she told the operator. "It's terribly important."

"That number does not answer," the smooth, metallic voice of the operator reported in a moment. "Would you like to try another number?"

Judy gave her father's office number at the court. The call was accepted by Judge Allen's secretary who said: "Judy? Your father is in court. He expected to hear from you so he left a message. I'll read it." She opened a crisp paper whose rustling carried across the wires.

"Have no connection with Judy's escapade. Grant no advice. Judgment and taste inexorably bad. Refuse any responsibility for bail. Time she learned a lesson."

THE world was small and close and tight. The world was no bigger than this telephone booth. That faint voice that tried to speak was not hers. Just the same, it said, "I can make him understand. I was kidnaped! It wasn't a stunt. Can't you make him see?"

"Your father is furious. Sorry, Judy, but I'm not much help. I'll get in all the words I can. He wouldn't take any calls at all from you last night."

"Calls—from me?" Judy's voice whispered. "I didn't call. I've been locked up with a rat that likes to eat. Is—is Philip still at the hotel?"

"Oh, yes, he approves everything your father does."

Judy did not say goodbye. She hung up so quietly even the young officer outside the door didn't know she had finished.

She asked to be escorted to her cell then.

She was aware that Sandy tried to reach her again, but she turned away and held her white, rouged face high. In her cell a new blue calico waited for her. There were white stripes on it. Plainly it stood for something like "Women's Department."

"Been told that you'll be more likely to get cold in that lace stuff," the matron said. "I'll save the white dress until you want it. How soon will you be checking out?"

"I don't know," Judy answered. "Maybe not ever—because nobody will loan me the money for bond, let alone for my fine and costs."

"When do you appear before the Municipal Court?" From some weary compartment of her mind where she had stored other half-heard suggestions, Judy summoned the answer. "Day after tomorrow."

"Then what will happen?" "I'll probably go to the state reformatory for women and learn to make hooked rugs."

SHE was afraid, more afraid than she wanted to reveal, so she laughed.

She asked for a telegraph blank and sent two telegrams, collect, 200 words each. One went to her father. The other went to Phil.

Now surely answers would come. Perhaps her family had not understood. Maybe Philip thought she had gone sky-riding for the daring of it. Now Sandy would have understood—Sandy! If it hadn't been for his crazy, barnstorming theft of her, she would be married to Phil and wearing a diamond circlet.

Suddenly she looked at the two-karat diamond engagement ring she wore. It was nice. It had been locked up with a rat that likes to eat. Is—is Philip still at the hotel?

Half an hour passed. Then another. On and on. Regularly either an attendant or the matron came to Judy's cell to plead for an admittance for Sandy. He wrote notes which she returned unopened. Finally, at 4 o'clock she received a telegram.

She opened it, with trembling fingers, and turned to the signature.

Baruch's Some Old Story Still Good One
When It Comes to Wartime Price Control

By PETER EDSON
NEA Service Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Most immediate effect of Bernard P. Baruch's bombshell statement that price ceilings should be slapped on wages, rents and farm prices as well as on all commodity prices—just as Germany has done—is that there will probably be no price control legislation before Jan. 1, if then.

Congressman Henry B. Steagall of Ozark, Ala., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee which since Aug. 4 has been dilly-dallying along with hearings on the proposed legislation, had previously announced that he hoped to conclude hearings by Oct. 2. But with Baruch's statement on the record, if Steagall's committee completes hearings before the snow flies, it will be breaking all the speed records ever set by Dan Patch, Eleanor Holm, Sir Malcolm Campbell, Howard Hughes, Jesse Owens or Peggy Hopkins Joyce getting a divorce.

You can just feel the lobbyists coming down on Capitol Hill now to get at Baruch's statement, oiling their larynxes as they come. Ed O'Neill of the American Farm Bureau Federation is already here. You bet he'll have a statement to make against freezing farm price ceilings at parity, and you bet the congressmen will listen. John L. Lewis, Bill Green and/or their C. I. O. and A. F. of L. cohorts, spokesmen and lieutenants will have their say against freezing of wages. And if you listen closely, those aren't ducks flying south in the clear September air, but the flapping wings of organizers out forming associations of landlords, wholesalers, commission men, and just general protestors who will now want to migrate Washingtonwards and speak their piece against this quote communist, nazi, fascist, socialistic, un-American unquote proposal.

Baruch is only the second witness the committee has heard. It isn't through with the first, Leon Henderson, present price administrator with limited authority and most likely choice for price fixer under the proposed legislation, if Congress ever passes it. Henderson was called as first witness Aug. 4. The committee recessed for nearly a month and most of the members went home for vacations, while prices continued to rise.

The committee itself is a cumbersome body. The members sit around its big semi-circular raised bench, with the witness and his aides and the press in the well inside the semi-circle, with several hundred representatives of the public and just plain curious rubbernecking tourists in chairs facing the committee. Doors bang, messengers scurry around, people get tired and leave, and new ones come to take their places. Witnesses make statements, and then nearly every one of the 26 committee members asks questions. By the hour. That's where the time goes. And when the House does finish its hearings and acts on the bill, the whole show will be repeated by the Senate.

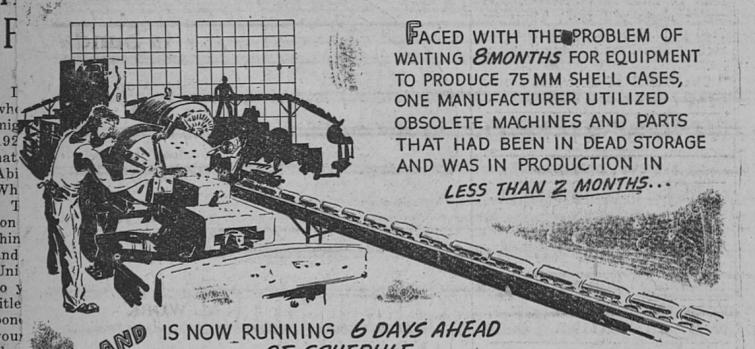

The most amazing thing about Baruch's statement on freezing every single price is that it is not new. Baruch has been saying this same thing for over 10 years. In June, 1930, a war policies commission was created by Congress. Pat Hurley, then secretary of war, was its chairman and from March to May, 1931, it held hearings on the general subject of planning for possible war. To that commission, Barney Baruch submitted a memorandum on plans for industrial mobilization, elimination of profiteering and the equalization of the burdens of war. Out of this came the industrial mobilization plan of 1931. This plan was revised in 1933, 1936 and 1939, but the basis of all these plans was Baruch's memorandum of 1931.

Man's Failure to Act as Son of God Stands as World's Greatest Tragedy

Text: Genesis 1:26-28; Matthew 6:24-33.

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D., Editor of Advance

THE foundation of a great religion was laid when man dared to conceive of himself as made in the image and likeness of the God who made him. Here was spiritual insight, clear, true, and sound, the full significance of which we can appreciate when in contrast we see the type of religion that had man cowering before the forces of nature, or bowing down to grotesque idols.

The writer of Genesis saw man in God's image, with dominion over lesser creatures and with dominion over his world. It is this view of man that is amply demonstrated throughout the centuries of human history. Man, like God the Creator, is himself a creator.

He has conquered seas and oceans; he has bridged great rivers and chasms; he has ascended high mountains and delved far into the depths of the earth. We see man, in spite of the short span of human life and the limitations of human weakness, as exercising dominion.

ON the other side of the picture, we see man with his great capacity and high estate, spurning his nobility and power to act more like a devil than like the good God who made him, and even perverting his great powers and capacities at their highest to evil and destructive ends.

It is man in these two capacities or characters, and man with the power of choice, that is set before us in the second portion of our lesson from the words of Jesus. The quality of human life, Jesus says, depends upon choice, and there are masters in rivalry for human choice that are utterly at variance.

Can we restore to man the vision of himself as the privileged child of God? The Bible is a great revelation of what man and human society could be, if men fulfilled the character and destiny for which God made them.

THE PAY OFF

ABOUT this time of the year as minor leagues come to a close, club treasurers wonder how they are going to get the red ink off their books and be ready for next season.

It remained for little Winfield, Kan., to devise a method to beat the high cost of baseball. In fact, Winfield just laughs out loud when you mention money matters.

This sports-loving town of 10,000 found a way to provide its citizens with free baseball—night baseball, no less.

Fred C. Clarke, the old-time Pittsburgh outfielder and manager, is the prime mover behind this unusual athletic enterprise.

The Winfield Plan has become so widely known in various sections that other communities are considering adopting it. It easily could become a national epidemic.

FANS do not have to dig into their jeans as they march through the gate at Winfield's ball park. The town pays the bills, if there are any. In Winfield, night baseball is strictly a civic proposition.

Business men and sportsmen had a well-lighted and comfortable modern field erected.

Players play for fun. Kids who retrieve lost balls turn them over to the management and in return are treated to a bottle of pop. At the end of the 10-week season all ball retrievers are awarded prizes. Usually they are professional-type bats, inscribed with the names of the better-known big league athletes.

One year Winfield has Donation Night. Fans throw a few cents in the pot, if they feel like it. Nobody makes goo-goo eyes at those who don't.

FRED CLARKE, a nearby gentleman farmer, organized a league with two teams in Winfield and several representing neighborhood towns.

The brand of baseball has been so good that big league scouts are beginning to wander in and take a look. Next spring the league may have a boy or two in the majors and a few in the now important minors.

The majors no doubt would be pleased to give financial aid to towns interested in the Winfield Plan.

Police Thank All For Aid With Show

The Ranger Police Department, through its chief, Lee Ames, Saturday thanked everyone who had anything to do with making the police benefit show a success. The following letter, thanking the people for their cooperation, was released by Chief Ames:

TO THE CITIZENS OF RANGER: We, the members of the Ranger Police Department, take this medium of expressing our sincere thanks and appreciation for the generous support you gave us, in staging our "Uniform Fund Show" which was a great success financially and a further incentive for the department to work hard to merit the respect and cooperation of Ranger citizens.

If, by any chance persons or firms purchasing tickets and same not being acknowledged thru the press, it was thru oversight and not intentional. Especially we do extend our thanks to Mr. Brann Garner, in whose Interstate Theatre, the show was held, and his employees who gave their time; to the Prompt Printery for the printing of the tickets . . . without cost; to Delbert Capps of the Modern Studio for photographs of policemen; to the Ranger Times for the fine publicity they gave the occasion and to the Ranger City Commission for their support and cooperation.

Again, we thank each and everyone who contributed to the success of the "Uniform Fund Show."

Yours very truly,
Lee Ames, Chief and Members of the Police Force.

Police Show List Completed Saturday

The final list of 100 per cent firms, which purchased police benefit show tickets, was released Saturday by Chief of Police Lee Ames, at the conclusion of the sales campaign.

Names added to the list included Ross Pharmacy, W. M. Bailey, Mode O'Day, Houghton Garage, Baby Ruth Candy Co., Fort Worth Linen Co., Anderson-Pruett and Perry's Garage.

English Girls And Texas Cowboys Are Now Pen Pals

SWEETWATER, Tex.—An article reproduced in the Manchester Evening News is that you will help me, as I am interested in them and would like to make pen pals of English girls and Texas cowboys.

Recently, Mayor Lee Langley of Sweetwater received a letter, on lavender stationery, from an English Miss who wanted to write to a "real cowboy."

The Sweetwater Reporter published her plea. It was reprinted by the Manchester newspaper.

Now, Langley is in receipt of another letter, also on lavender stationery, signed "Miss M. Joannidi" and bearing a Manchester postmark.

"Last night I read in the Evening News about a young man who wrote to you asking cowboy pen pal," Miss Joannidi began. "I love cowboys and ways go to see their pictures."

"I would like to find out who they are really in the Manchester stationery, and like I have seen in the lavender stationery, from an English Miss who wanted to write to a go-over to Canada, just to amuse me, but am quite attracted and would be very happy to lished her plea. It was reprinted anyone 21, six feet, dark handsome. If you cannot find another letter, also on lavender long as he is a good cowboy."
