Relax and Stay Sane

A lot of recreation experts and professional fun instigators are considering in convention the general prospects for play, and being pretty darned serious about it, too. From the President down, one after another, they have repeated something that is pretty clear to anybody who thinks about it for a moment: namely, if all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy in ordinary times, all work and no play in times like these are likely to bring the man in the white coat knocking on the door. Dr. McCracken, president of Vassar College, put it with greater dignity when he told the National Recreation Congress that without the spirit of play the world will go mad.

That is pretty obvious, true, and it requires no experts to tell the average man that a judicious mixture of work and play is the right way to live.

That is pretty obviously true, and it requires no experts play, however, for it to have full value.

When 70,000 howling baseball fans watch the classic clash of Yanks and Dodgers, the first thing to note is that they are having a whale of a good time. The second thing to note is that nobody told them they had to go to the game; nobody was fining them if they didn't appear, or checking up on whether they went or not. Nobody was telling them when to cheer, or what was cheerable. They were all at the park because that was where they wanted to be; hence they were relaxed, and for a couple of hours the world was well forgotten. And that is as it should be.

That is the American way to have fun and to get the kind of relaxation that really does some good. In the dictator countries they recognize the need for relaxation, too, so there are camps and resorts, and games. But they can't possibly be any fun with that insignificant looking fellow with the mustache gazing down from every wall; after 11 hours at the factory it can't be very helpful to have some brawny Storm Trooper come along, tap you on the shoulder, and say "Come on, now! It's time to have fun! Heil Hitler!"

What is fun, anyway? Why, a little time to do what you want to do without interference; to lose yourself in what you would be doing all the time if you could, whether it is yelling for a homer, trolling for bass, or remounting a stamp collection.

Give opportunity and the people will find their own fun.

People who think before they speak usually can back up what they say. Others just back up.

The great majority of us will get no place running things into the ground. Let's leave that to the farmers.

Milestones in a Long, Uphill Fight

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 12. The Golden Text is: "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise" (Jeremiah 17:14).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (I. Corinthians 15: 55-57).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Death is but another phase of the dream that existence can be material. Nothing can interfere with the harmony of being nor end the existence of man as Science" (page 427).

Howitzer Shells For Hitler

THIS small corner of a munitions plant somewhere in Canada which is manufacturing howitzer shells gives an idea of the vast munitions program upon which the Dominion is engaged. In the manufacture of shells, chemicals and explosives, Canada has assumed a position of supreme importance in the war. Nine of the Dominion's twelve chemical and explosive plants are of the largest in the British Empire) are producing and the balance will be in operation soon. This year alone, the total production of explosives in Canada should exceed the entire Canadian output during the whole of the 1914-18 World War. In the munitions plants, nine types of gun ammunition are being produced at a rate of millions of rounds per year. About forty per cent of the total national income of Canada this year will be spent by the Dominion for her own military needs and to give financial aid to Great Britain.

MURDER IN PARADISE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: "It's murder!" whispers Maudie O'Connor, as she, her school teacher daughter Mary, and their Scottish, Finn McCool, come upon the body of sophisticated Herbert Cord near their cottage at Paradise Lake, and Maudie goes off in the dark night to phone the police, probably from the resort, inn operated by elderly Chris Gordon. Cord surprised the resorters by showing up this year with sweet Margie Dixon, introducing her as his fiancée, when the people at Paradise had supposed the young man in a trim uniform was, according to his calm introduction, Officer John Antler. He was calm, too, and so was his companion, Dr. George Orway.

MAUDIE LIKES MYSTERY
CHAPTER III
THE moon had sailed ghoulishly past seven trees before I saw a car coming down the road. From the time that had passed and the way my eyes ached from straining to see a welcome arrival, I suspected Maudie hadn't gone direct to the inn for help. I really don't know why I expected her to do things the simple and direct way. Being her daughter for too many years to mention should have made me expect her to do it the hard way.

The car was from the State Police post over in Greenville and the young man in a trim uniform was, according to his calm introduction, Officer John Antler. He was calm, too, and so was his companion, Dr. George Orway.

I didn't go over with them when they started in the direction to which I pointed. Instead I grappled with Finn McCool who was getting his nerve back again, and yanked him into the security and safety of the back seat of the car. Another machine came up and some more men got out and pretty soon I saw them taking flashlight pictures of the body and searching the ground.

Crews, I supposed, and again I realized that murder meant a lot. Questions and suspicions, and the hunt by the law. But I was too tired now that I was safe in the car to really think much about anything but the cottage and a hot shower. I hoped to heavens Maudie was there and had sense enough to turn on the gas so I could get a soothing bath.

But she wasn't. I should have expected that, too. Eventually I did get home after I had told Officer Antler what little I could tell, and he and the doctor had taken me home and left me with some white powders to help me sleep and forget the whole ghastly mess. I had calmed down enough to go to bed before I heard McCool bark in that special way he has when he hears Maudie. I was almost too sleepy by then to be angry with her, but I did manage to ask a few questions.

"A fine time to go gallivanting," I said, while that fuzzy feeling decreased blissfully and my aching nerves relaxed.

"I was not gallivanting. I merely informed the proper authorities." "It never took you so long to get to the inn on other occasions," I pointed out with less vehemence than I felt.

"I didn't go to the inn." She stood in my doorway putting her white locks up on curlers. "I went to the Morrises."

THAT jerked me out of my wooziness for a second. "Good heavens, why?"

"They have a phone, and I rowed over. I saw no reason to advertise this crime to the entire community, and at the inn people certainly would have overheard my conversation."

"That's just too bad. I suppose it never occurred to you that you left me there alone in that beastly woods with a dead man and a criminal loose. It didn't occur to me I would have enjoyed a little

Maudie, it seemed, had called the State Police from the old Morris residence, and then she and prim, straight-laced Miss Millie had discussed the crime. It seemed that Miss Morris was too busy recalling her own anger at Herbert Cord's attentions to think of why he had been killed—or by whom:

company while the law took its own sweet time arriving."

"Nonsense," said Maudie, wiping cold cream off her face for the second time that night. "That nice Officer Antler said I did exactly right and nothing happened to you anyway."

"A lot you'd care," I said bitterly. "A fine mother you are. I suppose you're already seeing yourself as a lady sleuth." I was too tired to continue the argument, but the next morning I started from where I had finished. Maudie, it seemed, had done her calling from the old Morris residence all right, and then, she admitted, she and Miss Millie, whom she had criticized not so many hours previously for her strictness with Jeanie, had discussed the crime.

"She knows the land around here and all the people," Maudie justified that night conversation thusly. "I merely tried to learn if she could throw any light on the crime."

"Well, could she?"

"It seemed that Miss Morris was too busy recalling her own anger at Herbert Cord's attentions to her niece to think of why he had been killed or by whom. 'Not that I blame her for feeling that way,' Maudie hurried to add. 'She feels she took advantage of the child's gullibility and unsophistication, and, of course, she feels this trick of his—this bringing his current fiancée back to Paradise Lake—is exactly what one would expect of such a character.'"

"If she goes around spouting those sentiments she may find herself added to the list of suspects," I told her. "And so will you if you don't keep still. I haven't seen you shedding any tears over the death of this man."

"You haven't either, so don't jump at conclusions. Anyway, I know she didn't do it."

"And I suppose by now you do know the guilty one," I said, completely out of patience.

"I made no such statement, but I can have my suspicions."

Suspicious can be dangerous when spoken aloud and I was upset more than I wanted her to know. After all, Maudie and I had found the body.

I DIDN'T want to be bothered with a lot of questions by police during what I had hoped to be a quiet, restful vacation. I didn't want to get in an argument with Maudie either. It was like being one's head against a stone wall, for one never achieved results. If I walked down to the inn, perhaps I'd hear what the local gentry was saying and if I went for the mail, it wouldn't give Maudie a chance to go down there and talk.

Maudie was writing in her diary when I went to her room. "Don't be too literary," I said, "and it might be wise not to put down all the people you think are guilty."

She looked up at me over the top of her glasses and chewed the tip of her pen handle. Her desk always was a mess of odds and ends so I don't know why my eyes were attracted to the coin lying next to her powder box. It was a lucky piece. At least that's the only way I can describe it, and I reached over to examine it. Maudie beat me to the draw and put it in her manicure kit.

"Well, really," I said, "I wasn't going to steal it. What is it, anyway? I never knew you to carry lucky pieces."

"I don't," she said more brusquely than usual. "It's just something I found. Maybe it will bring me luck."

"I hope you won't have to use it," I said. "And remember, if you mind your own business and don't talk out of turn you'll be able to toss it right over your left shoulder."

But going down to the inn I wondered at the look in her eyes as she watched me turn and leave the room.

"FROM PLAIN TO PLANES IN 120 DAYS"

The story of America's first windowless, air-conditioned airplane factory—built in record time to produce military airplanes in quantities—is told in these three photographs. North American Aviation, Inc., built the factory—25 acres under one roof, and had it in production in 120 days. The company is publishing a striking advertisement in leading magazines to pay tribute to "the enthusiastic community cooperation" it has found in Texas. On December 17, 1940, the erection of steel for the new factory had just been started, with incessant rains creating a major obstacle to construction. The photo of October 4 shows the flight ramp at North American's Texas plant, indicating its production, in quantities, of advanced training planes for both the Army and Navy air services. The lower photo shows two sides of the mammoth main factory building—one of nine structures on the 150-acre site.

Ranger Aggies See the Light

By GENE KRIBBS
COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 11.—Among approximately one thousand Aggies who swarmed the entrance area to Kyle Field to watch the world's largest searchlight, were Bill Mitchell, Dickie Hodges, Billy Ross Hodges, Buster Wheat, Rossie Hodges, J. A. Johnson and Gene Kribbs. Despite a drizzling rain and thousands of bugs attracted to the powerful light, the cadets continued to stand around the light, watching it, and conversing with the enlisted men and officers in charge. With the equipment were the latest type 37 mm and three-inch anti-aircraft guns, which was of great interest to the Aggies, particularly Bill and Dickie.

Captain Johnson was in command of A Battery and part of B Battery of the 61th Battalion, Coast Artillery. This particular detachment was enroute to the State Fair at Dallas. Their regular quarters are in Camp Hulien, at Palacios, Texas. The Aggies popped numerous questions at Captain Johnson and the enlisted men, who were very patient and courteous in their conversations with the inquisitive cadets. Although the ceiling was low and the beam made by the gigantic arch lamp did not extend much over 500 feet, it has the reputation of having the capacity to spot planes on clear nights within ten-mile range. The light made from the lamp is estimated to be equal to all the automobile head lamps in the entire United States, having an 800,000,000 candle power. Also included in the mechanism of the light are eleven different motors, which are used to operate the moving system, the cooling apparatus, etc. Uncle Sam pays $70,000 for each lamp and generator of this type.

By Hamlin

Captain Johnson was a particularly interesting person with a personality that immediately appealed to the Aggies as he discussed the recent problems that confronted them on late maneuvers held in Louisiana, between the second and third armies. One problem they spoke of particularly was the defense of Lake Charles, Louisiana against air attacks. It seems as though one night about 12:00 o'clock, a squadron of nine bombers came over in groups of three. As the first searchlight was turned on, which is the custom until the planes are spotted, it was immediately focused on a plane. Then in quick succession the other twenty lights of the two battalions defending the city were turned on. "The planes were all destroyed theoretically," says the Coast Artillerymen. "They were not."

Several enlisted men said that the sham battles that they had been participating in were interesting and were invaluable as part of their army training. It was also stated by Captain Johnson that the army had some equipment about which he could not tell, that would make the Aggies and a lot of other Americans stick out their chests and say, "Let those Dutchmen come on over!"

Studer Brothers, Swiss Musicians To Be Here Oct. 13

The Studer Brothers, Swiss Musicians, will appear in Ranger Public Schools on Monday, Oct. 13, at 1 p. m., according to an announcement by G. C. Boswell, Supt.

Three young men arrived in the United States a few years ago from their native Switzerland. Since then they have delighted hundreds of audiences with their appealing Swiss folk music and yodeling. They filled sixteen weeks of engagements in the South and Southwest the summer and fall of 1938, and will fill eighteen weeks the summer and fall of 1941.

With a beautiful stage background of Alpine scenery, and wearing colorful native Swiss costumes, these young men carry the audience into the heart of their picturesque land. Their mission is to bring to us some of their wholesome folk music and acquaint us with the manners and customs of their people—and they do this with gusto and much enjoyment.

They present the typical Swiss combination of instruments: bass viol, clarinet and accordion. Each plays at least two instruments, with Joe, who is also master of ceremonies, specializing on the accordion; Louis on the clarinet and Josef on the bass viol. Several novelty numbers will be presented including one where Louis plays two clarinets at the same time.

Swiss folk dances will be given by Josef and Joe, with Joe dressed in the colorful costume of an Alpine girl.

Josef will demonstrate that unique Swiss custom of flag throwing. He says flag throwing developed centuries ago as a means of communication between people on distant Alpine mountains. It is now used largely for entertainment, and is growing in popularity in the United States. In one southern state it is said a wealthy football fan sent clear o Switzerland for an expert flag thrower to come over here and teach the High School Girls Pep Squad of his city the art of flag throwing as a stunt to be used at football games.

Solo and harmony yodeling will be featured. Joe will also give a short talk on the customs of his native land. The entire program is given with infectious enthusiasm. The variety, melody and folk color of the performance will make it unforgettable.

The Ranger Bulldogs turned the trick Friday night and won exactly as many conference games as all Ranger high school teams have in the previous six years. They defeated Stephenville decisively by a score of 31 to 0.

The Bulldogs got off to a bad start in the very first minutes of the game, after Floyd had raced 11 yards on the first play, and kicked to the Stephenville 20. After two plays Stephenville kicked back to the Ranger 30 and recovered, and it looked as though the Yellow Jackets were going to town. But the Bulldogs had other ideas and took over on their own 25 on downs.

The Stephenville passing game, with Whitacre, throwing to Bill Hicks, clicked time after time for short gains, as the big, 190-pound end, scooped up quick passes over the line, but he was always caught in his tracks without further gain.

The first quarter ended scoreless, and it was not until the late minutes of the first half that the Bulldogs pushed over a tally.

Mitchell intercepted one of the flat zone passes Whitacre was mixing up with his center shots, and Ranger took over on the Stephenville 45 and immediately got down to business.

"You'll Never Get Rich" Teams Astaire, Hayworth was good for a first down on the Stephenville 15, and Stephenville drew her first and only penalty of the game to put the ball on the 10.

Floyd lost six yards and on the second try gained one another, and Elder in two thrusts at the line got a first down on the Stephenville four. From there he plunged over for the score in two tries. Ranger kicked off and the half was over, with the Bulldogs leading 6 to 0.

Ranger made, and took advantage of, several breaks in the second half to score four more times before the game ended.

When Stephenville took to the air when the third quarter started Gray scooped up one of the aerial bombs and raced 45 yards to the goal line for the second tally, and Elder made the extra point.

Ranger got a break on a long, quick kick by Elder that rolled to the Stephenville 20, where it was fumbled and Ranger recovered, and on the last try carried over Elder was called upon five times to make the score 19 to 0.

Jimmie Houghton was called upon to make the fourth touchdown, and took off over his right tackle to make the marker and to bring the score up to 25 to 0. The touchdown was set up by a blocked Stephenville punt which was recovered on the 15-yard line as the third quarter ended.

Alert pass defense gave the Bulldogs their last score, with D. Hardin spearing one on the Stephenville 45 and going down the east sideline and outracing two Stephenville backs to score.

The Ranger line played well throughout the game, with Stephenville being thrown for a total of 80 yards in losses and one pass completion going for a three-yard loss.

Owby, Dabbs, Gray, Arterburn, Thomas, Hardin, in fact the whole Ranger line looked better than it did against Clyde, and stopped many of the Jacket line plunges for no gains or losses, without the aid of the linebackers, who were often kept back because of the Stephenville passes.

Offensive blocking was somewhat improved, too, and Ranger led much the better team on the field Friday night.

As the game closed another Stephenville punt was blocked and Ranger took over deep in Steph-

Motorists May Cause Road Work To Be Called Hazardous

AUSTIN, Texas—Unless Texas motorists become more responsive to warning signs, flagmen and road workers of the state highway department may have to be classified as following hazardous occupations.

Recently, so many flagmen and workmen have been injured that the department has issued an appeal to motorists to exercise more care in approaching and passing stretches of roadway where repairs are underway. One flagman was killed near San Antonio. Another flagman placed on a West Texas highway to warn drivers about flooded roads was severely injured. Another placed to direct traffic around working crew and one stationed to notify drivers that a center-stripping machine was at work, were recent victims.

The flagmen are put out for the dual purpose of protecting the road workmen and to protect the motoring public from accidents. If the highways were closed instead of being kept open to con-

DAY and NIGHT SERVICE

World Events Never Created a Sensation Like This!

The "hard day at the office" is forgotten as the tempting pork loin roast you bring out assumes importance. The usual discussion of sports or world affairs is postponed as the tender meat breaks away under the work. Mealtime is the hour when you shine. The day's events try to rob you of the honors, but put them in their places with quality Powell's meat. You can be a heroine every day!

"Every Dog Has His Day"

This has been said of many faithful dogs that have shown loyalty, consideration, courage and unflinching love to his master . . . only after he is dead.

In many respects your newspaper is similar to the life of a dog—It must always be on the watch—show unflinching courage and consideration—be ready at all times to face its master, the reading world, fair and square showing no malice or partiality.

A newspaper has no "day" because it doesn't die . . . it must keep serving from day to day without end.
