Keep Social Security Secure

The Social Security Act is capable of being one of the most far-reaching social measures of our times. Since it is just what it calls itself, a measure to provide security for the people, it should be carefully restricted to that.

The President's proposal to extend Social Security coverage to another 40,000,000 people in addition to the 40,-000,000 now covered, will require the most careful study. In admitting that one of the reasons for the proposal is to provide money for financing the defense effort and to restrict inflationary tendencies, the President calls attention to a vital point.

The original Social Security Act was one of the most complicated measures ever enacted by the Congress. The precaution had been taken of making a most thorough study of all European systems of social insurance, and of consulting all the best American experts with actuarial and relevant experience. The act was most carefully drawn in an effort to incorporate the best features of known and proved legislation of the kind all over the world. It is intended to be a permanent feature of the American order, not a makeshift effort to meet an emergency.

Since that is true, it ought to be amended only in the same way. There were valid and excellent reasons for excluding from the act those now outside its provisions. It has always been contemplated that the coverage should be extended, but it ought to be extended only in such directions and to such an extent as experience has proved work-

The experts who helped write this legislation in the first place ought to be recalled and consulted as to its extension, so that it may be built solidly, not for the emergency but for the future.

SERIAL STORY

MURDER IN PARADISE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

THE STORY: Just when it seems that the Paradise Lake murder of Herbert Cord, whose body is found by Mary O'Connor and her mother, Maudie, might be explained by the enmity of numbers racketeer Stush Veretti, another murder is committed and again it is Maudie who discovers the corpse. Second mystery is the fatal beating of straight-laced spinster Miss Millie Morris, who had hated Cord for his attentions to her pretty niece, Jeanie. And Jeanie had been under suspicion because Cord had come back to Paradise this year with a fiancee, Margie Dixon, much to Jeanie's embarrassment. Local editor Tod Palmer fakes an alibi for Jeanie and he and Dennis Flynn, city reporter, work together on the case. Both Mary and Dennis, old friends, feel that Maudie knows more than she is revealing, having talked often with such old residents as Miss Millie and Chris Gordon, proprietor of the inn.

THE PAY OFF

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK -Fred Landis Fitzsimmons paid the price for being the best fielding pitcher in baseball. Few pitchers have been able to field like Fat Freddie. He really was a fifth infielder. Though he never before was literally knocked from the box, as he was by Marius Russo's liner to his left kneecap in the seventh inning of the third world series game, Fitzsimmons has been hit everywhere by balls rifled back at him-in the throat, on the wrist, all over.

Because good old Fitz met with ill fortune in a world series for the third time, much was said and written about hard luck trailing him like a faithful hound.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Fitz has, as a matter of fact, been one of the more fortunate baseball people. Fitz stepped from the American Association to the affluent view York Giants and remained there for 11 years . . . broke into two world series with them.

Then, when Bill Terry felt he was washed up, Fitz was swapped to a Brooklyn club that definitely was on the rise. Pitched in spots last season, he bagged 16 games while losing no more than two. He won six while losing only one at the age of 40 this trip, after being retarded by an arm injury. FITZ hasn't had any small amount of the tough luck experienced by his illustrious teammate, Whitlow Wyatt, who was all over the map before he got anywhere in particular. Pitching to Babe Ruth for Detroit during the tail end of 1931, with the score tied in the ninth, Whit Wyatt attempted to throw the ball so fast that his elbow snapped. The ball did not reach the plate, and the Georgian had arm trouble from that time until a chipped bone was removed in '34. Traded to the White Sox in '32, he had a no-hit, no-run game against the Browns with two out in the ninth. Then Ted Gullic broke his bat on a handle hit that went through the infield to spoil a perfect performance. AFTER Brooklyn paid $40,000 and gave three players for him, Wyatt won four games before tearing a knee cartilage tripping over Lonnie Frey of the Reds in Cincinnati. An operation corrected the trouble, but Wyatt continued to favor the knee Wyatt really didn't come into his own until this year . . . at the age of 33 and with 13 years of professional baseball behind

Whitlow Wyatt had a full measure of success coming.

Bill Brown, who has been on the sidelines since the Weatherford game, is in condition to play part of the game in spite of his trick knee which was hurt two weeks ago, but he is not likely to start the game. Brown will likely be used from time to time to strengthen the Bulldog offense, but used as sparingly as possible in order that he may not suffer a new injury to his leg.

BY WILLIAMS

The Lion-Bulldog game is as hard to figure out as the T. C. U .-A. & M. game to be played in Fort Worth Saturday, but unlike the college fracas the high school game may well go to the team which gets or makes the early-game breaks and which scores first. Both teams are keyed up for a win, which would be the first for the Lions, and if either team gets to rolling early it may determine the outcome of the game. The college game Saturday may go to the team with the best reserve strength and which can outlast the other.

The Bulldogs were picked by Fort Worth writers to win the Weatherford game, and the team lost. Now they are picked again, to win over Brownwood, with the parenthetical remark that Brownwood may get started in this game. Maybe the same jinx, picked by the experts-may work against the Bulldogs again. If it does Brownwood should win by a big score, if they get started off well early in the game and get hot, otherwise we look for a closely contested game, with the Bulldogs barely nosing out a victory. Which is a two way guess with both sides being picked. Tie games are favorites with the two teams when they meet, according to past accomplishments, which adds another possibility. You can place your money and take your pick, but don't ask us to cover your bets. We are laying off of this

Dr. Boswell is not quite as conservative, however, because he predicts a Ranger victory. His guess is 18 to 14. Which accounts let our special for three Ranger touchdowns, without a point after being made. He is pretty safe on that point after touchdown failing, providing the three touchdowns are
