Green News

by Monica DuRussel

I'm sure everyone in town has noticed how bad the mosquitoes are and the Golf Course is no exception. However, the situation has been remedied, somewhat, many thanks to the Sonora Fire Department. They sprayed the water holes, greens, tee boxes and other places where the pesky things live. It is much nicer playing now.

In fact Sunday, there was quite a crowd playing golf and dominoes. Before the spraying, that was next to impossible.

Kathy Cotton, who was playing with Edwina Braden was really shooting her best-- Now, I'm not saying it was because of the comfort from the spraying, but she did birdie number nine. Her tee shot was terrible but with her second shot she pitched right into the cup.

The president of the Auxiliary, Wanda Neville, who is touring London, had a bit of

Lutheran Church Has Visitors

Hope Lutheran Church hosted sixteen people from northern California last Wednesday evening. The youth group was on their way to Redding, California after attending the Lutheran Youth Congress held at the Astro dome in Houston. Twenty thousand young people from various states were in attendance at the four day meeting.

A buffet supper was served to the group with Mr. and Mrs. Don Peel in charge of the arrangements. The California group reported of having attended an inspirational meeting, heart warming worship services and a wealth of information from the congress. They also entertained the young people of Hope-Lutheran with group singing. Lodging was provided by church members and breakfast served them the morning of their departure. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wuest were hosts at the breakfast held at the church.

The Devil's River Philosopher Sez.

Big Scheme To Save Money On Presidential Houses

Editor's note: The Devil's River Philosopher on his bitterweed ranch on the dry Devil's River comes up with another one of his peculiar ideas this week, we guess you'd say.
Dear editor:

A lot has been in the news lately about money spent on Presidential homes away from Washington, not just the current Presidential houses but the last four or five.

As I understand it, a man's eagerness to get to the White House is matched, after he's been there a while, only by his eagerness to get away every chance he gets, so the government has to see that his escape home is just as secure as his White home.

This naturally runs into money, if you want to call several million dollars money in these days of the $1.25 hamburger and the 50¢ tractor bolt I used to buy for a nickel, and in view of the fact all other Presidents in the years ahead will be expecting the same treatment I have hit on an idea to save money and solve the problem at the same time.

It's simple. Build a government-owned mobile home with all the equipment needed and let whoever's President have it pulled to whatever spot he wants to spend the next week-end at. This way he could have a Western White House, a Southern White House, Northern, Eastern or whatever point on the compass he likes White House at whatever distance he feels the safest from Washington. When he retires, the mobile home is taken over by his successor, given another coat of white paint, and the problem of private Presidential homes would be solved from now on. While we're on the subject of Presidents there's another problem that's been worrying me. It's the Presidential Library. Have you ever stopped to think that if this country holds together for the next 5000 years and every President has to have a library of his very own to hold his papers, there'll be a minimum of 625 such libraries scattered around the country, with some cities having 8 or 10 apiece? At a cost of at least 6 million dollars and maybe 12 if the cost of living keeps going up?

I'm not suggesting we ought to store those documents in mobile homes, some cities have restrictions against locating those things too close to town, but it would be cheaper to build one huge pyramid in the center of the nation and stack all the papers and tapes and denials there. Yours faithfully, J. A.

Owners Urged To Protect Against Equine Encephalomyelitis

Horse owners who have not yet had their animals vaccinated against all three types of equine encephalomyelitis in 1973 should check with their local practicing veterinarians about a vaccination schedule, reminds County Extension Agent Clint Langford. He reports that an outbreak of a disease thought to be a form of equine encephalomyelitis has occurred recently in an area north of Beaumont near Silsbee and Lumberton. Seven horses have died thus far, and although a confirmed laboratory diagnosis is still not available, it is possible that the disease is a form of sleeping sickness.

Langford noted that local veterinarians have sent samples of blood and tissue for diagnosis to the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory and to the National Animal Diagnostic Laboratory in Ames, Iowa.

While it is highly possible that the disease is caused by either the Eastern or Western strain of equine encephalomyelitis, local veterinarians say there is no indication that the horse deaths have been by Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis (VEE) that invaded Texas in 1971.

"The three types of equine encephalomyelitis can cause serious illness and even death in humans as well as horses," the county agent reminds, "so it is important to prevent its spread in the horse population."

There are effective vaccines for use in horses, but each protects the animal only against one particular strain of the disease. "That is, Eastern and Western vaccines do not protect horses against VEE, nor vice versa," Langford said.

Horses vaccinated against VEE in 1971 should be revaccinated, and Eastern and Western vaccines should be repeated each year.

Control of mosquitoes will help prevent the disease spread, said Langford. He recommends the use of insecticide repellents, screened stables where practical, and area control of mosquitoes.

Wildlife Diseases Dangerous To Man

Of all the diseases which may be transmitted from wild animals to man, rabies is the most feared.

Texas State Department of Health Laboratories report that during the first four months of 1973 there have been 85 confirmed cases of animal rabies. Of that number, 61 involved wildlife -- 45 skunks, 11 foxes, one coyote, two raccoons and two bats.

Texas had 343 cases of rabies last year --- 281 in wildlife.

The state led the nation in 1971 with 323 rabies incidents which was a far cry from the 658 cases reported in 1961.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reports that the chances of transmitting rabies to humans are slim. Most of the public will never come in contact with the disease unless their occupation involves handling sick animals.

The last documented death from natural exposure to rabies in Texas was in 1962. Last year one death was reported which was attributed to exposure to the rabies virus in a laboratory.

Rabies is caused by a virus which requires from one to six months to incubate within an animal.

The disease begins with a depression of the spirits and swelling of the lymphatics in the region of the wound. Choking and spasmodic breathing follows with increasing spasms of the respiratory muscles.

Fever, mental derangement, vomiting and secretion of saliva often accompany the disease. Death usually occurs within two to five days after the appearance of the first symptoms.

Positive diagnosis of rabies involves killing the suspected host to examine brain tissues.

Fortunately, however, man seems to be highly resistant to rabies and only 20 percent of those bitten by a known rabid animal will contract the disease.

Treatment for rabies in man is a painful series of shots in the fatty deposits of the stomach.

Why bother with such painful treatment if man has only one chance in five of contracting the disease?

Once the first symptoms appear, the only treatment for the disease is making the individual as comfortable as possible because death is almost inevitable once the disease reaches such an advanced stage.

The rabies cycle begins in Texas each spring when migrating bats return from Mexico to their homes. It has been estimated that five percent of all bats returning to Texas are infected with rabies.

Bats react slowly to the disease; therefore, the virus incubates longer and affects more bats within the same cave.

The disease begins to spread when infected bats fall to the floor of the cave and small animals such as foxes and skunks enter the caves to feed on crippled adults and helpless young bats.

Traditionally, rabies builds to a peak in August and September and declines with the onset of cooler weather.

Rabies can be controlled in pets with vaccination but, as yet, there is no practical means of controlling the disease in wild animals.

Unless kitchen carpet has a "water barrier," --a coating between the backing and padding--water can seep through and cause deterioration of the foam rubber pad, warns Patricia A. Bradshaw, housing and home furnishings specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

When a child tells a lie, parents natural reaction is to uncover the truth--but uncovering the reason for it is more important, notes Dorothy Taylor, family life education specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.
